JAPS SAID TO HAVE MADE LAND ATTACK ON PORT ARTHUR AND BEEN REPULSED BY RUSSIANS

Story Reaches Russian Headquarters From Chinese Sources.

The Russians Are Now Confident They Can Hold Port Arthur.

Loss to Japs' Fleet Causes Russians to Reoccupy Newchwang.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—According to reports which have reached the Russian headquarters at Liao Yang, from Chinese sources, the Japanese have made a land attack on Port Arthur, but have been repulsed with heavy loss. The truth of the report is questioned here.

CAN HOLD PORT ARTHUR.

The Russians Are Now Feeling Very Confident.

Che Foo, May 23.—The captain of a Russian merchantman, who left Port Arthur on May 20, and is among recent arrivals from Dalny, says in an interview that the whole of the Japanese fleet had not returned to Port Arthur since May 15, when, besides the battleship Hatsuse, another big vessel struck a mine and was towed away disabled. Gunboats and torpedo boats returned off the port on May 20, when the Russians succeeded in sinking a small gunboat and two torpedo boats. The Russians are now very confident of holding Port Arthur with the 30,000 men now stationed there, exclusive of the navy and the crowds of mechanics working on the damaged warships, all of which, except the Czarevitch and the Retvizan, are ready to rejoin the fleet. These will also be ready for sea service by June 1.

The entrance to the harbor has been cleared and small boats now pass in and out freely from Port Arthur to Dalny.

The forts on the land side of Port Arthur have been completed and are now preparing for a severe contest.

Of the few soldiers left at Dalny, the majority have gone to Port Arthur and the only defense left there now is the mines in the harbor.

The attempt of the Japanese to land troops in the Kin Chau gulf on May 16 failed, owing to insufficient water to float the boats.

There has been no fighting in the vicinity of Port Arthur up to Saturday, since the Kin Chau fight on May 15, when two squadrons of Japanese cavalry were completely wiped out, only eight men of which escaped.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made by the Japanese to land troops at Talien Wan last week, it is said. On the way over passengers on the junk, just arrived, heard firing in the direction of Port Arthur last night.

The Japanese have reported to the consuls here that a wreck in the Liao Tung gulf is dangerous to navigation and it is possible that this is the other ship said to have been damaged at Port Arthur on May 15, as the Japanese fleet is known to have entered the gulf after the disaster to the Hatsuse.

LOSS OF JAP SHIPS

Caused the Russians to Reoccupy Newchwang.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The admiralty reports that the battleship Orel, which suddenly sunk at her anchorage at Cronstadt on the night of May 20, as the result, according to report, of her sea valves being open, and which was subsequently raised, has not sustained any injuries. The investigation into the cause of the accident is not concluded.

The general staff says the reoccupation of Newchwang by the Russians in force is due to the change in the situation produced by the loss of the Japanese ships last week.

Gen. Kuropatkin originally had decided to abandon the town because of the Japanese complete mastery of the sea, but the losses sustained by Vice Admiral Togo's fleet so changed the relative strength of the two fleets that it is believed to render unsafe the dispatch of Japanese transports around the Liao Yang peninsula, as they run the risk of attack by Rear Admiral Wittsceft.

FEROCIOUS BITTERNESS

Prevails Against the Russians Among the Chinese.

Berlin, May 23.—A correspondent of the Frankfurt Zeitung, writing from Harbin under date of April 15, gives striking details illustrative of the conditions of the Russian army and the relations existing between the Russians and the Chinese. He says that two officers, Lieut. Col. Korlinsky and Staff Capt. Ignotowitch, are in the Harbin prison awaiting the carrying out of sentences of death imposed upon them for selling large supplies of gunpowder to the Chinese from the army depots. The officers charged the Chinese $25 per thirty-six rounds, but their supplies running low, they filled the boxes partly with saru and placed a layer of gunpowder on top. At the same time they raised the price to $50.

The Chinese merchants, incensed at the swindle, caused the matter to be made known in higher quarters, and a watch was set, resulting in the detection of the officers in the act of selling gunpowder to Russian intermediaries.

By similar means the robber bands are well supplied with the most modern rifles and plenty of ammunition. Although it is prohibited to sell arms to the Chinese, it is well known that every native village possesses a regular arsenal containing the best repeating rifles including many of the German model of 1900.

The robber bands have grown bolder and more active than ever. Within a few weeks of the date of the letter to the Frankfurter Zeitung, a band numbering as many as 2000 men, attacked a well-guarded railroad station. The Russians asserted that they positively recognized Japanese officers in command of the assailants.

Continuing, the correspondent says that ferocious bitterness prevails throughout the Chinese population against the Russians. He then relates the following incidents in explanation thereof. After saying that the Russian settlers regarded the natives as being far lower than dogs, the correspondent says Russian officers assured him that the peasant settlers tested their new rifles by taking a native as a target.

"One engineer with whom I traveled," he asserts, "did not salute a well-known officer because the latter had shot down eight of the engineer's best laborers in mere wantonness. His complaint remained unanswered."

In consequence of such conditions, the correspondent asserts, in conclusion, the entire laboring population are longing for the moment when they may dare to fall upon their tormenters.

GOOD IMPRESSION

By Emperor's Godspeed to South Russian Troops.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The Russian newspapers are unanimous in their affirmation of the deep impression made upon the country by the emperor's personal Godspeed to the troops in South Russia, declaring that Russian prestige in the far East must be vindicated and that every Russian breast re-echoes the emperor's conviction expressed to the town council at Moscow as follows:

"Our glorious armies will return with the aureole of victory."

Considerable irritation is manifested by the papers over the suggestion made by M. Dubail, the French minister at Pekin that a congress of the powers be held for the purpose of effecting a conclusion of the war. The Novoe Vreyma says:

"The war is Russia's personal affair and she asks no one's assistance. When it is ended she will negotiate with the mikado but not with Europe. Therefore, we regret that the representative of Russia's ally should be the first to pronounce the word 'congress.'"

The same paper, speaking of the reception of the news of the Japanese naval disasters by the British press, says:

"The hymn of uninterrupted triumph by Japan which was sung by the friendly choir of the English press has been changed by a few pounds of dynamite from allegro maestoso to agitato assai."

TWO SKIRMISHES

Reported By Japs Who Landed at Taku Shan.

Tokio, May 23.—The Japanese, landed at Taku Shan, report having been engaged in two scouting skirmishes, during which ten Russians were killed. In the first affair two Russians were captured and in the other Ken. Kuroki reports the capture of an officer and a man caught making a reconnaissance in the rear of Kuroki's army.

Three splendid horses captured at the Yalue battle by Kurok and presented to the emperor, reached Tokio today. Theye were taken to the palace, where they were inspected. Two of them are Russian bred and the other is an Arabian.

People who have visited Matsuyama report that the Japanese are exercising great care with the food and general treatment of the Russian prisoners there. The rations include liberal allowances of meat, bread and tea daily. The prisoners' quarters are clean and sanitary. The majority of the wounded are making good progress.

OREL SUNK.

Sea Valves Opened and She Filled With Water.

Kronstadt, May 23.—The battleship Orel, which was brought here some days ago to receive her main battery and to be given the finishing touches before going into commission, suddenly sank at her anchorage on the night of May 20. Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, commander-in-chief of the Baltic squadron, was instantly called from St. Petersburg and under his supervision the work of pumping out and raising the Orel was begun.

The ship was raised yesterday morning and was found to be undamaged, save that her interior was filled with dirty salt water. An examination showed that her valves had been opened, permitting the water to rush in. It is suggested that the carelessness of a workman might have been responsible for the opening of the valves, but an investigation into the affair is progressing.

USED THEIR RAZORS

Lively Time on Colored Excursion Out of Washington.

A Serious Cutting Affray Occurred on Board Steamer.

Washington, May 23.—A colored excursion to Notley Hall resulted in a number of serious fights and an assault on a deputy sheriff of Prince George, county, Maryland, which may terminate in the man's death. His name was not learned. A row among the negroes on board the steamer River Queen broke out on the return trip, and broken heads and bloody faces were plentiful, when the vessel finally reached the wharf. Frank Smallwood, a special policeman stationed on the boat, was overpowered by a gang of intoxicated negroes shortly after the return trip began and was badly beaten. He was taken to the emergency hospital, where his injuries were dressed. The fight on the boat was general. Razors were whipped out from half a hundred pockets and a scene of confusion reigned. During the battle John Crawford was stabbed in the leg and Warren Windon, 19 years old, was slashed across the throat with a razor. His condition is serious.

island, St. Petersburg, where she was built, to Kronstadt, the Orel grounded in the Neva and was pulled off only with considerable trouble. Some of her plates were damaged.

RUSSIANS TO RE-OCCUPY NEWCHWANG.

Newchwang, Ma 23.—The Russians are re-occuping this place with a fair force of artillery and mounted infantry. The disaster to the Japanese fleet is officially unknown here. The only information of the subject came from the Reuter Telegram company, whose dispatch was read to the troops on parade. The news was received with great cheering.

The Russians are constructing slight entrenchments south of the town. Steamers from Che Foo report that they pass quantities of wreckage and it is supposed here that the Russians have been blowing up the obstructions at the entrance to Port Arthur.

LOSS OF BOGATYR CONFIRMED.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The report that Rear Admiral Jessen finding it impossible to save the protected cruiser Bogatyr, which went ashore recently in a fog on the rocks of Vladivostok, caused her to be blown up, is confirmed.

SHELL KILLS TWENTY-FIVE.

Tokio, May 23.—During the reconnaisance off Port Arthur made by Admiral Togo, on Friday of last week, a shell hit the torpedo boat destroyer Akatsuki, killing one officer and 24 men.

ARRANGING FOR CONVENTION

Democratic National Sub-Committee Meets at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 2.—The sub-committee of the Democratic national committee met here today to prepare for the national convention, which meets in July. All the members who are expected to attend the present sitting of the committee were present. They were Senator Jones, chairman of Arkansas; Senator William J. Stone, Missouri; D. J. Campau, Michigan; J. E. Osborn, Wyoming; Norman E. Mack, New York, and James M. Head, of Tennessee.

Much of the time of the meeting today was spent examining and discussing plans presented for the reconstruction of convention hall. The contract for this work has been let and it is expected the hall will be turned over to the national committee June 15. The question of tickets and accommodations for the press also came up for consideration with Charles P. Mann and G. M. Hitchcock representing the committee of newspaper men. The committee will be in session several days.

KLEIMAN RELEASED

Through the Intercession of Ambassador McCormick.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—Morris Kleiman, a native of Russia, but a citizen of Wisconsin, who was arrested May 14, at Cheliabinsk, has been released through the intercession of Ambassador McCormick. It transpires that his arrest was partially due to representations made by the agent of a firm competing with the one represented by Kleiman.

Kleiman was charged with violation of an article of the penal code, which provides othat a Russian subject who swears allegiance to a foreign state without the government's permission, is liable to banishment or transportation to Siberia.

ATTACKED BY ALI

It Was Moro Outlaw Who Massacred the Filipinos.

Governor Wright Transmits the Report of General Wood.

Washington, May 23.—Governor Wright has cabled the secretary of war, making the following quotations from a dispatch sent to Gen. Wright by Gen. Wood:

"No disturbance in the Cottobato valley. Affair was a fight with a band of outlaws under Ali, who is as much an enemy of peaceful Moros as of ours. Al Moros in the valey are at work and friendly, and for the first time in history aer taking out cedulas. Have taken out 2500 in las two weeks. Not the slightest cause for anxiety."

Governor Wright adds: "Leonard Wood visited me at Baguio about two weeks since. We went over Moro matters fully. He was then sanguine there would be no further disturbance, except that involved in running down Ali, who is a fugitive in the mountains with a small band of Moros. I am inclined to think him correct in his views. Incidents of this character are always liable to occur and, indeed, may be looked for. Aside from what Leonard Wood says in the above telegram, I do not believe it possible that there will be any concerted opposition by Moros. They have no chief of prominence around whom they could gather. They are divided into very small groups, commanded by insignificant datios, intensely jealous and at general war with each other. The Moro act abolishing slavery and establishing a form of government wholly at variance with what has existed heretofore, naturally has produced some dissatisfaction, but for the reasons indicated, I regard serious opposition as improbable, if not impossible.

"The Philippine commission has appointed out of the congressional relief fund $150,000 to enable him to build roads through Lake Lano region."

SUPREME COURT HOLDS THAT STATE REFORMATORY AT ST. CLOUD IS NOT A STATE PRISON

Confinement There Is Not Statuatory Ground For Divorce.

Mrs. Joseph Dion of Duluth Loses Her Suit.

Decision Secured In the Local Courts Is Upheld.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Confinement in the state reformatory at St. Cloud is held to be not a statutory ground for divorce.

The supreme court ruled today that the St. Cloud reformatory is not a state prison in the meaning of the law.

The decision was made verbally today, in answer to a demurrer filed by Superintendent Frank L. Randall of the St. Cloud reformatory, who has been acting for an inmate of that institution, who was the defendant in divorce proceedings.

This inmate, whose name is Joseph C. Dion, was sued by his wife for divorce in St. Louis county, the statutory ground of confinement in prison being alleged. Superintendent Randall took up Dion's case and succeeded in securing a decision in the Duluth courts favorable to his contention that confinement in the reformatory was not grounds for a divorce.

An appeal was taken to the supreme court by the plaintiff, but the judges today brought the whole thing to a close by informing Mr. Randall that further argument was unnecessary. They sustained his demurrer in the lower court.

This is the first time this question has ever got beyond the lower courts. It has been passed on several times, always adversely, until the Duluth court was reached.

FOLK WOULD NOT ACCEPT THE NOMINATION FOR PRESIDENT

St. Louis Attorney Could Not Consider Johnson's Plan.

Only Nomination He Wants Is That of Governor.

St. Louis, May 23.—When Joseph W. Folk was asked last night whether he was in sympathy with Tom Johnson's proposition to secure the endorsement of Ohio for Folk for president, the circuit attorney said: "I am under a solemn obligation to the people of Missouri. This obligation is so definite that I cannot honorably consider for one moment the nomination, or even the suggestion of the nomination for any office other than that of governor of Missouri."

JOSEPH W. FOLK.

A NURSE FINDS HER MOTHER UNEXPECTEDLY.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 23.—Miss Elizabeth Bamboragian, a nurse at a sanitarium here, was called by the police last night to act as an interpreter for an aged woman who had been put off a train here sick and unable to speak English, and found her own mother, whom she had supposed to be dead for many years.

The aged woman had been brought to New York by a son who w as detained there and started his mother west alone.

UNITARIANS AT BOSTON.

Boston, May 23.—Unitarians from various parts of the country assembled here today for the annual meeting of the American Unitarian asosciation. The convention will last until Saturday.

THREE KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

Camden, N. J., May 23.—One man and two boys were killed and six men and two girls seriously injured by an explosion which occurred today in the fireworks factory of Joseph Scalona on the outskirts of the city. Fifteen girls and fifteen men were employed in the factory.

Joseph Scalona, the proprietor, was subsequently arrested and held pending an investigation as to the cause of the explosion. The explosion is said to have occurred in the mixing room.

BRITISH SLAY MORE THIBETANS

London, May 23.—A small force from the garrison of Col. Younghusband's mission moved out Saturday to clear the line to the south, says a dispatch from the Times correspondent at Gyang-Tse, Thibet. Col. Brander was at the head of the force and after burning three farm houses occupied by the enemy, returned to the post.

Two of the sikhs were killed and Lieutenant Hodgson was wounded in a raid on a farm house last Thursday. The Thibetans lost about thirty men. There have been fifty-seven casualties among the British since the mission crossed the Tangla.

The temper, self-confidence and actual military capacity of the Thibetans has much increased lately. Diplomacy has proved useless, the correspondent declares, to carry through the operations against the enemy, in order to guarantee the security of the Indian frontier.

DISPUTE ENDS IN THREE DEATHS

Morrisdale, Pa., May 23.—In a dispute over dandelions at Elk Lick mines, one mile east, three Italian miners met death and the fourth participant escaped. An Italian named Louis was gathering dandelions at dusk, in the rear of a boarding house, run by Dominick Bills. Bills ordered Louis away jestingly. Louis cursed Bills, at which Bills pulled a gun and shot him. An unknown Italian interfered, taking Louis' part, shooting Bills and his cousin, Samuel Bills, who was coming along on a bicycle.

The unknown Italian then escaped, but is thought to be hiding in a mine. The sheriff and coroner have been notified, while the town authorities are in pursuit.

TO CAMP AT WORLD'S FAIR

United States Soldiers and Marines Begin to Arrive.

St. Louis, May 23.—This week marks the beginning of the summer encampment of cadets and United States marine and state troops at the World's fair grounds. The first of the military visitors, a picked corps of twenty United States marines, arrived today. They will be followed by cadets, soldiers and marines, until about 3000 have assembled here. Daily drill exhibitions will be held.

Pennsylvania's state building was opened today.

The Brazilian pavilion, considered to be one of the most ornate structures on the World's fair grounds, will be formally opened tomorrow, that day being the anniversary to a number of important military and civic events in Brazilian history.

CROOKSTON MAN WEDS

After Being Widower Only a Few Days.

Crookston, Minn., May 23.—The news of the marriage at Sioux Falls, S. D., last Thursday of Robert H. Purvis of this city to Mrs. Mary M. Murray, also of this city, but who has been in Minneapolis for the last few weeks since she secured a divorce from her husband, H. T. Murray, a former conductor on the Great Northern and now in the land business here, has caused a sensation in this city. Mr. Purvis buried his first wife a week ago last Saturday, and the news of his immediate marriage to Mrs. Murray has given the gossips a new morsel.

SECRETARY MOODY ILL.

Washington, May 23.—Secretary Moody is indisposed and upon the advice of his physician will remain quietly at home for a few days. His ailment is not serious and is yielding satisfactorily to treatment.

INVITED TO WHITE HOUSE

President Roosevelt Extends Invitation to Methodist Protestants.

Washington, May 23.—President Roosevelt today extended an invitation to the Methodist Protestant conference through Representative Adamson, of Georgia, to be received at the White House Thursday afternoon. The invitation was accepted by the conference.

President Tagg announced the committees which are to give consideration to the legislative matters to come before the session. A special committee of fifteen was authorized to deal with church union. The co-operation of the conference was asked in a movement for an expression from all Protestant denominations on the question of remarriage after divorce. This request is contained in a communication from the general assembly of the United Presbyterian church. It was referred to a committee on moral reform appointed for its consideration.

Asserting that the Bible in the family was a custom of the past, that its study in the Sunday school was perfunctory, and that it was used for no purpose in religious colleges, the Rev. Dr. J. E. Gilbert, national secretary of the Society of Religious Education in Bible Literature, secured the interest of the conference to the extent of the appointment of a special committee to consider the plan of the society.

An optimistic report was received from the board of home missions. The property of the board has increased during the last four years from $12,000 to $53,000.

TWO MORE MINES CLOSE.

Ironwood, Mich., May 23.—The Newport and Ronnie mines closed down today and some 500 men are out. Both are Schlesinger property, with headquarters at Milwaukee.

TAFT FEELS BETTER.

Washington, May 23.—Secretary Taft writes from his camp, in the Adirondacks, that he is getting a good rest and is feeling much better than when he left Washington. He adds that he expects to return to this city Wenesday evening next.

QUESTION OF DIVORCE BEFORE THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY

Buffalo, May 23.—At the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States today, the special committee on marriage and divorce mode its report and submitted the following recommendations for the consideration and action of the general assembly:

"The general assembly again enjoins all ministers under its care and authority to refuse to perform the marriage ceremony in the cases of divorced persons, except as such persons have been divorced upon grounds and for causes recognized as scriptural in the standards of our church.

"Recognizing the comity which should exist between Christian churches, and believing that it would be desirable and tend to the increase of a spirit of Christian unity, we earnestly advise all the ministers under the authority of this assembly to refuse to unite in marriage any person or persons, whose marriages such ministers have good reason to believe is forbidden by the laws of the church in which such person or persons, seeking to be married, may hold membership.

"The appeal and address to the interchurch conference is hereby indorsed by this general assembly, and commended to the consideration of all our ministers and congregations. The stated clerk is instructed to issue it in such form, and to such extent as may seem desirable and expedient, and it is requested that it be read by pastors from their pulpits on some appropriate Sabbath."

The stated clerk is directed to call the special attention of presbyteries to action of the general assembly, with the view to securing the enforcement of existing laws, and obedience to the injunctions of the general assembly. The committee on marriage and divorce is continued and instructed to "cooperate with the representatives of other churches in endeavoring to obtain such ecclesiastical unity, and such state or national legislatino as may shield both church and state from existing and impending perils."

The committee is working with committees of thirteen other denominations, all of which form the inter-church conference on marriage and divorce, which recently issued an appeal to the Christian public.

HEARST'S FOLLOWERS ARE NO LONGER AGGRESSIVE IN OHIO

Columbus, O., May 23.—Leaders are in conference here today preparatory to the Democratic state convention of the next two days.

The Hearst men have for weeks been contending in Ohio for district delegates to the national convention at St. Louis, and for county delegates to the state convention here this week, but they have failed to get a majority of either, so that there will be no such scenes of contest as were expected here during the week.

The Hearst men had secured hotel accommodations that are now open for others. The Hearst men are no longer aggressive. They are now in favor of no indorsement for any one for president. This would give them the few district delegates they have secured, while any instructions or the unit rule would prevent them from getting any votes from Ohio at St. Louis. While there is no leader at this convention, as in former years, it is probable that the contest between the friends of Col. James Kilbourne of Columbus, and of Judge Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, may prevent any indorsement for president. It is certain that there will be no instructions for either Hearst or Parker. If there is no indorsement of either Kilbourne or Harmon, and no unit rule, the Hearst men will consider it a partial victory, as they would then be able to get the votes of such districts as they have carried.

Owing to the large number of contests to be heard, there is some talk of a bolting convention, but it is thought that there will be no more threats of this kind after the district meetings and the committee sitting tomorrow night.

TO REVIVE RACING IN NEW JERSEY

New York, May 23.—Efforts to revive running turf races in New Jersey are now being made by men here prominent in racing circles. Preliminary steps in the matter have already been taken through the purchase of a large tract of land near Atlantic City.

Attorneys are now drafting bills to be presented to the New Jersey legislature legalizing horse racing in the state. The bill provides for the encouragement of contests of speed between thoroughbreds of the highest class, prohibition of races run on a track less than one mile in circumference, and a tax on all racing association funds accruing from that sport to be paid into the state treasury. A certain percentage of the tax will go to the promotion of county fairs. No winter racing will be permitted. Legalized racing will be allowed only between April 15 and Nov. 1.

MOROS MASSACRE U. S. EMPLOYES

Manila, May 23.—A report has been received here from Camp Overton, on the island of Mindano, dated May 15, stating that a massacre had taken place on the 12th inst., near Malabang on the southern coast of Mindano. Fifty-three Filipino men, women and children, the families of employes of the United States military government at Malabang, were surprised at midnight while asleep by the Dato Alis and a band of Moros from the Rio Grande valley and slaughtered. The chief and his followers escaped before the alarm could be given.

SALE OF RED LAKE LANDS

Copies of Rules Received At The Land Office.

Copies of the rules and regulations under the act of Feb. 20, 1904, for the sale of a part of the Red Lake Indian reservation, have been received at the Duluth United States land office. Approximately 256,000 acres of good agricutural land will be disposed of to settlers.

This land is not within the boundaries of either the Duluth or Cass Lake districts, but is located in the Thief River Falls district. It comprises all that part of the reservation lying west of the range line between ranges 38 and 39 west of the fifth principal meridian, or, to be exact, 256,143.58 acres.

This territory will be parceled out in much the same manner as the reservation lands to be sold at Cass Lake, June 15. The land will be offered at public auction, at not less than $4 per acre, to the highest qualified bidder, at Thief River Falls, beginning at 9 a. m., June 20, and will continue each day, except Sundays, until disposed of.

The lands to be sold will be arranged in tracts of approximately 160 acres each, and sixty tracts will be offered each day for the first two days, and eighty tracts each day thereafter until all is sold. One-fifth of the price of the bid will be paid at the time the bid is made and the balance of the purchase price will be paid in five equal annual installments, all payments to be made within five years from the time the bid is entered.

NEW BAND UNIFORMS.

Expected To Be Here By Memorial Day.

Ne uniforms for the Third Regiment band are expected for Memorial day's turnout. They will be much more elaborate than the ones at present worn by the musicians, as the military regulations have changed considerably on this equipment since the last suits were purchased.

The coat and cap will be of dark blue and the trousers of light blue. There is no especial change in the last named garment but the coat is something more elaborate than the one now in vogue, being made so by the addition of much gold braid, which encircles the neck, arm and breast in an attractive way. The cap has two bands of gilt around it and includes the regular visor, although the general shape is more on the yachting order.

MAKING NEW SWEEPS.

Duluth Boat Club Getting Set Made.

Two weeks from today the Duluth boat club eight which will row the university of Wisconsin eight will be in Madison, as the trip is expected to commence on Sunday night, June 5, or thereabouts. The race is to take place the following Thursday and it is desired that the men get on the ground three or four days ahead of that time so they can have three or four good practice rows at Madison and get thoroughly accustomed to the conditions at the place of meeting.

A set of new sweeps is being manufactured for the eight by Ellis F. Ward & Son, of Philadelphia. The senior Ward is one of the famous Ward brothers ,who were a quartet of "shell workers" that probably eclipsed any family that ever undertook to race. They had a great record and were not men of lightweight, either, as their respective weights were 163, 158, 155 and 150. This made an average 156 pounds per man.

Commissioner McInnis Comments on New Little Fork Country.

Favor Present Site as Location For New Courthouse.

County Commissioner Nell McInunis, of Eveleth, who was in the city Saturday, had but recently returned from the little Fork country, where he went on a trip of inspection for the purpose of locating a county road across township 62-19. He was accompanied by Commissioners Patterson and Morcom, but the latter was afflicted with rheumatism and did not leave the train when Ashawa was reached, but returned home. Messrs. Patterson and McInnis spent two days in looking over that ned agricultural district and were both surprised and delighted over the evidences of progress and thrift everywhere apparent.

It was only recently that a government survey of 62-19 was ordered and yet the commissioners were assured by a settler that every acre of land in the entire town had been settled upon by squatters, who will file on their lands as soon as the township is opened for settlement. Many of them put in crops last year, as much of the land is easily cleared and all were highly satisfied with their first harvest.

"The Little Fork valley is sure to be a magnificent farming section," said Mr. McInnis. "There are already many splendid farms with substantial buildings and large clearings. The soil is particularly fertile and grasses, both wild and tame, grow there in profusion. We laid out a road through the new town that will best serve all the settlers. The county road is now built as far as the western line of 62-18 and hence it will be necessary to build only six miles further in order to accommodate a hundred or more farmers."

Speaking of courthouse matters Commissioner McInnis said it was not the purpose of the board to go ahead with the condemnation of the remainder of courthouse square. "There is plenty room there now for courthouse purposes and it is unnecessary to go to the expense of acquiring additional ground. We simply acted upon those condemnation proceedings with a view to securing the sentiment of the people as to the courthous location.

"Personally I am strongly in favor of the present site, for two substantial reasons. If the courthouse is moved the county will lose the ground and if a new site is selected it will be necessary to abandon a splendid jail building. I figure that it would cost the county $200,000 to make a move to a more central location, and that is an item that should be taken into account.

"As to the matter of a more central location, so anxiously demanded by a few of Duluth's attorneys, if a more central location is desired it should be remembered that the courthouse is a county institution, and that the people of the northern half of the county have a voice in the matter. A really central courthouse would be located about six miles north of Virginia. Personally I would not object if it were to stop sixty miles south of that. It would be a nice thing, of course, if the courthouse were in the business section of Duluth, but considering the enormous expense involved, it would hardly be just to the taxpayers enther in Duluth or in other sections of the county. For these reasons I am in favor of building a splendid new courthouse on the present ssite when the proper time arrives."

ALIGATOR PETS.

Southern Man Who Has Them About the House.

In the language of the street, we all have a screw loose, says the New Orleans Picayune. Whether we be of of lowly station or stand high in the community, we are a trifle twisted in some particular. In other words, we all have a hobby.

A strikingly unique and particularly interesting hobby is that of an old antique merchant on Royal street, who looks quite as antique as the various antiquated decanters which grace his shop. Amid huge disordered piles of glassware, bric-a-brac and household goods, the old man, Herman Levi, was found yesterday while impressing upon a buyer the fact that an old table was cheap at half the price. From day to day he buys and sells, and when he started purchasing the old wares of the aristocrats of Frenchtown is not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

Yet Mr. Levi, as he stoops around among the molding silver, the jewels and the vases, has a hobby on his mind. Whatever he be selling he always has in his mind's eye, a single vision. A beautiful daughter of Abraham, some ideal of the long ago? An ambition ungratified, a longing unfulfilled? Oh, no, nene of these things for Herman Levi. He has a Rebecca at home on Basin street, and his ambition is to buy and sell is gratified each day from the time the sun rises over the narrow street until it sets.

Mr. Levi's hobby is the alligator.

He has sought them and caught them and bought them and sold them again. For a decade past he has sought out their hidden places in the Delta country where they live in the swamps. He has seen their modes of life and their great battles with their enemies, the garfish. He has had sixty-five of them in his house at one time. Once his arm was nearly chewed off by an alligator nearly twelve feet long, and the entire sixty-five were frozen to death in the freeze of a year ago, but still the alligator is his hobby.

"I guess it must be ten years ago that I first started after the alligators," said Mr. Levi reminiscently. "It was many years ago, anyhow. I used to chase all over the swamps after them, and my collection grew larger and larger as I knew more about how to catch them and handle them, until finally I had a big lot of them. I was thinking of sending them to be exhibited at the World's fair, but they all died, and I now have only a few. But I guess I had better tell you how I catch them before I tell you about them.

"You know the aligators are great twisters. Whenever they grab hold of anything or fight with any animal or fish they will just twist and twist, turning over and over, until they secure what they are after. The alligator is caught by running a lasso around his neck, and is quickly pulled out of the water. Then when he begins to twist a loop is thrown around his nose, drawing his mouth together. He twists again, but some one steps over him, facing his head, so that when he swings it sideways it will not strike. Then he is carted away to where it is desirable to keep him. It never will do to injure him or harpoon him in any way.

"They hover along the banks of the swampes and sometimes are found in great numbers from little sizes up. During the warm weather they come out on top of the ground and also during cold weather, when the sun shines; but when it is real cold, they stay beneath the surface entirely. When I lost all of mine, it was so cold beneath the water and above that they froze to death. In the cold season they never eat at all and drink but little water, and when the climate grows more favorable, they eat fish and meat.

"I have seen them many times. Roaming along the edge of the stream the animal will stoop for a drink. Out the aligator, which has been awaiting such a chance from beneath the surface of the water; swish will go the jaws like a shot will come the great jaws of the alligator, which has been awaiting such a chance from beneath the surface of water; swish, will go the jaws over the head of the animal and into the stream both will go. Once I saw a cow which was grazing along and stopped for a drink. The alligator caught its head, but the cow got away. Then the cow, not being as bright as some other animals, after grazing around some more, went back to the same place, and this time a great alligator, twice as long as an ordinary man, took in its huge jaws head, horns and all, and the cow went into the stream and was drowned and devoured.

"A little negro girl once sat by the stream. She stooped to fill her pail, and the jaws nearly severed her arm. She was being dragged into the stream when her cries were heard, and when rescued, her arm had to be amputated.

"They grow double in size every year until they get to be some five feet in length, and then they grow an inch a year and even less, so that when an alligator is twelve feet long, you may know that it is pretty old. I have one in my possession now that is about 250 years old. A while ago I had nine in a dark room. When I opened the door and the light penetrated, one of the alligators moved and touched the others. Then there was a great scrap. When they fight they catch each other lengthwise by the jaws and continue to twist sometimes for hours, until one or the other succumbs. Each grabbed one of the others, and they were hot at it in a minute, but I only had to punch them in the belly with a stick, and they forgot all about fighting. Often I have seen some great battles between them and their enemies, the garfish. The garfish are the stronger, but the alligators are more courageous, and when they are about the same size, the long saw-like jaws of each do fearful work.

"A year or two ago I caught a great big fellow, nearly thirteen feet in length, and had it in a tank. I was about to feed him when his great jaws closed over my arm, nearly at the shoulder, and the twisting process began. When he caught me he cut a great gash in my arm, but I managed to fight him so that I got almost free from his jaws closed on my hand and took away a large part of my fingers. To this day I bear the scars made by that one and by others, but I have a fascination for them and have quite a number about me now.'

80 PER CENT OF THE ADULT POPULATION SUFFER FROM ONE PAINFUL AILMENT.

Think what this means. Imagine the amount of misery that exists and is endured simply because people do not know there is an absolute cure.

The only way to cure any complaint is to remove the cause. There are very few diseases or ailments that can be cured by external application—and piles is not one of them. Piles can be cured; the treatment must, however, be internal, for the cause of piles is an internal disorder of the liver or the bowels. Even catarrh of the stomach and bowels can be cured by DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, The Internal Remedy. Here is an instance of what this practically infallible remedy will do:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—Dear Sir: I have nearly finished the former bottle of Perrin's Pile Specific and am practically well. My case was one which most physicians would have pronounced incurable, as I was afflicted with a dysentery and compelled to go to the toilet room from three to five times each day and each time would bleed from one-half to one teacupful. I had to resort to bandages and absorbent cotton to check the flow of blood, and now the past ten or twelve days there has been no sign of bleeding and my appetite is good; have gained ten pounds in weight and feel like a new lease of life was given me.

Very truly yours,
T. R. HARRIS,
October 20th, 1902. Yerington, Nev.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold by all reliable druggists at $1.00 the bottle, under an absolute guarantee to refund the money should this great internal remedy fail to cure.

BISHOP DAY RESIGNS

Sensational Incident In Methodist General Conference.

Resignation Accepted But No Successor Will Be Chosen.

Los Angeles, May 23.—The most sensational incident of the Methodist general conference occurred this morning in the resignation of Bishop James R. Day, of Syracuse, N. Y. His resignation was accepted by the conference. The conference then voted to indefinitely postpone the election of a successor to Dr. Day on the episcopal board and this action was taken to mean that there will be no balloting for an eighth bishop by this conference and that the board will remain as at present constituted.

In resigning, Bishop Day asked permission of the conference to retire from further attendance. The resignation came as a profound surprise to everyone except a few friends, with whom Bishop Day had consulted regarding his determination, and his statement which preceded his action was listened to by the delegates and crowded galleries with intense interest.

When Bishop Foss, who was presiding, asked the conference to hear a statement from Bishop-elect Day, as a matter of personal privilege, the assembly appeared to divine that something out of the usual was about to happen, and immediately granted permission. Mr. Day, who occupied a seat among the bishops on the platform, came to the front of the speaker's stand and in a tense and impressive tone of voice began his statement.

"I do not believe," said Dr. Day, "that any man in the conference will charge me with disloyalty to my constituency, and to my God. I believe that every one will concedee that I am actuated by honest motives and that I am fulfilling my duty in taking the action I am about to take.

I wish to make it clear that there has been no coercion by the board of trustees of my university and that material considerations did not in any way enter into this matter. I am acting solely on the dictates of my conscience and have arrived at a conclusion only after two days of earnest and prayerful consideration, during which time I have left my room only for my meals and did not seek the advice of counsel of any of my friends until I had fully made up my mind."

Dr. Day then read a formal document, addressed eto the general conference, tendering his resignation as bishop-elect of the Methodist Episcopal church. After thanking the conference for its patient consideration in hearing his prefatory remarks, he said in part:

"When I came to this general conference I was told by many friends I would be voted for and possibly elected as a member of the eepiscopal board. I determined to keep my mind open on the subject and at no time have I allowed myself to entertain the question as to my duty in the matter until after the third ballot.

"I then felt at liberty to withdraw my name and did so. In spite of this, my friends kept my name before the conference and when on Saturday morning, a most unhappy incident occurred, I was astonished to see votes going to me. I wished then again to make public withdrawal of my name, but was earnestly besought by my friends not to do so. Since my election I have thought of nothing but my duty to the church, of which you are the representatives.

"I am not influenced by material considerations. There are new factors in my problem. I must return to the work of Christian pastorate, and I feel myself called to take up the work of a bishop. I hereby tender my resignation of the office of bishop and ask the confidence of this general conference."

There was a murmur of surprise among the delegates, which was stilled in a moment by the voice of Dr. J. M. Buckley, seeking recognition of the chair. Dr. Buckley began his reading of the last paragraph in a statement made to the conference by Dr. Day on last Saturday, concerning a newspaper article which had to do with an alleged altercation between Dr. Day and Prof. Alex Haddie, as follows:

"I stand upon those principles today. But if I did not, after having given you this incident, after having appealed to your kindness and your fairness, I am not capable of permitting you to vote for me for the episcopal office. I most certainly would not have one by the remotest hint that I thought that it would use any such incident as this to promote myself to the high office."

Dr. Buckley stated that he had had no conversation with Dr. Day until Saturday evening and then had endeavored in every way to induce him to abandon his determination to resign.

"But," said Dr. Buckley, "when a man puts his action upon his conscience and duty to God, argument is futile, and if insisted upon becomes impertinent."

Dr. Buckley then quoted a paragraph of the discipline to show that Dr. Day was not resigning the office of bishop, but only the eligibility to that office, as he had not yet been consecrated. He argued that the conference had a perfect right to nullify the act of his election, and that precedent was furnished in the case of Joshua Snow, who resigned after his election at the general conference of 1820.

He moved that Dr. Day's resignation be accepted.

The question was put without debate and was carried unanimously.

Dr. Buckley thereupon moved that the conference proceed to ballot for a bishop to take the place of Dr. Day in order to carry out the recommendation of the episcopacy committee for eight new bishops.

Dr. Wright moved as a substitution for this motion that the further election of general superintendents be postponed. This was carried almost unanimously and is taken to mean that there will be no more general superintendents chosen by the present conference.

Dr. J. R. Day asked permission of the conference to retire to his home at Syracuse and this was promptly granted.

The vote for three missionary bishops was announced today as follows:

For Africa, Rev. I. B. Scott; for Southern Asia, William F. Oldham and John F. Robinson.

The conference rescinded its action of Saturday by which the reporters of a local newspaper were excluded from press privileges. It also fixed Thursday evening, May 26, as the time for consecrating new bishops. The remainder of the day's session was taken up in memorial services in honor of those bishops who have died during the last quadriennium.

WITTY TIM CAMPBELL.

No matter what turn the late Timothy J. Campbell's political views took he maintained the friendship and loyalty of his retainers by being willing to oblige them, says the New York Herald. Only once was he temporarily checked in his generosity to his constituents.

Certain clerks in the municipal courts wished to have a bill passed through the legislature, giving them an increased pay for several years back. Campbell was then in the state senate and he went with the author of the bill, the late Judge Joseph Koch, to call upon Grover Cleveland.

"Why, Tim," said Mr. Cleveland, "such a bill as this won't do. I'll surely veto it. It is retrospective and unconstitutional."

"Let the courts attend to that," replied the senator. "Besides, what's the constitution between friends?"

This remark stamped from the Campbell mint of epigram has passed current for more than a score of years.

Whenever Campbell found himself cornered for lack of special knowledge his wit came to his rescue.

Asked by James Oliver what defense should be made for two boatmen who had been arretsed for stealing an anchor and chain, Campbell replied: "Say that they found it floating on the river."

He was showing some constituents the wonders in the national capital when the effigy of Robert Fulton contemplating his invention, a sidewheel steamboat, prompted them to ask the man's name.

"I've forgotten it for a moment," was the reply, "but he was the inventor of roller skates and that's one in his hand."

INDISPENSABLE.

A doctor tells a good story in connection with a lad who until recently was in his employ, says Tit Bits. It was a part of his duty to answer the surgery bell and usher the patients into the consulting room. One morning there presented at the surgery door a young fellow with whom Buttons was on speaking term.

"Halloa, Jackson!" he remarked, "what's the matter with you?"

"Oh, I just want to see the doctor," was the reply.

"Have yer brought yer symptoms with yer?" inquired Buttons; "cos that's the first thing he'll ask you 'bout. If yer ain't brought 'em yer'd better drop back an' get 'em; he won't be down for another quarter of an hour, and he's awful particular about 'em."

REDUCES RATE

Milwaukee Road Makes Cut In Wheat Tariff to Chicago.

To Aid Grain Shippers Affected By Tie-Up on Lakes.

Notice has been received by C. L. Kenedy, commercial agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul at this point, that the rate from Duluth to Chicago on wheat has been reduced from 10 cents per hundred pounds to 7½ cents. The new rate will go into effect tomorrow.

It is not known just how long the rate is to be kept in effect, as it is believed to be made principally to aid in relieving the grain men owing to their being tied up on contracts for delivery of the product which they had made a price on based on lake transportation.

As announced Saturday in The Herald there had been a movement on the part of at least three lines here, the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, which was aimed to relieve the situation by carrying shingles and wheat at the lake and rail rate.

But this was only intended to apply to stuff which could be delivered by these lines in Chicago by today, and only such as had been sold prior to May 7. The trunk lines at Chicago had announced their willingness to help in this movement by hauling the shipments to the seaboard provided they received it in Chicago by today.

This entire movement is believed to have been aimed toward getting grain in all the eastern markets for the May delivery, as the May option has but one more day after this week to live, all grain exchanges and boards of trade throughout the country being closed next Sunday and Monday, which are the last two days of the month, Monday being Decoration day.

Failure to get the grain at the points of delivery under contract by the last of this week would have meant much losses to the brokers and shippers who undertook to land it, and as the grain handling interests is a strong one, it is supposed that the efforts of those concerned to get the aid of the railroads were met with a willing attitude by the railroad officials. It is understood that there is a meeting of the trunk lines in Chicago today to give a lower rate to the east to meet the rate announced by the Milwaukee road, which would give a special rate to the seaboard on grain from this district until such time as the navigation interests come to a point where they can move such freight.

It is believed that all the other lines will promptly meet the rate which the Milwaukee has made from here to Chicago, but is supposed to have done the initiative, at least it notified its representative here before any of the other lines. It is said that the Milwaukee determined on this arrangement last week when it had under consideration the movement of grain to be delivered in Chicago by today.

The stipulation by trunk lines that they would have to have grain at the reduced rate delivered to them in Chicago was to give them six days in which to get the stuff to Boston, which is the longest seaboard haul of the trunk lines.

If the trunk lines at their Chicago meeting today should arrive at any conclusion regarding a through rate to meet the situation, which rate would hold until the vessel interests can open navigation, it is believed that there would be much rejoicing among the grain people, as by lower grain rates they will be enabled to make contracts more freely.

The rail rate on wheat from Duluth and Superior to Chicago, as stated above, has been 10 cents, while the boat rate has been from 2 to 3 cents, depending largely on conditions, such as the size of the contract or the room a boat might have to carry grain. The vesselmen contend that moving grain in small lots is practically of no profit to them and that they must have a large cargo of it to make any money. The result is that those not regularly engaged in grain carrying do not care much to undertake handling it unless they are short on other freight, when they put in a little grain to help out. In some cases where there is no cargo or other freights offered they will carry a boat load of grain. But the package freight people have practically no desire for the grain trade, as it takes large and exclusive movements to make money on it.

At 10 cents per hundred by rail the cost of moving wheat is about 5½ cents per bushel, or almost twice what it is by boat to Chicago. The boat companies, in this traffic trouble, have felt practically no concern on their own account, as they have not been under contract to move any grain and all the package freight which has been received by the Anchor, Mutual and Western companies is hardly believed to exceed 5000 tons.

It is understood that the Western Transit company is moving considerable of this package freight on down by rail, while the Anchor line, up to this time, stands pat, and is holding such freight as it has received until things move a little farther. If the holding on of freight is any criterion, it looks as though that company might expect soon to have its boats under steam, but at the Anchor line office today no information on this point could be gained, and the company's representatives said they had received no word from below as to a settlement.

In the movement of shingles the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic is the only road which is believed to have taken measures to relieve the shippers, and it is said only half a dozen or so cars of the product have been sent out at the lake and rail rate. This rate is understood to be 2¼ cents per 1000 shingles.

Probably 1000 shingles would weigh 125 pounds on the average, and the rail rate of 13 cents per 100 fo rthis material seems high until their bulk is taken into account.

Figures on the movement of grain during the present trouble are impossible to obtain, but it is known that there is now in this port, loaded on vessels awaiting shipment, 1,770,868 bushels.

Rail shipments from Duluth since April 1 have been about as follows, in bushels: Wheat, 252,454; oats, 71,606; barley, 35,217; rye, 49,891; flax, 756,578.

While there is considerable flour in storage here awaiting orders of its shippers, the importance of flour, so far as urgency of shipment is concerned, is comparatively little. There is considerable of it in the storage houses of the Northern Pacific, Omaha and Great Northern, but the owners do not have to worry about it. Any flour that is needed by their customers the millers ship direct, without the trouble of taking it from the points of storage here, as they figure it more advantageous to send their customers' product direct from the mills all rail than to lessen the supplies here which can get the benefit of the low lake rates whenever navigation may open. As to higher freight rates the longer navigation is held off, it is said, the people who own the flour can hold off as long as anyone else, as they have been known to put their barrels in storage in ordinary times and not take them out again until November.

The transit companies have obligated themselves to ship very little goods from their customers. They put their tariffs into effect in April, and issued them to their railway friends, who accepted such freight as was offered to be routed by the lakes, and shipped it to them here and at other points on the lakes. But on May 4 the companies foresaw the tie-up and withdrew their tariffs, notifying all who held them that they were out of effect until further notice, so that between the time they were issued in April, when the lakes were not busy owing to winter still holding on, and the time of the withdrawal of the tariffs, May 4, the friendly railways had accepted only a small amount of freight.

The tariffs apply to passengers as well as freight, so that no connecting railways are routing passengers via the lake lines, saving such of the passenger lines, like the Canadian lines, as are now running.

HARRIMAN SUIT

Against Northern Securities Company Causes Caustic Remarks.

A Long Cross Fire Ensues Between Opposing Counsel.

Trenton, N. J., May 23.—Argument was resumed before Judge Bradford in the United States circuit court today in the suit brought by E. H. Harriman and Winslow S. Pierce to restrain the proposed plan of distribution of the assets of the Northern Securities company. Argument was opened by John G. Johnson, representing the Northern Securities company. He stated first that the controversy was not one between the stockholders. Neither was it a claim that the directors of the Northern Securities company had exceeded their powers. What is in dispute, he said, is a plan of the Northern Securities company to distribute property which the complainants claim to be their own. The case, therefore, stands, he said, on the question of title to the Northern Pacific railroad stock, which was formerly owned by Harriman and Pierce and which was afterwards acquired by the Northern Securities company. Mr. Johnson outlined a number of points upon which he would base his argument. Among other things he said the bill of complaint was insufficient because it made no averment of title. The bill, he said, violated the settled principles of equity that the complainants were guilty of laches and that at any rate they could not claim interest in new shares of common stock which they had never owned.

Mr. Johnson was rather caustic in his references to Mr. Harriman, whom, he said, became a director of the Northern Securities company and that the stock acquired by the Northern Securities company was acquired with the aid of Harriman's vote. The stock held by Harriman and Pierce in the Northern Pacific company, he said, was sold to Northern Securities company. From that time Harriman could have no possible right in it other than the interest in common with the stockholders of the Northern Securities company in property belonging to that company.

When the Northern Pacific stock was sold to the Northern Securities, Harriman and Pierce, with their eyes open, forewent any further rights in the stocks disposed of by them. Their present idea was to secure for themselves stock of the Northern Pacific, which had gone up, and to leave all other stockholders of the Northern Securities company to serve themselves as best they could out of what was left, and out of what Harriman and Pierce, in their bill, had claimed had depreciated in value.

Mr. Johnson then read some testimony given by Mr. Harriman, in which the latter stated that the negotiations for the sale of his Northern Pacific stock had been conducted with J. P. Morgan & Co. Mr. Johnson argued that there were no constructed relations between Harriman and the Northern Securities company. He quoted from Mr. Harriman's testimony to show that at the time the sale was agreed upon Harriman only knew vaguely that the stock was to go to a holding company, and he read Harriman's answers to the effect that the stock was to go to such a company.

Mr. Johnson read a resolution from the proceedings of the directors of the Northern Securities company, showing that this stock, 37,000,000 common and 41,000,000 preferred, should be acquired by about $92,000,000, with payments in $82,000,000 of the Northern Securities stock and by about $9,000,000 in cash. The purchase was authorized, and this, Mr. Johnson said constituted a complete sale, leaving Harriman with absolutely no rights with respect to the stock.

A long cross fire followed between the opposing counsel and the court as to the exact point upon which the complainants based their case. Mr. Johnson insisted that the contract of Harriman to sell his stock was a complete one in itself, and not a continuing one as maintained by the complainants and that the obligation of the Northern Securities to hold the stock of the Northern Pacific company was not one in which Harriman had any right. This prompted Judge Bradford to remark that he understood Mr. Johnson's point to be that the continued holding of the Northern Pacific stock by the Northern Securities company was one of the expectations by Harriman rather than a contract. Mr. Johnson replied that so far as the records were concerned there was nothing to justify an expectation.

The court then took a recess until 2 o'clock.

CHILDREN'S TRAINING.

Eleanor's parents recently had as guests at dinner an elderly couple of distinguished and charming manners, who had traveled extensively, had plenty of money and common sense, the latter tempered by genuine good feeling toward their fellow-men. They were old friends of Eleanor's grandparents, and the little girl found them altogether delightful, says the Brooklyn Eagle. She was particularly impressed by two things which they said.

Commenting upon the many changes since they had been here, the man spoke of a small school on the Heights which he had attended as a little lad and where good manners were as much insisted upon as arithmetic. "We were especially trained," said he, "in courtesy to our elders and in deference to women. The memory of that teaching was forcibly brought back to me when I was on a trolley today," he continued, "and I thought that all the changes had not been for the better. There was a vacant seat near me, and presently a woman entered the car with her son, a sturdy looking boy perhaps 9 years of age. The woman pushed him into the seat and stood herself, holding her bundles and fumbling in her purse. The boy sat calmly as if the proceeding was quite usual. Bad training for him! Shortly after another woman with a son of about 11 years took another vacant seat and the boy leaned against her, though he could easily have held on to the strap by the aid of his umbrella. When I arose later to offer my seat to a woman with a baby, woman No. 2 took her son by the arm, pointed to where I had been sitting, and said, 'Hurry, Karl, and get that seat before that woman sits down.' He did not succeed, for I immediately reseated myself and rose when the woman was opposite. Bad training again! Yet you would have supposed at first glance that both women were ladies. When those boys are young men their mothers will probably exclaim over their unfilial conduct, for which they, the mothers, will be directly responsible. Then think of what awful selfishness the wives of those young men will have to put up with! My father was the most lovely man in his family relations that I ever met, and it was the direct result of my grandmother's care. 'I brought him up,' she often said, 'with the thought that he was to be some woman's husband.'"

"Well, John," said his wife, "I also have been deeply impressed today by lack of training, and if those boys marry girls of the type I have just met I foresee nothing but misery." Here she told of making a call and of finding both mother and daughter, the latter a girl of about 19, just returned from a shopping expedition in preparation for the daughter's approaching wedding. "So," said the elderly woman, "I naturally began to talk to her about her housekeeping plans, and found she had none, but expected to live in a hotel, 'for Harry and I are both so fond of company,' she said. Just think how awfully stupid it would be for us to just see each other day after day! We adore a lot of people about.' And her mother said, 'Beatrice would find housekeeping too hard. She has never done anything of the kind.' I found that girl had absolutely no training in the duties of a housewife, though her mother was well brought up. 'It isn't the fashion now,' that mother said. But the girl was well up in bridge whist—had been to fourteen bridges' in the past week. Just think of that!

"Furthermore, this girl's life seems to have been made up of frivolousness and splurge, to obtain which one must spend money, yet she knew nothing of what you would suppose anyone who had had the spending of much money must know. She shook a check book at some young girls who were also calling and said, "See all the money I can spend for my wedding!' On being asked how much, she said, 'I do not know exactly; I think there are over a hundred checks in the book.' Her father had not explained the uses of the book to her, and she actually supposed her credit good at the bank as long as the blank checks lasted. I could not believe my ears, but her mother said, 'You see Beatrice is as innocent as a baby about money matters. Her father has always paid her bills and we have preferred she shouldn't be troubled.' Nice preparation for matrimony, is it not? Both her father and mother are to blame there, I think, but principally her mother. I was enabled to understand the cause of some of the society rottenness that shocks us!"

That night after Eleanor said her prayers she crept into her mother's lap and was silent, for a wonder. "What is it, lovey?" asked her mother. 'I was thinking," said the child, "of all Mr. and Mrs. Blank said, and of what you said the other day—if I wasn't a nice, polite little girl, folk would say my mother had not trained me properly. What an awful responsible position us women have!"

More sickness is now cured by Liquozone than by all medicines combined. Won't you let us buy you a 50c. bottle to try?

More people use Liquozone now than use medicine. Yet thousands still use drugs to cure germ troubles—to do what drugs can't do. If you are one of them, won't you let us buy a bottle of Liquozone and give it to you to try?

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone, because it kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. There is nothing else known which will do that. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine cannot destroy the cause of a germ trouble.

Liquozone is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables, and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen gas—is deadly to vegetal matter. Liquozone invariably destroys the germs of disease, wherever they are; yet to the human body it is the most helpful thing in the world.

Acts Like Oxygen.

The value of Liquozone lies in the fact that it does what oxygen does. Oxygen is the nerve food, the blood food, the scavenger of the blood. It is the very source of vitality, the most essential element of life. There would be no weak nerves, no impure blood, no inside germs if we could get into the blood an excess of oxygen. But oxygen is a gas, and unstable. An excess cannot be held in the blood.

In the making of Liquozone, we get the virtues of 1250 cubic inches of the gas into one cubic inch of liquid. The gas is derived in large part from the best oxygen producers. The process of making takes 14 days. The result is a wonderful product, stable and concentrated, holding all the virtues of the gas. It goes into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable.

But Liquozone is more than a germicide. Oxygen is nature's greatest tonic, and Liquozone is a vitalizer with which no other known product can compare. It not only destroys the cause of a germ trouble, but it quickly repairs all the damage which the germs have done. It gives to every organ just the help that it needs.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

Fargo, N. D., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superb pitching by Gehring and perfect fielding by the visitors, enabled them to take the third game of the series from the home team Saturday by the score of 4 to 2. Gehring was in magnificent form. He issued but two passes to first, struck out eight men, and allowed only five hits, one of which was a double.

Lempke, a new pitcher, was tried out by Fargo. While he was hit frequently, he kept the safe ones scattered until the eighth, when the White Sox landed on him hard and tallied three scores before he came back to earth.

The visitors got their first run in the first inning. O'Leary, Ball and Randall, the first three men up made safe hits, scoring the Duluth catcher. Lempke's good work in the box pulled the home team out of a bad hole, and the next three men died at first.

Fargo evened things up in the second inning. Rose and Lynch rapped out safe ones and Mankle's drive to left field scored the former.

For the next five innings it was a pitcher's battle between Gehring and Lempke. The Fargo man got poor support, however, and Duluth had men on third several times. The White Sox, on the other hand, took everything in sight and the home players went out in one-two-three order.

In the eighth Duluth found Mr. Lempke for six hits, and aided by an error or two succeeded in putting three men across the plate, winning the game. Fargo made a desperate effort to even things up in their half of the inning, but Gehring was too strong for them, and only one man scored.

The Duluth batting order was given a shaking up before the game and it seemed to prove beneficial. O'Leary led off and he rapped out three hits of five times up. The change was due to Corrigan's absence from the game. The Duluth right fielder had not paid the fine imposed upon him by Umpire Smith Friday and he was not allowed to play.

FIFTEEN INNINGS.

Superior Defeated In a Nerve-Racking Contest.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—For fifteen innings the Superior and Grand Forks teams battled in the diedling game of the series, while several hundred fans yelled themselves hoarse.

It was a pitchers' battle between Simmonds and Martin, in which the latter probably had a little the better of the argument. He allowed but six hits to his opponent's seven, and struck out ten men while Simmonds struck out six.

Grand Forks put two men across the plate in the first and another in the second, and it looked like easy money. But at this point Simmonds took a brace and for twelve successive innings he was a complete mystery to the home batters, not one of whom crossed the plate during that time.

Superior made a game up-hill fight. In the third inning one run was secured, and in the ninth, by a desperate batting rally, the score was tied.

For six nerve-racking innings the two teams battled for the winning run. Each team had men on bases in every inning after the ninth, and it was anybody's game. The unlucky number was too much for Simmonds, however. For twelve innings he had forced the boy at the score board to put up large round "O's," but in the thirteenth he met his Waterloo. Dillon, the first man up, sent a hot one to Keas, who fumbled it. Cheek forced Dillon at second, however. Nagel sacrificed Cheek to second, and then Scharnweber, who had made four bad errors during the game, retrieved himself by a clean single, and Cheek raced home with the winning run.

The game was the most exciting contest Grand Forks has seen in years, and the visitors received almost as big an ovation as did the home team for the game struggle against long odds.

The Duluth Fashions had little trouble in disposing of Cloquet yesterday afternoon at the baseball park. The local players had an attack of stage fright in the first inning, and several bad errors allowed the visitors to score four runs on two scratch hits. They took a brace, however, and in the remaining eight innings only three men crossed the plate. In the fifth inning the locals landed on Houle hard, and piled up five runs, securing a lead that could not be overcome.

SHUT OUT GAME.

Bemidji Does Not Allow Akeley a Score.

Cass Lake, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Bemidji and Akeley baseball teams played at Bemidji yesterday afternoon, and the Akeley team never had a "look-in" on the score sheet, Bemidji shutting the visitors out by a score of 11 to 0. Skooksberg, of Bemidji, and Ludwig, of Cass Lake, formed the battery for Bemidji, while Bergerson and Espe were in the points for Akeley. But one hit was secured by the Akeley team and but four players of the visiting team got as far as the third corner, Oman, of Cass Lake, played shortstop for the Bemidjis, and the feature of the game was a phenominal catch, which he made of a line hit. There was a large crowd at the game and enthusiasm ran high, despite the one-sidedness of the contest. A. G. Rutledge, of Cass Lake, umpired.

VAN PRAAGH IS PLEASED

Says Duluth Team Will Be High In Average.

"The team will come home in second place or better," said Manager Van Praagh this morning.

The Duluth manager returned on an early morning train from Fargo, where he witnessed the three opening games.

"We have a better team than Fargo, I believe," he said, "and I see no reason to take back my prophesy that Duluth would be pretty near the top when the season closes.

"The men are playing good ball. They are hitting regularly and are going after everything in sight in the field. The game Saturday was a pretty one. The boys played an errorless game in the field and Gehring was in the best form I have ever seen.

Martin was out of the game Saturday and yesterday, and the team was weakened somewhat. He was hit on the hand by a bat which Zink accidentally let fly, and his hand was nearly broken. It is better, however, and he will be in the game again today.

"The team left for Crookston last evening and will play there today. Shaw will throw and they should take two out of the three.

"That man Schooley, who was in the box yesterday, was a pitcher I picked up in Fargo. Yesterday's game was an exhibition game only, and I put him in the box in order to save the regular pitchers for the league games. He pitched good ball yesterday, however, and he may be kept until Owens reports and be given another trial.

"Owens is expected every day. I thought he would be there before I left, but he did not show up.

"That Umpire Smith they have at Fargo is a dandy. He knows the game from start to finish and there was not a thing in his work in any of the games that could be objected to. He has plenty of backbone, and he sticks to his decisions and never tries to make up for a bad one. He is also a very fine fellow personally and popular with the players. If the other two are as good as he is, there should be no kick coming.

"There were good crowds at Fargo for all of the games, and I hear that the other cities did as well or better. They should have a great crowd in Winnipeg tomorrow for May 24, a Canadian holiday, and also in Crookston, where the season opens today.

"The team will be home June 2, and if it keeps up its present gait, it will land here in first or second place.'

The specialties will be changed and the usual Monday night favor will be extended to women.

"THE GAMEKEEPER."

"The Gamekeeper" will be presented at the Lyceum Thursday evening. Thomas J. Smith, a young singing comedian, is the star of the company. He is said to be a quiet, natural comedian and the fortunate possessor of a true ringing tenor voice, and sings his songs with rare expression. The story of "The Gamekeeper" gives Mr. Smith and his talented associates many opportunities for effective scenes, and they are handled admirably.

ORDER FOR HEARING PROOF OF FOREIGN WILL—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis.—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, May 16th, 1904.

In the matter of the estate of Helen Stockton Haines, deceased:

Whereas, certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the last will and testament of Helen Stockton Haines, late of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, deceased, and the probate thereof in the office of the register of wills in and for the city and county of Philadelphia and state of Pennsylvania, have been delivered to this court;

And whereas, Samuel S. White, Jr., of Philadelphia aforesaid, has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said Helen Stockton Haines lately died in said county of Philadelphia testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said county of St. Louis, and that said petitioner is named in said will as an executor thereof and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to him, Granville B. Haines and J. Clarence White, issued thereon;

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument and the said petition, be heard before this court at the probate office in said county, on Monday, the thirteenth day of June, A. D. 1904, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument;

And it is further ordered, that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at the city of Duluth in said county.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., this 16th day of May, A. D. 1904.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of six hundred and seven and 97-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Benjamin Torvund and Rikka Torvund, his wife, mortgagors, to Gertrude F. Allen, mortgagee, bearing date the 29th day of November, 1882, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota, on the 6th day of December, 1893, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 104 of Mortgages, on page 129.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Gertrude F. Allen, mortgagee, to Marcus F. Bates, by written assignment dated the 23rd day of May, 1902, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 29th day of May, 1902, at one o'clock p. m., in Book 188 of Mortgages, on page 38, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz.: Lot seven (7), block one hundred and twenty (120), London addition to Duluth, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the register of deeds in and for said county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said St. Louis county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the 14th day of June, 1904, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of six hundred and seven and 97-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars, attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated May 2, A. D. 1904.

PANTON & WHITE COMPANY

THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE — WHERE QUALITY IS PARAMOUNT

The great mill-end sale

A grand success!

The crowds came with the opening of the store this morning—they came faster and faster all day long. They will come still faster tomorrow, when today's shoppers have told their neighbors and friends of the rich bargains in every department and on every floor.

"Enough said."

COME TOMORROW!

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Saturday evening the senior class gave its annual play in the Assembly hall of the high school before a large and appreciative audience. The front of the hall above the stage was tastefully decorated in the class colors, blue and white, while along the gallery every other light was covered with blue tissue paper, lending a very pleasing effect to the whole scene. Suspended from the ceiling was a large, handsome shield, with the class numerals, '04, engraved upon it.

The plays, as in past years, were under the direction of A. F. M. Custance. A class may go through three years of its life without knowing Mr. Custance well, but no class ever graduates without a great wonder as to how the school could get along without him. The play, with all its attendant fun, is made possible through his untiring efforts, and however mediocre the ability, the production is whipped into shape so that it poses for a few months as the "Very best that ever was given."

The first of the plays given Saturday evening was "The Emerson Club," a frivolous little skit, played by nine girls and one young man. The meeting of the Emerson club, on the day his essay on "Love" is to be considered, occupies the time of the play, and the talk naturally turns to any exponents of love in their immediate acquaintance. Miss Mabel Ryan as Mrs. Wyeth, the deaf, elderly lady, was particularly good, and Miss Charlotte Mallory as Mrs. Neuman, with her ingenious remarks and naive manner, was delightful. The other parts were well taken by Misses Effie Smith, Winnifred Smith, Cora Helm, Frances Swift, Mildred Hobbs, Helen Coburn, Gertrude Robinson, and Carver Richards was good as the Mr. Henpeck, introduced by special request to the meeting of the club.

"Mr. Bob" was a more pretentious play, of two acts, and was well presented. Throughout it was carried on with a vim and dash that made the fun natural and spontaneous. Miss Nina Burbank as the old maid aunt was good, and Miss Janet Adams as Kitty Rogers carried her part with an ease and naturalness that was even not disturbed when bits of dialogue entirely new to her were introduced. Miss Grace Staples was an acceptable "Mr. Bob." Miss Murlen Fellows as Patty, the stage-struck maid, with her twinkling red slipper bows and gay little manner, was most sprightly and pleasing. Harry Gilman as the butler looked and acted the part well, and Phillip Royson, as acted by Shirley Alexander, was a very real character. Gilbert Rupley was a good, puzzled, mystified and disgusted Mr. Brown. Ralph Crandall appeared as the footman. Many expressions of approval are being heard for the class entertainment of 1904.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

Sunday Afternoons Becoming a Popular Feature.

A CURE FOR BLUE MONDAYS.

Are your Mondays dark and drear,
Void of comfort, rest or cheer,
And of all that life holds dear?
Do you sometimes shed a tear?

Listen now and you shall hear,
Of a cure for all these ills you fear.
Instead of going far and near,
On Sundays spend a few hours here.

Y. W. C. A.

Lunch. Music. A pleasant Time.

The above little notice was scattered broadcast last week as invitations to the informal Sunday afternoons held at the Young Women's Christian association. Miss Grace Maxwell was hostess for the afternoon. These afternoons are much appreciated by the girls who are boarding in the city away from their homes.

* * *

The plans for the "gym frolic" are nearly completed. The different classes of the gymnasium department have charge of the entertainment and the plans, which are to be kept secret, are said to be most ludicrous and the members are being besieged for invitations for the affair, which is to be given on Tuesday evening, May 31.

* * *

Rev. C. G. Kindred spoke at the devotional meeting last Friday at the association rooms and his talk was so greatly appreciated and enjoyed by the members present that he has been requested to speak again. He will address a noon meeting tomorrow. Mr. Kindred is from Chicago and is conducting evangelistic meetings at the First Christian church during this week.

The food sales, which are held each Saturday at the rooms, are well patronized and are becoming a feature of the association work that many housekeepers of the city are depending on for some of their Sunday dainties.

The Griggs Lectures.

This evening the first of a series of three lectures to be given by Edward Howard Griggs will be delivered. The lectures are to be given at the First Methodist church, and have been the subject of much interest and discussion. This evening's subject is "Florence," which will be an illustrated lecture. Tomorrow evening "St. Francis of Assisi" will be the subject of the lecture.

Reception to Prof. Griggs.

Tomorrow afternoon the Ladies' Literature class, which is instrumental in bringing Professor Griggs to this city to lecture, will entertain at an afternoon reception in his honor. The affair will be given at the home of Mrs. H. C. Marshall, on East Fifth street. All club members of the city are invited, and holders of tickets to the lectures.

Peabody-Routier.

Yesterday morning the wedding of Miss Bertha Peabody and Nicholas Roittier, both of Mason, Wis., took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hickerson, of 563 West Second street, yesterday. The wedding took place at 9:30, and Rev. Roderick J. Mooney read the service. Mr. and Mrs. Roittier left during the day for St. Louis for a wedding trip and will return to Mason, where they will make their home.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. H. S. Webster arrived the latter part of the week from Indiana to join her husband, Rev. H. S. Webster, pastor of Jonn's Episcopal church.

* * *

Mrs. M. Thompson, of 312 Fourteenth avenue east, left last evening on a visit of several months to California. She was accompanied by her grandson, Master William F. Winship.

* * *

Miss Winnifred spent Saturday and Sunday at Minneapolis.

* * *

Mrs. John Millen left yesterday for a visit with friends at Chicago.

* * *

Miss Catherine E. Brown, formerly a teacher in this city, and Richard Woodville, of Northfield, Minn., will be married at St. Paul on June 26. Miss Brown is at present teaching at Eureka, Utah. Mr. and Mrs. Woodville will reside at Northfield.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE INNOCENT THIRD PARTY

By Kennett Harris.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

A year is all I ask," said the girl, passionately; "just a year of Guyeriezs in Pesth and I am an artist. Of course, I am not an artist now. Guyeriezs may have nothing to teach me, but I am not an artist, as far as a good engagement goes, until I have received the trade mark him Pesth—made in Hungary."

"You are modest," said Starcom.

"You mean because I say that Guyeriezs may have nothing to teach me? Well, tell me your candid opinion. Has he? But did ever a genius come out of Chicago? If I play—and I know I can play—they say: 'Who is she? Oh, a little Chicago girl. I think she studied in Boston for a year or two. That explains the technique, of course.' I tell you, my friend, you've got to come before the public with European prestige. It's disgusting, but it's true. Not even Boston can wipe out the deep damnation of Chicago."

"Cut it out, Mirian," advised the young man, his eyes fastened hungrily on the dark beauty of her animated face. "Let's look over the list of vacant flats—and you can play to me evenings. You wouldn't get anything but heartbreaks and little squabbles out of the other, even if you succeeded."

She looked at him half contemptuously, half pityingly. "It may be as you say, Dick," she said, "but I won't be happy until I've had my chance and tried it. The best thing you can do is to help me."

"Help you to spoil my life."

"Nonsense! I've told you that if it were anyone it would be you, but if I came to you now I would spoil your life and my own, too. I want my year at least. You can't lend me the money, because you are too poor. If you could I wouldn't take it. Lots of people would lend me the money. Some of them would give it. Well, lend me your brains."

"Couldn't you sell your fiddle? You say it's worth $5000. I should think that was an easy way out of the difficulty."

"I thought you would show a little more intelligence than that. My violin! I couldn't, Dick; you know I couldn't. It's all I have left, and dad's gift, besides. Poor dad! If he had only lived!"

Tears stood in the beautiful dark eyes and Starcom looked embarrassed. "May I smoke?" he asked, presently. "It helps me to think, and I want to think of some way out for you." She nodded and he lit a cigar.

"Would you pawn it?" he asked suddenly, after a few puffs. "I should think that you ought to get a third of its value—that's what they generally allow me when I hypothecate my family jewels owing to temporary financial stress."

"The last financial stress was roses for me at that little concert, wasn't it?" she asked, smiling. "How many jewels did you hypothecate, Dick?"

"Eight," answered Starcom promptly. "It was jeweled in eight holes and had a lever movement."

"I thought that was it," she said, in a softened voice. "Dick, if I thought I could be happy I'd take you now, but I couldn't make you happy unless I was, my dear boy. You are good."

"Don't get that idea in your head," said Starcom. "I'm not. I'm just considering a burglary to help you out."

"Don't do that," she said. "No, Dick, I really respect you, and I want to have somebody respectable to lean on."

"Come on, then," said Starcom, airily. "I'm ready. I have another plan," he continued, when he had recovered from the withering glance she gave him. "I won't tell you what it is until I make sure about it. It will take ten days. Can you wait as long as that?"

"I expect to wait longer," she answered.

Within the time mentioned Starcom had his plan matured. "I didn't tell you what it was," he said, "because I know you would have thought it absurd. I have a friend in New York state—Cahoondawachick. He is an eccentric old chap, and rich as mud. He's going to lend you the money, Miriam."

"Dick, you are crazy."

"Not at all. He's a collector, and he wants your Amanti. Wait a moment, now, and don't interrupt. He will lend you the money on it on condition that if you die before you pay the fiddle goes to him, and he keeps it for you until you get back from Pesth, whether you pay before or not. He wants to inspect it first, of course, but that's a matter of form. We'll express it to him tomorrow, and I'll come around in the morning and help you to pack it."

"And do you think I'd trust it to the express company?"

"Oh, you'll insure it, of course," said Starcom. "I'll see to that, too. It's all right, Miriam."

The girl offered other objections, but Starcom overruled them in a brisk, businesslike fashion, and the next day he saw to the insurance and brought the box around for the packing. It was nailed when he brought it, and he was obliged to as the younk woman for a hammer and chisel. She was gone two or three miutes only, but when she came back the box was opened.

"I got tired of waiting for you, and pulled the nails with my teeth," said Starcom, in his absurd way. "Now for the Amanti."

"How peculiarly the box smells," remarked the girl, putting her pretty little nose down to it. "Like naptha, or kerosene, or something."

"That's nothing," said Starcom. "It'll keep the damp out. A little more of the cotton to hold it snug, and then I'll trouble you for some nails. These are bent and I want to fasten it securely. Too bad to bother you to go out again."

That night the evil-smelling box, covered with labels and seals, was packed in an express car speeding to the affluent violin collector of Cahoondawachick. At nine o'clock the next morning it was piled with a heap of other baggage against the shady side of the Wigton depot, awaiting transfer to the branch line of Cahoondawachick. At 9:12, from some cause unknown—possibly a carelessly thrown match—the box caught fire. Wigton is a lonely sort of a place for a junction, and before the station agent and a stray passenger who was awaiting the Chicago express, noticed ethe blaze there was not much left of the box to jump on. The station master jumped on it, however, and rescued some charred splinters of a violin. "It's only a fiddle," he said to the passenger; "a good thing it was nothing valuable."

And so Miram went to Pesth. She really was grieved over the loss of her Amanti; but Dick's remorse for having induced her to take the risk was so touching that she almost forgot her sorrow in consoling him. And then, of course, the insurance money softened the blow. When she came back she had the Guyoriezs trade mark, but she did not stem enthusiastically anxious for a career.

"I wish I had not gone," she confessed to Starcom. "If I had my old violin back and my old life I believe I could be happy, after all. I'm worn out, Dick."

"What do without the violin?" asked Starcom.

"Dick, I've missed you the whole dreary time," she said, with a sigh of content, as he took her into his arms.

It was rather a surprise for Miriam when she found that she had married a successful speculator. She was rather shocked, too, for she had ideas on the subject. It was another surprise when she found her old Amanti carelessly lying on the piano in the gorgeous music room that had been planned as another surprise. Starcom explained that an unscrupulous collector had substituted the cheap violin for the Amanti before it was shipped, but he was bound, in view of restitution, not to divulge that unscrupulous person's name.

"I've sent the insurance company a check," he concluded, "so I guess nobody's got any kick coming. I know I haven't. It was a good thing, though that the spurious instrument happened to get burned."

Mrs. Starcom might have asked a good many questions, but she is trying to be satisfied with her husband.

WHAT THE KING EATS.

What's Fit For Him.

A Masaschusetts lady, who has been through the mill with the trials of the usual housekeeper and mother, relates an interesting incident that occurred not long ago. She says:

"I can with all truthfulness say that Grape-Nuts is the most beneficial of all cereal foods in my family, young as well as old. It is food and medicine both to us. A few mornings ago at breafast my little boy said:

"'Mamma, does the king eat Grape-Nuts every morning?'

"I smiled and told him I did not know but that I thought Grape-Nuts certainly made a delicious dish, fit for a king." (It's a fact that the king of England and the German emperor both eat Grape-Nuts).

"I find that by the constant use of Grape-Nuts not only as a morning cereal, but also in puddings, salads, etc., made after the delicious recipes found in the little book in each package it is proving to be a great nerve food for me besides having completely cured a long standing case of indigestion." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There is no doubt Grape-Nuts is the most scientific food in the world.

Ten days' trial of this proper food in place of improper food will show in steady, stronger nerves, sharper brain and the power to "go" longer and further and accomplish more. There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Pierre Interested In Hot Water Project to Heat City.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—The plan of securing heat from hot water deep in the earth, which has been followed in Boise, Idaho, is creating much discussion in this city, where the chances of carrying out the same plan appear to be good. At Boise the temperature of the water secured was 100 degrees at 1000 feet, and 150 degrees at 2000 feet. In this city the water has a temperature of 97 degrees at 1000 feet, and it might be necessary to go more than 2000 feet to get the required temperature.

Chamberlain—The artesian well just completed for the Chamberlain Electric Light company, stands at the head of all wells in the artesian basin of South Dakota. It is an eight-inch bore, 950 feet deep, and flows 8479 gallons of water a minute. With the pipe wide open it throws a solid column of water twenty-five feet into the air from the top of the pipe. Reduced to six-inches a stream was thrown straight into the air 158 feet.

Rapid City—There will be a grand celebration in this city on the Fourth of July. Every year the Indian school at this place lets out about that time, and several hundred ndians come from Pine Ridge agency to take their children home. A special feature of the celebration will be the sports engaged in by the Indians. Supt. S. B. Davis of the Rapid City Indian school is strongly advocating the government to make an appropriation for an addition to the school, which shall teach the industrials. At numerous times prominent Indians, who have visited the school at this place, have taken up this matter and talked intelligently on the question. They claim that when their children return to the agency with a literary education alone, that they do not amount to as much as when they have taken education in the industrial pursults. The Rapid City Indian school is one of the largest attended in the West.

Pierre—Governor Herreid has commissioned Ralph L. Miller of Brookings, and C. S. Dillon, of Sioux Falls, members of his personal staff. Both young men are students of the agricultural college, who have distinguished themselves in both the military and academic departments.

Sturgis—Ludwig Nelson, residing near Vale, was brought here seriously cut by a harrow. He was fixing the lines on the horses when the animals became frightened and ran away, dragging the harrow. One tooth of the harrow entered the calf of Nelson's leg and tore it open, another tore one foot open and the third struck his watch and smashed it. The timepiece prevented the teeth of the harrow from penetrating the man's body.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grafton—One death occurred here on Friday night from scarlet fever and two new cases were reported Saturday. It is probable the schools will be closed.

Work on the paving commenced this week. The sandstone for the curbing has arrived and the grading of the streets is progressing. Grafton will have fourteen blocks this summer. Cement sidewalks have been ordered in the paved districts.

Mandan—The judicial Republican convention for the Sixth district was held here and Judge Winchester, of Bismarck, was renominated. The nine counties in the district were all represented, and the nomination was unanimous. It is not likely that there will be a Democrat put up against Winchester. He has been judge of this district fourteen years. The term for which he is now nominated is four years.

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIANS

Will Hold Forty-First Annual Meeting at Greenville.

Greenville, Pa., May 23.—The forty-first annual meeting of the United Presbyterian general assembly of North America will convene in the First United Presbyterian church next Wednesday and the session will continue for one week.

The meeting promises to be one of the most interesting that the body has held since the organ question was decided. Many important questions of vital interest to the church will be acted on, and indications are that there will be a division on several of the most important. Action on the adoption of the new membership covenant is expected to bring forth the greatest discussion that has occupied the body for many years. The question was sent down in overture from the last general assembly at Tarko, Mo. It was defeated in the presbyterics, because of a memorial from Xenia presbytery, setting forth that the time was premature for its adoption in the general assembly.

The matter of an advance movement in foreign missionary fields will bring forth a well-worked-out plan, which, if adopted, will be the greatest missionary movement exploited by any church in years. It is no less than the sending of 500 new missionaries into foreign fields.

Another question will be the union of the United Presbyterian church with the Associated Reform church of the South. The only objection to this union likely to arise is the historical attitude of the church on the slavery question. This may prove a stumbling block. In addition to a thorough discussion of the church educational institutions, the question of thee lection of college pastors, in addition to the presidents, will come up for action.

The election of a moderator will develop a friendly contest, in which personalities will count for much. The leading candidates for the office include Dr. J. W. Waitherspoon, of Allegheny; Dr. T. B. Turnbull, of Philadelphia; Dr. M. S. McCord, of Boston, and Dr. W. A. Mackenzie, of New York city.

VROOMAN IS ILL.

Famous Socialist Is Suffering From Nervous Prostration.

Baltimore, Md., May 23.—Walter Vrooman, the Socialist, who spent a large fortune furnished by his wife, in endevoring to carry out Utopian schemes in the West, is seriously ill from nervous trostration at Cambridge, Md. It is believed, however, the he will recover.

Little has been heard of Vrooman since the collapse of his Western Co-operative company, which conducted a string of stores in West and Southwest, followed by the removal of the Ruskin university, which he founded, from Trenton, Mo., to Chicago.

ORMONDE, THE WORLD FAMOUS HORSE, DEAD.

San Francisco, May 23.—Ormonde, the world famous horse, is dead. He was killed at the Menlo Park stock farm of W. O' D. MacDonough, to relieve great suffering from paralysis.

Ormonde, who was foaled in 1883, the son of Ben D'Or-Lily Agnes, bred and owned by the duke of Westminster, won every race that he started in and earned for his owner in stakes the sum of $142,325. He also had the distinction of winning all three of the great events of the British turf—2000 guineas, the derby and the St. Leger. He was eventually sold to his late owner for $150,000 for breeding purposes.

SPANISH MONKS EXPELLED.

New York, May 23.—When the Spanish monks, who came here from the Philpines, received orders of the government for their expulsion, says a Herald dispatch from Caracas, Vez., they answered that they would not leave only at the point of bayonets or on orders of their superior. All were immediately arrested.

CARE OF THE BOYS.

"Boys will be boys," and for enjoyment of wholesome sport, even if it is at times a little boisterous, they are not to be blamed. But boys should also be gentlemen, and at all times so conduct themselves that they do not annoy and trespass upon the rights of others. The disposition of many city boys to develop into pestiferous hoodlums is altogether too marked and it is well that the police force should be vigilant in their efforts to prevent acts of vandalism on the part of hoodlum gangs.

The arrest of a number of boys on East Fourth street yesterday on the charge of disturbing the peace of the neighborhood should have a wholesome deterrent effect upon other gangs of boys so disposed, for nothing will more rapidly lead to the development of evil tendencies than the education received by boys who join in the depredations of these hoodlum gangs.

The experience of Probation Officer Withrow has led him to the conclusion that one of the greatest sources of boyhood contamination is the alley shack, where many youths gather to read vicious literature, smoke cigarets and indulge in evil and profane conversation. The police should be given power to prevent such congregations and disperse them whenever found. Furthermore, The Herald believes that the practice of boy cow-herders and their companions to gather in gangs in the outskirts of the city, leads to much devilment and to future crime. It is doubtful if any parent is justified in permitting a boy to engage in this occupation unless he has means of knowing exactly what is going on, and what kind of company his boy is keeping. The very nature of their employment is a danger. The time hangs heavily on their hands and they must find some sort of occupation and amusement. The devil always finds work for idle hands to do. The poets have often sung of the ideal life of the shepherd who tends his flocks, but they did not sing of the herder whose flocks graze in city outskirts.

Parents should be vigilant as well as the police as to the character of company their boys are keeping during their idle moments. Furthermore, public play grounds, under the supervision of somebody in authority, should be provided for the children of all cities, while much could be done to prevent the development of hoodlum gangs by providing club rooms, with games, gymnasium and baths, where boys could congregate for wholesome amusement and exercise, when outdoor play is impracticable. There are several of Duluth's outlying districts in need of such institutions, and herein is opportunity for the exercise of a practical philanthropy that would be of more benefit to the rising generation than all the Sunday schools.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Judge Severance, of Mankato, one of the ablest district judges in the state, has written a letter which is published in another column, urging that no change should be made in the present composition of the state supreme court, pointing out the desirability of having a stable court and of keeping that tribunal out of politics as much as possible under the elective system.

At the last meeting of the State Bar association, it was recommended that the order of nominations by the political conventions be changed, placing the judicial nominations at the head of the list. The Republican state central committee adopted this suggestion and made the change in the call for the convention. Of course, the convention can make nominations in any order that it pleases. Some of the politicians are now urging that the convention should not follow the suggestion of the state central committee, but it is hoped that their wishes will not prevail. Despite all the talk about combinations with candidates for other places on the ticket, The Herald is in a position to state most positively that the present judges are endeavoring in every possible way to keep free from the other controversies involved in the campaign. It is their hope, as well as that of the great majority of the members of the bar, that the time is approaching when there will be independent conventions and elections of all the judges, district and supreme, and in this way the courts will be freed altogether from connection with politics. Placing the judicial nominations first on the list is a step in this direction.

WHO LOVES SCANDAL?

Having had occasion recently to defend mere man as against assertions of women's superiority in a moral sense, The Herald is now constrained to take up a club in behalf of womankind and belabor the manager of the Associated Press, Melville E. Stone. Addressing the General Federation of Women's clubs at St. Louis yesterday, Mr. Stone is reported by the Associated Press as having made the assertion that "not a line of scandal would be printed in an American newspaper were it not for the women." He went much further than this. Said he: "If the women of the General Federation of Women's clubs will set their faces against scandal the objectionable in journalism will disappear."

Mr. Stone is certainly a brave man. If his view is correct he went directly to the seat of the trouble and rapped it hard. But what can be said of his discretion? Or his accuracy? "Not a line of scandal," said he, "if it were not for women." Then he made the bold assertion that the club women alone were the greatest sinners in the desire to read salacious gossip, for what else could he mean when he said that the objectionable would entirely disappear from journalism if the club women would only set their faces against it? Club women are few; outsiders are many. The outsiders read newspapers, too. Do these not enjoy a little scandal seasoning with their daily news?

In the sense that women are largely responsible for the moral training of the male sex, they are also partly responsible for the kind of reading that men enjoy, but to say that men do not care to read scandal and that women alone are responsible for its appearance in the press of the country is preposterous and scandalous in itself. If every woman in Christendom were to be suddenly forbidden to read it is doubtful if the character of newspapers would change a particle in that respect, for as woman is, so is man, and what interests one interests the other.

If the manager of the Associated Press is a club man he must keep his ears stopped when in the presence of his fellow members or else he belongs to a mighty select club if he never noticed any desire on the part of the male sex to read or discuss scandals. But perhaps what he wanted to say was that woman is largely responsible for the character of the reading matter that appears in the daily newspaper, and that if all womenkind would make a concerted effort they could do much to improve it. If that was his purpose nearly everybody can agree with him. But for all that he will be compelled to wait for the milennium before newspapers that taboo all mention of the world's wickedness will be popular with either sex.

WHAT CAUSES FRECKLES?

What causes the freckle that comes on the skin of the white man and woman? Is it not the dark pigment remaining in the blood that is brought to the surface by sun and wind? This question comes to mind after reading the assertion of Bishop Turner of the African M. E. church that the first man was black and his white descendants have become bleached during their earthly wanderings. The bishop may be right, but his memory on that point is probably no better than that of anybody else.

Much depends upon what part of the earth man first trod. If the Garden of Eden was near the equator the chances are that the good bishop is right. If it was near the North pole it is more likely that the first man was white. Furthermore there may have been more than one Garden of Eden at widely separated points, and the first man may have been plural in number and both black and white. However, it is more reasonable to suppose that primitive man was produced somewhere in the tropics and that those who moved toward the poles not only became whiter, but improved more rapidly in mind than those who remained near the equator. At any rate it is plain that man has made better progress in the temperate zones than he has near the equator.

Bishop Turner, who is a man of wide experience and learning, is also the author of a hymnal, and the title of one of his hymns is "Wash Me and I Shall Be Whiter Than Snow," which is an indication that even he believes that, as far as the heart is concerned, snowy whiteness is preferable to the inky blackness of night, no matter what the color of the first man.

But when you see that freckle on your nose do not forget that it may have been handed down to you by some ancestor whose whole body was covered with one large freckle that wouldn't come off.

NOW AND HEREAFTER.

The Minneapolis Tribune is a paper whose Republicanism and party fealty cannot be doubted. To the best of The Herald's recollection it has never bolted a single bolt. It is true blue after the nominations are made. But, like the St. Paul Pioneer Press, it has a habit of telling the truth about the tariff between campaigns, especially since such a strong sentiment in favor of lower tariffs and wider markets has developed among the millers and other manufacturers of the Flour City.

Speaking of the recent Iowa state Republican convention the Tribune says that "the Iowa idea is to get into office by promising to reform the tariff, and then to 'stand pat.' Iowa has no patent on this idea. It is not so unfamiliar in this state, or even in this county. It works beautifully for a while, especially in boom times. But is is likely to breed Democratic victories if practiced too persistently, especially when depression of business drives home the lesson of artificial high prices with dwindling trade and industry."

The Minneapolis Tribune's well-known antagonism to John Lind leads it to devote some of its space every few days to an effort to stir up trouble that will have a tendency to prevent his re-election, and yet he is the only man on the Minnesota delegation who could be free to vote against the Republican stand-pat policy, no matter how much some of the others might feel like doing so.

It is not difficult to agree with the Tribune that "we have reached a point where business, at home and abroad, can be stimulated only by lower prices. The original theory of protection was that when home industries were once built up, domestic competition would reduce prices to the consumer. But these amazing Iowa stand-patters denounce a policy that would 'provoke American industries to make war upon each other.' Are we to have no more competition anywhere, either at home or abroad? We cannot think it wise for the Republican party to pledge itself to this principle of government for the next four years."

Yet it is probable, when the Minnesota stand-patters that control the Republican party have selected their candidates for congress the Minneapolis paper will fall into line and support the congressional nominees who will vote for a continuance of that policy, and fasten it upon the nation for another four years. The voter who desires revision and reciprocity will not get it by voting the Republican ticket this year.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

"The Russians are experimenting with a bullet-proof breastplate. Why not a bullet-proof bustle?" Is this, from the Courier-Journal, one of those "pert paragraphs" that Col. Watterson says should be allowed to die a natural death? (No flowers.)

The grief in some quarters over the exclusion of Anarchist Turner is needless. If the preaching of anarchy is needful in this country there are more than plenty of citizen anarchists to do it, and these ought to be protected against the "philosophical" anarchist of Europe. Freedom of speech is a great and sacred thing, but license to preach murder is another altogether different matter.

Unlike the hero in Otis Skinner's play, "The Harvester," a Michigan man who returned home after a long absence whipped his grown-up son because he thought he was a suitor of his wife. The man who took Enoch Arden's place would have had a hard row to hoe with a husband like that.

HOTEL GOSSIP

C. L. Fry, of Grand Rapids, who was here few days ago, has made a great reputation as a fisherman this spring. Not only has his general conduct in the fishing line been exceptional, owing to the large size of his string, but one day last week he caught one of the largest pike ever taken from the water contiguous to Grand Rapids.

It was last Wednesday evening that it occurred. He was sitting silently by the water's edge and had cast in his line. Pretty soon there was a twitching, and when he thought the bite was well on, he started to lift in. But there was nothing doing upward and inward. After considerable straining Mr. Fry began to think he had hold of the bed of the river, but it was not so. After a short rest he began to pull again and finally landed his fish. It was a 7-pound pike. Mr. Fry is agent of the Great Northern at his town.

Business appears to have been falling off at the hotels lately. The registers do not show any noticeable diminution in the number of arrivals, maybe, but the proprietors are noticing the difference. The people that the hotels make money on are those who come and stay a couple of days or more, and not simply those who take a meal or two. So it is oftentimes that a light register may mean a better business than one that is full, for all rooms may be well taken by people who are making lengthy stays. Business kept up very well until the time navigation was expected to commence, and for some little time after it was due, but a falling off has set in within a fortnight.

It was a few nights since and they were coming down to the Lyceum to attend a performance of a comedy. She was very pretty and he was something of an Apollo himself and was dressed in evening clothes and a high hat. They looked like a very wealthy pair, but truth crushed to earth will rise again, for when the car started after stopping to let off a passenger and the conductor gave two yanks of the bell rope, he said:

"Two bells. Can't get away from it, can I? Always reminds me of ice water, no matter when I hear it."

For he was a traveling man and al isuch know the meaning two bells has for the wayfarer. While he mentioned the fact that he was reminded of ice water, the proximity of his young woman friend prevented him from saying anything about the mammoth thirsts that the signal also brought up in his memory.

There was a fight in Superior not many nights since and a good many local gentlemen of sporting proclivities who like to see such exhibits of animation wended their way thither. Just whether it was a dog fight, cock fight or prize fight makes no difference, and besides, it is too much trouble to look back through the files to see.

At any rate, the local contingent of lovers of such events was well backed by the customary crowd of traveling men and other hotel visitors, many of whom had seen "Camille" and did not want to go again, but did want some place where they could spend the evening with less restraint than in the theater. The hotel clerks of course knew the time and place of the expected encounter and "tipped it off" to the inquiring ones.

Among those who went over was a visitor from Pittsburgh, Pa., who was not stopping at the McKay. Never mind where he was stopping. Suffice to say he was here and has a relative in a rather prominent position with one of the leading concerns that have headquarters in the Zenith city. But the aforesaid relative did not accompany him, having a family to look after.

A railroad man did, however, and the evening was made quite interesting by talk on sporting topics as well as liquid consultations which were calculated to add azest to the evening's enjoyment. Each of the latter conferences came at so much per "consult" the expenses being pretty well divided between the Smoky City representative and the railroad man.

By the time the fight was over the Pittsburg man was willing to take up his abode in Superior for time without limit, as he had begun to like the place. It began to seem like home to him. But he was persuaded to go home, or to his hotel, although the persuasion did not please him to any great extent. The two boarded a car with another man who has an office near the Spalding and on the car, which was filled with people, were two pretty sturdy looking young fellows with two young women, who had charms to start with, and these charms were magnified by the exultant feeling of the visitor, who wanted to flirt with them.

The railroad man protested and said that there were some pretty "hefty" people around Superior, and that anyone who tried to get gay with some stranger's "goyul" was likely to get an unwelcome salute from a well-directed fist.

The other office man, who saw the trend of things, whispered to the visitor that this information was correct, and taat it so happened that one of the two young men, the homelier and more formidable-looking, was an ex-prize fighter.

"That so?" asked the Pittsburger.

"No joke."

"What's his name?"

"They used to call him the 'Minnesota Chicken.'"

"Oh!"

No more was heard from the Pittsburg man on the way over, and his attentions were directed to different channels than they had been. He began to get pretty heavy on his feet before he was landed at his stopping place, and his friends saw that he was safely conducted to his room.

Next morning the Pennsylvanian came around and invited the railroad man to lunch at a prominent cafe. The railroad man suggested that they order some of the fowl that was on the bill, as he believed they would both like it, and one would probably be enough for bota.

"No, thank you," said the host. "You can have all you want, but I have had enough chicken for a while. I never liked the looks of Minnesota chicken, anyway."

FOR YOUR DAILY SMILE.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: "Do you enjoy your automobile trips?"

"Yessiree; we go so fast my wife is too scared to talk."

Yonkers Statesman: "But you were here last week applying for a place. Have you been out of a place ever since?"

"No, ma'am; sure I've had three places since then."

Cincinnati Enquirer: Him—Miss Elderleigh looks like a woman who has suffered.

Her—Yes, poor girl; she has suffered a great deal because of her mistaken belief.

Him—Indeed! And what is her belief?

Her—That she could wear a No. 3 shoe on a No. 6 foot.

Yale Record: Willie—No use. Couldn't get his mind off poker—he was bent on playing.

Billie—Followed his bent, I suppose, and he's broke.

Chicago Record-Herald: "What's the matter with your husband, Mrs. Gibbleson?"

"Oh, the doctor says he's been workin' too hard."

"Why, I thought he held a political office."

Princeton Tiger: "Why isn't Jones in the swim any longer?"

"Oh, he caught a cramp in his bank account."

Chicago Journal: "I don't see why Judson is in politics. What office is he after?"

"He isn't after any office. He thinks it will help him to dodge his taxes."

A HARMONY PLATFORM.

New York Sun: A judicious arrangement of political axioms, dexterously joined so as not to wound any sensibilities or arouse any antipathies, might meet the requirements of presidential candidates running, or walking in moccasins.

Here are twelve eminently safe and strongly defensible planks, warranted to deserve the approval of all voting men, without distinction of party, color, race, political preference, lineage, social station or place of residence:

1. All government is based on the consent of the governed.
2. The welfare of the people is the first great law.
3. Frugality in public expenditures lightens the public burdens.
4. The law is no respecter of persons. Justice is blind.
5. When bad men conspire, honest men must unite.
6. Absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority is essential to public order.
7. Commerce with all nations; political connections with none.
8. Indians are the nation's wards. They should be protected in all their treaty rights.
9. Ignorance of the law excuses no one. All men are equal before it.
10. All authority belongs to the people.
11. It is better to be sure than to be sorry.
12. May the best man win.

On a platform of that sort political harmony would be general, good fellowship paramount, and there would be occasion neither to point with pride nor to view with alarm.

A Noble Example.

Note—last week a lady in New Jersey tendered a reception to a "hired girl" who had been with her for twenty-five years.

Strange news that comes from Jersey,
Most wondrous to relate;
Is hired help so different
In that scraphic State?

What moved the patient plodder
In Jersey thus to try?
What stirred the servant spirit
To stick it out or die?

What rest and blessed comfort
To have no doubts and fears
About the household runing
For twenty-five long years?

Oh joyous, jocund Jersey,
What matters if your bliss
Is punctured by mosquitoes?
You've got a girl like this.

Preserve her as a pattern,
Though fit to wife an Earl,
And all the world will honor
The Jersey hired girl.

Her name will be a glory,
A household word, indeed,
And Jersey will be famous
By having such a breed.

 Charles Parpitt, who was struck on the head with an iron rod, is recovering slowly.

 Dr. Collins has purchased some property on the corner of Third avenue west and First street and proposes to put up two double houses and a dwelling for himself.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Minneapolis Tribune: It didn't need Carrol D. Wright's elaborate compilation of figures to convince the public that living expenses the past year or two have been from 25 to 75 per cent higher than ever before. The man with a fixed income knows more about it than Carroll ever did.

Little Falls Herald: A democratic governor would be the best solution of the Minnesota political problem.

Shevlin Advocate: W. E. Young, a prominent attorney of Mankato, has announced that he is a candidate for the office of state railroad and warehouse commissioner, and his friends are working hard for his success. The second district should be given a place on the commission, as it is not asking for any other place on the ticket, and Mr. Young is the logical candidate.

Wabasha Herald: Anyway it is apparent that the republican party in Minnesota has had some campaign funds, in past elections, even if they were solicited by no one and used for nobody in particular.

Anoka Herald: In spite of the fancied gain to the poor man through the installment plan of buying things it is an evil. It is often argued that a man is able to have more and better household goods, more books, more magazines, better clothes, a better home, more to eat and all on account of the installment plan. These arguments are all the work of the installment plan boomer. The fact still remains that a man cannot live a two thousand dollar rate on a fifteen hundred dollar salary. Breakers are ahead somewhere.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man's bank figure and a girl's tailor suit figure can make a very fine match.

The way not to be taken for knowing too little is not to pretend to know too much.

Somehow a girls' head looks awful red when you pull a hair of it off your coat on your way home.

The first five years of a boy's life he spends hoping he will know as much as his father; the rest of it that he won't know as little.

When a man comes home late and gives his wife $50 in the morning, it is a sign that this won't be her day for denouncing poker playing.

The Time Opportune.

St. Paul Globe: Never was time more opportune for Democratic success in Minnesota than this. The breach in the Republican ranks is too wide to be closed. The feeling is too bitter for conciliation. The worthlessness of all that the party relied upon for capital has been disclosed. The people are nauseated with the revelations that have been made. They are appalled at the impudence of men who ask for office on an issue of hostility to corporations while they are besieging corporate doors for financial assistance. Away with the corrupt and corrupting influence. Let us have an end of "hold-up" men as well as "hold-up" measures; a return to the plain, honest Democratic rule, which will regard every interest and every man with clear, uncovetous eye. The incident which is now the talk of the whole state should be the precursor of a great Democratic victory.

A Little Prod at Wellington.

Chicago Chronicle: Apropos of the ninetieth birthday of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, it is recalled that at one time it was currently reported that the great duke of Wellington wanted her for a wife. When the report reached the Waterloo hero he made this comment: "I said Miss Angela Burdett-Coutts deserved to be a duchess, not that I would make her one." On hearing what the famous soldier said, Miss Burdett-Coutts remarked quietly: "I think his grace should have said could instead of would."

So Simple.

A story just now going about among London journalists concerns one of their number whose "copy" is so charged with amazing abbreviations that subeditors and compositors have difficulty in wrestling with it. The other evening subeditors and compositors alike were "floored," for in a report of a sermon made by this particular journalist there was this—"tn." Solutions were sought in vain, so the writer had to be seen in order that an explanation might be got.

"What's this—'tn?'" asked the chief subeditor.

"Simplest thing in the world," said the abbreviationist; "what else could it be but 'transsubstantiation?'"

A MURDER MYSTERY

Girl of Fifteen Probably Slain By Jealous Lover.

Letitia O'Neill, Mother Insists, Did Not Commit Suicide.

New York, May 23.—Believing her daughter was the victim of a jealous suitor's bullet, Mrs. Letitia O'Neill Kerrigan urges the police to accept the same theory, and a man may be arrested charged with the murder of Letitia O'Neill, the pretty 15-year-old maid in the family of a Brooklyn millionaire.

The facts indicate that the girl whose body was found at the eastern parkway entrance to Prospect Park was the victim of a murder.

No powder marks are evident about the spot under the right breast where the bullet entered.

The girl was in her most cheerful mood three hours before the tragedy, planning for an outing during which she would wear a new dress.

She had a suitor whose affections she did not return and who is said to have threatened to kill her before he would permit her to marry another.

These are facts which have been elicited by the mother of the girl, who is living with her second husband at 310 Herkimer street.

Coroner Physician Charles F. Wuerst performed an autopsy on the body. He said:

"The girl was shot in the right side. It is natural to assume that she knew the location of the heart, if she contemplated suicide, and that she would have shot herself in the left side. Again, there is an absence of powder marks. In the case of a suicide who resorts to the pistol ball there is always the indication of powder marks, because the suicide must necessarily hold the muzzle of the revolver close to the body."

The mother of the girl insists that she was murdered by a too ardent suitor. Mrs. Kerrigan has covered the ground thoroughly, according to her own statement, and says there is no doubt that her child is the victim of a slayer.

Russell Smylie, eldest son of the girl's employer, added important facts to the murder theory in his statement to the police.

"My brother and myself were out Saturday morning with Letitia when a handsome-looking young man came along and met us near the Eastern parkway. We had never seen him before, but he started to talk with Letitia, and while they were talking together the man driving the wagon which takes away the garbage came along and he got very angry.

"He told Lotitia that if that was the way she was going to carry on he would soon fix her. He said he would 'finish her' in mighty short order unless she quit talking to strangers.

"Letitia was putting us to bed Saturday night when we heard a shrill whistle out near the Eastern parkway, and she said she would have to go out right away. She said she would be back in a few minutes."

That was the last the children saw of Letitia.

Letitia O'Neill, black-eyed, fair-skinned, plump and otherwise attractive, was a nursemaid in the family of William A. Smylie, millionaire licorice manufacturer, at 278 New York avenue. She put her two little charges, boys of 6 and 10 years, to bed at 8 o'clock Saturday night a week ago, and an hour later left the house, telling Mrs. Smylie that she was going to the drug store for postage stamps and that she would be back in a few minutes.

When she had not returned in an hour Mr. Smylie went out to look for her, as she had never been away before without informing her employers where she was going and just how long she would be absent.

Mr. Smylie inquired of the first policeman he met, and he told him that a half hour before a young girl mortally wounded, had been found in the vacant lot at Eastern parkway and New York avenue.

Mr. Smylie hurried to the police station, where the dying girl had been taken, and recignized Letitia. A new revolver had been found by the girl's side. Later she was sent to the hospital, where she died without being able to make a statement.

WEST DULUTH

Work of paving Central avenue was resumed this morning by Contractor P. McDonnell and crew of men. Only a few men were employed today, but within a few days the working force will probably be increased to fifty, and the contract will be finished within two weeks, weather permitting. Work will be pushed as rapidly as weather conditions will permit.

According to the provisions of the contract, Central avenue is to be paved with Telford macadam, from Main to Cody streets. Two blocks of the street, from Main to Gosnold, will be graded and graveled only. No attempt will be made to pave these two blocks this year.

HAS CHOKING SPELLS.

Child to Be Examined Under X-Ray.

Catherine Jordan, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jordan, residing on North Fifty-seventh avenue west, was this morning taken to St. Mary's hospital, to be submitted to an X-ray examination. The child was seized with a severe choking spell yesterday afternoon, and again in the evening. It is not definitely known yet whether the strangling was caused by something the girl had swallowed, or by some other means.

The child was seized very suddenly with the choking spell, and before medical assistance arrived was black in the face. Drs. David Graham and C. H. Payette worked over her for some time before consciousness was restored. She was pronounced dead at one time, but finally the crisis passed. Early in the evening she said she was hungry, and appeared to be in her usual good health, but later was seized with another choking spell. She was better this morning. The case is a puzzling one, and one which it was thought best to leave to the X-ray to settle.

SMALL BOY DROWNED.

The funeral of little Edward Anderson, who was drowned in Keene creek, Saturday, was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Congregational church. Interment was at Oneota cemetery.

The boy, who was only 7 years old, the son of John T. Anderson, was bathing with a number of boy friends at the time of the accident. He fell from a high rock in the middle of the stream into deep water, and before help arrived was dead. The boy's companions hurried up town after Mr. Anderson. When he reached the scene the body of his son was floating on the surface of the water. Deputy Coroner Linneman, who viewed the remains, decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The accident occured shortly before 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

LIKES MISSISSIPPI TRIP.

J. J. Frey returned this morning from a trip to Chicago and intermediate points. He stopped off for two days at Fountain City, Wis., his old home. Mr. Frey says that business conditions in the cities which he visited are rather quiet, and stated futher that everywhere he heard Duluth favorably spoken of.

"On my return from Chicago," said Mr. Frey, "I took the Mississippi river bout from Winona to St. Paul. I would suggest to any one seeking an enjoyable outing, with plenty of beautiful scenery thrown in, a trip down the Mississippi, especially at this particular season of the year. The trip down from St. Paul is one of the prettiest imaginable."

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

READY FOR ARGUMENT.

Prosecution and Defense Rest In Tyner Case.

Washington, May 23.—At the opening of the Tyner-Barrett conspiracy case today, the cross-examination of Harrison J. Barrett was deferred in order to put Thomas J. Fontleroy, of St. Louis, on the stand. Mr. Fontleroy was an attorney for Arnold & Co., a turf investment company, and he explained the circumstances attending the employment of Mr. Barrett as associate counsel for the company. The main reason for engaging him, said Mr. Fontleroy, was that Mr. Barrett was considered "a clean, active and capable man, who would get results."

Mr. Barrett then resumed the stand until cross-examination and rebuttal were concluded, and both the prosecution and defense announced that they rested their cases. A recess was taken until afternoon.

DESERTER ARRESTED AT NEW ULM, MINN.

New Ulm, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—James B. Neal, a deserter from Company A, Thirtieth infantry, surrendered to Sheriff Julius and is now in the county jail. DRIVEN BY FEAR

Dog Catcher Spreads Terror Among Owners of Canines.

Number of Licenses Issued Far Ahead of Last Year.

Black dogs, white dogs, yellow dogs, bull dogs, mastiffs, French poodles, of all kinds and breeds have been registered in the office of the city clerk today, and little tags issued to their owners entitling the canines to run the streets of the city unmolested by the police until May 1, 1905.

All dog licenses expire on May 1. The citizens owning dogs have been lax in registering their pets and the police department was instructed to "get busy." Officer Blair was detailed as "dog catcher" and he has spent the last two or three days in hunting up the owners of unregistered and untagged dogs and informing them that it is time to pay the sum of $1 into the treasury of the city of Duluth.

Fifty or sixty citizens have been notified in this manner, and the news that the "dog catcher" was out, has spread fear into the hearts of the other owners of unlicensed canines. They flowed into the city hall in a stream this morning. Between the hours of 9 a. m. and noon over fifty licenses had been issued by the city clerk, and this afternoon there seemed to be no decrease in the number.

There is either a big increase in the number of dogs in the city this year, or else the law regarding them is being more rigidly enforced. On May 23, 1903, 288 canines had been booked on the records in the city clerk's office, whereas this year 435 names have been entered, or an increase of nearly 50 per cent.

Some of the "purps' have peculiar names. A well-dressed lady entered the office this morning and asked for a license for a fox terrier pup.

"What is his name, please?" asked the clerk as he prepared to issue the necessary papers.

"Guess."

"I beg your pardon?"

"Guess."

"Why, Bruno? Fido?" said the bewildered clerk, thinking the lady was temporarily insane.

"No, Guess is his name, G-u-e-s-s."

"Oh, yes, I see," said the embarrassed clerk while his companions ducked their heads behind the books to hide their mirth.

"Why people choose such fool names for their dogs, I can't see," said the one who had "bit" after the lady departed with a smile on her face as if it were not the first one who had been caught by the little joke.

GROW THIN ON POISON

Dr. Wiley's Squad Has Enough of Food Preservatives.

Washington, May 23.—The second series of experiments under the direction if Dr. Wiley if the agricultural department to determine the effect of food preservatives upon the human system has been concluded.

The company of young men who volunteered to assist in the experiments by eating the food treated with preservatives on Saturday returned to a normal diet.

The result of the experiments from a scientific standpoint will not be declared for some time, but the appearance of the young men, who have been popularly designated as the "poison squad," indicates that simething at least in the treatment has had a deleterious effect.

If the report of Dr. Wiley shows that the salicylic, sulphuric and other acids alleged to be used in the preservation of meats have had a bad effect, stringent regulations will be adopted by the agricultural department.

These experiments originally were instituted to discover to what degree foods treated with chemical preservatives were deleterious to health. It was not exactly in retaliatin for Germany's restrictions upon our meats, but undoubtedly it was suggested by foreign regulations which in some countries practically bar out our meat products. The first experiments under Dr. Wiley were to determine the effects of boracic acid in the treatment of food. The second series of experiments begun on the first of last January was for the purpose of tracing the effect of other chemical preservatives. The treatment evidently was not beneficial to the young men who volunteered to undergo it. The food itself was the best that could be obtained in the local markets. It was beef, mutton and veal, turkey and chicken, all kinds of vegetables, milk, tea, coffee, bread, rolls, etc.

At first the acids were put into the food, the volunteers not knowing which dish had been doctored. The effect on the general system and upon the brain of the squad was watched closely, and when their stomachs began to rebel at the best of food, a change was made and afterward the acids were administered in capsules. The amount administered was varied, and when it was observed to have too great an effect it was stopped. The men are thinner than when they began the diet, and, although they refuse to discuss their conditions, one of them remarked Saturday: "I have had all I want of it."

YOUNG RUSSIAN JEWS

Create Excitement at Gomel and Attack Police.

Gomel, Russia, May 23.—A band of fifty young Jews made an anti-war demonstration in the streets here last night. They carried a red banner bearing an inscription reading, "Down With the War," and scattered an inflammatory proclamation. The police interfered in the interest of order, whereupon the Jews fired upon them. The police answered with firing two rounds in the air. The Jews then dispersed. No one was wounded on either side. One Jew was arrested. The population is considerably excited by the event.

ATTORNEYS DIFFER

Opinions on Proper Fee In Breach of Promise Case.

J. H. Whitely's Claim of $1000 Against Isaac Green on Trial.

What should be the reasonable cost of legal services in a breach of promise action seems to be a matter on which local attorneys have widely different opinions.

J. H. Whitely, who is suing Isaac Green, woodsman and former street railway conductor, for services rendered, claims that $1000 is a reasonable sum, while other lawyers called this morning to give expert testimony as to breach of promise fees estimated the value of legal services all the way from $102 to $750.

The case in which the question arises is that Mr. Whitely brought against Green to recover $1000, which he claims is due him for legal services rendered Katherine Alward, a former West End woman, who claimed Green had agreed to marry her and then backed out of his promise. She sued for $2000 damages in the summer of 1901, and recovered a verdict of $2000, there being no appearance on the part of Green.

Mr. Whitely claims in his complaint, and the answer of Green does not deny that, after judgment had been entered Gren and Katherine Alward had a conference, the result of which was that for some consideration not known to her attorney, she gave Green a satisfaction of judgment and left the city.

Mr. Whitely claims that the agreement or settement between his client and Green was entirely without his knowledge or consent, and he says that it embodied a written agreement whereby Green was to pay Mr. Whitely a reasonable fee for his services in the case.

Mr. Green denies the agreement to settle with Mr. Whitely.

Mr. Whitely, when on the witness stand in his own behalf, this morning, stated that Katherine Alward came to see him and asked him to take the case, after they had talked over the story of Green's courtship and engagement. He says she asked for terms, stating that she did not have the means to pay the fees. Mr. Whitely said he told her that he would take the case on the contingent fee basis, that is, he was to have one-half of the amount of the judgment on the verdict if any was recovered. His client was to pay all the disbursements and take what was left.

After Mr. Whitely had given his opinion that his services in the breach of promise case were worth $1000, Judge S. F. White was called.

Judge White caused a smile by remarking that he would not take a breach of promise case anyway. Questioned as to the reasonable value he would place on the various items such as the complaint, affidavit of garnishment, supplementary proceedings, etc., Judge White figured out an estimate of from $200 to $220. Judge White on cross-examination said these figures he gave on the supposition that the client was not able to pay immediately, and that where the transaction was on a cash basis he would make a lower charge.

On motion of Green's counsel, Judge White's entire testimony was then stricken out.

Before leaving the stand Judge White said he believed that a breach of promise case was worth more for legal services than a divorce case, although he claimed never to have taken up any divorce case.

Alexander Marshall, who was called just before noon to give his opinion as to value of services in a breach of promise action, figured them out at from $500 to $750, giving a lump sum. Cross-examined as to the value of items Mr. Marshall gave figures that totalled only $102.

Several prominent local attorneys who have been subpoenaed in the case to give expert testimony on the question of valuation of legal services in a breach of promise case, were present at the morning session.

Isaac Green, when called by Mr. Whitely's attorney for cross-examination, under the statutes, said his residence is wherever he is working.

Asked as to whether he was the defendant named by Mr. Whitely, Green said he "guessed so," that is he "had reason to believe" that he was the defendant.

Mr. Whitely claimed to have held two hearings in supplementary proceedings at which Green was present and at which it was disclosed he had $1500 in cash in his mother's hands, in Canada, and 60 acres of ground, also in Canada.

Mr. Whitely is represented by J. A. Keyes and Mr. Green by Washburn, Bailey & Mitchell.

AN ALCOHOL DRUNK

Gets One Man Into Trouble of Serious Nature.

John Krobin and Joseph Smith wanted a good place to get drunk in last evening, and they selected the house of Mrs. Anna Kovloski, a widow living at Tenth street and Twenty-seventh avenue west.

The two men had a bottle of alcohol their possession, and all they lacked was a little water to dilute it and a place to drink it in. So they entered Mrs. Kovloski's house, and in spite of her protests, took possession of the premises. They imbibed freely of the raw spirits and after accumulating a comfortable jag grew abusive. The aged widow was thrown down and a $10 bill taken from a pocket in her petticoat.

Meanwhile the ten-year old son of the woman had been sent out for an officer. Patrolman Kennell was found and informed of the state of affairs that existed in the house. He entered and found Krobin hiding under a bed, and Smith lying in a drunken stupor on the floor. Krobin had thrown the $10 bill away when the officer entered and it was also found on the floor beneath the bed.

The two men were placed under arrest and arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

They pleaded not guilty and were given a hearing. On the evidence of the widow and the officer they were convicted. Smith as it was shown that he had taken no part in the alleged robbery and that the only offense committed was becoming intoxicated. With Krobin, however, the court was more severe.

"From the evidence given here" said Judge Windom, a more serious charge might be brought against you. Throwing an unprotected woman down and robbing her is no light offense, and while the complaint charges you with disorderly conduct only, I believe the evidence would warrant a more serious charge. I will sentence you to pay a fine of $25 and costs and in default of payment to stand committed to the county jail for a period not to exceed 40 days."

Quick Arrest.

Distributed Tobacco.

Charged with furnishing tobacco to his schoolmates, Willie Black, a 14-year-old colored lad, living in West Duluth, was placed on parole from the municipal court for a term of one year.

The lad is a pupil at the Longfellow school. In some manner he secured a quantity of smoking tobacco and distributed it among his fellow schoolmates.

James Harris and George Dawson, two West Duluth tobacco dealers, were also arraigned on the charge of furnishing tobacco to minors. They pleaded guilty and were fined $3.50 each by Judge Windom.

SEVEN ARE KILLED

By Fearful Explosion In Fireworks Factory at Findlay, O.

Many Others Badly Injured and May Not Recover.

Findlay, Ohio, May 23.—As a result of an explosion in the two drying rooms of the Lake Shore Novelty company's plant here yesterday, seven persons are known to be dead; five are so seriously hurt that recovery is believed to be impossible, and twelve or fifteen are injured badly. From reports of the physicians, ten of the less seriously injured may die as a result of blood poisoning from the potash that was driven into their bodies.

The dead:
JOSEPH SHERWOOD, 21.
JAY SHERWOOD, 24.
EDITH DILLON, 17.
DEAN SHAW, 18.
MARC SNYDER, 22.

They were killed instantly, Estella Decker, 15, and Frank Grant, 21, died later att heir homes.

The injured whom, it is believed, cannot recover:

Maggie Logan, 19, injured by flying debris; Thomas Beck, struck in the back by flying barrel, arms and legs broken. Internally injured: Claude Shaw, twin brother of Dean, back severely injured and ankle broken; Effie Petterman and her brother Roy, caught in falling debris and internally injured.

The less seriously injured:

Carrie Peterman, 17, breast crushed and head and eyes powder burned; May Leavis, 18, who worked beside her, similarly hurt; Louis Weintgatner, hip fractured; Minnie Doll, burned; Mrs. Doll, foreswoman, cut and burned; Minnie Quinkan, floorwoman, cut and bruised about the head and shoulders; J. S. Leary, B. C. Swisher and William Baughman also sustained slight hurts.

Three others whose names could not be learned, were also cut and burned. Two employes are missing and are supposed to have been blown to atoms.

The Lake Shore Novelty works' plant covered nearly ten acres of ground, in the southwest part of the city, and employed nearly 200 men, women and children. Railroad torpedoes and Fourth of July explosives were manufactured.

Owing to the large rush of orders the officials of the plant requested the employes to report for duty yesterday. About thirty complied with the request.

Yesterday morning the residents of Findlay were startled by two explosions that shattered windows throughout the city. The concussion was felt for miles around. Two magazines in separate rooms at the novelty works let go simultaneously with terrific results. The exact cause of the explosion is not definitely known. It is surmised that one of the Sherwood brothers, who were the only persons in the drying rooms, dropped a large box of torpedoes, but this theory cannot be confirmed.

The explosion occurred shortly before the employes assembled for duty. At least twenty persons were on their way to the factory when the explosion occurred.

Human forms were strewn considerable distances apart on the factory site. The remains of the Sherwood brothers were found in drying room No. 1 mangled, and almost unrecognizable. Their clothing was blown from their bodies, save a stocking on the right foot of Jay Sherwood.

The body of Edith Dillon was picked up 20 yards from where the explosion occurred.

The news of the catastrophe spread like wildfire throughout the country. Every train and interurban car that has arrived in the city for the past ten hours was crowded.

The large plant is shattered into fragments, not one single wall remaining. Bricks and timber can be found for a half mile around.

JENKINS MAKES A MATCH.

New York, May 23.—Tom Jenkins has been matched to wrestle the Russian, Hackenschmidt, for $10,000, according to an American dispatch from London. The bout which will be Graeco-Roman style, best two in three falls, will take place in London, July 2.

THE CONFLICT WITH FRANCE

Continues to Agitate the Authorities at the Vatican.

Rome, May 23.—Vatican authorities continue to be agitated over the conflict with the French government growing out of the protest against President Loubet's visit to Rome and the recall of M. Nisard, the Fench embassador to the vatican.

The pope said mass yesterday morning in the presence of sixty-four Italians and foreigners and gave up the rest of the day to the consideration of the difficulties with France, reading clippings from the newspapers on the subject.

The vatican authorities hope that M. Nisard will soon return to Rome, being influenced by the fact that his family is still here.

The question as to how L'Humanit of Paris became possessed of the note of protest addressed to the other powers, which varied from that sent to the French government, is daily becoming more interesting. It seems to be now certain, as was at first supposed, that the indiscretion was due to the principality of Monaco, the vatican's note to which was stronger than that addressed to the other Catholic states in consequence of the vatican having been informed that Prince Albert of Monaco intended to visit the king of Italy. The further reason why the note to the principality of Manaco was more emphaitc, it is said at the vatican, was because Prince Albert was the friend of Capt. Dreyfus, who had worked against the French government and also because the clerico-nationalists were in accord, if not in the same field with M. Juares, the Socialist leader, who originated the present agitation.

It is said that Prince Albert was offended because the late Pope Leo, at his last jubilee, refused the Peter's pence sent by Monaco, because the money had its source in gambling operations. The relations between Prince Albert and the vatican became more strained when the latter rejected Professor Klein, translator of the works of Bishop John L. Spaulding, of Peoria, Ill., who was proposed by Prince Albert as bishop of Monaco.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

At Cardiff, Pa., Mrs. Frank Paul was shot down Sunday in cold blood by Severis Bellengrino, an Italian. A half hour later the murderer was lying dead, his head full of buckshot from the gun of the husband of the murdered woman. A quarrel of a trivial nature was the cause of the double killing.

The Ulster county poor house, three miles from New Paltz, N. Y., was totally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon. Three inmates, who are missing, are supposed to have been burned. The loss is placed at $50,000.

Lyda and little Seubarth, aged 8 and 14 years, respectively, were drowned in a pond in Wauwatosa, a suburb of Milwaukee Sunday. Lyda, the younger of the two accidentally slipped in the pond and while Lillie was trying to rescue her sister, both drowned.

After suffering extreme depression for several months, because of heavy losses in stocks, Charles D. Lyon, 48 years of age, son of D. M. Lyon, formerly the head of the Lyon Brewing company, took his own life in Newark, N. J., Sunday. Lyon lived with his wife, one grown son and two younger children.

How well the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers loved their chiefs, P. M. Arthur and A. B. AFFECTING LUMBER

Tie-Up on Lakes Said to Be Depressing the Market.

Diversion of Lumber Boats to Other Traffic the Cause.

Although the lumber boats on the lakes are not concerned in the present tie-up, the owners having effected agreements with their men, there is nevertheless danger of a shortage of tonnage for the carrying of lumber. This is because the demand for boats for the grain and coal trade is strong enough to induce the lumber carrying boats to go into that trade. Chicago has been shipping corn in large quantities and practically all of it has been in lumber boats.

The effect of this condition has been to make a quiet market for lumber. Buyers are reluctant to purchase when they must afterward face the uncertainty that exists with reference to getting boats to move the stuff and also the probability of having to pay advanced rates.

Some lumber is going forward. The Mary Boyce was the first lumber boat to arrive from the lower lakes this season. She took a cargo from Alger, Smith & Company's docks. The Boyce has been followed down the lakes by several other vessels carrying lumber. The market is characterized as rather dull and quiet but with prices holdin a little better than last fall.

The Nester estate has made a sale of nearly 1,000,000 feet to go East, besides the 5,000,000 feet of Norway pine sold by the Virginia Lumber company and already reported. The Norway pine is said to have brought $15 per thousand feet.

Some lath are being placed to go East and a few lots of shingle are being sold from time to time.

The season is backward in the agricultural districts where there is usually the greatest demand for lumber for building purposes, and conditions are not favorable for a rapid rise in demand, but it is claimed that the retail yards over the Middle West are doing a better business than the retail concerns elsewhere. Building is claimed to be quite active in the interior towns and in the cities. The lumbermen claim that at the present time the West is absorbing more lumber than the East.

The report that the Morley & Heath mill on St. Louis bay has a new contract with the Brooks-Scanlon company to saw Cloquet river timber is not true. The mill has no contracts in view and its future operation is in no way certain. It is quite probable that the mill will be torn down and set up elsewhere in accordance with the announcement made when the mill was purchased last fall.

The Scott-Graff company has the contract to saw the rest of the Crooks-Scanlon timber that will be brought here from the Cloquet river this summer.

The Swallow & Hopkins mill at Winton, Minn., has started operations for the season, as has the mill of the St. Croix Lumber company, at the same point. Both mills have plenty of logs for a long run.

The logs from the Pine, Embarrass, Cloquet and Wolf rivers are all in the St. Louis river and there are several millions of feet now in the boom limits at Cloquet. The Cloquet Lumber company has broken its railroad landings and a large percentage of the logs are now in Island lake and some have been sluiced. The Northern Lumber company has also broken its railroad landings.

Reports from the Cloquet river Saturday indicated that the water was quite low and many logs were high and dry along its course.

The Duluth Logging and Contracting company will finish its work about July 1. The company expects to have put in a total of about 65,000,000 feet since Nov. 1, 1903.

The Vermilion Lumber company, of Ely, has been incorporated by N. J. Benson, M. L. Wilson and John Owens. Its capital stock is $50,000.

At St. Paul report says that William Sauntry, the millionaire lumberman who for years past has been associated with the Mussers and Frederick Weyerhaueser in timber affairs on the St. Croix river, has about closed up his affairs there and has turned his attention to copper and gold mining. Mr. Sauntry has built a handsome and expensive residence in St. Paul and is said to have an $85,000 option on another residence property that was valued at $125,000.

The Hamermill Paper company at Erie, Pa., will receive some heavy shipments of pulpwood from Two Harbors, this season. The wood has been measured up and arrangements have been made for its shipment by boat. Rail shipments have about ceased. While the volume of the pulpwood business has been heavier than in any previous season the contractors claim that it has not been up to expectations.

IS CHARGED WITH MURDER

Woman Who Claims to Be Victim's Wife, Arrested.

Canton, O., May 23.—Grace Battorf, who claims to be Mrs. Taylor, wife of George H. Taylor, manager of the American Woolen Mills company, tailors, murdered in his store room after midnight yesterday morning, is in jail on suspicion of the murder. Circumstantial evidence that points against her, is that she quarreled with Taylor Thursday and was discharged from employment with the company. She admits that when he said he would shoot her if she bothered him any more that she replied:

"Not if I shoot you first."

She claimed to be Taylor's legal wife, but repeatedly said their marriage was a mere mockery and was performed in a Cleveland hotel on March of last year by a "fake" minister. Another woman, Lillian Taylor, claiming to be Taylor's real wife, invoked the aid of the local police several weeks ago, asking that Taylor be shadowed with reference to his relations with other women and a document found in Taylor's room by inference acknowledges this wife and his responsibility for their son's support. That the fatal shot was fired by some one who entered the store after it had been closed for the night and was there when Taylor returned for his overcoat is conceded, but whether this person was a burglar or a woman of jealous mind the authorities disagree. Taylor, who was 32 years old, had conducted a prosperous tailoring business here for the past eighteen months. A widowed mother and a brother reside in Cleveland and another brother in Pittsburg.

Miss Battorf is prominently connected in Ashtabula and Canal Dover.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

ENDS HIS LIFE.

Peter Elliott Hangs Himself to a Bridge.

Minneapolis, May 23.—The lifeless body of Peter O. Elliott, the man who was arrested several months ago in Washington, D. C., on suspicion of being a lunatic with probably murderous designs on President Roosevelt, was found yesterday morning suspended from the girder of a railroad bridge in South Minneapolis.

Elliott had been arrested a few days ago as an escaped inmate of the St. Peter insane hospital, but had been released.

In chosing a form of self-destruction he had made careful plans to make the job sure. He had tied the rope in such a manner that when he jumped from the bridge his neck was broken.

On the body was found a long letter in Swedish supposed to be an explanation of his life and conduct, but while prominent Swedes say the language of the letter shows that the man was finely educated they are unable to translate the letter into intelligible English.

JEWELS STOLEN.

Chicago, May 23.—Diamonds, emeralds, and other jewels amounting to $18,000 were stolen yesterday from the residence of John W. Kiser, 3357 Michigan avenue. The jewels were put away in a chiffonier Saturday night and locked up, but yesterday when Mrs. Kiser went to get some of the gems to wear she discovered that they had all disappeared. Detectives have been put on the case, but so far no trace of the thieves has been found.

LUTHERAN COLLEGE

At St. Peter to Be Enlarged at Expense of $100,000.

President Wahlstrom Resigns—Conference to Choose Successor.

St. Peter, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—At Saturday morning's session the vote was taken deciding that Gustavus Adolphus shall remain at St. Peter as has already been reported in these dispatches. Immediately after announcing the result of the vote a motion was made by Rev. E. O. Stone, of Minneapolis, that the conference take the necessary steps for the establishment of an institution of learning in the Twin Cities. The motion was carried almost unanimously and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The following persons constitute the committee: Revs. E. O. Stone and C. J. Petri, of Minneapolis; A. P. Monteen, Hopkins, and F. M. Ekman, of Center City, and Messrs. J. S. Carlson, Ph. D., and Briand Lind, of Minneapolis; J. M. Carlson, St. Paul; Victor E. Lawson, Willmar.

The citizens of St. Peter and vicinity had gathered a sum of $15,000 which was presented to the conference by ex-Senator J. A. Johnson on behalf of the citizens of St. Peter and vicinity. The money is to be used for the purpose of erecting new buildings for Gustavus Adolphus at St. Peter. The conference accepted the donation with sincere thanks and resolved to raise $100,000 for new school buildings at St. Peter.

Rev. S. Anderson and Peter Thomson, of Worthing, Minn., donated to the conference $50 as a nucleus of a mission fund within the conference. Rev. E. M. Ericson and Messrs. S. Chindlund and Peter Thompson were appointed a board to administer this fund.

Saturday evening the Gustavus Adolphus college had its commencement exercises in the Swedish Lutheran church, which was elaborately and beautifully decorated for the occasion. Twenty-six young men and women were graduated from the different departments of the institution.

Today is another intersting day at the conference. Then will occur the election of a president for the college. Rev. M. Wahlstrom, Ph. D., who has been president of the institution for the past twenty-five years and under whose care and management the school has developed from a small academy to one of the foremost institutions of learning in the Northwest, has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted by the board of directors. The Board has nominated three candidates from which the conference will choose a successor to Dr. Wahlstrom. These candidates are: Rev. P. A. Matson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Ebenezer church of Minneapolis; Rev. L. A. Johnston, pastor of the First Swedish Lutheran church of St. Paul, and Hon. C. G. Schultz, assistant state superintendent of public schools for the state of Minnesota. Thus far Rev. Matson seems to be far in the lead of the other two candidates. He is a very able and successful pastor, who graduated from Gustavus Adolphus College in 1892, took the degree of Bachelor of Divinity at our Theological seminary at Rock Island and was ordained to the ministry the same year. Since that time he has served as pastor in Tacoma, Wash., and his present charge in Minneapolis. During the last few years he has been studying at the University of Minnesota and will shortly receive the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from that institution.

Among others who have been mentioned for the position are Dr. V. Hegstrom, of Chicago, Ill., and Prof. C. W. Foss, of Rock Island, Ill., seem to have the strongest support and it is possible that one of these men will be elected.

This evening the Alumni association of Gustavus Adolphus College will hold its annual banquet at the Nicolett house. A large number of graduates and former students of the institution will attend. Toasts will be responded to by Rev. J. Fremings, D. D., president of the Minnesota Conference, Rev. Prof. M. Wahlstrom, Ph. D., the retiring president of the colege and other prominent men of the church and state.

SUICIDE AT CASS LAKE

J. H. Kelehen, While Despondent, Takes Dose of Carbolic Acid.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. H. Kelehen, a contractor from Brainerd, is dead, as the result of poisoning from carbolic acid. The remains of the dead man were found by a little girl named Hampton, late Saturday afternoon, on the south side of the railroad. The body was lying, face downward, in the woods, at the outskirts of town. The little girl gave the alarm, and her father went to the place where the dead man lay. By his side was a one-ounce bottle, which still contained a few drops of liquid, the odor of which indicated carbolic acid. The face of the man was red and white in spots, and around the mouth the flesh was burned, showing the deadly effects produced by the contents of the bottle. Persons who came to the scene identified the body as being the remains of J. H. Kelehen, a contractor who recently came here from his home at Brainerd.

The clothing of the dead man was searched and in one of the pockets was found several letters, in one of which (evidently addressed to his wife) the suicide stated that he wanted whoever found him to do the best they could with him; that he was not crazy, but discouraged; hoped they would pay all his debts, and to be good to the children; that he was not to blame—it was whisky that did it. The remains were taken in charge by A. Lesgrad, of this place, a brother-in-law of Kelehen, and were shipped to Brainerd.

J. H. Kelehen was one of the pioneers of Brainerd, having resided there during the past thirty years. He at one time was possessed of considerable means and owned several valuable pieces of property. Reverses overtook him during the past ten years, and his financial affairs became very much mixed. During the past few years, he has been a contractor and housemover, and he came to Cass Lake about ten days ago to secure work in his line. He got several contracts and had sent away for the material to do the work with. It appears that the companies from whom he ordered the material were somewhat slow in sending it, and he believed that they suspected his financial standing, and he consequently became discouraged, and, while his spirits were at low ebb, committed the rash act which ended his life. Kelehen is survived by a wife and three daughters, two of whom are twins, all living at Brainerd. He was a kind father and husband, and had many friends, who are all shocked at the terrible manner in which he put an end to his existence.

EXPORT OF COTTON

And Its Products Will Exceed $400,000,000 In Value.

Figures For Present Fiscal Year Show Large Increase.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cotton and its products will bring more than $400,000,000 into the United States from other parts of the world in the fiscal year which ends with next month. Last year the total exports of cotton and its products amounted to $376,000,000, and a statement just issued by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics shows that in raw cotton alone the total for the present year exceeds the figures of last year by nearly $50,000,000, thus indicating that the grand total of cotton and its products exported will exceed $400,000,000 in value.

The products of cotton other than the raw cotton fiber which go to form this enormous total, far exceeding in value that of any other single crop exported, are cotton-seed oil, and cotton-seed meal, cotton waste, cotton seed in natural state, and cotton manufactures. In cotton-seed oil and cotton-seed meal the growth in exports now amounts to more than $25,000,000 annually, while but a comparatively short time ago the cotton seed from which they are manufactured was considered valueless. The value of cotton-seed oil exported from the United States last year was over $14,000,000. In the present year the figure falls somewhat below that of last year, owing to the large home demand, and something of a falling off in the demand from abroad.

The value of cotton-seed oil exported from the United States during the past decade aggregates a round $105,000,000. In 1899 the total value of cotton-seed oil exported amounted to only a little over $1,000,000. In 1890, however, it was over $5,000,000; in 1895, $6,000,000; by 1900, it had grown to $1,400,000, and in 1903, it was $14,500,000.

Cotton-seed meal is another article of comparatively recent development in our export trade. Prior to 1894 the amount exported was not considered of sufficient importance to justify its separate statement in the list of articles exported from the United States. In 1895 the total was about $4,000,000; in 1898, it was $8,000,000; in 1900, $11,000,000, and by 1903 had grown to $12,750,000.

The European countries are the chief consumers of both of these newly developed classes of products from cotton seed. Of the $14,000,000 worth of cotton-seed oil exported in the fiscal year 1903, over $2,500,000 worth went to France, over $3,750,000 to eNtherlands, nearly $1,500,000 to Austria-Hungary, more than $1,250,000 to Germany, and about $1,500,000 worth to other European countries, principally the United Kingdom. Mexico, Brazil, and other tropical countries also take considerable quantities of cotton-seed oil, which is a substitute in many cases for olive oil, formerly imported into those countries. To Mexico the exports of cotton-seed oil in 1903 were over $1,000,000 in value, and have ranged at about that figure for several years.

Cotto-seed meal oil, the other recently developed product from what was formerly considered waste material, is also chiefly exported to Europe after supplying the demands of the home market.

Of oil cake and oil cake meal exported from the United States last year, amounting to nearly $20,000,000 (of which $12,750,000 was from cotton seed), $4,500,000 worth went to Germany, $4,000,000 to Belgium, $3,500,000 to Netherlands and a little less than $3,500,000 to the United Kingdom.

Cotton manufacturers form another important class in this general group of cotton and its products exported. The total value of cotton manufactures exported during the present year will fall materially below that of last year, partly by reason of the high price of cotton and partly by reason of conditions in the Orient, to which a large proportion of the cotton cloths exported from the United States in recent years has been sent. Our total exports of cotton manufactures had never reached as much as $10,000,000 prior to 1877. By 1887 the total amounted to practically $15,000,000; by 1897, to $21,000,000, and in 1903 to $32,000,000. In the present fiscal year the total will probably not exceed $25,000,000 in value.

In the nine months ending with March the total exportation of cotton manufactures was about $8,000,000 below that of the corresponding months of last year, and $7,500,000 of this reduction was in the exports to China, where domestic manufacture of cotton is increasing somewhat and imports from India and Japan are becoming more competitive each year. This is especially true in years of high prices, such as that of 1903. The shorter staple cotton of India proves very acceptable for use in the class of goods largely utilized in China, and this fact explains, in part at least, the reduction in our exports of this class of goods to China in a year of such high prices for cotton.

The table which follows shows the total value of the various products of cotton exported from the United States in the nine months ending with March, 1904, compared with the same period in 1894. The figures indicate that the grand total of cotton and its products exported during the fiscal year will amount to about $400,000,000.

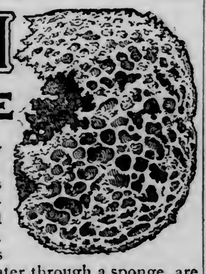
Cotton, raw	$185,379,276	$330,070,018
Cotton manufactures	10,833,883	16,735,456
Cotton seed oil..	4,855,163	8,501,302
Cotton seed meal and cake	6,395,871	7,828,737
Total	$207,464193	$363,135,513

THE SKIN LIKE A SPONGE



Some of the most stubborn diseases enter into the system through the pores of the skin. Like a sponge, it absorbs poisons of various kinds, which are taken up by the little blood-vessels beneath the surface of the body, and emptied into the great current of the blood. The juices of poison oak and other noxious wild plants percolate through the skin like water through a sponge, are taken into the circulation, breaking out afresh each season, and lingering on for years unless antidoted and driven out of the system.

Dye Poisoning among the employes of dye houses, and from wearing colored under-clothing and hosiery, is of frequent occurrence and dangerous to health, causing boils and sores and other eruptions.

Workers in lead, brass and other metals ars often poisoned by the chemicals and acids used in polishing, and the dust and filings settling upon the skin, and which find their way through the pores into the blood, followed by inflammation, swelling and the most obstinate sores.

Blood Poison, the vilest of all human diseases, is often contracted through shaking the hand or handling the clothing or other articles used by one infected with this dangerous poison. The deadly virus finding its way through the pores of the skin, contaminates the blood and produces fearful ulcers, eruptions and blotches.

SSS

The diseases that enter the system by absorption or through the pores are as deep-seated and dangerous as any brought on by internal causes, and cannot be reached by washes, salves, soaps or other external remedies. The blood must be purified and a healthy circulation established before getting permanently rid of the disease. S. S. S. acts upon the blood, ridding it of the original poison and restoring it to a healthy, normal condition.

S. S. S. is guaranteed entirely vegetable, an unrivaled blood purifier and the best of all tonics. With all impurities removed from the blood, the sores and eruptions disappear from the skin. Write us should you desire medical advice or any information about your case; this will cost you nothing.

POISON OAK AND ITS EFFECTS.

Over fifteen years ago I was poisoned with Poison Oak. I tried remedy after remedy without getting relief. Sores broke out over my body and on my tongue, affecting the lining of my mouth. Finally, about a year ago my doctor told me to try S. S. S., which I did. After taking three bottles all the sores disappeared, and I have not been bothered since, and I feel much indebted to your valuable medicine for so prompt and complete a cure. I am certain that S. S. S. will do all that is claimed for it in blood diseases.

YOUNG MEN TO FRONT

Rise of Secretary Cortelyou Recalls Several Other Instances.

Show the Opportunities For Young and Ambitious Americans.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The selection of Hon. George B. Cortelyou for chairman of the national Republican committee, is but another evidence that the young men are rapidly forging to the front in the affairs of this country. Mr. Cortelyou, while closely connected with the presidential office for the past twelve years, was comparatively unknown until President McKinley chose hom as the successor of the late John Addison Porter, as presidential secretary, upon the resignation of that gentleman in 1899. George B. Cortelyou was first known to the newspaper men of the capitol while a clerk in the office of Assistant Postmaster Maxwell in the second Cleveland administration. President Cleveland needed an additional clerk in the executive office and Mr. Maxwell recommended Mr. Cortelyou. The appointment was made and President Cleveland very soon discovered that he had obtained exactly the man he needed in his official entourage. Mr. Cleveland during his first term had as his secretary Daniel S. Lamont, than whom no better fitted man ever occupied thati mportant positon. But in 1893, when his second term began, he was not so fortunate. He appointed Henry Thurber, of Michigan, a well meaning, honest and faithful secretarial who, however, lacked the prime essential of a successful secretary—he was utterly devoid of tact. This quality was developed in a marked degree in George B. Cortelyou, and in addition he soon displayed ability as an organizer, which made his services invaluable. It ws not surprising, therefore, that Mr. Cleveland should urge his retention in office upon Mr. McKinley in the very strongest terms. Mr. Cleveland never asked Mr. Cortelyou what his political affiliations had been or were. He had entered the public service through the machinery of the civil service commission, and his advancement has proved one of the very strongest arguments for the maintenance of the merit system as opposed to the old doctrine of "to the victors belong the spoils.'

Mr. Cortelyou's loyalty to Mr. McKinley, and the value of his services to the executive heads of the government are recent history and are too well known to be retold. When, however, his name was first suggested in connection with the secretaryship of the new department of commerce and labor a storm of protest arose among members of congress from New York. These gentlemen, among them some of the very closest personal friends of the president, insisted that it would mean political ruin to give a cabinet place to man utterly unknown to the politicians of the state to which he is accredited as a citizen. But Mr. Cortelyou was nominated, confirmed and installed as secretary of commerce and labor. He set about the difficult task of organizing the new department and he succeded so well that he very soon gained the support of the very men who had antagonized him to the degree of preventing the passage of the bill creating the department, for nearly a year. It is admitted today that no executive department of the government is better estblished than that over which Mr. Cortelyou presides. It was because he has demonstrated his accomplishments as an organizer that he was selected for the chairmanship of the national committee.

Again the young man has forced himself to the front in the person of John F. Wallace, who has been designated as chief engineer of the Panama canal. There are three eminent engineers on the commission, any one of whom is old enough to be the father of Mr. Wallace. But the older men will devote themselves to the administrative features of the work and to the task of creating sanitary conditions on the isthmus, which will make it possible to dig the ditch without the enormous sacrifice of human life which has characterized the regime of the French companies. Mr. Wallace will carry on the work of construction itself, and his record is such as to assure the progress of the work with the utmost rapidity and at the least possible cost. The salary which he will receive is equal to that which Lincoln and Grant and all their predecessors drew as president of the United States. Probably if congress had fixed definitely the compensation to be paid, the men who are to carry on the great work of uniting the two great oceans, a man of the ability of Mr. Wallace could never have been secured because it is the general policy of the members of congress to gauge the worth of others by the low standard of the worth of the services of an ordinary member of the house. This low estimate is largely responsible for the fact that few young men of marked ability care to remain in the federal office. Examples of this fact are to be found in the cases of Eckels, Dawes, Vanderlip and Ailes, who, within the past few years, just as soon as they had demonstrated what stuff they were made of, were snapped up by outside financial institutions and lured from the government service with salaries from three to five times as great as Uncle Sam pays his most efficient servants.

It would be comparatively easy to fill a newspaper page with the names and records of young men who have recently proved the truth of Senator Dolliver's assertion that there are still opportunities in this country for the able and ambitious young American. Charles G. Bennett, secretary of the United States senate, is one of these. Mr. Bennett is the youngest man who ever held the office. And senators, such as Allison, Platt of Connecticut, Morgan and a score of others who have been a long time in the senate, do not hesitate to express the opinion that he is the best man for the place who ever held it. He has organized the office in such manner that it is today the very antithesis of what it used to be. Neatness, order and good taste have superseded confusion, dirt and disorder. The employes know what is expected of them and they perform their tasks. The library, from being a mass of unsorted volumes in all stages of delapidation, has been made, what it should always have been, a valuable adjunct to senatorial work, so systematized that any volume can be obtained in ten seconds, whereas a week was sometimes required in the old days. Not many years ago there was a pie and milk stand in the main corridor of the senate. The doorkeepers squatted down upon decrepit chairs with a convenient 'cuspidor dirty and nasty at their feet. The janitors, appointed for political service rendered, paid but indifferent attention to their duties, and in fact every branch of the secretary's office, as well as that of the other administrative divisions of the senate, was conducted in a slipshod manner, which was a disgrace to the country. But Charles G. Bennett, secretary, and Daniel N. Ranadell, sergeant-at-arms, have changed all this. Everything has been reduced to a system. The document room, is as orderly as the senate chamber itself, and the young man is responsible for the change.

It is seldom that a young man is able to show the 'old fellows' that he is made of the right stuff in so short a time as Elliott Woods has required to demonstrate that no mistake was made when he was appointed superintendent of the capitol building and grounds. Mr. Woods' first big contract was carried out in the fall of 1901, when, in a few months' time, he tore out all the interior of the west side of the old capitol building, formerly used as the home of the congressional library, and completely remodeled it. The work was a revelation to men who are familiar with the slow process of construction work for the government, and naturally when Mr. Clark, the long-time architect of the capitol died in the following January, Mr. Woods was the only man thought of as his successor. He has held his present office for two years, and so well is he regarded by the members of the senate and house committees on appropriations that they have entrusted to him the work of constructing new office buildings for both the house and senate, as well as the preliminaries for the extension of the capitol. At Mr. Woods' suggestion he has been authorized to employ the services of some of the best architects in the country as consulting experts, but he himself is charged with the proper expenditure of nearly $10,000,000, and his record guarantees that every dollar will be properly expended and that the result will be entirely satisfactory to all those who will use the building which he will construct. Mr. Woods is a young man, almost boyish in appearance.

The Pennsylvania members of congress are very proud of a young man who has arisen to eminence in the architectural profession in Philadelphia and Harrisburg. A few years ago the capitol of the state was destroyed by fire. Sesigns for a new building were invited from architets all over the country. The award was made to Joseph M. Huston, of Philadelphia, a young man who had become rather well known through his work in the City of Brotherly Love, but whose reputation outside that city was still to be made. Mr. Huston began work in earnest. From the concrete foundation, through the material for the superstructure, up to the rural decorations of the interior, he inspected every pound of material, and examined every sketch himself. He visited the granite quarries in New England and to the great astonishment of "experts" of great experience he demonstrated that it is possible to get material out on time. He made a trip to Europe, where Pennsylvania artists are preparing the decorated design, to satisfy himself that his ideas are being carried out. He is building for the Harrisburg capitol one of the most perfect public buildings in the world, and he is doing it without the waste of a dollar, without the slightest breath of scandal. He will finish it completely within the specified time, and, what is far more remarkable, within the limit of the appropriation.

It is this same young man, Joseph M. Huston, whose work will cause a thrill of delight to 500,000 visitors to Atlantic City this summer. That famous resort is to celebrate its birthday as the Mecca of the pleasure lover. It is twenty-five years since Atlantic City first began to attract summer crowds. The event is to be celebrated by a gorgeous display and light. The board walk is to be converted into a "court of honor," which will outrival in magnificence anything seen before on the Atlantic coast. Joseph M. Huston has been commissioned to create this grand transformation scene, and his townsmen—those who know what he has accomplished in Harrisburg—declare that his designs demonstrate beyond doubt that the young man of today is coming to the front very rapidly in artistic construction, just as the young man has reached the zenith of his power in business and politics.

THREE WOMEN CLAIM TO BE DUBOIS' WIDOW.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 23.—When the remains of the late E. L. Dubois, a prominent contractor of this city, were carried to the cemetery yesterday, they were followed by three women, each of whom claims to be his lawful widow. One came from Denver, and gives the name of Mary E. Dubois, claiming that she was married to the dead man in 1880, in Joplin, Mo. The second Mrs. Dubois came from New Orleans; but refused to talk of her claims. The third woman was married to Dubois at West Union, Iowa, and has lived with him for some years. There was no scene at the funeral, the women pledging friends of the dead man not to make a disturbance.

Dubois has had a notable career. He was a French officer in the Franco-Prussian war. As a contractor he did work in all parts of the world, notably in Brazil, where he was decorated by the government for his achievements. He came to Des Moines about nine years ago and was prominent in fraternal and business circles. He left a considerable estate.

AGED MAN BURNED.

Vineland, N. J., May 23.—Alfred Morgan, aged 75 years, said to be a relative of J. P. Morgan, was burned to death at his home here, early today. His house was discovered on fire and an attempt was made to rescue him, but the flames spread so rapidly that this was impossible. Mr. Morgan was a graduate of the university of Pennsylvania. He was a lawyer and gave up his practice thirty years ago when he came here to live a retired life.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

RHEUMATISM!

Shawano, Wis., March 20th, 1904.

MEDERINE REMEDY CO., Duluth, Minn.

Dear Sirs: A year ago last February I was taken with a most severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism, so that it was impossible for me to help myself. I called a doctor and he prescribed some medicine for me and I doctored with him for two months without any help. Then I went to taking patent medicin s but they did not help, and I was nearly discouraged, till finally I saw your advertisement and started to take MEDERINE. After I had taken three bottles I was able to work but I finished the whole course and am perfectly cured. If not it would have come back before this time. I most gladly recommend Mederine for Rheumatism. One of my children is taking Mederine for Eczema with great success.

Yours truly, A. O. ANTES, Shawano, Wis.

Mederine is sold at $1 per bottle or 6 for $5 by all dealers. Write for booklet.

The Stream's Source.

SPRING FRESHETS AND SPRING FEVER.

IN the spring, it is said, we can always look for fire, flood and devastation. When we look at a mighty river in flood, carrying devastation with it, we can hardly imagine its source in the little, tiny brook on the mountain side, starting with a small stream and wending its way down hill and valley, gathering force and volume until at last it pours its mighty flood above its natural banks and sweeps along, carrying ruin to many peaceful households. What is true in nature is also true of the human body. We are now in that season in which we feel languid. Only the lucky are able to get off without a spell of fever. When all nature is putting on its beautiful dress, when the trees begin to bud and all nature smiles, man is usually in the midst of his woes and troubles because the poisons have accumulated in his body during the winter and the blood stream endeavors to throw off this debris, and in the process we are perhaps laid on our backs with a cold, possibly to be followed with grip or pneumonia. The break-down, the feeling of fatigue, is usually due to the lack of pure blood needed to replenish the materials used up. We have overfed during the winter, usually under-exercised, confined in a small room perhaps, breathing over and over again bad air, with little oxygen, our health balance is not kept up. We feel worn out, played out, pale, and deep circles under the eyes appear. Simple attention to the laws of nature will sometimes pull you through without these annoying symptoms. The several organs of the body which take care of the worn-out tissues, such as the kidneys, bowels and liver get out of order without being noticed, and the poisonous matters accumulating become an active poison if they remain in the blood. Poisonous matters thrown back into the blood cause headache, bowel irregularities and often severe illness with jaundice, wherein these liver poisons are so abundant as to give a yellow color to the skin. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when overworked and exhausted. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery helps in driving out the poisonous matter and brings into the blood a tone and vigor which will resist disease.

Every one should have their blood up to the healthy standard of five million red blood corpuscles to the cubic millimeter. Disorder of the digestive function is sure to be the case with people who over-work their brain, for the more intelligent the person is the more apt he or she is to have indigestion. Improper food is taken into the stomach, and the lack of vitality, lack of proper "blood-balance" does not permit of good digestion. "Golden Medical Discovery" assists the digestive functions, assimilating the food and taking from it what is necessary for feeding the blood. Thus the blood takes on new vigor and spirit.

After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general break-down, a tonic made of the alterative extracts of certain herbs and roots was the best corrective. This he called: Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For over a third of a century this tonic and alterative has been more largely sold than any other blood medicine or nerve tonic. Being made without alcohol, this "Medical Discovery" does not shrink up the red blood corpuscles, but on the other hand it increases their number. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heartburn, and many uncomfortable symptoms. It is especially adapted in diseases attended with excessive tissue waste, especially in convalescence from the various spring fevers, whether of a malarial or typhoid character. As a tonic and reconstructive during and after the influences of grip it will prove of particular value.

"It has been seven months since using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I only used three bottles of the medicine when it made me feel like a new man," writes S. A. Miller, Esq. (care of Mr. Amos Hyre, R. D. 10), Dayton, O. "I had doctored with two local physicians for quite a long time without receiving any benefit and became discouraged. I read of the wonderful cures your medicine had made for others and concluded to try it. I can testify to the merits of your medicine and feel very grateful for the benefits received. I felt all worn out, and had an awful misery in my back for two years, but noticed a change for the better when I began using your 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

"I would like to tell the world what a fine medicine Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is for sickness resulting from impure blood," writes Miss Mabel Weston, of No. 812 West 28th Street, Indianapolis, Ind., First Vice-President Young Peoples' Christian Temperance Union. "Last fall I noticed that my appetite failed me, and gradually I became weak and sick, while large, red patches on the skin told me that there was something decidely wrong with me. I tried so many remedies that I grew nauseated at the sight of medicine, but finally a friend persuaded me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, as a last resort, and I reluctantly did so. I found it, however, very pleasant to the taste, and soon began to realize that it was doing me some good; my complexion began to clear and I began to feel better, that 'all gone' feeling left me, and after ten weeks' treatment I was well once more. I thoroughly endorse Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, over 1000 pages, is sent by Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of 21 cents in one-cent stamps for the paper-covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound.

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is a pure compound of medicinal plants scientifically combined. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

World's Dispensary Medical Association,

R. V. Pierce PRESIDENT.

Judge Severance Discusses the State Supreme Court.

The following letter from Judge Severance appeared in a recent issue of the Mankato Free Press:

It is very unfortunate that the judiciary of this state should be dragged in the wake of politics, but it will be likely to be so as long as the office of judge is elective.

Each party is prone to believe that no man outside of its fold is fit for any office. There was a time in this state when such a narrow sentiment of party bigotry did not prevail, but when in 1893 the Democrats and Populists fused, they swept away the last hope of a non-partisan judiciary. This fusion threw down the gauntlet and the Republicans accepted the challenge, and now loyalty to the dominant party is a prerequisite to judicial advancement. I see no hope for any change in the exclusive demands of either party, but no matter what party is in power, it should have enough regard for the public good to rescue the supreme court from the dice box of political jugglery. The Judges of the supreme court should not be used to establish a sectional equilibrium, or to gratify local pride. But they should in every instance rest on merit alone.

When the supreme court as to its personnel is able and conscientious in the discharge of its duty, why not let it alone? The supreme court should be stable and not drifting at the caprices of every person who has a friend that he would like to exalt.

It seems that there are now two or three judges on the bench of the district court who have come to the conclusion that they know too much for the positions they hold, whilst the bar and the people entertain a very different opinion. If these judges feel humiliated when they compare these extraordinary powers with the insignificance of the positions they hold, let them resign and not waste their sweetness on the desert air. Our supreme court as now constituted is an able court, and the continual chirping of a few half-fledged lawyers in the state should not be allowed to disrupt it. Long service on the supreme bench with a constant interchange of thought and opinions between the judes, for many years, naturally leads to that judicial development that alone insures the accuracy of legal conclusions. The supreme court is not the place to crown egotism or pay political debts.

I am in favor of letting the supreme court alone for the present.

M. J. SEVERANCE.

Mankato, May 12, 1904.

MUST PAY CLAIM.

City Must Reimburse John Lowry for Sidewalks.

The city must pay the Anderson claim for tile and cement sidewalks that was assigned to John Lowry.

A jury in district court, under the direction of Judge Cant, returned a verdict of $3,254.26 in favor of Mr. Lowry, which is the total amount of the claim with interest.

Oscar H. Anderson made a contract with the city council to build cement and tile walks last season. The work was accomplished and was accepted by the inspector and the council ordered the payment of the claim. The claim, however, was presented for payment by John Lowry and the city clerk refused to pay to other than the contractor.

Taxpayers appealed from the allowance of the claim on the ground that there is a charter provision against the assignment of a contract entered into between the city and a second party.

THE BASS SEASON

Opens In Minnesota Next Monday—Wednesday In Wisconsin.

Isle Royale One Most Popular Fishing Resorts Near Duluth.

The bass fishing season in Minnesota opens one week from today, on Monday, May 30. After that date it will be allowable to angle for any variety of fish in Minnesota waters, the season for all other kinds than bass having opened from a month to six weeks earlier. In Wisconsin the season for bass opens next Wednesday, May 25, or five days earlier than in Minnesota. It will also be allowable, after May 25, to catch pike, muscallonge and all other varieties of fish in Wisconsin.

A god many fishermen annually take pleasure trips into the latter state, the northern section of which boasts of many good fishing resorts, but most of the local enthusiasts pin their faith to their own state. In nearly all of the hundreds of lakes scattered over Northern Minnesota there is excellent fishing.

There is no good bass fishing in the immediate vicinty of Duluth, but it is a matter of only a few hours' ride by train or horse before waters abounding with this gamey fish are reached. Thus far this season Duluth sportsmen have confined their attention to pike and trout, meeting with the usual different degrees of fishermen's luck. Some have had the best of success, while others have had the worst. Up to this time the pike fishing in the St. Louis river and tributary streams has not been very good, except at the rapids, above Fond du Lac, during spawning season. The pike have now returned to deeper water, however, and the recent rain and warm weather have tended to better conditions for catching them.

Perhaps no fishing ground within a day's journey of Duluth has become so popular as Isle Royale, where members of the finny tribe of almost every variety known to fresh water are to be found in large numbers. Brook trout are plentiful in certain of the streams and little harbors, and some have been taken weighing over four pounds each. Outside the harbors are to be found the lake trout, ranging in size from two to thirty pounds each. The lake trout is not as gamey as his speckled brother, but that is not saying that he is not a fighter. A big one on the end of a trolling line will furnish plenty of sport and excitement. In the inferior lakes and streams are brook trout, pike, pickerel, bass and all manner of game fish.

SMALL BOY DROWNED.

Another Nearly Loses Life Attempting Rescue.

Roy Nelson, the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Nelson, of St. John and Tenth street, Central park, Superior, was drowned in Superior bay, Saturday afternoon, while playing with some companions on floating logs.

Carl Erickson, an 11-year-old companion nearly lost his life in the attempt to rescue the Nelson boy.

The boys were riding logs when Nelson slipped and fell into the water. Erickson was the only one in the party that could swim and he dived to the assistance of his companion. He succeeded in reaching Nelson but was not strong enough to either bring him to the logs or to get him ashore.

Erickson pluckily held on to the boy until exhausted and was forced to loose his hold. He was barely able to reach the logs in time to save himself.

Nelson's body was recovered by the police and members of the lie saving crew, last evening.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Women to Meet and Make Plans for It.

The ladies belonging to the Women's Relief corps will hold a meeting at the Masonic Temple hall, Tuesday afternoon, for the purpose of fastening the preparations for the Memorial day program. Arrangements will be made for the exercises May 27, 29 and 30.

Patriotic exercises will be held in all the city schools Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, except at the Central High school where they will occur at 9 o'clock in the morning. Committees have been appointed to speak at the exercises in the various schools.

Next Sunday morning special Memorial day services will be held at the First Methodist church, under the charge of Rev. John Callahan and Rev. E. C. Clemans will preach. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Grand Army posts, the Women's Relief corps and the Sons of Veterans.

The Women's Relief corps and the J. B. Culver post, G. A. R., will meet to make arrangements for the flowers to be used in decorating graves of old soldiers on the morning of Memorial day.

Official Dog Catcher.

Officer Blair of the local police force has been detailed as "dog-catcher," and will round up all the canines whose masters have not provided them with tags.

Under the charter the officer is permitted to arrest the owner and kill the dog if the license fee has not been paid.

As the result of the officer's first day's work, twenty owners of unlicensed dogs were notified to appear at the office of the city clerk within two days and take out a license or expect prosecution.

Motion For New Trial.

A motion for a new trial in the case of C. Sandeen against R. A. Elzy will be argued before Judge Page Morris, in federal court chambers, next Friday. The case is one of those tried by Judge Morris at a term in St. Paul last January.

Sandeen sues to recover $15,000, claimed to be due as balance on account. He is a railroad contractor, and claims to have performed work of Elzy, under a sub-contract, from the old Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway, since absorbed by the Rock Island route.

The defendants ask that the verdict of $1800, given Sandeen at the first trial, be set aside and a new trial granted. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Lightner and the defendant by Attorney Mitchell, both of St. Paul.

POLO PLAYER KILLED.

Was Accidentally Struck In Temple With Mallet.

New York, May 23.—Harry D. Babcock, Jr., a member of the freshmen class of Yale and a player on the Yale polo team, died at his home here, yesterday, from the effects of an accident—a blow on the head from a polo mallet in the hands of a fellow player, W. C. Devereux. The accident occurred Saturday afternnoon in Van Cortlandt park in this city, during the last half of the first intercollegiate polo game ever played in this country. Babcock plumbed No. 2 in the Yale line-up and Devereux No 3 on the Princeton side. According to his own version of the affair, Babcock intentionally slipped from his pony to the ground after being struck but partially recovering from the dizziness that followed the blow, he insisted upon returning to the game. Capt. Baldwin, of Yale, overruled him, however, and put another player in his place. It was not until several hours after the accident that the serious nature of the injury became apparent and the young man's condition then grew so rapidly worse that he died while surgeons were preparing for an operation.

DAY IS CHOSEN EIGHTH BISHOP

Four Missionary Bishops Are Still to Be Elected.

Los Angeles, May 23.—When the general conference finished its third weeks' labors Saturday and adjourned until Monday it had elected eight bishops, the number recommended by the episcopacy committee, and disposed of the majority of the subjects that have come up for consideration. Ten days more remain in which to complete its business.

Subjects yet to be passed upon are the election of four additional missionary bishops, the election of general conference officers for the next quadrennium and action upon important problems of denominational and general interest as follows:

Amusement, divorce, consolidation of book concerns, temperance, relations of capital and labor and polygamy.

Dr. J. H. Day, chancellor, of Syracuse, N. Y., was the eighth and last bishop chosen. His election was effected on the fourteenth ballot. On the twelfth ballot Dr. R. J. Cook, of Tennessee, Dr. Day's competitor, withdrew from the race and from that time on Dr. Day increased his lead and finally was elected on the fourteenth ballot by a vote of 474 of the 689 ballots cast. Dr. W. A. Quayle, of Kansas City was second highest candidate on the last ballot, receiving 180 votes.

The complete list of bishops chosen in order of election, follows:

Joseph F. Berry, Chicago; Henry F. Spellmeyer, Newary, N. J.; William F. McDowell, New York; James W. Bashford, Delaware, Ohio; W. A. Burt, Rome, Italy; Luther B. Wilson, Baltimore; Thomas S. Neely, Philadelphia; J. K. Day, Syracuse, N. Y.

With the exception of Bishops Berry, Burt and Neely the newly elected members of the episcopal board are young men, ranging between the ages of forty-two and forty-eight years.

The conference finally disposed of the question as to whether the Methodist church would return to the rule of limitation of the tenure of pastorship by adopting resolutions that no change be made in the rule adopted four years ago, which provides for an unlimited tenure. A minority report from the committee was reported providing a time limit of six years and giving the bishops discretionary powers in special cases, but it was overwhelmingly defeated.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Grand Rapids, Minn., May 23.—John Plourdes met a sudden death on Saturday, while unloading logs from cars into the Mississippi river. He was caught by some logs that moved uncaught by some logs that moved unexpectedly, and his life was crushed out as the heavy timber rolled over his body on their way to the river below. Little is known about Plourdes. He was 30 years of age, and it is said, he has a relative or friend employed by the Red Cliff company and named Le-Beaux. He was a French-Canadian.

ARRESTED AT ASHLAND.

Rufus Johnson Charged With Stealing From Boat.

Rufus Johnson, who is suspected of being the leader of a gang that robbed the steamer Lafayette of her valuable silver, china and cut glass, while the boat was in winter quarters in the local harbor, was arrested yesterday in Ashland, Wis., on the charge of grand larceny. Johnson has said that he will return to Duluth without requisition papers.

The warrant was sworn out by E. H. Houghton, agent for the company, who, while fitting out the boat the other day for the season, discovered that she had been stripped of her silver, china and table linen to the value of about $300. Johnson was a former employe on the steamer.

Some of the stolen property was discovered in the pawnshops and second-hand stores in this city.

It is claimed that as soon as Johnson knew he was under suspicion he fled to Superior, afterward leaving for Ashland. His description was sent out by the local police and Johnson was located very shortly after he left the head of the lakes.

THE FIRST BALLOT

Will Give Dunn the Nomination, His Supporters Claim.

Assert He Can Win Without Hennepin County Delegation.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supporters of Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, all along have maintained that their candidate will be nominated on the first ballot, and that they do not really need the votes of Hennepin county. Yesterday a Republican friendly to Dunn told The Herald correspondent how this will be brought about. He prepared a table showing the number of delegates which each of the three candidates for governor will probably get, and for the sake of argument conceded that Collins will carry Hennepin.

The table follows:

	Dunn.	Collins.	Eddy.
First district	62	86	—
Second	57	78	—
Third	100	25	—
Fourth	84	14	—
Firth	—	113	—
Sixth	74	51	13
Seventh	54	41	63
Eighth	106	29	—
Ninth	82	40	7
Total	619	468	83

This table appears very conservative to the average Dunn supporter. The managers are confident that the Princeton candidate will get Hennepin county, and many believe that the Eighth and the Third districts will be solid for Dunn. Neither will they concede sixty-three delegates to Eddy in the Seventh district, nor forty-one to Collins.

The table will be criticised by the Collins men, who have not given up hope of carrying Ramsey county, which has sixty-seven deleates, who believe that Collins will get the best of the Ninth and the Sixth districts, and who do not concede so many to Dunn in the First and Second.

• • •

Judge Loren W. Collins of St. Cloud and Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, are willing to fight the gubernatorial nomination between themselves. Neither looks with favor on the renewed talk of Frank M. Eddy, of Glenwood, and both are trying to head off the boom which has recently been started in the interest of the Glenwood candidate.

The Collins men do not like the Eddy boom, because they think it is taking Republicans from their ranks. They realize that it is the field against Dunn and they prefer that their candidate be the leader among the opposition forces.

The Dunn men on the other hand do not like talk of Eddy or a "dark horse" candidate, fearing that some Republicans will thereby get the idea that neither Dunn or Collins is acceptable for the nomination and that there will be a stampede to nominate a new man. The Dunn men are confident that they can defeat Collins.

There is also a feeling on the part of some Republicans that the Eddy dark horse talk will result in Governor Van Sant entering the race, and it is a safe guess that the Dunn men would rather fight Collins than Van Sant. Van Sant as a campaigner has few equals in the West, and should he make the run there would be a battle royal between him and Dunn.

Should Van Sant get in the race, however, the Dunn men believe that it will prove that the fight is solely to keep in office the administration forces and that "it is anything to defeat Dunn." For this reason many Dunn men believe that Van Sant's entry into the field would only strengthen Dunn.

• • •

R. C. Dunn has been devoting considerable time to Hennepin county recently. His supporters in the state university have formed a "Dunn club" with sixty or more members, and the Princeton candidate appears quite frequently at ward meetings.

Judge Collins has two sons at the state university, and the Collins men argued all along that the St. Cloud candidate would get the best of the university vote.

• • •

L. P. Hunt, of Mankato, has announced that he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for railroad and warehouse commissioner and that he will support William E. Young of the same city. Thomas Crawford of Lakefield, is also a candidate for the place, and there is a movement among the Republicans of the Second congressional district to get together and decide on one candidate.

• • •

The feature of the Democratic presidential campaign in Ramsey county is the absence of any talk of William Randolph Hearst. The New York publisher so far has no active leader in St. Paul, although he is making considerable progress in Hennepin.

SHIP SUBSIDY RECOMMENDED

As Best Plan to Develop the American Merchant Marine.

New York, May 23.—The merchant marine commission authorized by the Fifty-eighth congress to consider and recommend legislation for the development of the American merchant marine began its first session here today. Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire is chairman of the commission, which is composed of members of both branches of congress. Invitations had been sent to the chief shipowners and builders of this port, to marine engineers and even to sailors before the mast, to appear before the commission.

Senator Gallinger, in opening the inquiry, pointed out that more than 90 per cent of the foreign commerce of this country is being carried in foreign ships, and said the commission will be fortunate if the discussion here and elsewhere sheds such light on the subject as will enable it to recommend to congress legislation of a remedial character.

Thomas Clyde, of the Clyde line, the first witness called, strongly advocated ship subsidy. After deep study of the problem he was convinced that this was the best plan to be pursued. He presented a chart showing the standing of the chief maritime nations of the world. The United States stands at the bottom. All the nations, he said, have given aid of some sort to natural conditions.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

TO SEE ST. PAUL

With Eight Dollars Two Small Boys Start For There.

Humane Officer Withrow Stumbles on to Them By Accident.

"We just wanted to see St. Paul," said Clarence Brown, a thirteen-year-old lad who with a companion of the same age, named James McLean, was brought up from the Saintly City Saturday night by Humane Officer Withrow.

"We cashed an eight dollar pay check and ran away. We rode to South Superior on the blind baggage, and then bought tickets to St. Paul from there.

"When we got to St. Paul we slept at the Bethel and got our meals at a restaurant. We made a shoe shining box from some wood we found in an alley, and bought some blacking with some of the money we had left.

"We just wanted to have a good time and see the city."

The Brown boy was employed by the A. D. T. company in Duluth. His mother had fitted him out with new clothes about a month ago and the understanding was that the boy should turn over his wages to her.

Tuesday he secured a pay check for $8 and signing his mother's name to it, cashed it. With the proceeds, he and his chum Jimmy McLean started out to see the world. The proceeds of the check were sufficient to purchase two half-fare tickets to St. Paul and the lads had a little money to spare for their immediate necessities.

The mother of the Brown lad was nearly prostrated over the absence of her son from home. She had received no word from him, and had no idea where he had gone. She appealed to Mr. Withrow Friday afternoon for assistance. Mr. Withrow was compelled to leave that evening for St. Paul with a crippled child, whom he was taking to the state hospital. He promised the mother to look into the matter on his return, and also left the description of the lad with the police.

As he was entering the depot at St. Paul Saturday night to return to Duluth, a lad hailed him and wanted to know if he wanted his shoes shined.

"What are you doing here," said the humane officer, as he reached out and grasped the arm of the lad and also his companion. The two youngsters were the lads who were missing from Duluth.

"If we'd seen who you was you'd never 'a got us," said the Brown lad as he told the officer why he had gone to St. Paul. They were brought home and restored to their parents.

The Brown lad has just been released from parole to the municipal court for hitting a girl during the strike of the A. D. T. boys last spring. Some disposition of his case will be made by municipal court authorities. He may be sentenced to Red Wing, or again placed on parole to the court.

The McLean lad has no previous record of bad conduct and he was turned over to the custody of his parents with a warning from the municipal court.

SMITH CANNOT MAKE SPEECH

That He Desires Seconding the Nomination of Roosevelt.

Washington, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. A. Smith, delegate to the national convention from Minneapolis, desires to make a speech in seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt. He has written to Washington in response to letters of inquiry as to whether or not there was any friction or not among the Minnesota delegation regarding the honor of making a seconding speech. The same inquiry was addressed to Ed. G. Rogers, the St. Paul district delegate, and he promptly replied that so far as he was concerned he would not seek the honor of making a nominating speech. But Smith is not unwilling to yield. He says in his letter that, if his friends want to make a speech he "will be pleased to do so." Inasmuch as the program of nomination speeches, as made up, does not include Minnesota at all in the seconding speeches, Mr. Smith will not have the coveted opportunity. The political conditions in Wisconsin and Illinois and other states are such that the old Republican war horses will be brought forward to do the speaking at the national convention.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

EFFECT OF GLASS

In Scattering Shot Explained In Gillespie Case.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 23.—Dr. A. P. Heyl, called as an expert by the defense in the Gillespia murder trial, testified that he had made experiments in firing through window glass, and found that glass at a distance of one foot from the muzzle of a gun would have no perceptible influence in scattering the shot, and that a 16-gauge choke-bored gun, such as James Gillespie owned, would not have scattered the shot so widely as did the weapon used by the assassin. Asked the direct question if a 16-gauge choke-bore gun was the weapon used by the assassin, he said he thought not; that an ordinary muzzle-loading gun would scatter the shot approximately as did the assassin's weapon.

MINSTREL GUILTY

Of the Awful Crime of Lese Majeste Against President.

Lew Dockstader Talks of Recovering Pictures By Replevin.

New York, May 23.—The World says: President Roosevelt is reported to have smiled when told of the moving picture incident of Thursday morning, when the minstrel, Lew Dockstader, disguised as a venerable negro, did a funny fall at the steps of the capitol and was tenderly assisted into a carriage by a person who was the counterpart of the nation's chief executive.

Hereafter men will tremble at the presidential smile.

There was a conference of the president's advisers at the White House that night, at which the situation was discussed. All agreed that the minstrel's impersonation was the curtain-raiser to a political tragedy planned by foes of the administration. The advisers thought of the merriment of vast audiences throughout the country, as the Dockstader moving pictures revived memories of Booker T. Washington and the president's friendship for the eminent negro.

But how to stop it—that was the all-important question. President Roosevelt insisted that there must be a law somewhere, and, sure enough, they found it.

In substance this statute provides swift punishment for the person who seeks to harass or ridicule a government official.

"Just the thing," said Secretary Loeb as he dashed to the White House 'phone and called up the Washington Police headquarters. What followed is a state secret not to be discussed, but the sequel was known at midnight, when Sergt. Hartigan, of the Washington police, started for New York. His mission was to nip the moving-picture scheme in the bud; to compel the surrender of the films, and, if necessary, to capture the minstrel alive or dead.

Hartigan, in raincoat and rubbers, arrived here in the cold dawn of Friday, and stealthily made his way to police headquarters. There at an early hour Commissioner McAdoo and Inspector McCluskey were closeted with the visitor.

The mystery deepened when Detective Sergeant Morris, summoned to the secret conference, rushed out half an hour later, jumped into a cab and vanished northward. Meanwhile the guilty Dockstader was slumberin at the Hotel Marlborough.

No thought of his awful crime disturbed his dreams. Visions of big boxoffice receipts made him smile in his sleep.

But a sudden and sharp knocking at the door aroused the minstrel.

"Man to see you in the office, Mr. Dockstader," said a bell boy.

"He is, hey?" shouted Dockstader. "Well, tell him to take a walk around the block."

"But, Mr. Docktader," interrupted the hallboy in a tragic whisper, "it's a fly cop from police headquarters."

Ten minutes later Mr. Dockstader confronted his visitor—Detective Sergeant Morris.

"The chief wants to see you at headquarters. Better come along with me right now," said the officer, with a significant smile.

It was an awful moment for the minstrel, who was unbraced by even one morning cocktail.

"There's a row about that moving-picture trick of yours," continued the detective, "and it looks as if there would be something doin'."

The minstrel knew that the commissioner's pressing invitation meant business, and that Morris's mission was to deliver him at headquarters bound hand and foot, if necessary.

Arriving at police headquarters, the quaking minstrel's captor marched him through the Rouges' Gallery and, pointing to a vacant space between the photographs of "Sheeny Mike" and "Red" Leary, remarked pleasantly:

"That's a nice spot for your picture."

Dockstader was trying to laugh, when three detective sergeants off duty strolled up to Morris with the query:

"What's your man wanted for? Murder?"

"Worse," was the solemn answer. "He was caught taking a picture that looks like the president."

Cold perspiration bathed the minstrel's brow when he confronted Inspector McClusky. That official led him into the presence of Commissioner McAdoo. Let Dockstader tell what happened.

"Now, look here, Mr. Commissioner," said the minstrel, "I am absolutely innocent of any intentional disrespect to President Roosevelt. I took that feature in Washington for use in a stage attraction. There is no politics in it and no menace to any human being."

Commissioner McAdoo was not satisfied. In short, strong sentences he drew a picture that made the minstrel shudder.

"President Roosevelt is terribly aroused over these pictures," he said, in sepulchral tones. "He and his friends feel that the pictures are part of a terrible plot to influence the American voters against him.

"They have sent a police officer from Washington to seize the films. I advise you to surrender them or the consequences may be serious."

"Surrender!" gasped the minstrel: "why, certi! I'll pass over the films with pleasure, and I feel sure that our noble president will enjoy them."

In less time than it takes to tell it, Mr. Dockstader had written an order on a kinetoscope company for the films and had handed it to Commissioner McAdoo. A late afternoon train carried Sergeant Hartigan back to Washington with the films addressed to President Roosevelt. He was the bearer, also, of a personal letter from Cimmissioner McAdoo to the chief executive couched in terms of deepest respect.

In discussing the case Commissioner McAdoo and Inspector McClusky professed ignorance of any plan to arrest Mr. Dockstader, stating that the minstrel gave up the pictures "cheerfully and of his own volition."

From an absolutely reliable source it was learned, however, that the Washington police sergeant came to this city with authority to demand the minstrel's arrest. Now Mr. Dockstader, recovering from his exertime nervousness, threatens to regain possession of the films if he has to institute replevin proceedings. Surrounded by sympathetic friends Mr. Dockstader discussed the situation.

"We are up against this game of lese majeste for fair, and I'm not going to be the only victim," he said. "I get off straight that President Roosevelt will squeeze the cartoon-man next and that Tom Powers is slated for 400,000 years in jail.

"But, dear me! What tough luck I have had with those Washington pictures. I went there in the innocence of my heart to get a little moving-picture scene. And what happened?

"It rained three straight days and than when I do manage to turn the trick they push the dome of the capital down on me.

"Now this political-plot idea is all rot. I don't stand for hard money. I don't vote and I don't shout with any party, Republican, Democratic, Temperance or chowder.

"But McAdoo tells me that the president called a cabinet meeting on my case last night. They dig up an old law under which I am to be drawn, quartered and shipped to St. Helena for burial.

"And why?" queried Mr. Dockstader, with rising indignation. "Simply because Henry Ellis, a man in my company with the finest set of store teeth on the stage, played President Roosevelt to my Uncle Tom for just five minutes before a camera.

"And yet, our imperial ruler, when a police commissioner, occupied a front seat on three consecutive nights to see my impersonation of Mayor Strong hoisting the flag on the City Hall. I can hear the Roosevelt laugh even yet, and see his dental smile.

"But that was before he contracted the lese majeste habit," continued Mr. Dockstader, in saddened tones. "Cleveland never had it, not even when I did him in a little derby hat and an inflated rubber stomach for six weeks, at a theater within gun shot of the White House.

"Ben Harrison didn't seem to mind it, either, and I certainly did rub it into him for the full four years of his term.

"But President Roosevelt is different," continued the minstrel. "I did hope to feature him in my company this season, but it looks now as if he had served the usual two weeks' notice and was going to quit."

Emboldened by his stimulating surroundings, Mr. Dockstader next ventured a veiled defiance.

"I am going to get those pictures back," said he. "Tomorrow I shall wire the president to please return them with his O. K., and if he refuses—well—ah—I may resort to replevin."

Consternation fell upon the group of listeners, while Mr. Dockstader, circling the room with apprehensive glance, hastened to add, "But keep it quiet until I say the word."

With strongest emphasis the minstrel denied that a thought of Booker T. Washington had ever entered his head.

"My little act," he said, "finds me touring the country in a balloon. Suddenly I find myself directly over the White House. Overcome by thoughts of President Roosevelt I tumble out of the basket, and land on the steps of the capitol. I am succored by the president and placed by him in a carriage. That is every blessed thing there is in the picture."

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Negaunee Mine Closes Down For Lack of Room.

Negaunee—The Blue mine closed Sunday night owing to the strike of the masters and pilots, three hundred men having been let out. Other mines in the county will follow in a few days unless the difficulty is settled. There is no room to pile ore and the coal supply is short.

Munising—There is a colony of beavers on Grand island, near Munising, the members of which seem to be fully as industrious as the rest of their kind. This colony, it is estimated is about a dozen strong. A. O. Jopling, who has charge of the construction work for the Cleveland-Cliffs company on Grand island, says the beavers have been very busy this spring and during the past winter. In one place on the little creek the beavers have cut down an elm tree fully eighteen inches thick.

Norway—Near Lyon's lake, Dickinson county, Deputy Game Warden Brewster recently effected the arrest of a trapper named McCartney, on the charge of violating the game laws. Arraigned before Justice Patenaude at Norway, the prisoner acknowledged that he had killed deer for wolf bait, but said he had not trapped for beaver as claimed. He was fined $50 and costs but as he had not money enough he was given a few days to return with the sheriff, take up his traps and try to raise the required amount.

Bessemer—G. S. Barber, who for several years has had charge of the Mikado mine, east of Bessemer, for Pickands, Mather & Co., and under whose management it has become one of the principal producing mines of the range, has resigned that position to become superintendent for Corrigan, McKinney & Co., in charge of its properties on the Gogebic range. The Mikado, where only a light force of men is employed at present, will be looked after by Captain Hardenberg, of the Cary mine, at Hurley, owned by the same company.

Escanaba—After lying unclaimed at a local undertaker's nearly two weeks the body of an unknown man found floating in the bay near the Stephenson dock, has been buried at Escanaba. It is estimated that fully 500 people looked at the dead, and although many claimed they were positive they had met the man at some time not any were able to furnish any clue that would lead to the location of relatives. A photograph of the dead man's features was taken, and will be kept by the coroner in the hope it may lead to establishing the identity of the stranger.

WHEAT IS WEAKER

Better Crop News Cause the Market to Decline.

World's Shipments Large and Large Decrease In Visible.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 23.—The wheat market was weaker today and largely on crop news. Reports from Kansas were of a very decided improvement in the condition of the wheat crop, and some estimates put the probable crop at as high as a year ago. St. Louis reported the news from all directions as telling of a great improvement in crop conditions. World's wheat shipments were heavy, much larger than expected, and Broomhall's guess of last week proved to be a bad one. The visible supply, on the other hand, decreased almost 1,000,000 bus more than had been estimated.

Foreign markets were closed today and this restricted business somewhat in American markets.

The July option in Duluth lost ¾c, in Chicago 1½c, in Minneapolis ¾c and in New York it was ½c higher.

The world's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week in last year were as follows:

	Last Week.	Previous Week.	Last Year.
America	1,600,000	936,000	5,432,000
Russia	3,096,000	3,200,000	2,488,000
Danube	992,000	816,000	864,000
Argentine	2,584,000	3,664,000	2,376,000
India	1,176,000	1,368,000	1,152,000
Australia	696,000	384,000
Austria-Hungary	46,000	48,000	8,000
Various	112,000	240,000	64,000
Totals	10,296,000	10,656,000	12,424,000
CORN
Argentine	1,096,000	864,000	803,000

The amount of wheat on passage increased 328,000 bus., and corn increased 1,194,000 bus.

Snow's weekly report says: "Scattered returns from a sufficient number of counties to be indicative of the general situation show a marked improvement in winter wheat conditions during the past month in Tennessee and Kentucky, slight improvement in Ohio, Indiana, Kansas, while Missouri and Nebraska have fully maintained previous promise. Michigan is the only state of importance showing deterioration. Weather conditions have been good for stooling, so that the stand is better than seemed probable a month ago. The average of condition is probably two or three points higher than on May 1. Spring wheat promise is fully up to the normal with an acreage apparently a little larger than last year. Condition of oats about normal, rather low in the Ohio valley, but good elsewhere and making good progress."

Car receipts at Duluth were 1 against 14 last year, and at Minneapolis 232 against 267 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 233 against 271 last year. Chicago receipts were 2 cars against 4 a year ago.

The visible supply last week decreased 3,927,000 bus., and is now 24,111,000 bus., against 27,202,000 bus. a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 337,047 bus., last year 435,624 bus. Shipments 314,945 bus., last year, 362,928 bus. Clearances were 127,455 bus.

The visible suply of corn decreased 1,031,000 bus. last week and is now 5,164,000 bus., against 4,296,000 bus., a year ago.

Primary receipts of corn were 419,453 bus., last year 659,110 bus. Shipments, 387,641 bus., last year 440,104 bus. Clearances were 11,000 bus. In the Chicago market July corn closed unchanged. July oats a shade lower.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth market was very quiet. July opened ¼c higher at 96¾c, but fell to 94⅝c at 9:55. It rallied to 95c at 10:08 and fell to 94¾c at 10:50. It then rallied to 95c at 11:45 and after that fell to 94c at 12:15. It again rallied to 94⅞c at 12:40 but again weakened and closed at 94⅝c, the low point. This was ¾c lower than Saturday. The May option closed 1c lower at 96½c. September was off ½c, closing at 81¾c.

Cash wheat was very dull, the receipts being very light. No. 1 Northern sold from ½c over July to about 3c over.

Flax was very dull. July was up ¼c to $1.06¾ during most of the morning and then closed unchanged at $1.06½. The May option was also unchanged, September ½c higher and October ½c higher.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard 98c; No. 1 northern, 96½c; No. 2 northern, 94c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 97¼c; No. 1 northern, 96½c; No. 2 northern, 94c; on track, No. 1 northern, 94⅜@95¼c; No. 2 northern, 92¼@95¼c; macaroni, No. 1, 91c; No. 2, 89c; May, 96½c; July, 94⅝c; September, 81¾c, last, in store, $1.07⅜; to arrive, $1.07¼; May, $1.07; July, $1.06½; September, $1.00½; October, $1.06¾. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Selling Pressure on Wheat Caused Weak Undertone.

Chicago, May 23.—Extremely favorable weather caused considerable selling pressure on wheat today, resulting in a weak undertone. The bearish sentiment was augmented by a report from Kansas claiming for the central part of the state a greater yield than last year. The weakness of May was an additional bear influence. On small local receipts the market opened firm. July being unchanged to ⅜c higher at 87⅞c to 88¼c. The demand was only light and with quite liberal offerings the price gradually declined to 87½c. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 235 cars, against 129 cars last week and 313 cars a year ago.

Additional weakness developed as the session advanced. An attempt on the part of pit traders to sell wheat bought on prospects of a large ofercrase in the visible supply was one of the chief bear factors late in the day. The market closed near the low point, final figures on July being off ¼c at 87¾c, after the price had dropped to 87⅛@87¼c.

Under the influence of ideal weather conditions, the corn market was subjected to liberal selling from scattered sources resulting in considerable weakness. The easier tone in wheat was also a factor in bringing out a number of selling orders. July opened ½c to ⅝@¾c lower at 48¾c to 48⅝@¾c, and sold off to 45c. Local receipts were 175 cars with eleven of contract grade.

On a fair demand from a prominent house the market held steady the remainder of the day. July sold off to 47¾c, but rallied, closing unchanged at 48¼@48⅝c.

Oats were steady at a slight decline, the weakness in other grains being the depressing influence. July opened ¼c lower at 38⅛c, advancing later to 38¼c. Local receipts were 95 cars.

Lower prices at the yards due to liberal receipts of hogs caused an easier tone in provisions. The feature of trading was the selling of pork by packers. July pork opened 2½c to 5c lower at $10.90 to $10.92½, and declined to $10.85. July lard was down a shade to 2½@3c at $6.25 to $6.27½, and sold off to $6.22½. Ribs opened shade lower at $6.35, and declined to $6.30.

Close: Wheat—May, 96c; July, 87¾c; old, 88¾c; September, 80¾c; old, 82¾c; December, 80¾c. Corn—May, 47⅞c; July, 48¼@48¾c; September, 47⅜@47½c; December, 42¾c; May (1905), 41¾c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The trade was not large in the May, but the market seemed to lack good support. The local situation in this option is uncertain. We doube if the concentrated holdings are very large and while there is yet a considerable scattered short interest, there is also, we think, a good deal of scattered long interest waiting for somebody to put the market. This makes a rather precarious situation. The market acts a little tired. Kansas City which is the cheapest cash market in the country reports a poor cash demand with prices sharply lower and the movement from farmers increasing. We thing it should still be kept in mind that there is a good deal of this artificial and that is due to speculative causes in the situation, and that the price is high.

Corn—It is the same quiet hesitating market as for some time past with no manifest tendency to prices. There is a good deal of bearish speculative feeling on the crop prospects and the expectation of an increased movement from farms. This is offset, however, by the fact that interior prices are still relatively higherinvely higher, and by the further fact thatt hese offerings of corn do not yet begin to show up in our receipts.

Oats—The weakness was in the May, the holders of which seem disposed to meet the demand from shorts more than half way. The cash situation is quiet and not much of a factor either way. There is enough short interest in the September to give that option a fairly steady tone.

Provisions—It was a very quiet market with a little better tone on local buying which may have been in the way of covering shorts. Receipts are about the same as a year ago, and shipments are larger. We see nothing yet to indicate any change from the dragging tendency which the market has had for so long.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—Wheat fluctuated nervously with a light local trade. During the forenoon, previous closing prices were pretty well maintained but a downward tendency developed the last hour and a half. The early news offered few influential trading facts. Cable statistics were bearish but of little influence in a market controlled entirely by the domestic situation. The larger world's shipments than anticipated and the Prussian wheat report showing a much improved condition over last year's, had little weight. The New York was strong. Prices were lower in the Northwest but firm relative to Chicago. There was no cash business reported prior to the close. The July promises to continue a nervous market and the active trade is likely to shift to the old September. This option, we think, is a safer and a better purchase on the breaks. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 12 cars.

Corn—There was little change in corn values at the end of the day's trading. There was selling early by houses with country connections which was supposed to be against country purchases. Local receipts came up to the highest estimate and proved to be more than the local demand could take care of, and prices were 1 to 1½c a bushel lower. Country advices continue bearish in regard to movement and our purchases Saturday were the largest so far. On the decline shorts became good buyers. The lake situation is unchanged. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 315 cars.

Oats were a quiet, dull market. The May was rather weak, selling 1c a bushel lower at one time. Cash business was quiet. The sample market was ½c to 1c a bushel lower. Receipts were moderate with no material increase predicted in country movement. Crop reports were good. Snow says that the promise is good, except in the Ohio valley, and the crop is making good progress. It is expected that crop conditions will be reflected in the July and in the September. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 225 cars.

Dennis, Chicago: Do you remember how the trade dropped May wheat and went into July over night almost, a while back? Look out the trade don't drop the July and go into September just as quickly lure somewhere in between four hours. We think the safest trading proposition now is the September, and advise buying it with confidence. If trade goes into it, it is almost sure to pull it at once on account of the comparatively low prices.

* * *

McKinnon, Chicago: Still feel, with local stocks so small, there will not be much money on the short side of July wheat. There is still a large short interest in the new July, and believe it just a matter of time when it will sell at same price as the old. Would stick to the long side on the breaks.

* * *

A Kansas City message says: The wheat crop has certainly made a record in improvement during the past six weeks and we would not be surprised to see more wheat raised than ever. Wheat has spread out and is very thick on the ground. All the southern part of the state is practically made now and there is enough moisture in the ground to carry it through. Wheat cutting in Oklahoma and southern Kansas will start some time and threshing will be under way by the end of June. If present premiums continue new wheat will reach this market by July 1. Grain men say that by changing usual gulf shipments to Chicago they can get eight cents more per bushel out of it. As all dealers here are bearish, presume first threshings will be rushed to market.

* * *

Dennis, Chicago: Last year the visible supply of wheat did not increase until Aug. 22. What is there to make it increase any earlier this year?

TRADING IN STOCKS

Opening Dealings Broader and More Active Than of Late.

Later the Market Became Dull But Strength Was Shown.

New York, May 23.—There was no market in London today, but opening prices of stocks here showed moderate gains in continuation of Saturday's upward movement. The opening dealings were broader and more active than for some time. Five thousand shares of United States Steel preferred sold at 54⅝ and 54½, compared with 54⅜ on Saturday. There were sales of 1400 shares of Union Pacific at 84¼ and 84⅝, compared with 83⅞ on Satuurday. Brooklyn Transit rose ⅜. Otherwise there were no changes in excess of ½.

Opening advances were canceled when the traders took profits. After the selling orders were disposed of the market rallied vigorously, some of the specialtics selling well above their first prices. Copper was bought in large blocks and advanced 1⅛. Brooklyn Transit, Manhattan, Metropolitan Street Railroad, Smelting, Lackawanna, Colorado & Southern first preferred and Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. also gained about a point each and General Electric 1½.

The buying movement spent its force when the market became very dull at slight reactions. Locomotive, Colorado Fuel and Iron and Chicago Great Western preferred B rose 1 to 1¼. Reading second preferred 2 and United Fruit 2¼. Cotton Oil, Realty preferred and Westinghouse Electric lost about a point. Bonds were steady at noon.

Prices moved up again under the lead of the grain carriers. St. Paul, Atchison and Missouri Pacific were taken freely and the specialties also made headway upwards. The purchasing movement was suspended pretty much all of the afternoon, the market failing back again into its recent state of semi-stagnation. Atchison, Amalgamated Copper, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and United States Steel preferred increased the advances slightly, but the general market scarcely moved. Lackawanna jumped 3¼, Denver & Rio Grande preferred 1⅝, Republic Steel preferred 1¼ and St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred 1.

Atchison and U. S. Steel was lifted ⅞ over Saturday during the final hour, for Tennessee Coal, 1¼; Metropolitan Securities and St. Louis Southwestern pfd, 1⅝, Republic Steel pfd 2, and Reading 2nd pfd 3. The response in the general list was very sluggish. Brooklyn Union Gas sold at 215, compared with 227 for the preceding sale, and Consolidated Gas receded a point. The closing was easy and dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is firm. There is little more doing, but it is a long way from be more active market. The expressions of feelings from Wall street are rather more bullish. It is still, however, almost wholly a traders' market and the bullishness seems based largely on the expectation of being able to force the shorts to cover. There is also less fear that they have exports and a hopefulness that they have about ceased. There is no increase in public interest so far as we can see, and this is what the market needs more than anything else. There are, pool operations by Amalgamated Copper and Brooklyn is being bought on the expectation of large Steel issues act summer earnings. The better although a large short interest is probably responsible for this. It is still, on the whole, a slow market.

* * *

Ridgeley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Advices remain unchanged. I have told you for a week that the market should temporarily do letter. Simply for the reason that sentiment was so bearish that many stocks were oversold. But that for the large public remained bearish. An unexpectedly good bank statement was sprung on the shorts Saturday and some quite vigorous covering resulted. It is surprising how sentiment has veered over on the bear to the bull side. One theory of the present rally is that as London is closed for three days insiders are getting ready to sell stocks to foreigners Tuesday morning at good prices when the London market reopens.

* * *

Coe Commission Co.: The stock market opened strong at around Saturday's close. The bank statement Saturday was an agreeable surprise and impelled the buying movement which lifted prices so smartly before the close. The rather spasmodic movements in one or two stocks indicated some distress on the part of the shorts. This buying movement was continued this morning and carried the active issues higher. Sales to noon, 175,000 shares. Advise buying the active railroad shares on all the declines.

* * *

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It is very positively asserted this morning by people in a position to know that steps are being taken toward peace in the Northern Securities affair and that it is possible a compromise will be effected in the near future.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 23.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 5 points. There were no cables to influence sentiment, but the weather over Sunday was very favorable and the room seemed bearishly inclined, though selling was checked somewhat by the report that one of the Southern bull leaders would arrive on the floor shortly after the opening. At first however, a renewal of the bear pressure and liquidation caused the market to work downward, and July, opening to $12.80, sold down to $12.62, while October declined from $10.85 to $10.68. At the lower level covering became more active, and following the appearance on the floor of the New Orleans operator, July jumped 19 points to $12.81 in about fifteen minutes, but there was no indication of bull support, and after the rally the list price became less active, ruling nervous and irregular, with prices moving in a narrow limit.

Cotton spot closed steady; middling uplands, 13.35; middling gulf, 13.60; sales, 3937 bales. utures closed barely steady: May, 12.82; June, 12.85; July, 12.97; August, 12.47; September, 11.22; October, 10.85; November, 10.73; December, 10.70; January, 10.75.

CAUSES OF STRIKE

Furnished to Civic Federation By Masters and Pilots.

Federation Will Try to Bring Both Sides Together.

Cleveland, May 23.—Upon the request of Samuel Mather, president of the local branch of the Civic federation, District Captain Paul Howell of the Masters' and Pilots' association delivered to Mr. Mather today a long written statement covering the causes leading up to the present deadlock between the two organizations. It is understood that the Civic federation will attempt to bring the representatives of both sides together in another meeting with a view of settling the trouble.

IS STILL HOPEFUL.

Vesselmen Think June 1 Will See Things Clear.

One well known vessel man said this morning that he still believed navigation would be under way by June 1. He said he had no particular reason for believing it other than that "he felt it in his bones."

"It has been my belief all along that Decoration day would see the end of this difficulty, and I think now, just as I have right along, that it will all terminate satisfactorily" he said.

"While I don't know that the masters and pilots have thought of it and don't know whether the vessel owners would receive such a proposition, it does appear to me very much as though it would be in good taste for the Masters' and Pilots' association to assert their willingness to go to work this yeaar for last year's wages and postpone consideration of an increase until next year. I contend, as do all the other owners, that a raise cannot be afforded this year, as conditions do not justify it.

"But it would be a simple solution of the problem if the union would notify the employers that they would not go to work next year for the same money but would do so this year."

Several Hundred New and Beautiful White Shirt Waists Are On Sale at Very Much Below Their Usual Selling Prices!

NOTE.
The opportunity was given us to place these unusual waist values before our patrons—because of unfavorable weather conditions—manufacturer s had more summer materials than they cared to have at this season of the year—when they are ready to send their representatives on the road with fall samples.

All brand new, fresh goods—made as well as any particular woman would know how to make them—all perfect fitting—all with the broad, full shoulders, so much desired now by women of fashion—all sizes from 32 to 44 bust measure—at savings of from a fourth to a third, right at the beginning of waist wearing time!

$1.75 and $1.50 Waists $1.00 $2.50 and $3 Waists $2.00
$2.00 and $2.25 Waists $1.50 $3.50 and $4 Waists $2.75

VERDICT FOR CARLSON.

Damages In Elevator Accident Assessed at $2,835.

The sealed verdict returned by the jury in the personal injury case of Charles Carlson against the Peavey Elevator company last Friday afternoon, was opened in court this morning, and Mr. Carlson was found to have a verdict for $2835 against the elevator company.

He sued to recover damages in the amount of $10,500 for injuries received at the time the scaffold inside the big concrete elevator fell to the ground, killing several workmen and injuring Calson.

The relatives of the men who were killed in the accident have also brought suit against the elevator company to recover the statutory limit of $5000 for the death of each.

In the action just tried John Jenswold, Jr., represented Carlson, and Adams & Miller represented the defendant.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The series of evangelistic meetings being conducted at the First Christian church, West Fourth street, by Rev. C. G. Kindred, of the Englewood Christian church, of Chicago, are meeting with gratifying success. There was a splendid attendance yesterday in particular. The meetings, which began May 16, and which commence each evening at 8 o'clock, will continue to Thursday evening, May 25. Rev. Kindred's church supports a foreign missionary at Lu Cheo Fu, China, and a home missionary at Chicago Heights.

THE McDONALD TRIAL.

State Closes and the Defense Opens Its Side.

Bedford, Ind., May 23.—The state closed its evidence-in-chief in the McDonald murder trial today and Judge Palmer made the opening statement for the defence. It is expected the case will go to the jury Thursday. The plaster cast of the track in the alley mud claimed to have been made by Miss Schafer's murderer and McDonald's shoe was put in evidence.

Public Affairs Committee.

Secretary Eva of the Commercial club his issued a call, authorized by Chairman T. W. Hugo, of the public affairs committee, for that committee to meet Wednesday night, after several postponed dates.

One of the principal things to be reported on by sub-committeees is the fund to be raised for advertising the city and its enterprises and save the merchants from solicitations. The amount set for raising is $15,000, and it is understood the committee at work on this is meeting with considerable success.

QUAY STILL WEAK.

Pittsburg, May 23.—The reports from Beaver today concerning the condition of Senator M. S. Quay are that there have been no unfavorable developments following the trip from Morganza to his home in Beaver. It is said, however, that he is still very weak, and, while able to take a little more nourishment than for several days, he does not gain much strength. During the last two days he has shown some improvement, but the attending physicians are not confident that this will be permanent.

All the healing, balsamic virtues of the Norway pine are concentrated in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, nature's own remedy for coughs and colds.

NEW NATIONAL BANK.

Washington, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Comptroller of the Currency today authorized the First National bank, of Deer Creek, Minn., to begin business with $25,000 capital. E. J. Webber is president; L. W. Babcock, vice president; A. D. Baker, cashier, and H. J. Baker, assistant cashier of the new bank.

NANCY HANKS SOLD FOR $4000.

Readville, Mass., May 23.—Nancy Hanks, the mare which for nearly three years held the trotting championship of the world, when the record stood at 2:04 was sold for $4,000 to J. M. Johnson, mayor of Calais, Maine, at the big horse sale here today.

TORNADO NEAR LA CROSSE.

La Crosse, Wis., May 23.—A small tornado swooped down through Mormon Coulee, near here, today and tore up trees and fences and unroofed many buildings. Several thousands damage was done to orchards, and crops just above ground were ruined by hail which followed the wind storm.

THEY KILLED A SNAKE.

During the siege of Ladysmith, in the Boer war, Henry W. Nevinson and the late T. W. Maud, British war correspondents, were walking up the main road of the village when they caught sight of a black thing moving rapidly across the road close in front of their feet, says the Chicago News. It was about three feet long or a little less and was moving very swiftly. In a perfectly straight line it darted forward, without the usual snake-like wriggling or other visible means of movement. Accustomed from boyhood to hunt adders on the Cumberland moors, Nevinson dashed upon it with his stick and broke its back with a single blow. Nevertheless, it still continued to move forward, as snakes will, no matter how desperately wounded, and the war correspondent sprang on its head and stamped it into the dust with his boot. At the same time Maud, who had only just perceived the danger, stamped on its back. The long and deadly body gave a few little jerks and then lay still. The snake was then carefully lifted on the end of a stick, carried back to the cottage, where the two men lived, and carefully deposited outside for future examination.

On the following morning a fragment of a Boer shell dropped on the snake, cutting it clean in half—but the rest is better told in Mr. Nevinson's own words: "To my astonishment," he says, "I noticed that the snake's inside was pure white. I looked closer. It was white, cotton wool. The skin was a silken umbrella case. The body was carefully wound round with black thread and a long piece of cotton projected from the mouth—the place where the deadly fangs ought to have been. Being something of a naturalist, I took the creature up in my hand, lifting it with care, because I remembered that poisonous snakes will bite even after death. I thought that at the end of the campaign I would bring it home and present it to the South Kensington museum. It needed no stuffing.

"And now, whenever I am downhearted and want to think of something that is happy, I think of the little boy (or little girl) who sat behind a wall with a piece of cotton in his hand and watched two experienced war correspondents pluckily dancing upon his magic snake and leaving it for dead."

WOMENS OUTFITTERS

Getting rid of the Wool Tailored Suits at half! More of them go on the special racks for tomorrow's selling—

And, a word or two about the sale!

Every Suit in wool cloths that cannot be reordered—

Every Suit that has not for any reason moved quickly—goes on to the special racks at half!

We're not waiting until the season is about over to give you the benefit of reductions—but right NOW, when you can get full use of them—it's simply our way of giving a bargain—and, that women appreciate merchandising of this sort is shown by the BUSINESS we are doing—not only on these special lines at half—but on our regular lines at regular prices!

It's the new way of doing things—

And some of the competitors in bold black newspaper type, are trying to "work" the "Only Original Honest John Smith Racket" by telling you that either the original prices were exorbitant or else price tickets were tampered with at other stores but theirs!

But people aren't to be blarneyed so easy—THEY KNOW VALUES—and they also very quickly recognize the store that offers them!

Some of the frantic efforts to stem the tide of trade from this store is indeed laughable!

ONE uses "the Only Original and Honest John Smith Racket"!

THE OTHER store is so "big" that manufacturers fairly run after them—anxious, almost, to GIVE them merchandise!

Laughable, indeed, isn't it?

BUT, we're doing business at the "old stand," and, what's more, we're going to do it!

The little store of today will perhaps be the big store of tomorrow! Rome wasn't built in a day!

BUT, good merchandise—fair treatment—new, fresh and fashionable goods at popular prices!—will do much towards making a "little store" big!

More than that—full knowledge of the things we sell—giving close, personal attention to every detail—being thoroughly familiar with the Eastern markets, and with a knowledge of merchandise, styles and values, that money cannot buy, enables us to compete successfully with "big" stores and "fogy" merchants who are so very much "interested" in the public that they WARN them AGAINST price tickets being tampered with, and all such Rubbish!

EVERYONE AT THE HEAD OF THE LAKES KNOWS THE PERSONNEL OF OUR FIRM—they know that our methods have always stood for everything that is fair and honorable—they also know that we are wide awake to every trade condition—and, that we are aggressive as well as progressive! We've built a store here that Duluth and its people are proud of—and, have shown their appreciation by their more than liberal patronage—If our competitors see fit to go into "spasms" every time we strike out with something new—with something modern and progressive—it's time they got into the band wagon with the "young blood!"

AGAIN WE SAY Man-Tailored Women's Suits of wool materials at half! And we add this---if you can match our values at any other store in this city, come back and get your money.

No ifs or ands about it—shop around—go to the self-styled "big" stores—to "the only original Honest John Smith stores" or the little stores! and, here—if you can get as good for less money, or better for the same money—the cash till is open to you for the amount that you've paid!—the store is here to protect its patrons in every instance.

THE RUSSIAN TROOPS MAKE SUDDEN ATTACK ON ANJU, KOREA, AND DESTROY IT

Japanese Garrison Retired After Setting Fire to Buildings.

No Confirmation of the Reported Battle at Port Arthur.

War Office Hears Nothing Except From Chinese Sources.

Mukden, May 24.—The Russians on May 16, made a sudden attack upon the town of Anju, Korea, from the village of Hai-Tchien and captured the town, destroying it. The Japanese garrison set fire to the houses and stores and retired in perfect order.

NO CONFIRMATION

Of Reported Land Attack on Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The report cabled to the Associated Press yesterday that the foreign office had received a telegram from the Russian consul at Che Foo reporting that the Japanese had made a land attack on Port Arthur and had lost 15,000 men killed or wounded and that the Russians had lost 3000 men, is true, but as nothing confirmatory has been received from any other source, the report is not given much credence.

The consul in his telegram said his information was obtained from the Chinese. The war office has nothing to confirm his report.

Che Foo, May 24.—(10 p. m.)—No further news had been received here from Port Arthur or the armies north of the Yalu river up to the hour of filing this dispatch.

DEFEAT COSSACKS.

Japanese Rout Infantry Who Leave Twenty Dead.

Tokio, May 24.—General Kuroki reports that a section of Japanese infantry encountered and defeated two hundred Cossacks at Toutao-Kou, eight miles northeast of Kuang Tien. The Cossacks fled to Ai Yuang Plenman, leaving twenty dead. The Japanese sustained no losses.

Additional details of the fight at Wang Chiaton, near Taku-Shan, May 20, indicate that thesquadron of Cossacks was almost annihilated by the Japanese infantry which surrounded and completely routed the enemy. All the Russian officers were killed, wounded or captured. Natives report that some of the Cossacks escaped on foot abandoning their equipment. Many killed and wounded were found on the battlefield.

JAPANESE DISASTER

Makes It Impossible to Overpower Port Arthur Fleet.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—Lieut. Saint Paire, the French naval attache, said today in the course of an interview with the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"The last Japanese disaster makes it impossible for Vice Admiral Togo to overpower the Port Arthur squadron. Port Arthur will hold out until the Baltic fleet arrives, and then the Russians will be able to gain command of the sea.

The foreign office states that it has not received any protest regarding the alleged planting of mines by Rear Admiral Wittseeft outside the main limit at Port Arthur.

The admiralty denies the report of the capture of three Japanese cruisers by the Vladivostok squadron, which has not been outside the harbor for several weeks.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE

Along Great South Road From Song Chin.

Seoul, May 24.—Further reports are being received that the Russians are advancing along the great south road from Song Chin.

Koreans estimate their number at about 660. The Cossacks, who fought with the Koreans at Ham Heung are supposed to have retired to Chang Chin. The latest reports from Ham Heung are that the Russians burned 500 houses in the suburbs, and partly destroyed the longest bridge in Korea, which spans the Song Chun river. Detached bodies of Russians, which evidently lack mutual understanding are continually appearing and they seem to have no definite purpose other than that of hurrying the country people. Maj. Takagi, the commander at Gensan, apparently wearying of this continued raiding, has sent a force north, the strength of which has not been stated, and which is probably intended to garrison Ham Heung.

The influence of Lady Om, the emperor's favorite at Seoul palace, has recently weakened. She insisted upon the retention in office of Yi Yung Tai, the seller of prefectures, against the emperor's desires to the appointment of either Yi Chi Yong or Sim Sang Hun, the home minister to the office. The emperor sharply rebuked her for interference in state affairs, and suggested that she refrain from interfering in politics. Many Koreans predict the end of her power, which has lasted for over a decade.

The Japanese commissariat is considerably annoyed over the unstability of the rate of exchange between the Japanese yen and Korean nickels. The government mints are working overtime to pay the imperial notes held by an American firm.

DIRECT ATTACK

On Russian Forces Is Not Considered Impending.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The prevailing opinion at the headquarters of the general staff is that the withdrawal of the Japanese upon Feng Wang Cheng means that the enemy has decided to devote himself primarily to operations against Port Arthur and that the present object of General Kuroki, with the first army, supported by Gen. Nadya, with the third army now landing near Taku Shan, is to watch Gen. Kuropatkin and prevent a move southward which would take Gen. Oku and the second army, on the Liao Tung peninsula, in the rear. A direct attack upon Gen. Kuropatkin's main force apparently is not considered to be impending. Nothing more than outpost affairs are anticipated, although some of these may be sanguinary. The Russian scouts are keeping in constant touch with the enemy and thus far the minor shiftings of the enemy's detachments west of the Tayang river and northward of Moi Ting Ling are considered to be in the nature of screens. If the two armies of the Russian commander-in-chief are trying to work a force around in the rear of Gen. Kuroki or are planning a surprise of course the fact is sedulously concealed here. Uneasiness is displayed at the near approach of the rainy season which will retard if not completely stop field operations, although this plays directly into the Russians hands. The Russians will continue to hold Newchwang, Kai-Chou and Tashi-Chou until a move in force is made towards Hai-Cheng, with the object of cutting off the retirement of the force at Kai Chou, which is sufficient to stand off an ordinary force of the enemy and discourage the landing of troops there or at Hiung-Yo-Chen. The Japanese are not in force north of Wa Fandian.

The report circulated by the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Central News, that ten stokers were killed by an explosion yesterday on board the Russian battleship Orel at Cronstadt is absolutely denied.

COMMITTEES ARRANGING FOR THE PRESS AT CONVENTIONS

There Will Be Over Seven Hundred Seats Provided For Newspaper Workers at St. Louis and Six Hundred at Chicago.

St. Louis, May 24.—The sub-committee of the Democratic national committee, at a session here, has adopted a resolution providing "that all applications for press tickets from newspapers for the Democratic national convention shall be made by and in the name of the publishers or managing editors of the newspapers, and must be filed with Charles H. Mann, press gallery, house of representatives, Washington, D. C., on or before June 8. Applications for press tickets from persons other than those indicated above will not be recognized."

A total of 702 seats will be provided for press workers. Of that number 352 seats are for correspondents or local newspaper workers. These will have tables. The remaining 350 seats will be reserved for representatives of the weekly press and publishers who do not send telegraphic matter but write news letters.

Chicago, May 24.—Sergeant-at-Arms W. F. Stone of the Republican national convention, who is in Chicago to remain until after the convention, was busy today discussing arrangements and perfecting plans. Mr. Stone stated today that all applications for press seats should be directed to his office in the Auditorium Annex. He said no change had been made in the allotment of press seats for the convention, and that if any change is to be made, it will not be until after a meeting of the sub-committee on arrangements, to be held in Chicago on or about June 1. According to present arrangements, approximately 600 seats will be provided for the press, a larger proportion in comparison with the seating capacity of the Coliseum than was the case at the last national Republican convention in Philadelphia.

TO PROTECT AUTOISTS.

New York Police Will Guard Certain Streets.

New York, May 24.—Repeated attacks on automobilists by East Side hoodlums, which culminated Sunday in the probable fatal wounding of Mrs. William C. Gottschalk, who was struck on the head by a large stone, have brought out a plan by the police to protect motorists on their way to various ferries. So vicious have these attacks become that scarcely an auto car has reached some of the ferries recently without bearing marks of its passage.

Adequate measures are extremely hard to frame, but the police department has arranged a scheme whereby, beginning next Sunday, certain streets leading to every East Side ferry will be under special patrol and the chauffeurs who may wish to free themselves of showers of tin cans, stones, etc., will be invited to use those routes.

CHAO CHU AT HEAD OF CLASS.

New York, May 24.—Chao Chu, son of Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese minister to the United States and now vice president of the foreign board at Pekin, has been graduated at the head of his class in the Atlantic City high school. There were thirty-one scholars in the class. The young Oriental will begin the study of medicine in Philadelphia next fall.

TO DIVIDE $100,000.

New York, May 24.—Officers of the American Smelting & Refining company will within a few days divide $100,000 in cash among their employes in accordance with the profit sharing scheme announced two years ago. Arrangements are now being perfected to divide the cash in proportion to the amount of earnings.

PATENTS AND RURAL DELIVERY.

Washington, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following patents have been issued: To Joseph H. Miller, of Duluth, horse collar; H. H. Petry and L. S. Hanson, of Cloquet, watch case.

Rural free delivery service is to be established on June 15 at Sebeka, Wadena county, Minn., with one carrier.

MANY CONTESTS FOR DELEGATES

Will Have to Be Settled In Ohio Convention.

Hearst Men Will Act as Temporary Officers.

Columbus, Ohio, May 24.—The preliminary meetings of the Democratic state convention were unusually animated today owing to contests from the large conventions involving 200 delegates and nine members of the committee that are selected by the twenty-one congressional districts.

The convention proper does not convent until tomorrow, but its control was determined at the meetings today and especially by the selections of members of the committees at the district meetings. When the hold-over state central committee was selected last year, at the convention that nominated Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, for governor, it was composed largely of "Johnson men," but recently this committee acted so independently that there was great doubt today as to what it would do with the unusually large number of contested seats. At a recent meeting, this committee selected R. L. Starr, of Bryan, for temporary chairman of the convention and other Hearst men for temporary officers, although Mayor Johnson was opposed to Hearst. Even the two state committeemen from Cleveland, at a previous meeting, voted against Chairman Starr and the rest of the Hearst organization and they were reported today as not in accord with their former chief, Johnson. The anomaly was presented of the old friends of John R. McLean, James Kilbourne and Tom L. Johnson, the last three Democratic candidates for governor in Ohio, who have never co-operated before, combining against the recent organization of Hearst men in this state.

The state central committee could not meet this forenoon, owing to unsettled conditions in the factional fighting. Meantime both the radicals and the conservatives are claiming the state committee—110 to 10—neither having more than one majority on their own claims. The result is not only close, but the feeling is very bitter, with all sorts of charges of fraud in the contest cases, and even of "dark deals" in securing votes in the committee, which meets at 2:30 p. m., and continues in session until the district meetings are held at 5 p. m.

Mayor Johnson was the last of the leaders to arrive.

Hon. H. L. Starr, of Bryan, temporary chairman, arrived today. His announcement that he could not furnish advance copies of his keynote speech to the press until tonight, was accepted as an indication that the Hearst men still expected to win at the preliminary meetings tonight and control the convention tomorrow. Mr. Starr is classed as a Hearst man.

N. Y. POLICE CAPTAIN IS WARNED

New York, May 24.—Threats of bodily harm to a police captain, who took part in the general pool room raids of yesterday, in event of continued surveillance in the manner which it has been conducted, were made by an attorney in open court today when some of the raided prisoners were arraigned. Lawyer Stephen O'Hara, who represented three men arrested in the raid on an alleged pool room on East Thirty-second street, bitterly attacked Police Capt. Shiere when his clients were arraigned in the Yorkville police court. He charged that the captain had unlawfully raided the place at various times.

"I warn the captain now," said Lawyer O'Hara, "that if he ever goes there again, he will be shot."

Capt. Shiere then made a formal complaint against the men and the hearing was adjourned until tomorrow.

PRESIDENT MAKES A FLYING TRIP TO MASSACHUSETTS TO VISIT HIS SONS AT SCHOOL

Will Participate In the Prize Day Exercises.

Presidential Train Greeted By Children at Several Stations.

Executive Will Return to Washington After Exercises.

Groton, Mass., May 24.—President Roosevelt, who had made the trip from Washington to be present at the Groton school today and participate in the annual prize day exercises, reached Groton at 9:05 this forenoon. He was met at the station by the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, principal of the institution, at which two of the president's sons, Theodore, Jr., and Kermit, are preparing for college, and was driven to the school. The president's trip from Washington was accomplished without special incident, save that at a number of stations which were passed after daybreak today the citizens, and in some cases the school children, assembled to greet the chief executive. The president's party includes Miss Carew, sister-in-law of the president, and Secretary Loeb.

The presidential train made no stops and the president did not make his appearance at any point along the route. The most notable demonstrations made were at Clinton and at Lancaster, Mass. At Clinton hundreds of school children were banked upon the platform, each provided with an American flag. As the train passed the children cheered and waved their flags. The demonstrations at Lancaster was similar.

On the way from Groton station to the school the president stopped a few moments at the residence of John Lawrence, a friend, who entertained Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt at the time of their visit here two years ago, when their eldest son, Theodore, was ill.

The students, anticipating the arrival of the nation's chief executive, were gathered at the main hall. As the carriage appeared in the grounds, the school yell, given with all the enthusiasm which the occasion prompted, greeted the president. The carriages stopped at the residence of Dr. Peabody and the president walked over to the hall, where the students had assembled, to return their greeting. He said that he was exceedingly glad to meet and greet them and provoked a laugh by saying:

"I deeply sympathize with the two unfortunates among you who have a presidential father."

The president then returned to the Peabody residence, where he remained until 1:30, when the exercises of prize day were scheduled to begin in the main hall.

THE GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS ELECTS MRS. SARAH P. DECKER, PRESIDENT

MRS. SARAH PLATT DECKER

St. Louis, May 24.—The first order of business at today's session of the seventh biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which has been in session for the last week at the Odeon, was the report of the nominating committee.

The report was presented by the chairman and was unanimously adopted. Forty-four states and territories were represented on the committee. The officers, as elected, are as follows:

Prsident, Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, Dnever, Colo.

First vice president—Mrs. Phillip N. Moore, St. Louis.

Second vice president, May Aldan Ward, Boston.

Recording secretary, Mrs. John D. Sherman, Chicago.

Corresponding secretary, Miss Louisa B. Pepenheim, Charleston, S. C.

Treasurer, Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, Austin, Texas.

Auditor, Dr. Sarah H. Kendall, of Washington.

Directors, Mrs. Charles A. Perkins, of Tennessee; Mrs. Lydia P. Williams, of Minnesota; Miss Belle M. Stoutenburgh, of Nebraska; Mrs. Charles Yardley, of New Jersey; Mrs. Josiah E. Coles, of California; Mrs. William P. Orr, of Ohio; Mrs. Mary I. Wood, of New Hampshire; Mrs. Edward L. Johnson, of Rhode Island.

BEDE EXPECTS COTTON TO SPEAK AT THE CONVENTION

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Congressman J. Adam Bede said to The Herald correspondent this morning: "The report, or rather the rumor, which has been printed in Minnesota newspapers to the effect that I have been designated to second the nomination of President Roosevelt in the Republican national convention, is untrue. On my own volition, several weeks ago, I suggested that Hon. J. B. Cotton, of Duluth, speaking in behalf of Minnesota and the Northwest, would be a good man to make a seconding speech. That suggestion met with approval from those who have the program of the national convention in hand.

"A week or so ago I received information that other members of the Minnesota delegation wanted to make an address in behalf of the president. Letters had been written to that effect to Chairman Payne and possibly others of the national committee. These letters were written about the time of the Illinois deadlock and the Wisconsin bolt. 'Local feeling and factional troubles are to be avoided, as I am informed, and for this reason Minnesota would have no place on the program if there was a contest.

"I am not a delegate to the convention, and nobody has any right to assume that I will address the convention. I want to have Mr. Cotton make a seconding speech, and I fully expect him to do so."

CLEVER CHURCH SWINDLER IS RUN DOWN AND ARRESTED

New York, May 24.—With the arrest of William Davidson alias "Fred Hall," alias "Fred Halford," alias "Fred Hill," agents of the Charity organization claim to have run to earth, one of the cleverest of church swindlers in the country. Officers of the society assert that reports in their hands charge a man answering his description with having collected nearly $50,000 during the last fourteen years from church members in various cities. He has even been traced to Australia.

It is alleged that Davidson would appear at a Presbyterian or Baptist church, attend services regularly for a time and then develop a consumptive cough. Soon he would appeal to members of the congregation for aid in seeking another climate and generally met with generous aid. Upon being arrested recently in Brooklyn, he established a complete alibi but agents of the society immediately set to work on other clues and have now caused his arrest a second time.

PHILIP IRON TAIL A BRAVER BRAVE

Chicago, May 24.—Charge-the-Enemy, Pawnee Killer and White Eyes, representing the Sioux Indians injured in a wreck near Melrose Park on April 7, have conferred with United States District Attorney E. G. Godman regarding the settlement of their claims against the railroad company. An agreement probably will be reached soon.

"The railroad company contended the terms of settlement could not be the same as in the cases of white persons," said Mr. Godman, "so we considered each case separately. Philip Iron Tail, who was killed, was a braver brave than either Comes Last or Kills a Head and was more respected by the squaws, so the company agreed to allow us greater damages in that case."

TRAIN CRUSHES MINNEAPOLIS CAR

Minneapolis, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—An interurban car containing sixty-six passengers bound for St. Paul, was crushed by a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul freight train at Oak and Erie streets, shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, resulting in one death and injuring several passengers.

The train backed down on the car as it was on the crossing.

Dead:

A. L. JACKSON, Roscoe, S. D.

Injured: Ned Parker, Minneapolis, face cut, leg bruised; F. E. Jones, Minneapolis, leg sprained, leg cut; H. A. Ralph, Minneapolis, knee injured.

THE M'DONALD TRIAL.

Witness Faints and Juror Is Taken Sick.

Bedford, Ind., May 24.—Mrs. I. B. Grigsby was the first witness in the McDonald murder trial today. She testified that the defendant entered her store, seven squares from the scene of the murder, twenty minutes after it is admitted to have occurred. He was not excited, and made some purchases.

Mrs. Grigsby's 11-year-old daughter was recalled, and during her testimony fainted and fell from the witness chair.

William McGriffith testified that McDonald passed his house going home at 7:20 and spoke pleasantly. Juror Hunter was taken sick during this testimony and a recess was taken.

STRIKE SETTLED.

Plumbers at Detroit Go Back to Work.

Detroit, May 24.—The plumbers and steam fitters who have been out on strike for a number of weeks resumed work today by a settlement of the difficulties, 400 men resuming work. A two-years' agreement was signed by representatives of the union and employers, with an increase in wages of 50 cents a day, and the provision that there shall be no sympathetic strikes nor lockouts during the life of the agreement.

STRANGE MAN SHOOTS FARMER.

Boone, Iowa, May 24.—A sheriff's posse, with a brace of bloodhounds, is searching for the assailant of Curtis Galpin, who is lying at the point of death from a bullet through the lungs, fired by a strange man who lay in wait in Galpin's barn for his victim.

CATTLEMAN KILLED.

St. Paul, May 24.—A special to the Dispatch from Helena, Mont., says: Emile Launer, a cattleman, was shot and killed by John L. Simmons, a keeper of a hotel, as the result of a quarrel. Simmons had accused Launer of stealing money which was afterwards found intact, but the quarrel was continued and ended in the shooting.

IRON HANDLERS STRIKE.

Chicago, May 24.—The 900 handlers of iron and heavy hardware in the wholesale and retail stores have struck today for higher wages. The order to strike followed a month of negotiating for a new wage scale, which was finally refused by the employers. The men asked for $13 to $18 per week as against $12 to $15 heretofore paid.

DESPERATELY ILL WITH KIDNEY CATARRH

DOCTORS AND FRIENDS DESPAIRED— PE-RU-NA SAVED HIM.

MR. GEORGE KING.

Only recent medical investigation has revealed the fact that catarrh is responsible for most of the diseases of the kidneys.

Many people don't get well because they fail to use the catarrh cure Peruna.

MR. GEORGE KING, Deputy Sheriff of Rensellaer Co., N. Y., for years was a well known merchant of Troy. In a letter from No. 45 King St., Troy, N. Y., he writes:

"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's Disease, after I had suffered with catarrh of the bladder and kidney trouble.

"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me a well man and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me. I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since."—George King.

Catarrh of the Kidneys Cured By Pe-ru-na.

Mr. J. G. Martin, 1229 St. Denis St., Montreal, Que., Clerk in the Custom House, and Soloist Notre Dame Catholic Church, writes:

"I contracted a heavy cold last winter which settled in my kidneys causing me great pain and discomfort. At times the pains in my back were unbearable. I would have a peculiar dizziness in the head, and altogether I was miserable. After trying many remedies, I finally took Peruna, and the way it took hold of my trouble was marvelous. It cured me so quickly that I am glad to be able to write you of it, and I certainly will speak a good word for Peruna whenever I can."—J. G. Martin.

Catarrhal inflammation of the mucous lining of the kidneys, also called "Bright's disease," may be either acute or chronic. The acute form produces symptoms of such prominence that the serious nature of the disease is at once suspected, but the chronic variety may come on so gradually and insidiously that its presence is not suspected until after it has fastened itself thoroughly upon its victim.

At the appearance of the first symptom Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once at the very root of the disease.

The Court Holds John Johnson For Stealing Horses.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Clark—John G. Johnson, arrested near Lily for stealing a team of horses and a buggy from Walter Stacey, was brought to Clark. He waived examination and was bound over to the next term of the circuit court in the sum of $300. It is asserted that Johnson is from Clarkfield, Minn.; that he was arrested for stealing cattle near Clear Lake several years ago, and was released from a three years' term in the penitentiary at Sioux Falls on the very day he came north and stole the team from Stacey. The prisoner denies stealing the horses and says he was overtaken on the road by a stranger and hired to drive the team to Aberdeen.

At the first meeting of the city council, M. L. Yeamans was elected president and A. D. Warner vice president. Thomas Dean was elected city auditor.

Andover—A man suppered to be Ziegler, the murderer, was arrested on suspicion last evening by Marshal D. H. Passage. Soon after persons from Groton arrived to identify him and he proved to be the wrong man and was released.

The next meeting of the Northern South Dakota Educational association will be held in Andover, the date to be decided by the executive committee. The newly elected officers are: F. L. Ransome, of Redfield, president; J. H. Hilley, of Andover, secretary, and Mrs. J. C. Jackson, of Doland, treasurer.

Deadwood—One hundred and thirty miles of fencing will be built on the south and east sides of the Pine Ridge Indian agency this summer. It will require ten carloads of wire. John R. Brennan, agent, is in Deadwood attending United States court. He asserts that the Indians are becoming accustomed to work. He has 25 Indians and half-breeds employed at present. The common wages are $1.25 to $2 a day.

Belle Fourche—An unusually large amount of rain has fallen this spring, covering the entire cattle range west of the Missouri. Cattlemeu who have been with the roundup say the losses for the winter will not exceed 5 per cent.

Lead—The annual meeting of the Black Hills council of Knights of Columbus will be held in this city on May 29. Delegates will come from O'Neil, Omaha, Sioux City and Sioux Falls. A class of forty will be initiated.

Salem—Rev. M. M. Whiteford of Hurley, S. D., has accepted a call from the Presbyterian church of this place.

Rapid City—George Bertschey, one of the earliest pioneers of the Black Hills, died at his home at Sheridan.

Webster—A building boom is on. Twenty-six residences are in course of construction.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Mandan—The past week twenty-six young men from eastern states were in this city on their way to Hittinger county to take homestead claims. They will erect suitable farm buildings and put in some grain. The 400 free homesteads in that vicinity are fast being filed upon, and the government gift of 160 acres will soon be a thing of the past in this state. The William H. Brown company recently opened an office in Richardton, and Mr. Brown will devote his attention to Hittinger county land.

Grand Forks—One of the most amusing complaints ever filed in the district court in this county is that of John Wurth, against Carl Ernst. Both men live in the neighborhood of Larimore, and Wurth brings the action to recover damages in the sum of $1000 for injury to his reputation and the laceration of his feelings.

The Imperial elevator at York was destroyed by fire early Sunday. There was but little grain in the house.

The livery barn of Kelly & McLaughlin at Langdon was destroyed by fire Sunday. The U. C. T. hotel adjoining caught fire several times, but was saved. The loss on the livery barn is estimated at $3500. The Salter photograph gallery was slightly damaged.

BELL RESIGNS HIS COMMAND

Adjutant General Declares Colorado Militia Has Been Degraded.

Denver, May 24.—"The state militia was degraded to the uses of corporations which connived at the breaking of the law. The very men whom we used the troops to protect imported all-round bad men—the very men I ran out of their camps—to break the law in Denver and carry the election in their interests."

With this statement Adjt. Gen. Bell, heretofore the right-hand man of Governor Peabody in his military methods of handling recent labor troubles, announced his purpose to resign his position and have nothing more to do with what he considers an improper use of the state forces.

"I shall resign the office of adjutant general, and by the first of July there will be another man in my place," he continued. "I do not approve of using the militia of the state to help any political movement, I am accused of using, or attempting to use, the military in the late campaign. This is false, but the corporations used the militia for their purposes, and instead of the militia being used to protect the people and uphold the law, that force was actually used to encourage trouble.

"I found last Sunday that there were many familiar faces upon the streets of the lower part of the town, and that they were of the worst type of men in the West. I then discovered that the corporations had sent out all over the West and brought them here.

"I thought then more than ever that the military ought probably to be in the vicinity of Denver in case of trouble, but imagine my surprise when I was given orders on Sunday night by the governor not to call out a single man, and to abandon my plan of assembling the troops for practice."

ROBBED TO FINISH

Woodsman Gets Day's Board and Whisky For $130.

Goes Against Loan Bank and Lodging House Landlord.

An excellent example of the manner in which woodsmen are seperated from their earnings came to the notice of the police this morning.

An intoxicated Finlander, who could not speak a word of English, came into police headquarters, accompanied by a fellow-countryman who was able to make his troubles known to the police.

The Finlander had just arrived in Duluth from Port Arthur, Canada. He had in his possession a certificate of deposit on a Canadian bank for $130, the result of his winter's work.

Wishing to cash the certificate, he went into a local loan bank, not knowing enough of the methods of banking to go to one of the established banks. The proprietor of the loan bank gave him $100 cash for the certificate of deposit, which was as good as gold, making $20 on the deal.

With the $100 in his pocket the Finlander went to a lodging house. Fearing to carry the money in his pocket, lest he should be robbed, he gave it to the proprietor to keep, taking no receipt for it, and having no witnesses to the transaction.

He spent one night and a day in the house, buying a few drinks and eating three meals, and this morning he applied to the proprietor for his money. The latter told him that he had only deposited $68 and that he had spent all but $20 on drinks and board.

The foreigner did not dispute the statement, but asked for what was coming to him, thinking that he might have spent that amount while drunk. The proprietor, he claims, refused to return him the balance, claiming that he would have to remain in the hotel and take it out in trade.

Even to the ignorant woodsman this looked like an imposition and he told his troubles to a friend who could speak English. The friend took him to police headquarters and the matter was laid before the proper authorities. The police are investigating the matter today in an attempt to find out what truth there is in the story as told by the Finlander.

If the story he tells is true, all he received for his $130 was board for one day and a night, and a few drinks of bad whisky.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Tie-Up on the Lakes Is Causing Great Loss.

Marquette—The tie-up of lake commerce and prospects that it will continue well into the summer furnish a situation highly discouraging to the Lake Superior country. No region pays a higher price, for in addition to the higher freight rates consequent on the all but complete shutting off of lake traffic, it pays a heavy toll that other sections escape.

Newberry—Eighteen miles southeast, a thriving little city has sprung up. The location is the scene of quarrying operations conducted by the Union Carbide company, which acquired the property last year and which is getting out limestone for use in its big plant at the Soo.

Hancock—A company of Calumet men has been organized with a capital of $100,000 to engage in the manufacture of building brick and locks from waste stamp sand—sand discarded from the stamp mills after the copper contents have been extracted. A site has been purchased at Ripley.

Houghton—Frank C. Wyman, of Chicago, who possesses the finest collection of ancient copper tools in the world, wants the town of a smaller collection of the Michigan college of mines to complete his assortment for exhibition at the St. Louis exposition. The board of control will likely grant his request.

Calumet—The Calumet Business Men's association has been organized with 125 charter members.

Women as Educators.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I cannot refrain from expressing an approval of your editorial comments regarding educational affairs. The article in The Herald of May 21, entitled "Women as Educators," contains truths regarding our defective school system. Among the thoughtful it is without controversy or argument, conceded that men are better qualified, both mentally and physically, to fill the positions as teachers in our public schools, that are now occupied by women, who are using this important office for their personal benefit, and many of them are of no use as a factor in its advancement. No young woman can become a public school teacher, with the intention of making it her life's work, because of the possibilities of her marriage, which insures duties and responsibilities requiring her undivided interest, while on the other hand marriage will not interrupt or retard the services of men as teachers.

Many reasons can be cited in favor of the superiority of men as being endowed by nature to teach, instruct, command, maintain discipline and vigor a daily and continuous exercise of the necessary teaching qualities. These stern attributes have no abiding home in the feminine nature, and even an occasional or temporary exertion of such energies produces at once, or gradually, a nervous collapse or physical breakdown. While it may be true that women teachers do not, or will not, overtax themselves—recognizing these results if they do so—will not occasions in school work that call for immediate enforcement be neglected or disregarded just at a time when the pupil is prepared to receive the instruction? Is there not a responsibility here to be accounted for and who but such as you, Mr. Editor, can so ably direct attention to the needs of a reform in our public school system?

CLEVER DOCTOR

Cured a 20 Years Trouble Without Any Medicine.

A wise Indiana physician cured 20 years stomach disease without any medicine as his patient tells:

"I had stomach trouble for 20 years, tried allopathic medicines, patent medicines and all the simple remedies suggested by my friends, but grew worse all the time.

"Finally a doctor, who is the most prominent physician in this part of the state, told me medicine would do me no good, only irritating my stomach and making it worse—that I must look to diet and quit drinking coffee.

"I cried out in alarm, 'Quit drinking coffee!' why, 'What will I drink?'

"'Try Postum,' said the doctor, 'I drink it and you will like it when it is made according to directions, with cream, for it is delicious and has none of the bad effects coffee has.'

"Well, that was two years ago, and I am still drinking Postum. My stomach is right again, and I know doctor hit the nail on the head when he decided coffee was the cause of all my trouble. I only wish I had quit it years ago and drank Postum in its place." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Never too late to mend. Ten days' trial of Postum in place of coffee works wonders. There's a reason.

PRODUCTION OF PIG IRON

Will Be Greatly Curtailed Within Next Thirty Days.

New York, May 24.—Within the next thirty days the production of pig iron will, it is stated by leading dealers here be greatly curtailed at the furnaces in all parts of the United States. The proposed reduction which is not by united action, is variously estimated at 20 to 40 per cent of the present output. The furnaces to be most quickly affected, are those which have been in operation the longest, as the new furnaces have more modern machinery and equipment and can turn out at a lower cost than their older competitors. The production of pig iron during 1903 was 19,000,000 tons. Experts assert that unless there is great improvement in the near future, the total for the current year will not exceed 14,000,000 tons. It is stated that the first curtailment will be made in about three weeks. One company's furnaces in the Chicago district producing about 900 tons of pig iron a day will then be closed down and others are expected to follow rapidly unless the demand becomes much heavier than at present.

SOUTHERN EDUCATOR SAYS

There Are Too Many Negroes In North.

Chicago, May 24.—There are too many negroes in Chicago and the North, according to the Rev. R. D. Stinson, chancellor of the Morris Brown college, Atlanta, who spoke at the Institutional African Methodist Episcopal church. His subject was "Practical Education for the Masses the Redeeming Feature of the Race."

"There are 35,000 negro men and women in Chicago today who ought to be started down South at once," said Dr. Stinson. "Fifteen years ago I could get plenty of money here for the education of the Southern negroes, but when the green, unsubstantial, ignorant herd of brutes from the South came yelping up to Chicago, where they have free bars, free street cars, free hotels, where they can go where they please and talk as they please, things nearly were turned upside down.

"These Southern negroes are not able to meet conditions here. They are ignorant, and they are deceived. The best negroes stay in the South, but instead of telling these poor people the truth, you in Chicago urge them to come where they can vote."

TURKS EXILED.

Officials Corresponded With Daughter of Ex-Sultan.

Constantinople, May 24.—Kemal Pasha, the sultan's son-in-law, and other high officials, have been arrested and sent into exile in consequence of the discovery of a secret correspondence between Kemal Pasha and Princess Khadidje, daughter of the imprisoned ex-sultan, Murad. Kemal Pasha, who is a son of the late Osman Ghazi Pasha, is a general in the Turkish army and aide-de-camp to the sultan.

DO NOT WANT MINISTER.

Colombian Government So Notifies the United States.

New York, May 24.—Late advices from Bogota, forwarded by the Herald's corespondent at Colon, are to the effect that the Colombian government has notified Alban G. Snyder, United States charge d'affaires, to cable his government not to send Minister Russell or any other diplomatic representative to Bogota until further notice. Mr. Russell is now in Panama.

MEN IN MOTHERS' CLUBS.

New York Woman's Association Amends Charter.

New York, May 24.—After a brief agitation, the New York City Mothers' club has amended its constitution in order to admit men as associate members. The ladies announced that they would gladly receive the necessary membership fee of $2 from any respectable person of the male persuasion who is in sympathy with the purposes of the order. Of course, as an associate member, he will not be allowed to vote.

COUNCIL ENDORSES RECALL OF MINISTER.

Paris, May 24.—The council of ministers has considered the vatican conrtoversy and, in an official note, says:

"The government is satisfied with the authenticity of the reported protest sent by the vatican to the powers and, therefore, has decided to recall M. Nisard, leaving routine business in the hands of the third secretary of the vatican embassy."

THE CORWIN IS SAFE.

Seattle, May 24.—The steamer Cottage City, from Lynn canal, reports having passed the Nome steamer, Corwin, May 21, between Ketchikan and Wrangel Narrows. This information disproves the sensational report to the effect that the Corwin was lost on the Vancouver coast. So far as the Cottage City officers could observe the Corwin was in no trouble whatever.

WEST DULUTH

The remodeled old St. James' Catholic church building on Fifty-seventh avenue west was formally opened as a hall for meetings and entertainments by the Twentieth Century Progress club last night. A program of musical and literary numbers was rendered, and refreshments were served. The attendance was large.

Several brief addresses appropriate to the occasion were made. Rev. John Feehely, a leading and enthusiastic member of the organization, spoke of the club and the good it has accomplished. John, Cashin, P. H. Martin, George Coleman, Joseph Bellmeur and Edward Dormedy spoke along similar lines.

Others taking part in the program were Mrs. Robert Hayden, with a vocal solo; Master Harry Hayden, recitation; Miss Annie Casey, monologue; Miss Cashin, vocal solo; Harry Fell, recitation; John Allen, recitation; Harry Carrol, dialect reading; Edward McCullough. The program was an excellent one throughout, and each number came in for a good share of applause. Miss Alma Brotherton played piano accompaniments to the solos.

WILL DELAY WORK.

Rain Affects Construction of Sewers.

Sunday's rain will delay the construction of West Duluth sewers to a considerable extent. A number of drains which had been dug last week were almost completely filled with water. So serious is the damage from this source that the work of taking out the water by hand is considered too great a task, and one of the harbor sand suckers will be used for the purpose. This apparatus, as its name implies, draws cut the water by suction, and once in place it will be a matter of but a short time before the drains are freed of water and soft mud.

At the meeting of the council last night City Attorney Fesler was directed to ascertain the necessary process for the city in utilizing Keene creek as an outlet for the new sewer system from Grand avenue to the alley between Fifty-fourth and Central avenues west. It was stated that the city has acquired a right-of-way to construct a sewer along the creek without the right to use it as an outlet.

WILL PLAY HIBBING.

Ball Team Going to the Range Town.

The West Duluth baseball team will play at Hibbing Sunday and Monday. The lineup will be practically the same as was arranged for last Sunday with the Big Duluths. Probably a number of local fans will accompany the players to the range town. The latter's team is said to have been materially strengthened since it played the White Sox in Duluth two weeks ago, but in spite of this fact the West Duluthians believe that they will succeed in coming out victorious. Bets are being freely made that the locals will win out in both games.

Amateur ball teams this year will have three opportunities to get two consecutive days' play away from home without losing any time from their work. Memorial day falls on Monday, and both July 4 and Labor day fall on Monday, so that the teams will have Sunday and the holidays to play. West Duluth is planning to play outside teams on each of these occasions.

THE CITY DOCK.

Matter Is Brought Before the Council.

The matter of the city dock for West Duluth again came up at the council meeting last night, and a resolution was passed directing Aldermen Chesney, Tessman and Olson, as the committee on harbors, parks and roads, to interview the property owners along the proposed dock site and find out whether they will give the city a title to the water frontage, so that a start may be made this season towards the construction of the dock.

It will be remembered that three or four weeks ago the council, after discussing a petition for the dock, directed that the matter be laid over until next year for the reason that the permanent improvement fund, out of which the $7000 appropriation for the dock would be paid, was not in condition this year to stand the strain.

Another West Duluth matter brought up before the aldermen last night was that of the proposed reservoir. City Attorney Fesler was directed to ascertain whether the $40,000 of water works bonds, issued by the city council, March 9, 1903, are in conformity with the law. There is an impression in the minds of some of the aldermen that the issue, to be in full compliance with the law, must be ratified by popular vote.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The remains of Mrs. S. R. Saunders, 5811 Ramsey street, who died Saturday at St. Luke's hospital, were shipped yesterday over the Omaha to Boyd, Wis., for interment. A sister, Mrs. C. M. Harris and two daughters of the deceased, Nellie and Margaret, accompanied the body.

T. Santare has returned from the Brule river, Wis.

The West Duluth barbers held a meeting last night and agreed to keep their shops closed all day on Memorall day and the Fourth of July.

Wanted, markers and sorters, West Duluth Steam laundry.

The unusual amount of ice in Keene creek the past winter damaged the Fifty-ninth avenue bridge to such an extent as to make travel over it either by foot or team, decidedly dangerous, and the approaches to it have been boarded up. Some of the supports of the structure were carried away when the ice went out, letting one side sag down several feet.

Andrew Solberg has returned from Seattle, Wash.

C. Hines is back from a trip into Ontario, Canada.

Frank Ashley was a departure for Minneapolis yesterday.

Thomas Ensign, of Fifty-seventh avenue west, left yesterday for the Twin cities on business.

ADVICE TO REFORMERS.

Should Adopt Some of Ward Politicians' Methods.

Chicago, May 24.—Alderman John J. Brennan, saloonkeeper, lately of the Bridewell, was pointed out to Evanston people as a model which they might well copy in some lines of endeavor. The preceptor on this occasion was Raymond Robins, of the Municipal Lodging house.

"John Brennan comes nearer living up to the teachings of Scripture than some of you who listen to me today," said Mr. Robins, addressing the co-operative class. "His influence is due, not to his corruption and baseness, but to his generosity and kind-heartedness. He has given food to more people and saved more people from eviction and sent more people to hospitals and kept them there than any of you. These deeds are the source of his power, and you reformers who are trying to elevate humanity will never succeed until you adopt the methods of this man whom you so displise."

Robins referred to Brennan as "my friend," and several voices were heard saying: "Don't call him friend." In reply to them Mr. Robins said: "You people remind me of a man who sees things through a keyhole; you see very clearly what you do see, but you see so very little."

In speaking of his work in the Municipal Lodging house, Mr. Robins said: "The only religion we try to inculcate in a man who comes to us is to make him realize that he is a man, and to try to get him to walk upright as a man; we don't care whether he believes in God or immortality or heaven or hell if we can make him feel his manhood."

Two Days More of Our Special Rug Sale. Wednesday and Thursday....

And why is it that so many people feel suspicious? Is it because they have been humbugged at other sales—or is it that they have been puffed up by some unreliable clerk? Why, it is astonishing to know how many people know so little about a good rug or carpet and its actual value. We sold rugs yesterday far below their cost, and yet people feel suspicious. WHY IS IT? We are not in the humbug business—never was and never will be. We shall endeavor to tell the truth always, and do just as we say.

THE WORK DONE

By the Geological Survey During Past Twenty-Five Years.

The More Important Results Achieved By the Survey.

Washington, May 24.—The members of the United States Geological survey in Washington recently celebrated the quarter-centennial anniversary of its organization. The more important results aschieved by the survey during the twenty-five years of its existence are set forth in its recent bulletin (No. 227) entitled "The United States Geological Survey: Its Origin, Development, Organization and Operations." This bulletin is intended for gratuitous distribution, and copies of it will be given away as souvenirs in connection with the survey's exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exposition.

Since the establishment of the survey a complete topographic map has been made of 929,850 square miles of the area of the United States. In other words, the survey has finished the mapping, on more or less detailed scales, of 26 per cent of the area of the country, including Alaska, or 31 per cent, excluding Alaska.

This great map of the United States, of which nearly one-third has been completed, is necessarily published in the form of an atlas. The portion completed consists of 1327 atlas sheets printed in three colors from copper plate engravings. The topographic maps of the geological survey have greatly expedited investigations made by cities of their water supply and have been of the highest value to railway companies and state highway bureaus. The improvement of highways in New York, Maryland, Massachusetts and other states has been greatly facilitated and the cost of the state work has been materially reduced by these maps. The elaborate and valuable reports recently completed on the future water supply of the city of New York and on the New York state barge canal have been, in a large measure, rendered conclusive only through the agency of the existing topographic maps.

The geologic mapping of the surface formations has been extended over about 171,000 square miles and 106 geologic folios have been published, while nearly an equal number are in various stages of preparation. Each of these folios presents a practically complete history of the topography, geology and mineral resources of the area described. Coincident with the geologic work, important experiments and investigations relating to rocks have been made in the survey's physical, chemical and petrographic laboratories.

The survey, through its hydrographic branch, including the reclamation service, has recorded, during the last fifteen years, the maximum, minimum and mean discharges of all the more important rivers, and for shorter periods the same facts concerning all the lesser tributaries of the many hundreds of streams in the United States. The physical characteristics of the river basins have been studied in respect to their forestration, soil-covering, etc., and a vast amount of data has been accumulated from which it is possible to estimate closely the volume or run-off of each of the streams. The development of the water powers of the country, especially in the Southern states, has received a great impetus during the last few years through facts brought to light by the survey's work. Many unknown water powers have been found. Projects already commenced have had their value or their defects made manifest through the evidence procured by these surveys. Data have been gathered concerning irrigable public lands and their relation to possible water supplies. A large number of reservoir sites have been examined and surveyed in a preliminary way, and the lands which the reservoirs would serve have been withdrawn from sale or occupation pending more detailed studies. Surveys of the irrigable lands as well as of canal lines have been made, and several finally approved for construction by the reclamation service.

The survey, by its division of geography and forestry, has examined in detail 110,000 square miles and has made a classification of the lands as forested, grazing, desert and arable. Final reports on these reserves have been prepared, which show the character and amount of the timber on each, and furnish many other facts that will serve as a basis for the forest management of these properties.

Perhaps the immediate value to the people of the survey's work is best shown by the aid it renders in developing the mineral resources and in forwarding important engineering projects. The investigation of the mining geology of Leadville has, for instance, guided exploration and secured economical mining in a district that has produced between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000. It has also taught the mining engineer and the miner the practical importance of geologic study in their work. The investigation of the origin and geologic relations of the Lake Superior iron ores and the publicaton of numerous reports on that region have directed the prospector in the discovery of deposits and have suggested to the miner the most economical methods of development. The result is that this region now leads the world in the production of iron ore. Detailed areal mapping and the determination of underground structure in the Appalachian coal fields are placing the development of its coal, petroleum and gas resources upon a scientific basis and relieving these industries of a large part of the hazard and uncertainty which have always attended them; and the publication of reliable statistics of mineral production has furnished a sound commercial basis for all branches of the mineral industry.

POPULATION DECREASES

Number of Dogs In City Is Reduced By Eight.

Eight mangy "purps" were dispatched in a prompt and efficient manner by the police department this morning.

The collection was the result of Officer Blair's three days' duty as dog-catcher. The dogs were stray mongrels, for whom owners could not be found, or which were disclaimed by their owners. They were kept in the police station for three days in order to give an opportunity for the owners to appear and claim them, but no reprieve from their death warrant came and this morning they were taken out behind the station, one at a time, and despatched by a bullet through the brain.

Several other canines caught by Officer Blair were redeemed before the three days expired. One very handsome collie pup was rounded up yesterday, and some of the officers were casting longing eyes upon it, when the owner showed up yesterday afternoon, paid the fee for its license, and took it away.

The crusade against unlicensed dogs continues, and any untagged dogs that are left in the city are chained up in cellars or woodsheds. By June 1 it is expected that they will be well rounded up.

Between thirty and forty dog licenses were issued by the city clerk's office this morning.

TO REVISE BY-LAWS.

Meeting of Commercial Club Committee.

Next Monday evening the Commercial club will probably hold a meeting to reconsider the by-laws of the club. At the annual meeting, some weeks ago, I. Fretmuth called attention to some discrepancies in the club regulations, and on his motion a committee, consisting of E. M. Ferguson, chairman; Judge W. A. Cant and W. G. Joerns, was selected to revise the rules.

There are no important changes to be made, but it is understood the committee has gone over the rules and picked out places where there were inconsistencies, such as omissions of paragraphs referred to in sections that have not been altered to correspond to such omission.

Many of the club rules have been taken from the regulations of other similar organizations, and in compiling them after such a method, it is very easy to make such mistakes, which, though not vital to the club, are incorrect, and therefore undesirable.

SHOULD CLEAN THE TROUGHS

Drinking Places For Horses In Need of Attention.

Inspector Langslow, of the health department, will urge the board of public works to clean out the horse troughs located at different parts of the city, and to establish some regular method of keeping them in a sanitary condition.

"The troughs have not yet been cleaned this year," said Mr. Langslow this morning. "The water was turned on in them April 1, and where they are used by innumerable horses each day, dirt and filth cannot fail to collect in them.

"There are quite a number of cases of glanders in the city at the present time. Four horses have been shot for glanders during the past week, and when these troughs are not cleaned regularly they are apt to spread the disease.

"There are six of these troughs in the city and they should all be cleaned at least once a week during the summer. Those in the central part of the city, which are used almost constantly during the day should be cleaned twice a week in order to keep them in proper condition."

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

SHEVLIN IS FIRE SWEPT

Six Business Buildings Completely Destroyed, With $16,000 Loss.

Bemidji, Minn., May 24.—Yesterday morning, fire broke out in the drug store of A. Gilmore & Co., at Shevlin and before sufficient help could be had the flames were beyond control and were sweeping down the street and threatening to destroy the entire town.

Just how the fire originated is a mystery. A. Skie who has charge of the drug store had been but a few minutes in bed, having just come from the train, which was late, when the fire was discovered by some men who were in a nearby saloon. Mr. Skie had barely time to get out of the building and saved but a part of his clothing. There was no fire in the building and he had no lamp and had not been smoking.

The fire destroyed every building on the east side of the street with the exception of the bank which was north of the drug store. The wind swept the flames to the south and all the efforts of the citizens to quench them were fruitless.

The loss was almost a total one. Most of the buggies and carriages and all of the stock except one cow, were saved from the livery barn, but very little was saved from the other buildings.

Shevlin has no other protection than a hand engine which was totally inadequate for such a fire, and although the citizens worked desperately nothing south of the drug store could be saved.

The losses and insurance are as follows:

A. Gilmour & Co., Bemidji, stock of drugs $1600, insurance $1000.

Leithhead Drug Co., Duluth, store building $900, insurance $500.

Martin Hippe, livery barn, $1800, insurance $800.

William Brompton, personal effects, $250, no insurance.

S. T. Odegard saloon building, $1400 no insurance.

H. C. Aldrich, saloon fixtures, $1200, no insurance.

Martin Nelson, Central hotel building, $5000, insurance $1500.

George Daniels, landlord, personal property $500, no insurance.

Olia Olson, saloon building and fixtures, $2500, insurance $1500.

T. Gram, photograph gallery, $150, no insurance.

In addition all the fronts of the buildings on the west side of the street were badly scorched and many window panes are cracked and broken.

DESPONDENT LUMBERJACK

Tries Suicide With Carbolic Acid at Tenstrike.

Bemidji, Minn., May 24.—Late Saturday afternoon a lumberjack named King, attempted to end his life at Tenstrike by taking carbolic acid. When the stuff started down his throat he repented an spat it out. Now he lies in the jail at Tenstrike half sane and half crazy.

King had been working near Tenstrike in the camps and was discharged Friday. He came to town and went to see a woman of the town with whom he was infatuated. She would not have anything to do with him and he returned to town, secured the acid in some unknown way and made the attempt at suicide. It was thought at first that the man would die, but he is still living and will probably recover.

The Golf Players.

Two pairs of golf players contested in the preliminary of the espring handicap at the Northland Golf club. The winners were Alexander and Hopkins, the players and their handicaps being as follows: Alexander, 2, vs. Munger, 3; Hopkins, 0, vs. Hegardt, 5.

It was not a good day for playing, and rather the opposite for the women, who failed to turn out in consequence. The wind was too strong for them to make good headway. But today was considered as promising well, and it was understood that several matches would be had on the links.

HAD TO JOIN THE FILIPINOS

Was Given Choice of Death or Army Commission.

New York, May 24.—This is a soldier's own story of his desertion from the United States army in the Philippines, his commission as a lieutenant colonel with the insurrectionists, his capture and court-martial and finally his return home on the transport Kilpatrick which has arrived from Manila.

He is still a prisoner, but through intercessions of his aged mother, who lives in Baltimore, he has received a commutation of sentence to two and one-half years, by reason of a legal technicality he hopes to escape serving further time.

"My name is R. H. Richter, and I am 26 years old. I enlisted in Baltimore in the regular army and was sent to Manila with battery C of the coast artillery. On the night of Sept. 24, 1899, I was on post duty. When the relief came I was missing and I understand they heard no more of me until I was captured at Catipan in November, 1901, at which time I was a lieutenant colonel in the Filipino army.

"While I was on post I was struck on the head and knocked senseless. I remember nothing until I awoke in the enemy's camp. I was told that I must accept a death by slow torture or accept a commission in their army. I agreed to be a lieutenant colonel provided I would not have to fight against the Americans. I never fought against the United States soldiers in battle and never intended to.

"The day I was captured at Catipan I was reclining in a bamboo hut in the rear of the army attended by three native servants.

"Suddenly there was a cry from the servants: 'The Americans are coming.' The Filipino soldiers fled. Two of my servants were shot down as they ran. I was seen by Lieut. Noyes of the Thirteenth infantry and to him I surrendered. I was taken to Batabgas to be tried.

"Maj. William L. Pitcher, then on duty with the Thirteenth infantry, gave me the water cure. Three buckets of water were forced down me. I was tried for treason, but they could not prove it. Then I was tried for desertion and sentenced to ninety-nine years' imprisonment, which was commuted to two and one-half years."

X-RAY TURNED

On Buckley, Who Swallowed a $200 Diamond.

Billings, Mont., May 24.—The unique spectacle of a prosecution being based upon the results attained by an ex-ray examination of the stomach of a man suspected of robbery and who swallowed a $200 diamond, a part of the plunder, is being witnessed in this city, in the case of Edward Buckley, who was placed under arrest at Miles City several days ago.

Buckley was captured by the officers while in the act of trying to dispose of a diamond, which he said weighed one and one-half carats, at a very cheap figure. While the police were attempting to pinion his hands behind his back he swallowed the gem. The physicians have administered emetics to Buckley, but thus far the sparkler has refused to come up.

Though Buckley has had several attacks of neusea, he laughs at the efforts of the doctors, and last night lazily stretched himself upon the operating table when so ordered.

Buckley is charged with robbing the safes of the Billings brewery and laundry companies last week of about $8000 in cash and diamonds.

LYNCH'S ELECTION ASSURED

Will Have About 7000 Majority Over Hawkes.

Indianapolis, May 24.—It was announced from the headquarters of the International Typographical union today that returns from vote by unions already received insure the re-election of President Lynch over Mr. Hawkes by 7000. Secretary Bramwood is elected over Graham by from 22,000 to 23,000.

COAL BARONS MUST TESTIFY IN THE COAL TRUST HEARING

New York, May 24.—The interstate commerce commission today renewed its inquiry into the anthracite coal trade, based on the complaint of W. R. Hearst against Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company and other coal carriers, which was continued from last September. The first witness called was President Baer, of the Philadelphia & Reading.

On April 4 the supreme court of the United States decided that Hearst's attorney, Clarence J. Shearn, had the right to demand an answer to his questions relating to contracts between the railroads and operators, by which contracts it is alleged the coal trust will be established as a fact and will be proved to exist in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

In its decision the supreme court directed E. B. Thomas, president of the Lehigh company and W. H. Truesdale, of the Delaware & Lackawanna, to answer questions regarding the fixing of coal rates at tide water, transportation to tidewater and the manner of preparing price circulars. The decision also compels the Temple Iron company and other operating companies to produce in open court their contracts with the carrier.

Mr. Baer was asked to produce the contracts between the Temple Iron company and Simpson & Watkins, of Scranton, made Feb. 27, 1899. This the witness did, together with copies of other contracts. The copies were filed as evidence.

For the Temple Iron company, Mr. Baer was one of the signers. The firm of Simpson & Watkins transferred to the Temple company all the firm's collieries in the Lackawanna and Wyoming valley region.

Mr. Baer produced also the contracts between the Temple company and the Guaranty Trust company, of New York, as trustees and the Lehigh valley, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Erie, New York, Susquehanna & Western and the Philadelphia & Reading companies, indicating the railroad company as guarantors of the payment of bonds, both principal and interest, of the Temple company.

Mr. Hebbard, an officer of the Guaranty company, was directed by the commission (while Mr. Baer was on the stand) to produce the individual contracts between the Guaranty company and the several railroads party to the Temple Iron company contracts, obligating the railroad companies individually to meet their agreements as security for payment of the Temple Iron company's bonds, principal and interest.

Five hundred and sixty unions, casting over 32,000 votes, have been heard from. The total vote will be about 34,000. The vote for delegate to the American Federation of Labor and trustee is very close. It will be known June 2.

TURNER FOR GOVERNOR.

Seattle, May 24.—Democrats are urging ex-United States Senator George Turner to accept the nomination for governor, and while he has not consented, it is thought he will be prevailed upon to permit his name to go before the state convention.

The Republicans recently named an almost unknown man for governor, Albert E. Mead, and turned down the present executive, Henry McBride, who has made such a fight for a railroad commission.

Turner's real ambition is to go back to the senate, where he was sent first by a Silver-Republican legislature, and if he accepts the governor's place on the ticket it will be with the understanding that he is to be chosen senator, providing his party carries the legislative elections.

Engineer James Root, better known as "Jim" Root, the heroic engineer of the St. Paul & Duluth limited, says: "For years I was troubled with my kidneys and had paines and soreness across the small of my back. The kidney secretions at times presented an unnatural appearance and I was run down. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procured a box at a drug store and used them. From the promt and satisfactory results obtained I can speak of them only in the highest terms of praise. Doan's Kidney Pills are all and more than they are represented to be. I can only say a word for Doan's Ointment. I used it for itching hemorrholds and it gave me prompt and permanent relief."

TODAY'S GAMES.

Duluth at Crookston.
Superior at Winnipeg.
Fargo at Grand Forks.

Big "doings" are being planned for the afternoon of June 2, when the White Sox will open the season on the home grounds.

Manager Van Praagh has laid plans for a celebration in honor of the occasion, and the usual adjuncts of a brass band and a parade will be forthcoming. The mayor and the members of the city council will be invited to attend the game, and if the mayor can be persuaded to do so, he will throw the first ball over the plate.

The two teams will be driven through the business portion of the town in tallyhos, preceded by the city fathers and the Third Regiment band.

The band will remain at the park and will play popular selections previous to the game.

Winnipeg will be the opposing team, and the game should attract a big crowd of fans to give the White Sox a welcome home.

Meanwhile the team is cutting a wide swath on its present trip. Two out of three from Fargo on the latter's home grounds, and a good start toward repeating the same trick with Crookston, makes the team look like a four-time winner.

Thursday the team will open in Winnipeg for a series of three games with the "Champs." If the White Sox can land in Winnipeg with a record of four games won and two lost, a pretty struggle for the leadership in the race should result.

Returning from Winnipeg, the Sox will play three games in Grand Forks, while Winnipeg will come to Fargo for four games, two on Memorial day and one on May 31 and one on June 1.

Both teams will then come to Duluth, and the series of three games played here will give the fans an opportunity to size up the two teams that promise to be found pretty close to the top when the season ends.

It is Koukalik's turn to twirl today and he will probably be in the box. Capt. Martin was back in the game yesterday, and all of the members of the regular team will play today.

"Dad" Schooley, the twirler picked up by Manager Van Praagh, is being retained for the present. He has barrels of speed and big curves, but little control of the ball. He will be given another trial, however, to decide whether or not he will be made a permanent member of the team.

THEY FIND MR. MARTIN.

White Sox Land on Him For Fifteen Hits.

Crookston, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Crookston team was snowed under an avalanche of hits and errors here yesterday afternoon, in the opening game on the home grounds with the Duluth White Sox.

Martin's slants proved to be easy for the visitors, and they fattened up their batting averages at his expense. Quillan and Lagger secured triples off his delivery, the Duluth third baseman having four hits to his credit out of five times at bat, while Lagger had three. Every man on the team connected at least once with Martin's delivery.

About 1000 fans witnessed the game, and some of them got out on the field and interfered with the players. In spite of this fact, the visitors played a snappy game. Witte's home run was due to the fact that the ball fell under a bugsy in left field, and Randall was unable to reach it in time to cut the runner off at the plate.

Shaw pitched magnificent ball, allowing but five hits and striking out ten men.

The Crookston team played a listless game, and the fans were disappointed in the showing made.

TIGERS SNOWED UNDER.

Fargo Smothers the Grand Forks Bunch.

Grand Forks, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first game of the series between Fargo and Grand Forks was played here yesterday. The game was a one-sided fracas, Fargo winning by a score of 16 to 3.

The day was miserable for ball playing, the sun failed to shine and the wind swept from the north. Sorenson was scheduled to pitch for the Tigers, but after he had let the first five men go safe, Cole sent him to the bench, and called Carriveau. Carriveau failed to make good. Rose took a hand, Poulks a three-bagger, and six other hits were secured by the bunch from Fargo.

Rose made a sensational catch in the seventh inning, and Traeger headed off a couple of runs in the eighth by a phenomenal one-handed catch. This, together with the fact that the Tigers could only get five scattered hits, accounts for the defeat.

The game was a slugish one from start to finish. Neither team seemed to play good ball. Umpire Smith held the indicator, and it took some little time for the boys to understand that he was not to be fooled with. He put up two fingers at Perry Werden and was generous about reminding the other players of the fact that it was play ball or stand a fine.

LOSES HARD GAME.

Superior and Champions Have Beautiful Contest.

Winnipeg, Man., May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superior lost a hard game to the "Champs" yesterday afternoon, by the score of 4 to 2. It was a fast, well-played, pitchers' battle in which Green had a little the better of it. Kilroy threw away his own game in the second inning by sending a high one over Rogers' head into the bleachers, and letting in two runs. The score:

SUPERIOR STREET

Paving of Eastern End Is Being Rapidly Pushed.

Relaying of Street Railway Tracks Is Causing Little Delay.

Work on the East Superior street paving contract, from Sixteenth to Twenty-third avenues East, is progressing at a fairly satisfactory rate, considering the trouble and delay incident to taking up the old street car tracks and relaying them with new rails and ties.

Contractor P. McDonnell has a large number of men and teams at work plowing up and removing the old cedar blocks and commenced this morning to remove those on the upper sides of the track. The blocks are being hauled away as fast as tey are taken up and are being dumped in nearby ravines, which the owners desire to fill in. About 20 teams are employed in hauling alone.

The street railway company has avoided the extra expense and inconvenience to the public of the temporary track at the side of the street, as was the arrangement when the brick pavement and the asphalt pavement was put down west of the present work, away as fast as they are taken up and removed from Sixteenth avenue to Twentieth avenue East and the ties have been laid and new rails put down from Sixteenth avenue to Nineteenth avenue East. After the lower track is laid it will be graded and filled in with tar macadam.

The street railway company has put temporary switches in at Sixteenth and Twentieth avenues East, using the upper track for both the East and the West bound cars for several blocks. This system has been working very satisfactorily so far and there has been very little delay on the part of the cars going in either direction.

As soon as the lower track is laid and filled in with macadam, it will be used and the old track on the upped side will be taken up and replaced by new rails and ties.

The street railway company has its welding machine on the ground and will probably begin welding the new rails today or tomorrow.

If the weather continues favorable and the work continues at the present rate of progress, the tar macadam pavement will be down and the street will be in use again long before most of the East Enders living in that district had any idea that the new pavement could be laid.

TWENTY-SEVEN PLACES RAIDED

New York Police Are Hot After Alleged Pool Rooms.

New York, May 24.—Twenty-seven places, suspected of being pool rooms, were visited, 143 persons were taken into custody and ninety-four telephones and two telegraph instruments were confiscated yesterday in police raids in New York. Fifteen of the raids were made in the tenderloin precinct.

The other raids were made in various parts of the city. One of the places visited in the lower section of Manhattan, it is said, was a racing exchange and here nine telephones and many racing sheets were confiscated by the police.

In another place twenty telephones were found and in a third eleven were taken out.

The tenderloin police visited the place said to be kept by "Honest John" Kelly and found Kelly on the steps.

"You can't get in here unless you have a warrant," said "Honest John." "I've had too many visitors lately and I'm tired of showing people the house."

The officers made no effort to enter.

In one place, on Broadway, opposite the postoffice, the police were forced to climb from the roof of a building down to the third floor on a fire escape. They found twenty-one telephones, but no person inside. The place, evidently, had been vacated in haste.

The raids were the most extensive made in this city in years and covered the district from Forty-second street to the Battery.

ATTEMPTED HOLD-UP.

St. Paul, Minn., May 24.—Late last night three masked men entered the saloon of Henry Jentz and attempted to hold-up the proprietor and about a dozen customers, who were in the place. A score of shots were exchanged during which C. Brettschneider was shot in the face and seriously if not fatally wounded, and Chris Forberg was wounded in the arm. The robbers succeeded in escaping.

CROWDED VAULTS

County Offices Greatly In Need of Additional Room.

Must Be Extended If Courthouse Is Not Built Soon.

That the new county courthouse must be built within the next few years, or else some provision be made made for larger vault room in connection with nearly all the county offices, is certain.

County officials are now and have been for a long time past complaining of the lack of room in their vaults for the county records comprising papers and books, etc.

Every year witnesses the accumulation of more of the records and about all the available space under the county buildings has been utilized for storing the older records to make place for the overflow from the vaults.

Although every precaution that is possible under the circumstances, is made for the protection of the records, it is certain that in case of a bad fire there would be an irreparable loss of records.

During the office hours the county officials are now hauling the book and filing cases out of the vaults to the offices in order to make room for those who are employed in the vaults in looking up records.

At night the cases are pushed back in the vaults, filling them up clear to the doors in many instances.

When the new courthouse is built one of the features that will be planned for will be ample vault room to take care of the old records and those that will accumulate in many years to come.

Hints To Advertisers

Mercantile advertising must be of the "continued-in-our-next" kind—that is, if today's busy store is to be a continued story.

A small amount of newspaper advertising space is the right thing for a small business. That's the only kind of a business it will fit.

Admitting that newspaper advertising will sell goods—and people have quit arguing about that—the question of how much newspaper advertising you should do becomes one of how much goods you want to sell. That's all there is to it.

You don't close your store for a day every once in a while—but that would be as wise as to drop your newspaper advertising for a day now and then.

A battleship with armor, armament and crew would be pretty helpless if without ammunition. A big store, with goods and clerks and delivery system, would be just as helpless without newspaper advertising.

Monday is Decoration day, and now is the time to advertise merchandise suitable to the occasion. The day will be generally observed, and all the leading business houses of the city will be closed.

THE RUSSIO-JAP WAR.

The war between Russia and Japan is the sole topic of the day. In pronouncing the names of the Russian cities and battleships we are apt to disagree. Some say it should be Vla-di-vost-ock, others, Vlad-i-vo-stock. There is one name everybody agrees on. Those who know, pronounce pillsbury's vitos the best food on the market. Served in a hundred different ways, you never tire of it. Your grocer sells it.

M'CHESNEY GOES LAME.

May Not Be Able to Race on Thursday.

New York, May 24.—McChesney, the Western champion, and the hope of the Westerns in the Brooklyn handicap to be run at Gravesend yesterday was looked upon as sensational, and he went to his stable apparently sound, but cooled out perceptibly lame. Mr. Smathers himself was present, and a veterinary was called in at once. Everything possible was done to relieve the trouble, and although the lameness is not considered by any means permanent, it is peculiarly serious on the eve of such a race as the Brooklyn derby.

"If," said Mr. Smathers, "there is any way within reason of getting the horse to the post on Thursday I want him to be there. Originally I would not care for any particular stake, but in the Brooklyn there seems to be a chance that he will meet his fellows that I would most deeply regret his loss of opportunity to do so."

In his trial yesterday McChesney went the mile and a quarter in 2:08 and the mile and a half in 2:37.

MANY MEN DISCHARGED.

A General Reduction on New York Central.

New York, May 24.—What amounts to a general reduction of the staff, to reduce expenses in every one of the seventy-five or more departments of the New York Central railroad system is going on in pursuance of an order issued from the office of the president, W. H. Newman. The reason given is the decrease in freight traffic.

From New York to Buffalo dismissals have gone into effect. The tie-up of traffic on the great lakes, due to the disagreement between the masters and pilots and the employers is said to be partly responsible for the poor showing in the Central's freight department.

May Lease Plant.

It is claimed that the contemplated visit to the head of the lakes this week of Edward Hines, of Chicago, will be in connection with the reported negotiations of the Hines Lumber company for the Peyton, Kimball & Barber mill on Connor's Point.

Rumors have been afloat for some time past that the Hines company would like to secure the mill to saw on its timber contracts, and much credence is placed in the report of an arrangement whereby the mill will be leased. The owners have no more timber of their own to saw and no other contracts in sight. There was some talk of the plant being torn down and removed to some Western timber point.

FOR YOUNG MEN

Project For Organization of Club For Their Benefit.

Great Number Have No Place to Spend Spare Time.

There is a project on foot to organize a young men's club in Duluth, with headquarters of a suitable nature somewhere near the center of the business district. The plan is to have commodious quarters arranged in a comfortable and attractive manner, something in the manner of the Commercial club, only on a smaller scale. A bunch of employes in the wholesale district, who are boarding in the city, are back of the move. Speaking of the matter yesterday one of them said:

"Duluth is in need, more, perhaps, than any other city of its size in the country, of a club of this nature. I believe that I am safe in saying that 75 per cent of the fellows employed in the local wholesale houses are boarders in the city, with homes at outside points. It would be for this class that the club would be organized, rather than for actual residents of Duluth, with their homes here, although the latter, with the necessary qualifications, would of course be welcomed as members.

"Seventy-five per cent is a conservative estimate. I have heard it placed as high as 90 per cent. Anyway, there must be 300 or 400 fellows who keenly feel the need of just such an organization. Their circle of friends in the city is small, and many of them find it very inconvenient, to say the least, at not having some place besides their rooms to resort to evenings and Sundays when there is nothing special on. Some have memberships in the Y. M. C. A., but the majority have the pool rooms, saloons and streets as their only alternatives.

"With a club organized along the plans we propose, all this would be changed, and the boys would have some place to loaf in in comfort, without paying for the privilege, except, of course, their regular dues. Plenty of good reading matter would be supplied, and games would be provided. If the thing is gone at in the right way, there is no reason why the initial membership fees, in the aggregate, should not furnish a fund sufficient to secure desirable quarters and pay for fitting them out in good shape."

FIRE NEAR CASS LAKE.

Fifty Acres of Land Were Burned Over.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The extremely dry weather of the past two weeks has caused considerable danger of forest fires breaking out and spreading over a considerable area. One fire was started about two miles west of Cass Lake. It was discovered in the forenoon, and in the afternoon, Eugene S. Bruce, chief lumberman of the bureau of forestry, took a party of five men with him and went to the scene of the fire. The fire had started near the railroad track, and had burned over fifty acres taking the grass, burning several large trees, and forever ruining the small reproduction of white, Norway and jack pine that had been growing within the burned district. Mr. Bruce and party were armed with shovels, pails and dippers, and they proved that those implements could be put to very effective use in stopping the fire. They worked steadily for several hours and with piling sand on the outskirts of the burned district, putting small amounts of water from the pail on the burning stumps, they were able to stay the fire, and prevented it from getting further headway.

EIGHTH-BLOOD KAW,

Ninety Years Old, Would Be American Citizen.

Guthrie, O. T., May 24—General W. E. Hardy, secretary of the Kaw Indian national council, is here coferring with Congressman McGuire with reference to obtaining citizenship for himself. It is likely that within the next month he will go to Washington to see Secretary Hitchcock in regard to the same matter.

General Hardy is an eighth Indian and is related to Congressman Charles Curtis, of Kansas. He is an ardent admirer of Congressman McGuire, having known the "McGuire boys," as he calls them, for years. As he now lacks but eight months of being 90 years old, he desires to spend his remaining days as a citizen of the United States, and hopes to enlist Congressman McGuire in his behalf.

For fifty years General Hardy has been with the Kaw Indians, and during all that time his council in the nation has always been in the interest of his fellow tribesmen, although he has less of their blood than of white. He is well versed in all their lore and his council and advice are respected by the tribe above that of any other member. General Hardy has had a varied existence. He was in and about St. Louis in the early '30s, when that city was but a struggling village, and moved from there with the tribe to a point near Kansas City. The Indians were afterward moved to Shawnee county, Kas., where Topeka is now located, and then to a reservation near Council Grove, Kas. This reservation was later ceded to the United States, and the Indians purchased the land they now occupy, in Northeastern Oklahoma.

"We were once a part of the Osage nation," said General Hardy, in speaking of the derivation of the tribe, "but dissensions arose and we seperated from them early in the last century. The word 'Kaw' means coward, and was applied to us by the Osages in derision, but it has stuck with us to this day. There was always more or less rivalry between the Osages and the Kaws, until the United States began to make treaties with the Western Indians. At that time a treaty was made with the Kaws, recognizing their independence from the Osages, and it has not been questioned since."

Speaking of Congressman Curtis, his nephew, he said:

"I knew the mother of Charley Curtis when she was a girl and I also knew Captain Curtis, his father. When Charley was about 10 or 12 years old his father took him to Topeka and educated him. He has worked his way to the top through his own exertions, and I admire him."

AUGUSTANA SYNOD

Of Swedish Lutheran Church to Meet June 1.

Linborg, Kan., 24.—The forty-fifth annual meeting of the Augustana synod of theSwedish Lutheran church of North America will convene here Wednesday, June 1. The executive committee of the synod will meet Friday, May 27, to hear reports and outline the order of business for the synod. About 200 delegates will attend. A great many visitors will be present for the commencement exercises at Bethany college, which will be held in conjunction with the synod, so that the total attendance will be about 500. Special rates have been secured on the railroads. Lindsborg will take care of all who may come.

The Augustana synod is one of the strongest organizations of the Lutheran church in this country. It numbers almost 1,000 congregations, with over 500 ministers, and a membership of more than 220,000. The total contributions made by the synod last year to church and educational work amounted to over $1,000,000.

There are six orphans' homes and three hospitals within the synod, in adition to a number of other charitable institutions. The synod own and cotrols Augustana college and Theological seminary at Rock Island, Ill. Besides, there are conference schools, namely, Bethany college, of this place; Gustavus Adolphus, St. Peter, Minn.; Luther academy, Wahoo, Neb.; Upsala college, New Orange, N. J., and Northwestern college, Fergus Falls, Minn. These institutions will have an enrollment this year of over 2,50 students. The synod is very liberal in its support of Christian education.

The Augustana synod of the Swedish Lutheran church gives special attention to the education of the children Parochial schools are maintained in almost all the congregations. The attendance in these schools last year was over 2,100. The Sunday schools had an enrollment of over 6,000 pupils. The late Dr. Carl Swensson was one of the leading members of the synod and his inspiring personality will be greatly missed at the forthcoming meeting.

The officers of the synod are: President, Dr. E. Norelius, Vasa, Minn.; vice president, Dr. C. E. Lindberg, Rock Island, Ill.; secretary, Rev. J. G. Dahlberg, Rock Island; treasurer, Rev. C. J. Bengston, Rock Island, Ill.

WILL DIVIDE ESTATE.

Dubois' Three "Widows" Come to an Agreement.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 24.—Three women, each claiming to be the legal wife of Contractor Dubois, who died last week, met in a restaurant yesterday, talked the situation over and mutually agreed upon a division of the estate. Simon Cassidy, a prominent banker, is agreed upon as administrator of the estate, which is valued at $11,000.

Mrs. Dubois No. 1, as she is distinguished from the other two wives of the contractor, resides in Des Moines and was living with Dubois at the time of his death. Mrs. Dubois No. 2 comes from New Orleans and Mrs. Dubois No. 3 comes from Denver. They met here to atend the funeral of their "husband."

DETECTIVES ANNOYED BURT.

Omaha, Neb., May 24.—Horace G. Burt, former president of the Union Pacific railway, who has been traveling in the Orient, has written a friend in this city that he was followed by Japanese detectives until it became so irksome that he was forced to appeal to a United States consul for relief. Shortly after his arrival in Japan the newspapers all over the empire published an article to the effect that Mr. Burt was about to be placed in control of the Trans-Siberian railway. He was at once placed under espionage and detectives followed him from place to place, until he was forced to appeal to an American consul. The consul secured a retraction by the press of the story that had caused the trouble.

LARGE CLASS AT WEST POINT.

West Point, N. Y., May 24.—The annual examination of the corps of cadets was begun yesterday and all recitations have been suspended until the beginning of the new academic year next September. The class to be graduated on June 15 has 125 members, and is the largest in the history of the military academy. The academic board hopes to complete the examinations this week as the corps will start for St. Louis on May 28th.

SLANDER SUIT

Miss Hines Case Against Mrs. Florence Johnson On Trial.

Mrs. Johnson Claims Import of Her Words Was Misunderstood.

Claiming that her words carried an entirely different import than the interpretation given to them, Mrs. Florence Johnson, wife of H. W. Johnson, who conducts the store and boarding house opposite the car barns, in the West End, is fighting a $2000 libel suit in district court.

The plaintiff in the action is Miss Lillian Hines, who was formerly employed at the boarding house owned by the Johnsons, but who is now conducting a boarding house of her own.

The alleged libelous statements that Mrs. Johnson is said to have made were spoken during an altercation which took place between the two women in the upper hall of the boarding house one day last March.

Miss Hines claims that she was sitting on the edge of a sofa, in the hall, on which one of the young men boarders, a street railway conductor, was reclining. She alleges that while she sat there talking Mrs. Johnson passed through the room and "giving a scornful look" toward the pair on the sofa, applied the term, "Your dirty slob," to Miss Hines.

Miss Hines says she resented the term and asked whom Mrs. Johnson meant, when the latter said she had a good mind to slap the complaining witness. Miss Hines dared her to do so.

According to her testimony the dare was promptly taken and she received a slap that broke her eyeglasses.

The young man who was on the sofa, testified that at this juncture the two women clinched and there was every evidence of something doing in the scratching and hair pulling line when he interfered and told Miss Hines that there was another way to get her revenge, that she could have Mrs. Johnson arrested.

In a wordy war that is claimed to have followed between the two women, Mrs. Johnson is alleged to have made a declaration which was meant to accuse Miss Hines of undue intimacy with a young man named Parks, to whom Miss Hines says she is engaged to be married.

Two other young men, who were boarding at the place, testified to seeing Miss Hines sitting on the sofa, but said they saw nothing out of the way about it.

Mrs. Johnson, who was called to the witness stand just before the noon hour, admitted making the statements charged in the complaint, but she claimed for them an entirely different import: that she never meant to carry the idea that she was accusing Miss Hines of immorality.

Mrs. Johnson said the boarding house had been leased to another party, and she was about to regain possession, and had gone there to take down some curtains. She said that while passing through the hall she was so disgusted with the general run down condition of things that she exclaimed to her mother, who accompanied her, "The dirty slobs," meaning that the people who had been there had not been as cleanly about the care of the place as they should be.

Mrs. Johnson says that Miss Hines took the remark to herself, and that she, Mrs. Johnson, told her that she was one of the "slobs" referred to. She testified that Miss Hines then assaulted her, and that in the clinch the eyeglasses fell off and were broken.

Mrs. Johnson said the young man, who was on the sofa, then interfered and shook his fist in her face. She claimed he was intoxicated.

As to the sofa scene, Mrs. Johnson said that while she was in another room taking down curtains, she looked out in the hall and saw Miss Hines with her arms about the head of the young man on the sofa, and that was the ground for her making a remark about it when she was in the hall.

In reference to the young man Parks and the alleged accusation of immorality, Mrs. Johnson said:

"I meant that she and Mr. Parks had a dime novel scene last fall, after which she faded, and went to the hospital. It was a love affair. I did not mean to accuse her of any immorality."

Mrs. Johnson made a very sharp witness and was ready to answer questions even after the opposing counsel had interposed objections.

Judge S. F. White, counsel for Miss Hines, finally asked her to "keep her mouth shut," if she could, and she informed him she could do so if necessary.

Several sallies took places between her and Judge White and a smile went round the courtroom when, after he accused her of trying to talk too fast, she told him she "guessed each one of us sems to be talking fast to get ahead of the other."

J. H. Whitely appears for Mrs. Johnson.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

Shipbuilder Sewall Presents Views To Commission.

New York, May 24.—The merchant marine commission appointed by the last congress to inquire into the causes of the decline of American shipping and suggest remedial measures as a basis of legislation, continued its hearing today.

William G. Sewall, representing the firm of Arthur Sewall & Co., of Bath, said that his yard had been closed during the last year owing to dullness.

He said he had no faith in free ships that it is a distinctly un-American measure. Discriminating duties he did not favor entirely. Some bill granting a bounty on the basis of mileage and capacity with some mail subsidy would be the best form. It must, however be liberal. Standardization is not the only trouble continued the witness. Labor and material are even greater factors in increased cost. A merchant marine would open up the markets of the world to us and secure transportation of our products to our own benefit.

T. P. Getz, author of "A Night in Bohemia" and other theatrical successes, is spending a few days in this city.

Mrs. C. T. Lamb, mother of the Lamb children, arrived in the city this morning from New York and will remain for a time, the guest of Mrs. Getz, of Lakeside.

TWENTY-FIVE EXAMINED

Applicants For Service In the Postoffice Department.

Twenty-five applicants, one woman among them, this morning took the competitive examination under the rule of the United States civil service commission, for the positions of clerk and carrier in the classified postoffice service in Duluth, for that of clerk and sixteen for carrier. The examinations were held in the local federal court room, under direction of the local examining board, and consisted of the usual address, reading tests, and questions in the ordinary studies—geography, arithmetic, spelling, writing, etc.

Under a new rule, which recently went into effect, the examination papers will be sent to the secretary of the board of examiners of the district. In this instance Patrick M. Moroney, St. Paul, instead of being finally passed upon by the local board as formerly. The two Dakotas and Minnesota have been made into what is known as the Eighth district, and under the new order of things, civil service examinations held in cities in any part of these states are under the general supervision of Secretary Moroney. It is expected that the papers will be returned to Duluth within six or eight weeks, when the standings of the applicants, most of whom reside in Duluth, will be made known.

The list of eligibles at the Duluth office for the position of clerk and carrier is getting rather short, and today's special examination was held to increase the list of eligibles. The local post office force will probably be increased by two or three clerks about July 1, and aside from this the present employes will, many of them be asking for their annual vacations about that time.

BRIGGS-YEO.

Duluth Young Woman to Wed St. Vincent Man.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Florence Gale Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Briggs of this city, and Norman H. Yeo, of St. Vincent, Minn. The event will take place at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, June 8, at the First Methodist church, in this city. Although it is to be a church wedding, it is planned to be a very quiet one.

Mr. Marshall's Testimony.

In the Whitely-Green case, which was tried yesterday, and in which Alexander Marshall was called to give testimony as to reasonable fee in breach of promise cases, The Herald gave his testimony up to the noon hour, at which time Mr. Marshall did not understand that Mr. Whitely had the case on a contingent basis.

In the afternoon, Mr. Marshall when recalled to the witness stand, said that in a breach of promise suit where the fee was on a contingent basis, $750 would be a reasonable fee, and that for the recovery and collection of $300 in a breach of promise action, $500 would be a reasonable fee. He estimated the services rendered by Mr. Whitely in the case as worth something over $100.

From Bisbee District.

A. S. Gray, of 218 West Third street, has returned from a visit to the mining district in the neighborhood of Brisbee, Ariz., where he had opportunity of studying mining conditions. He says he spent some time at Paradise, where the Chiriaheu mountain range, is being worked.

Mr. Gray says he believes this district is going to be one of the best in the neighborhood of Bisbee, and that a heavy development is going on. While the town is twelve miles from the El Paso & Southwestern railway station of Rodeo, there is a stage line run over which accommodates travlers comfortably, and much traffic is conducted both in transporting passengers and freight. The latter, consisting of all sorts of supplies for both living and mining. The town, he says, is growing very fast and is a typical example of the thriving Western mining town.

RAILROAD NEWS

Western Association Is Considering Rail Rates on Grain.

Coal and Wheat Movements May Come at Same Time.

In Chicago today the Western trunk line association continued its deliberations as to whether to continue to accept a proportion at lake and rail rates for the transportation of grain to the eastern seaboard. The result of the meeting was not expected to be known here until this evening, but there seems to be a pretty strong impression that the cheaper rates all rail will hold until the freight lines on the lakes resume business.

It is said now that the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic has been making the low rate on wheat ever since the first of the year and that it had filed its tariff to this effect with the Interstate commerce commission long ago, but the other lines had not discovered the fact.

One feature of the present tie-up on the lakes is the effect that may be had upon the distribution of coal throughout the west via the head of the lakes, in case the lake shipments westward should not be resumed for many weeks to come, when the eastbound movement of wheat is due.

As it is now the railroads are pretty well congested with the wheat movement alone in the late summer, and have frequently been badly tangled up in trying to keep the crops moving and their rolling stock straightened out. If there should be added to this the west bound movement of coal, it is said by people who ought to know that it would be impossible for the roads to cope with the offerings, as they are said to have no equipment capable of handling so great a movement in both directions at one time.

Two years ago after the coal strike in the East when coal began to move through the West, the congestion at Chicago and other Western points was enormous and made a trying time for the traffic officials. It is said that if the coal movement and wheat movement this year should come at one time, that it would be much as the case of one irresistible body coming in contact with an irresistible force.

In connection with the discussion of the movement of wheat eastward by way the railroads at lake and rail prices, the amount has been variously estimated, and most of those who have done the calculating have put the amount close to 100,000 bushels.

But railroad men say these figures are exceedingly high, and say they believe the amount shipped to Chicago all rail the latter part of the week at the low rate was closer to 25,000 bushels. It is impossible to get correct figures on the matter as the railroads will not give them.

Only For Few Days.

All the discussion recently about cheap rates to Minneapolis and St. Paul, to be in effect for sixty days, from al points in Western Passenger association territory seem to have been the outcome of the proposal of the Western Passenger association to have cheap rates in effect from July 14 to July 18, inclusive.

During this period tickets are to be sold from the Western Passenger association territory to the Twin Cities at one fare for the round trip, plus 50 cents, and the return trip limit on tickets is to be Sept. 15.

Our Immigration.

Immigration at the rate of 100,000 persons per month was the record for several months during last year. This is a very large number, especially in view of our strict immigration laws, excluding those most undesirable. There is also a larger number of people every year taking Hostetter's Stomach Bitters because they are learning more of its wonderful curative powers, and are convinced that it is the best remedy to restore the appetite, steady the nerves, induce sound sleep, or to cure bloating, nausea, heartburn, distress after eating, dyspepsia, indigestion and malaria, fever and ague. Delicate women, too, have come to realize that the Bitters is the best medicine in the world to restore them to health and strength, the weakest system being able to retain it. We urge a trial.

MATSON IS CHOSEN

President of Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter, Minn.

Minneapolis Pastor Was Elected on the First Ballot.

St. Peter, Minn., May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—From the Icelandic Lutheran synod of North America there was presented a petition asking the Evangelical Lutheran conference to establish a professorship in the Icelandic language and literature at Gustavus Adolphus college, St. Peter. It was unanimously decided to establish such a professorship.

The board of directors and managers for Bethesda Hospital and Deaconesses' home at St. Paul presented their reports. From these reports it is evident that the institution is in a most satisfactory condition. Eight hundred and nineteen patients had been cared for during the past year. The income for the institution was $24,239.98 and the expenses $23,483.14, leaving a balance of $811.84 in the treasury.

The eDaconesses' home was established two years ago and is therefore still in its infancy, yet it has met with encouraging success. During the past year nine proof sisters have been admitted to the institution and several others have applied for admission. Rev. C. H. Huitkrons, the manager of the Bethesda hospital, was elected to fill the same position at the Deaconesses' home.

In accordance with instructions given by the conference last year the board of directors of Bethesda Hospital and Deaconesses Home have taken preparatory steps for establishing a Home for the Aged within the conference and purchased twenty-three acres of land on the shores of Green Lake near Chisago City, Minn., to be used as a site for such a home. Several aged people have already made application for entrance to such a home. The conference expressed the hope that the board may be in a position to realize its plans in the near future.

In the afternoon reports were received from the board of directors and president for Gustavus Adolphus College. These reports were very encouraging showing that the work at the institution during the past year ha sprogressed in a very satisfactory manner. Three hundred twenty-eight students have been enrolled in the different departments. The treasurer's report showed that the total income for the past year have been $32,963.58 and the expenses 26,733.36, leaving a cash balance of $6,230.52 in the treasury. This is by far the best showing ever made for the institution.

Rev. Professor Wahlstrom, Ph.D., who during the past twenty-three years has been president of Gustavus Adolphus college, tendered his resignation which was accepted. The board had nominated the following candidates: Dr. L. A. Johnstone, of St. Paul; Rev. P. A. Matson, of Minneapolis, and Hon. C. G. Schultze, of St. Paul. The convention nominated the following candidates: Professor C. W. Foss, Ph.D., of Rock Island, Ill.; Rev. P. M. Lindberg, of Omaha, Neb.; Professor V. Hegstrom, of Chicago, Ill.; Rev. A. Bergin, Ph.D., of Cambridge, Minn.; and Rev. Professor S. G. Youngert, Ph.D., of Rock Island, Ill.

Rev. P. A. Matson received a large majority over all the other candidates on the first ballot. It was therefore moved and carried that he be elected by acclamation.

Great satisfaction was expressed on all sides with the result of the election. Rev. Matson was called upon and appeared before the conference and made an appropriate speech in which he expressed his heartfelt thanks for the great confidence shown him by the conference. It was decided to give the board of directors power to make quite extensive repairs and improvement at the college.

Professor V. H. Hegstrom, Ph. D., of Chicago, was elected professor in Greek, to succeed Professor J. M. Anderson, who has resigned from this professorship to accept a similar position in Augustana college in Rock Island, Ill.

BALLOTING FOR EDITORS

Of Church Publications Principal Business of Methodist Conference.

Los Angeles, May 24.—Most of today's session of the Methodist general conference was taken up in balloting for the editors of the eleven church publications and hearing the report of the committee on the consolidation of benevolent societies of the church. The committee recommends that the several benevolent societies shall be consolidated into three under the following corporate names:

First—The board of foreign missions of the M. E. church.

Second—The board of home missions and church extension of the M. E. church.

Third—The board of education of the M. E. church, or the board of education, freedmen's and Sunday schools of the M. E. church (as the general conference may determine).

While the result of the ballot for editors will not be given out until this afternoon, it can be stated with every assurance of accuracy that the following have been elected:

W. V. Kelly, editor of the Methodist Review; J. M. Buckley, Christian Advocate, D. D. Thompson, Northwestern Christian Advocate; C. B. Spencer, Central Christian Advocate; C. W. Smith, Pittsburg Christian Advocate; W. B. Hammond, Southwestern Christian Advocate; D. L. Rudock, Pacific Christian Advocate; A. J. Nast, Christian Apologist; Frederick Munz, Haus and Herd.

TO ENDOW COLLEGES.

Presbyterians Will Try to Raise $12,000,000.

Buffalo, May 24.—A matter of general interest to members of the Presbyterian church is the conclusion reached by the committee appointed by the last general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States to raise $12,000,000 with which to endow colleges, especially the weaker ones in the West. The report which may be presented today, recommends the union of the board of aid for colleges and the endowment committee under the name of college board, and the removal of the headquarters of the board from Chicago to New York.

Reports from the board and standing committee which were received shows the amount of money received this year was $820,000. One million dollars is needed for the work next year.

PRESIDENT TO BOYS

Addresses Scholars of Institution Which His Sons Attend.

Presents Prizes to the Boys Who Won the Honors.

Groton, Mass., May 24.—President Roosevelt made an address at the prize day exercises at Groton this afternoon.

Dr. Peabody, president of the school, made a brief address in introducing the president, in which he said:

"We like him as a parent; we admire him as a president and we love him as a man."

The audience rose to receive President Roosevelt.

In addressing the students, the president gave what he called a "homely heart to heart talk with the boys."

In opening his remarks the president addressed the audience as "Fellow parents and our boys." He said that he would speak to the students concerning their duties as boys and men, as the qualities in each were fundamentally the same. Continuing, the president said that if a boy had not pluck, common sense and decency he was of a pretty bad sort and a man without those qualities was even worse. He said parents had a right to expect much of their boys and that the lads must conduct themselves so as to make their actions count for good, both at school and at college and in after life. He admonished them that they must not in any degree become "prigs" and urged them to be strong, to be decent, and to be resourceful.

"Boys and men," he said, "possessing such qualities will not be snobs. There are in our civic and social life worse creatures than snobs, but no creature is more contemptible."

The president referred to the advantages of training in public schools, which training he believed to be most beneficial because of the democracy of these institutions.

"It is necessary," he continued, "for boys in school and in college and for men in civic or social life to demonstrate that they have power to accomplish things and be able to do their part in life. The boy or the man must be able to accomplish something for decency or he must step aside for those who can do so."

The president alluded to the athletics of modern school life, saying that he believed in athletics and sports and in the spirit which is back of them. He said that if a boy were what he termed "Molly coddle," many boys and men would have little use for him, and if he did not possess the spirit, the pluck and the energy necessary to make him successful in athletics, he probably would amount to little in after life.

At the conclusion of the president's address, President Peabody announced that President Roosevelt would present the prizes. The boys who had won honors during the year were called to the platform and President Roosevelt shook hands with each one and presented him the prize, in most cases a book.

ONLY SHOW ON EARTH

Elks' Minstrel Performance Will Surpass All Others.

It is understood that Lew Dockstader and Al. G. Field, with a number of their leading minstrels, will arrive in Duluth by special train tomorrow, in order to be present at tomorrow evening, at the minstrel show to be given in Elks' hall by the local lodge of good people. They expect to there obtain a choice selection of new and valuable points, with a budget of jokes, for use on the road next year. It is even rumored that Dockstader, who, as reported in yesterday's Herald, was so bitterly disappointed in being thwarted in his attempt to get a series of moving pictures of President Roosevelt assisting an aged negro into a carriage before the white house steps, is planning on featuring Dr. Patten and William Gorrie, particular stars in tomorrow night's show, instead. Their fame has spread rapidly abroad.

There will be about thirty people in the cast altogether, picked from the best singers in Duluth. No expense has been spared to make the production first-class in every detail, and it will easily surpass anything ever before attempted in this line by local talent. Time has been spent as freely as money. Messrs. Patten and Gorrie have been especially free with their time. They occupied front at the three recent performances of Field's minstrels in this city, but say the pointers thus obtained are as nothing compared to what they could give, were they so minded. Every little helps, however. They have also taken great pains to have original jokes and dialogues prepared for the event by contributors to Puck, Judge, and other funny magazines, by special order.

The show will be under the direction of Carl Raymond, an old theatrical man, and will be for Elks and their friends. E. L. Millar will act as interlocuter, and it is said that he has the part down to perfection, and even lower. Dr. Patton, Leslie Hubbell, William Gorrie and Charles Applehagen appear as end men. All are shining stars. They will be assisted by a chorus of twenty trained voices, the best in Duluth. The stage effects are pleasing, and suitable costumes have been provided.

NORMAL CONDITIONS ON PIERS.

New York, May 24.—Practically normal conditions, so far as was apparent on the surface, had been restored today at the piers along the North and East rivers, which have been affected by the strike of freight handlers employed by the various lines of sound steamships. Nearly full crews of laborers were at every pier.

MYER ISAACS DROPS DEAD.

New York, May 24.—Myer N. Isaacs, president of the Baron De Hirsch fund, and prominently identified with many other local and national organizations, dropped dead in a Broadway cafe today. He was 63 years of age.

JAPANESE DYING

At Rapid Rate From a Virulent Form of Cholera.

War Office Has Heard Nothing of Korlinsky Charges.

Paris, May 24.—The correspondent of the Temps at St. Petersburg telegraphs that cholera is causing the loss of 100 Japanese troops daily near Feng Wang Cheng.

Liao Yang, May 24.—Troops continue pouring into Liao Yang. Dysentery has broken out south of Liao Yang.

Gen. Kuropatkin today inspected seven new city gates which will enable the garrison to more easily concentrate and meet an attack on any side. The Chinese governor entertained the Russian officers at dinner yesterday. The guests of honor were Gen. Kuropatkin and the Manchu imperial prince.

Natives have brought in news from Feng Wang Cheng that cholera in a virulent form has broken out among the Japanese troops. In some cases death has occurred within three hours.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The war office denies any knowledge of the alleged charges against Lieut. Col. Korlinsky and Staff Capt. Ignotowich of selling rifles and ammunition to the Chinese, as reported by the Harbin correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung.

The director of the department of military states it has informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that he certainly would have been informed of so serious a case as it would have been submitted to the emperor.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The report transmitted to the Breslau Zeitung by its St. Petersburg correspondent and published May 18, of an alleged attempt on the life of Emperor Nicholas, has, according to official statements, the following foundation: Miss Mereshewsky, daughter of Privy Councillor Mereshewsky and her brother are under arrest for possible implication in the recent fire at Cronstadt. She was not arrested at the time of the May parade of troops, no bomb was found upon her and she has not been hanged.

RUSSIANS INSIST

That Bogatyr Has Not Been Blown Up.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—Additional details of the disaster to the protected cruiser Bogatyr confirm the previous reports to the effect that she went ashore in a fog at the entrance of the gulf of Amour, opposite Vladivostok. Her guns were taken off, and some of them were mounted ashore to protect the vessel during the salvage operations. Although the statement was positively made yesterday that she had already been blown up, the admiralty insists that it is not true, and that efforts are still progressing to save her. Vice Admiral Skrydloff having telegraphed to the emperor that he thought he could do so.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT

Dunn and Collins See Only Victory In the Outcome.

St. Paul, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Conferences were held by each of the gubernatorial candidates and their managers today and the situation discussed. Both Dunn and Collins see only victory in the outcome.

Mr. Dunn expects 650 votes on the first ballot when the convention meets June 30. This includes the Hennepin delegation.

Jude Collins claims that the first roll call will show 615 ballots in his favor and says Hennepin county is not included.

Frank M. Eddy has confided to friends that he will get 225 votes on the first ballot and that if Hennepin goes to pieces, as he expects, he will double the number on the second ballot.

The Dunn people will not concede Mr. Eddy over 100 votes at any stage of the game.

JUDGE GAYNOR'S PLAN.

The published report of the remarks of Judge Gaynor of New York on the trust problem is now said to be somewhat inaccurate. It is claimed by the Brooklyn Eagle that Judge Gaynor did not say that the freight agent which he suggested should be appointed by the government for every railroad, should have the fixing of freight rates. He only suggested that such an agent should be appointed to prevent any one getting any favoritism in freight rates. The companies establish and schedule their freight rates; the general freight agent appointed by the government would see that such rates were not departed from to favor any one.

If that is true, Judge Gaynor's remedy would be entirely inadequate. Freight-rate discrimination is forbidden by law today, but it is almost universally practiced for the benefit of the big industrial combines. The interstate commerce commission and the courts seem powerless to prevent it, probably for the reason that they are hedged about with restrictions by the political party in power. Reputedly the coal-carrying roads are constantly violating the law in regard to freight-rate discrimination, and yet nothing was done by the national administration to prevent or punish it until it was forced into action by the efforts of W. R. Hearst.

The appointment of a government freight agent for each road, without the power to fix all rates, would simply add a lot of expense without effecting the desired reform. If he could not be bribed to keep still, then he could be deceived by designing railroad managers. And the result would be the same.

The experience of this country in attempting to regulate the affairs of privately-owned railroads has already been sufficient to show that it is entirely ineffective as far as protecting the public against rate discrimination is concerned. And the chances are that no plan can be devised that will be effective as long as the railroads remain in private hands. It is all very well to pass laws forbidding a man to do what he will with his own property, but it is a far different matter to compel him to observe the law. Thus far it has not been done.

WHY MEN STAY AWAY.

"Why men don't go to church," is being gravely discussed through the columns of the New York Sun by scores of its readers. There are so many reasons offered why men don't go, it would seem the query "Why do some men go to church?" would be more pertinent.

The Herald reproduces in brief a few of the more striking reasons given by these correspondents with a few thoughts suggested thereby.

"An Old-Fashioned Christian" writes: "Men, and women, too, will go to church to hear the old-fashioned Gospel preached from the old-fashioned Bible." Much depends upon what is understood by the old-fashioned gospel. No doubt a few people will go to hear anything, but will intelligent reasoning men go to hear such "old-fashioned" Gospel as is thus described by another writer: "At the time of the 'Great Awakening,' or religious revival of 1857, eternal physical punishment was held forth as the alternative of non-acceptance of salvation as offered by religion, and even the appearance of a comet that year was represented as a sign of warning of the wrath to come. People were literally frightened into professions of faith. At that time men and women of adult years who were not church communicants were regarded as not entirely respectable or moral."

After detailing how much more vice and crime there was in New York in 1857 than there is today and the great improvements that have taken place, this correspondent adds: "A stronger sense of duty now permeates the minds of men toward their fellows less fortunate. With less of absolute religious faith the men of New York today are showing themselves superior to those of 1857, and by their works. In 1857 many were led through fear to perfunctory acquiescence in Christian tenets. Today there is more courage, inspired by the belief that by 'taking proper care of this world, the next one will take care of them and itself.'"

F. H. Jones asks: "Do you not think that the wider diffusion of knowledge and the more universal spread of education have something to do with it?" Probably the universal human desire for knowledge led men to church in days past when the opportunities for popular education were limited. There is no doubt that the freedom of the press and the newspaper editorial, usually of a moral tone, are also partly responsible for the decrease in church attendance, for therein the average man can find food for the hunger of his intellect. It is no doubt for this reason that many preachers senselessly rail at the Sunday newspaper, which is prepared on Saturday, while they bring no objection to the Monday paper, which is prepared on Sunday. They think that the Sunday paper is their successful rival and fills the void for both moral and intellectual teaching that formerly brought men to hear the preacher's sermon.

John F. Baxter thinks it is because the preachers are not as able as those who are dead, but this is answered by another who thinks that religion "does not appeal to the intelligence, but to some hidden springs of being, which we can only describe as the spiritual nature." Other people describe this "hidden spring" as superstition which comes from fear and the universal ignorance of the "first cause."

The agnostic view is thus given by T. Mackvie, of Westfield, N. J.: "There is no longer any hell to frighten them into going; or any heaven to reward them for going. Therefore, there is nothing left to the church but its social advantages and its charities. The female part of our families can attend to the social part, and we can mail checks from the office for the charities."

Another like believer attempts to explain the preponderance of women church attendants in this way: "So far as observation goes we must all be in the way of admitting that men are neither better nor worse citizens in all the relations of life because they go to church or remain away. As to women who still go to church, social considerations are the governing factor. Such 'belief' in religion as they still possess is based on the natural timidity of their sex and is therefore largely pathological; fear being at the foundation of all religious sentiment,"

This may be a satisfactory explanation to those who think that there is nothing mysterious about their own being or the creation of the universe, and if it is true it is no wonder that some ministers still insist on preaching hell fire and eternal damnation.

But the rational view, the one that strikes the keynote, is this explanation by S. A. Saunders: "Is it not true that men know that religion does not depend on a church, nor even a Bible? There is, I think, a general conviction that a man can be good without either, and that God will not damn a good man and probably will not damn anyone."

The evident truth is that mankind generally has progressed toward a true religion faster than the churches and that man's chances for either eternal salvation or earthly happiness do not depend upon a "belief" in any particular dogma, but in right living, moral conduct and practice of the golden rule.

IMMIGRATION CONVENTION.

Considerable interest is being taken in the state immigration convention which is to be held in St. Paul on June 14 and 15. Delegates are to be appointed from every county by the governor, and a general attendance of not only delegates, but other representative men of the state is expected. The people of Northern Minnesota should take an especial interest in this gathering, because this section of the state contains a vast area of splendid agricultural land which would furnish homes for many thousands of settlers.

The movement for the meeting originated with the Commercial club of St. Paul and it has the active support of the Duluth Commercial club and the similar body at Minneapolis. The railways will make reduced rates for the convention. Various committees are at work and a varied and valuable program has been arranged. Addresses will be delivered showing that Minnesota is not only a great state, but by organized effort can be made much greater. It is unfortunate that the legislature has not given the attention that it should to the gathering of reliable information concerning what is going on in our splendid commonwealth. It is only once in ten years, through the national census, that anything authentic can be had. Other states less favored naturally are far ahead of us in respect to showing yearly progress. These states attract setlers for the reason they show that "something is doing." People go where there are signs of prosperity. This meeting can be made one of the most important ever had in the state, by formulating plans that will result in attracting immigration to the vacant lands.

LABOR FOR THE CANAL.

A solution of the labor problem for the proposed Panama canal, that appears to be at once sensible and humane, is offered through the columns of a New York paper by D. Collazo, a native of Porto Rico. Instead of importing Chinese coolies, who are semi-slaves, and thus defaming the fair name of the American government, besides adding an element of danger and discord, this writer would have Uncle Sam draw his labor supply from the congested island of Porto Rico, where thousands of the poorer classes are awaiting the event of some miracle that will afford them an opportunity to earn a living.

The actual population of the island is almost a round million, and as to density it occupies the third place in the world, coming just after Belgium It is estimated that since the present economic crisis began its terrible ravages among the island breadwinners there are at least 100,000 of them anxiously seeking a chance to work. In the various ramifications and branches of construction of the Panama canal, the Porto Rican natives should find, in preference to the other West Indians and foreigners, remunerative employment that shall at the same time be constant and lasting.

Mr. Collazo asserts that "in spite of the opinions to the contrary, the Porto Rican peasant has demonstrated that with fair pay and proper encouragement he makes an excellent workman, as tropical conditions will permit. The island has an abundance of cheap labor inured to climate and pernicious fevers, and accustomed to tropical soils, that must be taken into account for the construction of the Panama canal. There is a notable precedent and an eloquent instance in the case, known to the writer, of an enterprising Porto Rican, Lorenzo Mercado, who, during the boom of the canal work and at the time of the French concern's operations, went to the isthmus along with 200 companions as a first experiment. They worked well and satisfactorily, met with success, and at the end of six years returned safely and in health to their native country with a useful experience and plenty of gold in their purses."

Considering the present crowded condition of this island possession and the industrial stagnation there prevalent, it would seem to be a matter of simple justice and the plain duty of the government to give these people at last a fair trial in the digging of the canal. Such a course would be much more satisfactory to the American people as a whole than the proposed plan of following the example of the English mine-owners in South Africa.

The employment of these Porto Ricans would no doubt result in inducing many of them to make their permanent homes on the continent and thus permanently relieve the island of its surplus population without the alternative of allowing them to starve to death.

Miss Lavinia Egan, of Louisiana, a member of the World's fair board of lady managers, brought a true indictment when she said that the women's column in the average newspaper was filled with "plaudits and platitudes, pie crust and puddings. Clear it of recipes and frivolities," she says, "and let it express the woman's point of view." But that is easier said than done. The character of the woman's page cannot be changed until women themselves demand the change. The newspapers give what is asked by the larger number.

The senator also considers that he is ineligible under Section 9 of the state constitution which says that "no senator or representative shall, during the time for which he is elected, hold any office under the authority of the United States or the state of Minnesota, except that of postmaster."

Michigan Republicans in convention assembled asked for an increase of the duty on sugar. Do you suppose a majority of the Republicans of Michigan desire that? HOTEL GOSSIP

When a reporter saw the name of H. J. O'Neal on the register at the Spalding today he thought there might be a chance of learning about the political status of Stillwater, from where Mr. O'Neal hails.

He called Mr. O'Neal on the telephone and was asked to go to the room.

Mr. O'Neal had not yet been out to breakfast.

He was asked if he could tell something about the situation in his neighborhood.

"Guess you're not after the right man, are you?"

"Maybe not."

"Think you must mean the O'Neal of Winona?"

"He's something of a politician, isn't he?"

"Yes, he's in the grain business and is pretty well known in politics. He spells his name the same as mine and the initials are the same. But I am not interested in politics. I am in the lumber business."

It so happens that there is a theatrical man in Duluth who has the same name as an insurance man. The result is that there is sometimes a mix-up in mail and packages intended for one which occasionally get to the other. One of the gentlemen is married and the other is not, and from what can be learned of the case, it appears as though the gentleman who is not married is getting the better of the argument by finding out the domestic affairs of the other.

Let it be supposed that each of the gentlemen is named John Doe, for it is not the case, and consequently does not bind anyone who is telling the story to stick to facts. But facts are stranger than fiction, and the facts furnished by one of them, the unmarried one, are strange enough to warrant anyone in believing the story fiction, if such person does not care to believe. The unmarried man's version is given here in all cases.

Some time ago he was alone the possessor of his name in Duluth, but in this case possession is not ten points of the law if he should want to retain the exclusive rights. But that is another story, and in this instance possession of the name has privileged him to learn a good deal about the other man and his affairs.

First in the misdeals was a package which came to John Doe, the bachelor, some time since. It looked as though it might be a box of fruit or a set of books, or something else that most anyone might appreciate.

As it was properly addressed to "John Doe, Duluth, Minn.," Doe thought it was for him, without question. It was for Doe but not for him. Before opening it he tried to think what it might be, and smiled to himself several times, thinking which one of the fair damsels of his acquaintance might have remembered him. He finally concluded that it was a particular girl who lives in Chicago, and a girl that he is very particular about.

So he opened the package. It contained dog biscuit. He keeps no dogs but would like to have had one or two about that time. As he had a bank balance of eight dollars, he concluded he would not eat the biscuit, at least for a while.

A few days later he got a postal card from Rock Island, Ills., stating that some furniture there in storage which he had been inquiring about was all right. It read something like this:

"Dear Sir: The household goods which we hold in storage for you are in first-class condition and have not been damaged by the high water. The insurance charges have been kept up, and will be, so you need have no concern about indemnity in case of fire or other unforeseen damage. Yours truly, Mollnger Storage Co."

As he is a bachelor he does not care very much about the household goods, especially if the Chicago girl cannot send him anything better than dog biscuit. He turned the postal over to the carrier the next time that gentleman came around and explained that it must be for some one else.

Then he learned that another John Doe had come to Duluth to live. The postal matter indicated that anyway, for it did not take much guessing to conclude that some John Doe, formerly in Rock Island, had come to Duluth and left some furniture in Illinois.

Next and third in the order of the misdeals was a bill which he received from a fashionable dressmaker of the Twin Cities. The envelope was addressed to him and the bill inside was made out to Mrs. Doe. The amount was something in the neighborhood of $100 and contained various items running from chiffon and balbriggan to "mooseleen de soy and "fairies' waists."

Since his bank account was only eight dollars and he was not married, he concluded that the accusation did not fit him, so turned the missive back to the postal authorities for better delivery.

The fourth time he was reminded of his double in name and the fact that the other Doe was married was while riding on a train from St. Paul to Duluth. When the train was nearing the Zenith City a boy came through the train carrying Duluth papers for sale. He bought one.

Turning to an inside page in scanning the paper he found a large heading over the society department. The heading was across two columns of the paper and the biggest item in it, in brave type, was this:

"Mrs. John Doe Entertains."

That's all at present.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It takes ten times as long for a woman to get old as for her children.

A woman with a good figure worries mighty little about the fashions.

Sunday is a good day for staying home without letting your family know you'd rather be some place else.

When a woman rides horseback straddlewise she feels as natural as a man who tries to climb a rope in petticoats.

Either a woman is always waiting for the time when her children will get religion or some unknown rich relative will leave them a fortune.

Prince Pu Lun's Sarcasm.

New York World: "Yesterday I had a headache," says Prince Pu Lun of China, "and this morning the newspapers say I have a headache. It is wonderful." Not half so wonderful as if the papers had said that the prince had a headache when he hadn't. And some newspapers have been known to do such things.

"I don't care if it is—the glue isn't good," replied the bookworm, as he crawled away to the next shelf.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Mankato Free Press: It was hardly necessary for Mr. Wright to inform the public that things in general are higher now than they used to be. All householders were satisfied of the existence of such a state of things prior to his announcement.

Cass Lake Times: One John Cooper, who resides at Chicago, would-be autocrat of all the northern part of the state, has recently hatched a new scheme in furtherance of his purpose in the stationing of a regiment of soldiers in our midst to protect the fish and game from the marauding acts of the resident public and to secure for himself and his co-laborers an actual possession of the lands they covet. It may be possible that the war department may be weak enough to grant his request but the people of the region sought to be inflicted will most certainly be heard from in no uncertain terms.

Warroad Plaindealer: If you have thought that reciprocity with Canada would be a bad thing for Minnesota, just ask yourself if it would be better for Minnesota if trade restrictions were established between Minnesota and North Dakota. The answer you would give to yourself on that proposition is the only stensible answer to the question of freer trade with Canada, at least as affecting the Northwestern states.

Republican Inconsistency.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The orthodox Republican position is now that we must have reciprocity only on noncompetitive articles. Sugar is a competitive article, as is tobacco. But we are boldly told, on the one hand, that the lowering of the duties on these competitive products has been a good thing, and, on the other, that Republicans will tolerate no increase of exports of competitive articles. Both positions cannot be maintained. If we are to have a lowering of duties only on noncompetitive articles the Cuban treaty was a colossal blunder. But orthodox Republicans continue to assure us that it was a great feat of statesmanship. If the last be true, give us more of that brand of statesmanship which reduces the tariff.

Hezekiah's Venture.

Hezekiah Hopkins, much excited, said one day,
As he entered his wife's presence in a most impulsive way,
"Mother, listen; I'm a-goin' to invest in mina' stock.
I've a chance to make a million; here's a sample of the rock;
I can git it now for twenty cents a share, and in a year
Close it out for twenty dollars, which is nineteen-eighty clear."

"Don't you do it, Hezekiah; them is only idle dreams;
Think of all the folks we've heard of that got beat on minin' schemes."
Thus his good wife sagely counseled, but he laughed at her advice,
And he sold a spotted heifer at a painful sacrifice.
Sold the roan mare and the filly, scraped up all the cash he could,
And invested it as only a deluded bumpkin would.

Hezekiah Hopkins still is toiling for his bread;
All the hopes he had of winning wealth in golden heaps are dead.
He has learned a costly lesson, it is seldom that he smiles,
And he says hard things concerning glib promoters and their wiles.
But weep not for Hezekiah, his is not a crushing woe,
For the gentle wife who warned him never says: "I told you so."

Advice to Marriageable Girls.

Marion (Ind.) News-Tribune: We rise to make plain talk on a theme that is big in the thought of the girl. The theme is man and the choice of a life-mate for a maid. The dear young thing will bear in mind that a "freak hat," a foul pipe, tan shoes, shaped like grown hams, and a pair of fierce socks do not, of need, go to make up the best sort of man to tie to. The scarf and the vest, their check, tint, or noise do not take a place in the worth of the brute who must soon or late serve the soft sex. It is to say then, that the duds make the dude, but do not make the real man. The girl who thinks a dude is all right is not the girl we wish to talk to on this line. For those who like that sort the dude is all right. The maid who seeks, as is right, real joy in life with a man; the maid who has the heart to make a home a place of bliss, will pass by the one who thinks of dress and shine and style more than he thinks of the world's call on mind or heart. A good man to tie to is the man who thinks first of all of his job and of his stand in the town. The staid, safe, true, plain, square, white-browed, clear-eyed, pure-lipped young man is the boy to place bets on in the home game or in such game as one may choose.

Capt. Hobson's Sympathy.

Charleston News and Courier: The affliction that has come upon the people of the Sixth congressional district of Alabama weighs very heavily upon Hero Richmond Pearson Hobson. The success of Mr. Bankhead at the polls did not make much difference to The Hero personally, but he minded it keenly on account of the constituents that might have had the honor to be his own. Having pondered the matter deeply for some time, Capt. Hobson has now come forward with what the Chicago Chronicle calls "a letter of condolence to his supporters." In it he says: "I feel the keenest sympathy for my friends in their sore disappointment, but I feel sure that we shall ere long see that the result was for the best." A more typically Hobsonesque view of defeat in the primaries could scarcely be imagined. However, Mr. Bankhead has proved himself quite a worthy representative of Alabama and of the South, and his re-election to congress may not appear to every one the calamity it seems to Capt. Hobson. Even the friends for whom Capt. Hobson feels sorriest may become resigned to it in the course of time.

The Parrot Had Its Innings.

Eddie Foy was once much smitten with a young woman whose father had a parrot which was a fine conversationalist. One evening Mr. Foy remarked that a friend of his possessed a bird almost as clever as this one; and, he added, somewhat facetiously, that his friend's parrot could imitate to perfection the sound of a kiss.

"Is that among the accomplishments of your feathered treasure in the corner?" asked he.

Whereupon the young woman, with some show of indignation, responded: "It is not. I'll have you understand, sir, that our parrot does not attempt an imitation of a sound he is not accustomed to hear."

"Just as the words were out of her mouth," concluded Mr. Foy, "the parrot chimed in with:

"'Wait, John, dear, till I take this horrid bird out of the room!'"

RESERVOIR PLAN

Council Views West Duluth Proposition With Much Favor.

To Investigate Liability of Property For Garfield Avenue Paving

The council last evening:

Requested city attorney for opinion on $40,000 bond issue for new reservoir for West Duluth.

Appointed committee to secure site for a city dock in West Duluth.

Asked for city attorney's opinion on plan to assess all property owners on Rice's Point for improvement of Garfield avenue.

Ordered three extensions of water and gas mains.

Ordered renumbering of street on Park Point.

The plan to construct a supplementary reservoir in West Duluth to supply the western part of the city with water in case a break in the connecting main should ever shut it off from the main reservoir is evidently looked upon with favor by the members of the council.

At the meeting last evening the city attorney was requested to state whether in his opinion the remaining $10,000 of the bond issue of $100,000, authorized a year ago, could be issued at this time. Only $50,000 of the amount was issued, and the remaining $40,000 has been authorized but never sold.

The council asked the city attorney to give his opinion as to whether or not this remaining $40,000 could be placed on the market at this time, to be used in the construction of the supplementary water system at West Duluth. The amount would be sufficient to cover the cost of the construction of the reservoir and the mains connecting it with the present system, and if it were decided to use the money for this purpose and issue the bonds immediately, the work could be undertaken this summer.

West Duluth business men are anxious that a site be secured for a city dock at the foot of Ramsey street.

A petition, signed by sixty of the most prominent business men in that part of the city, was presented to the council last evening, calling attention to the fact that there is no city dock between Twenty-first avenue west and Spirit Lake, and urging the needs of the western portion of the city for such a structure.

Several weeks ago the council deferred further action in the matter until next year, on account of the condition of the permanent improvement fund, out of which the $7000 appropriation for the dock would have to be made.

The West Duluth people, however, are anxious that a site should be secured as soon as possible, and a resolution was passed last evening directing Aldermen Chesney, Tessman and Olson as the committee on harbors, parks and roads, to interview the property owners in the vicinity with a view to ascertaining whether or not they would not donate a title to the water frontage for dock purposes.

Alderman Tessman reported the result of the conference with the property owners on Garfield avenue last Thursday evening, when it was found that practically all of them were opposed to any assessment for street improvement.

"It seems to me that this is one case where our present charter is deficient," said Alderman Barnes. "We can't get a petition signed by the property owners down there, but the street simply must be improved. In a case like this where the property owners themselves do not use the street, it is impossible to get them to sign a petition to have it improved, but it is the main highway between Duluth and Superior and something will have to be done with it."

The matter was finally referred to the city attorney with a request to furnish his opinion as to whether or not the adjoining property might be assessed. The conditon of affairs is similar to that existing on Lake avenue, which was paved last year. In this instance certain property that was not actually abutting on the street was assessed for the improvement.

If the city attorney decides that it is legal, all of the property on Rice's Point may be assessed for the pavement of Garfield avenue, and the elevators, mills and coal interests will pay their share.

* * *

Manager Case of the water and light department recommended the following additions and extensions: West First street from Piedmont avenue to Seventeenth avenue west, a distance of 225 feet, at a cost of $338; East Sixth street from Seventh avenue to Tenth avenues, a distance of 1398 feet at a cost of $2097; Twenty-second avenue east, south from London road to the last house south of Water street, on Water street from point 100 feet west of Twenty-second avenue to Twenty-third avenue from a point 125 feet south of Water street to a point 50 feet north of Water street, a distance of 1632 feet in all to cost $2448.

Manager Case stated that a twelve-inch main would be necessary for East Sixth stret because the plans of the department to supply the hillside or middle district in future require a twelve-inch main in Sixth street west from Fifteenth avenue east.

The extensions were approved and ordered, as recommended.

* * *

On a motion by Alderman Walker new street signs were ordered for Park Point. The streets will be numbered and the signs will contain both the present name of the street and the number south from the canal. The signs wil be placed in position by the street railway company.

* * *

The city attorney was requested to ascertain the process necessar to utilize Keene's creek in West Duluth as an outlet for the new sewer system. It is stated that the city has secured a right-of-way for a sewer in the creek, without acquiring the right to use it for an outlet.

* * *

At the request of the health commissioner, the council ordered the enforcement of the sewer distributing ordinance in fifteen business blocks and dwellings.

CUTS AMOUNT CONSIDERABLY

Jury Awards J. H. Whitely $105 For His Legal Service.

By a verdict returned yesterday afternoon in district court, a jury decided that J. H. Whitely's legal services in behalf of Katherine Alward, in her breach of promise action against Isaac Green, the former street railway conductor, were worth $105. Mr. Whitely sued for $1000, which he claimed was the amount he should have received, having taken the case on the contingent basis and a judgment having been entered against Green of $2000.

Mr. Whitely claimed that his client settled with Green after the judgment had been returned unsatisfied, leaving him out in the cold as far as fees were concerned. He claimed that Katherine Alward and Green, when the settlement was made, came to an agreement that Green was to pay all her attorney's fees. The suit was tried over three years ago, but Green has been out of the city, working in the woods and on the range.

Mr. Whitely sued Green for his fees on the strength of the alleged agreement that the latter was to settle with the attorney.

During he afternoon L. C. Harris estimated the services of an attorney in the Alward-Green case at $100, or, if the judgment were colectible, at from $150 to $200. Mr. Harris said he never took cases on such a contract as Mr. Whitely claimed to have made and was not, therefore, in a position to tell what legal services would be worth by the day.

H. B. Fryberger thought Mr. Whitely's fee rather too high. He said that if the lawyers were in the habit of charging such excessive fees the legal profession would be wiped off the face of the earth in a short time.

The estimate of the various attorneys, called to the stand yesterday, placed legal services in a breach of promise case anywhere from $100 to $200.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, Editor. COPPER IS LOWER Price Continues to Sag and Buyers Wait For Lower Prices.

Copper Shares Still Fail to Start Toward Higher Prices.

George L. Walker in his weekly letter on the conditions that prevail in the copper market reports a continued sagging of prices. He also discusses the failure of the prices of copper shares to make the advances which they should. He says:

"Copper prices continue to sag, and are now about ⅛ to ¼ cent per pound lower than a week ago. Lake is 13¾ to 13¼ cents and electrolytic is 13 to 13¼ cents per pound. There are, it might be said, neither buyers nor sellers in the market. Producers have sold all the copper they care to sell, and buyers are waiting with the expectation that prices may go a little lower. A sale of 120,000 pounds of Lake at 13⅛ cents is known to have been made this week. A leading authority says: 'I do not think Lake will go as low as 12½ cents;' another writes: 'If the price gets a fraction lower I look for renewed London buying. The weakness seems to be due to manipulation from that center. I don't think Lake will sell below 13 cents.'

"Exports of copper this month are expected to aggregate from 12,000 to 13,000 tons, compared with 9207 tons last May, and 15,439 tons in May of the preceding year. This will make the total exports of the first five months about 95,000 to 96,000 tons, which will compare with 55,231 tons last year, 81,429 in 1902 and 39,897 in 1901. There is a very good prospect that exports will continue to break all previous records throughout the year.

"London prices are a little less than £1 per long ton lower than a week ago. With the easgging prices there has come an increase in business. Foreign consumption of copper is showing a marked increase this year. The war is helping European industries, and its termination will probably be followed by a great business revival in Great Britain, on the continent and in the far East. It is the hope of Europe that the outcome of the war will be the opening up of China to progressive development.

"The question of generation of electricity by water power is receiving increased attention, and there will be tremendous development along this line during the coming ten years, both in the United States and in Europe. There is no probability of any falling off in the consumption of copper, and if the price declines slightly the demand will be largely increased.

COPPER SHARES.

"There has continued to be just enough clouds in the sky to prevent the copper shares from starting out on their long-delayed cruise for higher prices. Earnings are satisfactory, and the general outlook is all right. The Lawson-Rogers controversy, however, is causing the newspapers to publish a great deal of matter that naturally has a tendency to, for the time, restrict the public investment demand for copper stocks; and it is possible, also, that it has encouraged some liquidation of long holdings. At the same time the 'wise ones' are shaking their heads and talking of clouds that are really not in sight, and predicting storms that are not at all likely to occur.

"It is an old axiom that no storm was ever so severe that it did not clear, and it is also true that stock market disasters are always followed by periods of great prosperity. The depression in the coppers has lasted longer than it has in any other group of stocks, and it naturally follows that the coppers should be next in order to enjoy a boom. They have completely recovered from the reverses suffered in the metal market break of two and a half years ago, practically all of the producing companies now having substantial treasury surpluses, and being in a position to pay increasing dividends. It should not be forgotten that the copper metal market is in a much more healthy state than is the market for almost any other commodity. Taking all factors, facts and probabilities into consideration, therefore, one must be led to the conclusion that when the financial skies finally do begin to clear copper stocks must certainly be the first to reflect the general improvement."

KENNEDY COMPANY.

The Kennedy company presented "Cheek" last evening at the Metropolitan. A large audience had gathered to witness the pleasing play and left the theater perfectly satisfied. John J. Kennedy was excellent as Dick Smythe, a part which gave him ample opportunity for being just what he is—natural and very entertaining. All the rest of the company were well placed. "Cheek" will be repeated tonight.

"THE GAMEKEEPER."

Thursday evening "The Gamekeeper" will be at the Lyceum. It is an Irish comedy drama and Rowland & Clifford, proprietors of the piece, are featuring Thomas J. Smith, a young singing comedian, who has been tried in leading roles and found not wanting. Mr. Smith, while not well known in this part of the country, has been very successful in legitimate Irish comedy elsewhere, having starred in Mr. Murphy's well-remembered plays, "The Fairies' Well" and "The Ivy Leaf."

PRESBYTERIANS DECLINE

To Join Inter-Church Conference on Divorce.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 24.—By a vote of 262 to 244 the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States yesterday afternoon wiped out that part of the report of the special committee on marriage and divorce which advised Presbyterian ministers to refuse to marry any person whose marriage is forbidden by the church of which that person is a member.

The committee had formulated this provision to help promote the work of the inter-church conference on marriage and divorce which takes in thirteen denominations, and this action of the assembly, it was declared, might prove a set-back to the conference.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

Vance, Miss., May 24.—A negro, name unknown, has been lynched at O'Neil, ten miles north of here, on the charge of murdering Robert Logan, a sawmill man. Another negro suspected of complicity in the crime is being hunted and will be strung up if captured.

TALKING OF VAN SANT

To Second Roosevelt's Nomination Are State House Republicans.

Was Regarded as Settled Cotton Would Be Given Honor.

St. Paul, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some of the administration Republicans in the Twin Cities are proposing Governor S. R. Van Sant as the national delegate to second the nomination of President Roosevelt at Chicago, June 21. The governor has not expressed his desire on the subject, but it is generally believed that he would not refuse the honor should it be conferred on him.

Most Republicans in the Twin Cities have taken it for granted that Joseph B. Cotton, of Duluth, would be selected to second the motion to nominate President Roosevelt. Mr. Cotton has been considered favorably in this connection, because he is an eloquent speaker, a leading representative of the Minnesota bar and a staunch Republican. Many Republicans also believe that it is only proper that Duluth, the growing city of the Northwest, be honored in this connection, especially when the city can produce an orator that has few equals in the country.

Those Republicans who had some other candidate in view for the place have found a pretext on which to oppose Mr. Cotton. Because he has acted as an attorney for the steel interests in the northern part of the state they say he is ineligible to second President Roosevelt's nomination. The fact that Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul, who also has acted as an attorney for the Rockefeller interests, will probably be elected Minnesota national committeeman, these Republicans say, is an additional reason why Mr. Cotton should be selected.

A leading Minnesota Republican, who lives in a country district, yesterday expressed his opinion on the opposition to Mr. Cotton.

"I don't think that any fair-minded man will oppose the selection of Mr. Cotton to second President Roosevelt's nomination because Mr. Cotton is an attorney for the steel interests. In the first place, it is not improper for a representative of the steel interests to second the president's nomination. No one thinks for a minute that the president's official conduct toward the United States Steel company will be affected in the least because a representative of the company seconded his nomination. If the company wants to recommend and second a good thing, let them do it. In the second place, everyone who knows Mr. Cotton knows that he is first a Republican, then an attorney. As a Republican, he is for the nomination of President Roosevelt, the pride of the party. As an attorney, he endeavors to faithfully discharge the trust confided in him whether it come from a company which has large investments in Minnesota or from a farmer who merely owns his homestead. The opposition to Mr. Cotton is purely selfish and it comes largely from those who have some other candidate whom they wish to see selected for the honor."

Judge Loren W. Collins will begin in a few days in Ramsey county a campaign that will put his efforts in all other counties in the shade. He plans to organize every precinct in every ward in the city, and to reach practically every voter in the county through addresses at ward meetings.

Since the city election the judge has been letting Ramsey county go by default. He has done practically nothing in the county, whereas the Dunn men have already perfected a good-working organization. The Collins men were not over-rejoiced at the result of the city election, which they practically managed, and it has taken a few weeks to recover from the blow.

One of the arguments to be used in the Ramsey county campaign is the charge that the Dunn men were responsible for the defeat of Wright, the Republican candidate for mayor. The Collins men insinuate, and they say they have proofs to prove the charge, that one of the leading representatives of Dunn's campaign in Ramsey county made a deal with R. T. O'Connor, the head of the Democratic organization, whereby the Dunn men agreed not to work for the Republican ticket.

The Collins men have come to the conclusion that they need Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties to win the nomination. They believe that they have Hennepin pretty well in hand, and they say that St. Louis county is getting to be in splendid shape. Whenever St. Louis county is mentioned, they smile blandly, as much as to say: "Of course everybody says that St. Louis is for Dunn, but I have inside information that we Collins men are getting to the front at a rapid gate." Having cinched Hennepin and St. Louis, they will go after Ramsey.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Dolly Gray, second choice, won the feature of a good card at Delmar Park at St. Louis, Monday. Elastic, the odds on favorite, finished second, a length back. The defeat of Elastic was a severe blow to the talent. The big horse led nearly the entire distance, but could not withstand Dolly Gray's rush at the end. The track was muddy and uncertain.

Capt. Thomas I. Porter of the United States secret service, arrested Dr. William Aubin, of Racine, Wis., Monday on a charge of counterfeiting. The police claim they found in the doctor's possession considerable bad coin and also a plate for making $10 gold pieces. Dr. Aubin was taken to Milwaukee in the afternoon.

Jesse L. Jewell, state senator, went to trial in the criminal court at Kansas City Mo., Monday upon a charge of soliciting a bribe for his vote and the votes of other senators upon certain baking powder legislation pending in the Missouri legislature, of 1903. At his first trial, the jury disagreed, seven of the jurors voting for conviction and five for acquittal.

Seventy-six blooded horses, the entire complement of the famous racing stable and stockbreeding farm of the late J. Malcom Forbes of Boston, were sold under the hammer at the rotting park at Readville, Mass., Monday. The horses brought $119,450, or an average of $1532.

IRON ORE

Found Twenty Miles From New Richmond, Wis.

New Richmond, Wis., May 24.—Inexhaustible quantities of the purest iron ore in existence have been discovered along Apple river, twenty miles northeast of New Richmond. A. G. Boehm, of this city, was casually inspecting the soil in that vicinity some weeks ago when he found indications of mineral and, being somewhat of a mining expert himself, he secured samples and proceeded at once to St. Paul to have them assayed. There he learned that the ore was as pure if not purer than any mined along the Mesaba range. Mr. Boehm then returned to the Apple river district and made a thorough investigation. With the aid of assistants, he dug into the earth at many places on an area of 100 acres and found iron ore in immense quantities. This ore is located within three to five feet of the surface of the ground. Just how thick the bed of ore is cannot be learned today, but experts are now blasting and drilling to ascertain the depth of the mineral. A shaft has already been sunk six feet. Mr. Boehm has purchased 100 acres and will develop the property at once. He believes that he has struck it rich.

This discovery will add new fame to Apple river, which has been prominently before the public as one of the greatest water powers in the world, one plant costing more than $1,000,000, being in successful operation and furnishing power and light to several small cities.

BATTLESHIP MINNESOTA

May Be Launched Early In Next Year.

Washington, May 24.—The last report of the bureau of oenstruction, navy department, shows that the battleship Minnesota is 26 per cent completed. She has only bene contracted for about a year, and the department annals do not show that any vessel heretofore built has been so far along toward completion in that time.

In fact, the Newport News Shipbuilding company is considerably ahead of the contract requirement. If the same rate is maintained the Minnesota will be ready for launching in January or February of next year, which is several months ahead of the time she was expected to go "overboard."

BRYAN'S CANDIDACY

For United States Senator Is Now Announced.

Lincoln, Neb., May 24.—The candidacy of William Jennings Bryan for the United States senate has been announced in the higher councils of the Nebraska Democracy, and the leaders responsible for the movement assert he has approved the suggestion. Chairman Hall, of the state committee, and T. S. Allen and James Manahan are the principals in the Bryan senatorial propaganda.

The Republicans tok the lead last week by nominating Congressman Elmer J. Burkett, of the First Nebraska district for the upper house, but the nomination of Bryan cannot take place until the Democratic convention, which nominates a state ticket, assembles in August.

Bryan, it is expected, wil make a thorough canvass of the state and his interest in the result in Nebraska will probably make him much less of a figure in the national campaign than has been generally expected.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Last evening the first of the three lectures to be given here by Edward Howard Griggs was delivered in the parlors of the First Methodist church. Mr. Griggs has been brought here by the Ladies' Literature class, and the opportunity to hear this lecturer, who has been so intently listened to in the East, was welcomed by a large number of the club women of the city. The audience was large enough to assure the success of the undertaking.

Professor Griggs is a Western man. He was born in Minnesota and educated in Indiana, and later was of the faculty of Leland Stanford university. He has been spoken of by Eastern critics as a man coming from out of the West to the East, to which fact, perhaps he owes not a little of his strength and breadth of view. He was introduced to the audience last evening by Mrs. C. d'Autremont, president of the Literature class.

The lecture is one of the most beautiful that has been presented to a Duluth audience in some time. "Florence" was the subject, and the lectures to be given tonight and tomorrow evening are connected with it. In last evening's discourse the culture of Florence, and its influence on the student of art, was what was dwelt upon with the ardor of an idealist and a poet. As a preface to his explanation of much of the art of Florence he said:

"Italian literature and art has always been a wonderland of charm to the Englishman from the fogs and mists of his own country, and to the German from the midst of his Northland the charms of Italy have mystified and attracted. To others, too, the wonderful appeal of Italy, with its wealth of human association and unique destiny, the charm is such as no other place exerts. To no other land has the distinction of being three times the beating heart of the world. This distinction has been Italy's. First, with its political power centered at Rome, Italy was the center of the earth. Then from the chaos of the middle ages came the ecclesiastical movement, from Paganism came Christianity, and Italy was again the beating heart of the universe. And, again, with the artistic renaissance, with its center at Florence, Italy was once more the center of power. Under three vastly different conditions Italy has a power over us not as another place would have, but from its wealth of human association it sways and moves and controls our emotions as no other place could.

"Florence affects us as a personality, moves us as an individual would. It could be equalled only by Athens. Florence is the holyland of the pilgrim of culture. To Jerusalem would the Christian pilgrim go, but for the pilgrim of culture Florence and Athens have an attraction and possibilities no other places possess. Florence is the birthplace of the classic renaissance. In this city with its democratic competition and almost vulgar democracy the art of the age attained a height that would have been impossible in an aristocracy as that which controlled Athens. In the art of the place during its development there was a constant struggle between the motive of the earth and that spiritual motive which is uppermost in the works that appeal most to us. At one time the struggle between the flesh and the spirit is apparent in the paintings, again the motive of the flesh has dominated and later they are fused into one and yet again we find the work of the artists a veritable spiritual consecration.

"In the next generation a conscious effort to unite the two opposite motives an execution of work beautiful without and beautiful within. The dream was impossible of fulfillment and in the next generation they were so separated that no hope of union was apparent. But Florence with all its struggle was overflowing with rich red human blood, the blood that must enter into all our artistic life. It was Florence that could produce a Dante and exile him, create a Michael Angelo and embitter his life with unappreciation, call out the genius of Savanarola and hang him upon a scaffold, and withal she exerts a force on our emotions that no other place can."

The latter part of the evening was given to the explanation of pictures of the greatest works of art in Florence. The meaning in the pictures as Mr. Griggs interpreted them was always that of the idealist. His English was chosen with a nicety and beauty seldom heard and in his descriptions there is a marked poetic enthusiasm.

Events of Interest.

This afternoon the Ladies' Literature class entertained at a delightful reception in honor of Edward Howard Griggs. The affair was given at the home of Mrs. H. C. Marshall, of East Fifth street.

This evening the second Griggs' lecture will be on "St. Francis of Assisi" said to be the greatest of the Griggs' lectures. This one dealing with perhaps, "the most perfect Christian since Christ" is the moving an beautiful story of the renunciation of Francis of the world and his after life lived there in his own country. Tomorrow evening "The Lesson of the Divine Comedy" will be the subject of the lecture.

This evening a social evening will be held at the home of A. H. Smith, of 4506 London road, in honor of Rev. H. S. Webster, pastor of St. John's church. This evening is planned to give Mr. Webster an opportunity to meet the men of Lakeside.

THE EVENING STORY.

A SELF QUARANTINE

By Gertrude Manly Jones.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The inhabitants of the little mountain town of D—— were thrown into a mild excitement one day over the mysterious doings of a stranger who had suddenly made his appearance in their midst.

He had paid one month's rent in advance for a tiny vacant cottage in the center of the town and had moved into it, ordering from the one big store below a cot, an easy chair, a table, a few rugs and a small invoice of paper, pens and inks.

An order was left at the little depot restaurant for three meals a day for a fortnight, to be delivered on the poren of his cottage, and this bill also was paid in advance.

The man was said to have been by those who saw him young and extremely good-looking and accompanied by a bulldog, old and extremely ugly. Within twelve hours after taking possession an enormous scarlet card swung from the stranger's cottage door.

SMALLPOX.

KEEP OUT.

Terrified people crossed the street to avoid passing the house, and the nearest neighbors barred up the windows that overlooked the pest-ridden place.

Thrice daily a negro boy left a basket of eatables on the deserted veranda and fled as if the goblins were after him. Thrice daily the bulldog was seen to carry the basket within doors and gravely return it to the steps when emptied. The old doctor of the town, standing upon the ethics of his profession, declined to go to the assistance of a well-to-do sick man unsummoned, so the mysterious stranger—self-quarantined—was left to his fate.

Several days passed. Within the house Harry Owsley stretched his legs lazily before a crackling fire and laughed aloud. A box of fine cigars stood at his elbow and under his busy fingers a pile of manuscripts—his first novel—grew rapidly.

"Say, Jack, old fellow, this is great, isn't it?" he said, chuckling as he stroked the dogs' head laid upon his knee. "No soot, electric cars or telephone bells, no clamoring people, no getting up at 6 in the morning, only the twitter of spring birds and the solitude and rest—blessed rest for mind and body."

The bulldog was not so enthusiastic, and wagged only a feeble response. A mangy cat in the back yard had been, so far, his only diversion, a poor exchange for his cushion of down in a steam-heated flat.

As evening approached a sudden change came over the young man's mood. Rigors began to creep down his spine, a splitting headache racked him with its torture, and as night came on fever leaped in his veins.

All night he tossed, thirsty, sleepless and half delirious, while grinning demons chased up and down the bare walls of his room.

When morning came a blind in the house opposite was turned, and a woman's pretty face looked anxiously out at the bobbing scarlet sign.

"Aunt Amanda, it's a crying shame to let a poor man die, perhaps, in a Christian community, and not a soul go near him. My mind is made up. I am going over there immediately," said the owner of the face.

"But, Blanche, dear, you came here to rest—and then the risk, you know, my child—"

"I have rested, auntie, and am well protected by vaccination. The love of my profession as well as duty calls me."

A few minutes later Blanche Gordan, having made friends with the bulldog, stood at the sick man's side, regarding him with cool, critical eyes. A long white apron, which had gone through a bi-chloride of mercury bath, enveloped her trim figure, and a cap, treated in like manner, protected her blonde hair from infection.

"I am a trained nurse from Atlanta," she said quietly. "Would you like to have me do something for you?"

"Yes," was the grateful reply.

"Let me see your tongue, please." Her skillful fingers ran along his wrist as she asked a few questions.

"You have grippe, with pneumonic symptoms. That placard at the door is a sham."

"Yes."

"What was your object?"

"I have a position in Atlanta of heavy responsibility. The tension grew so great I could bear it no longer. I wanted to rest, to write, to get away from people, from everybody—everybody."

The nurse turned to the chair where she had thrown her cloak.

"What are you going to do?" he asked fretfully.

"I belong to the class you mention. People—everybody."

"Don't go. I am thirsty and sick," he moaned.

The girl threw down her cloak and brought him a glass of water. For three days and nights the cool-headed nurse fought—sleepless and single-handed—with the pneuro-grippe demon until he loosened his hold, then she disappeared, and Aunt Amanda, who had been hovering in the background, came to the front with broth and stimulants. During the hours of his delirium it seemed to Owsley that the chasing imps on the wall had changed to floating cherubs, with dovegray eyes, in a few days the convalescent was able to take a Pullman car back to the city. Pleading weariness, Miss Gordon declined to make him the visit he craved, a visit that was not professional, and the young fellow was forced to write his farewell and thanks.

"How good you have been to me, my dear Miss Gordon," he scribbled feebly. "I am sorry to have been such a beastly nuisance, and wish that I might think clearly enough to tell you something of my gratitude. I shall try to do so later. For the present believe me to be your devoted

"HARRY OWSLEY."

A month slipped away and the rose vines about Aunt Amanda's veranda were sending out their long green shoots. Blanche Gordon in the morning sunshine was trying to fasten a refractory climber to the pillar above her. This was her last day of vacation. Tomorrow she must go back to duty and work in the city hospital.

"Let me do that for you," said a voice at her side, with a suddenness that nearly made her fall from the rickety ladder.

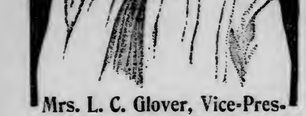
"Mr. Owsley," she exclaimed, descending and giving him her hand in cordial welcome. "I am glad to see that smallpox has not left you marked in any way." She smiled sarcastically.

"The scars are there, though you do not see them," he answered gravely.

"But there is no constitutional weakness, I trust, as a result of that dread disease," she continued in mocking tones.

"Yes, I find my heart's action seriously impaired. Miss Gordon, at the age of 21 I had my first love affair. The girl turned out to be a shallow, soulless little flirt, and, disillusioned, I thought that I had done with women forever. But let me remind you, since you are bent on teasing, that vaccination does not always render one immune. At the expiration of seven years—a period in which, they tell us, the entire system is changed—I have become innoculated with a pair of dove-gray eyes, and have, at last, a genuine case of love, from which I shall never recover. Miss Gordon I love you. I want you for my wife. Will you marry me?"

The girl looked at him for a moment, then hesitatingly gave him her hands. "If you are sure this is not varioloid," she began blushing, but the young man drew her to him and stopped the words with a kiss.



Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice-President Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed the testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one-half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. TONIGHT!

GIRL MARRIED IN JEST.

Romance Has Faded and She Wants Divorce.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 24.—A. W. Graves, of Mason City, who achieved fame by establishing a headquarters at a Chicago hotel recently for the purpose of inspecting applicants for matrimony, has come to grief in his fourth matrimonial experience.

Miss Marie Stickney, a beautiful young woman, accompanied by her parents, arrived from Northern Michigan last week and let it be known that she had married Graves several weeks ago. Her father is a conductor on the Pere Marquette line and is well-to-do.

She says she entered into correspondence with Graves while at college, in a spirit of jest. She and her parents agree that when he called to claim her as his bride he represented himself to be a millionaire. She refused to accompany him home at the time, but arrived last week with her entire family.

They were indignant to find Graves had such a chequered career in the divorce courts and had squandered most of his money in alimony, and returned home declaring the new Mrs. Graves would sue for a divorce.

NEW ROBBER'S SCHEME.

Pretends to Be Physician and Loots Patients.

New York, May 24.—The Newark detective department has joined forces with the New York and Brooklyn authorities in a search for a thief who, in the guise of a physician, gains the confidence of business men and persuades them that they are ill. He is taken to their homes to examine and treat them, and then robs them of jewelry and money.

He found a victim in Newark in John G. Ward, general manager of a carriage factory, getting from him a diamond shirt stud worth about $200 a gold watch and chain, and $50 in money.

The "doctor" requested his victim to remove all his clothing. Then some plasters were produced and cut into strips and strapped across Mr. Ward's shoulders and back. Suddenly the doctor deplored the fact that he had forgotten to bring bandages and, on the pretext of getting them, quitted the house with jewels and money.

FIFTY YEARS OF SUCCESS.

Fifty years ago an eminent specialist prescribed Father John's Medicine for the late Rev. Father O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., by whom it was recommended and from whom it derived its name. It is not a patent medicine and is free from opium, morphine or poisonous drugs or weakening stimulants in any form such as the majority of patent preparations depend upon for their temporary effect, and which are dangerous—you are warned against them. DECISION WANTED

On Application of Eight-Hour Law to Panama Canal.

Important Question Which the Commission Must Soon Settle.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the most important questions with which the Panama canal commission will shortly have to deal is whether the present eight-hour law act of August 1, 1892, applies to the construction of the Panama canal, and whether, if passed, the eight-hour bill now before congress will so apply. Not only are thousands of prospective contractors and subcontractors vitally interested in a decision on these points but also the public at large, as the application of either the present law or the pending bill would extend the time of construction at least two years and increase its cost by many millions of dollars. It is understood that the American Anti-Boycott association, which includes in its membership many builders and dredgers and others who may become directly or indirectly interested in canal contracts, will undertake to secure a decision from the proper officials. In this event Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, Conn., the executive agent of the association, who has been so prominently identified with the opposition to the eight hour bill, will have charge of the case.

The leaders of organized labor are also looking into this matter carefully, for although the canal will be located far from the United States it will be dug on American territory or territory under the jurisdiction of the United States, and be constructed and owned by the government, and the application of the eight-hour principle to a government work of this magnitude would not only be a triumph but have a far-reaching, and, they believe, wholesome moral effect. On the other hand, those who, like Mr. Davenport, regard the present eight-hour law as vicious and the bill for its extension as socialistic, hold that under no circumstances should either be so applied.

In discussing this subject, Mr. Davenport said: "In opposing the eight-hour bill I spoke for the allied interests which are concerned in doing public work for the government in the nature of dredging and harbor work, and also those people that will have to do, probably, with the building of the Panama canal. In 1892 congress passed a law which made it unlawful for any contractor or subcontractor doing work upon the public works to require or permit any laborer or mechanic to work more than eight hours in any calendar day, and further imposed the savage penalty upon any contractor or subcontractor who intentionally permitted any man to work more than eight hours on any such work in one calendar day of making him liable to a fine of $1000 or imprisonment for six months or both, at the option of the judge before whom he was tried. But the pending eight-hour bill piles on the agony far beyond that under the law as it stands today. Any contractor who intentionally violates the present law is liable to penalty; any sub-contractor who violates the law is subject to that penalty. But the eight-hour bill leaves that law still in force and proceeds further and makes the contractor liable to a heavy fine; that is, a penalty of $5 for every man employed, whether he does it intentionally or not, not only for himself but for the subcontractor, and whether the subcontractor is intentionally violating the law or not. In other words, it is proposed by act of congress to make the contractor responsible for $5 per day for every man whom the subcontractor may permit to work more than the allotted time. Now the question is whether the eight-hour law and the eight-hour bill, if it passes, with all these severe penalties, are to be applied to the construction of the Panama canal."

It is argued by some that as the canal zone is entirely under the control of the canal commission, acting, of course, under the supervision of the secretary of war, and by the direction of the president, the eight-hour act of 1892 does not ex proprio vigore apply to the zone, and that until congress shall determine otherwise the matter rests entirely with the commission. It is further represented that as the canal will necessarily be constructed so largely by labor other than from the United States, the commission will not restrict such labor to eight hours a day, but while it is not probable that the commission would undertake to enforce this law should the canal be constructed directly under its supervision, what the prospective contractors want to know is whether they would be exempt, if the work should be done under contracts and they should be fortunate enough to secure some of them. In the absence of an authoritative opinion in advance, they fear the question might be raised at a later time by the labor organizations at home and they might be heavily mulcted. Of even greater consequence to the members of the Anti-Boycott association, is the matter of the application of the eight-hour bill. That provides for the employment of labor on all kinds of government work for only eight hours a day, and the question is whether it would apply to the manufacturers of engines, dredges, rails, spikes, picks, shovels, steam shovels, cotton duck, stone, cement, carts, wagons, derricks, windlasses, and the thousands and thousands of articles which will have to be supplied for the canal. These articles must be manufactured in the United States under contract or sub-contract, and while labor on the isthmus may be exempt from the operations of the present act, the impression prevails that the pending bill will cover all contracts for materials furnished from the United States as the first clause specifically includes "every contract hereafter made for or on behalf of the United States," etc.

HAVE CHANGE OF HEART.

Iowa Democrats Now Turning From Hearst.

Des Moines, May 24.—Hearst has lost control of Iowa. The second state convention to be held July 19 will witness a complete reversal of the conditions that existed at the recent convention for selecting delegates to the national convention.

The hopeless split at Saturday's meeting of the state central committee resulted in the tacit agreement that, in view of the fact that Hearst would not be nominated at St. Louis, the second convention would be overwhelmingly against him, and his candidate for chairman of the state central committee, A. W. Maxwell, will at that time be turned down. Maxwell recognized this condition and based his sole hope of victory on the remote contingency of Hearst being nominated at St. Louis. He conceded that the failure of the latter will mean the return of the conservatives to control.

LOOK AT YOUR TONGUE.

It Is a Sure Indication of the Condition of Your System.

A white tongue, a brown, moist tongue, a tremulous, flabby tongue, or a red, glazed tongue, are indications that you are suffering from stomach, liver or bowel disorders. Beecham's Pills cure Biliousness, Constipation and all varieties of Indigestion. A course of Beecham's Pills rapidly brings up the vital powers, thus producing a clean tongue, bright eyes and a clear mind.

The committee has now two de facto chairmen and neither will be able to name a chairman for the state convention itself. It is recognized on all sides that there has been a complete revulsion of sentiment since the state convention and that Hearst sentiment is in a hopeless minority.

OFFICIAL FLAG

Adopted For the Lewis and Clark Exposition.

Portland, Ore., May 24.—An official flag for the Lewis and Clark exposition has been adopted by the exposition. An order was given today for a large sized flag of bunting to be made and sent to the St. Louis exposition, where it will float over the Oregon building.

The design for the flag is in four colors—red, white, blue and yellow—symbolical of England, France, Russia and Spain, the countries which first sent exploring expeditions to the great northwest. The yellow also brings out the Oriental feature of the exposition. The large field is of bright yellow, crossed by red bars, with the official symbol of the exposition, Sacajawea leading Lewis and Clark on to the west, in the center.

The small field is of blue. In the center is a spray of Oregon grape, the state flower of Oregon. Around this are five stars, representing Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Wyoming and Montana, the states of old Oregon.

HEARST DROPS OUT

Of the Fight For Control In Nebraska.

Omaha, Neb., May 24.—"Hearst will make no fight in this state," says Louis J. Piatti, who has been considered the local representative of the Hearst movement.

"Will a Bryan victory be equivalent to a Hearst victory?" he was asked, and he replied:

"Not exactly; Hearst has simply dropped out here; that is all."

HUSBAND PUNISHES

Man Who Stared Rudely at His Wife.

New York, May 24.—Jerome D. Gedney, a lawyer who lives in East Orange, N. J., was annoyed Tuesday evening last when his wife told him that on her way home from the city a strange man had tried to make her acquaintance on the ferryboat. She was accompanied then by her three small children, and their maid. The man, she said, had "made eyes" at her and had tried to make her acquaintance by speaking to the children.

Mr. and Mrs. Gedney were on their way to the city, when a tall, smooth shaven man got in the same car and took a seat directly in front of them. Mrs. Gedney recognized him as the "masher."

In the ferryhouse Mr. and Mrs. Gedney were separated for a moment. The tall man, Mrs. Gedney says, took advantage of this to station himself in front of her and stare. On the ferryboat Mrs. Gedney pointed out the stranger and Mr. Gedney called him aside and gave him a few uppercuts and several kicks. Gedney was arrested, but Magistrate Moss discharged him, announcing that the fellow got only what he deserved.

TATTLING IN SCHOOLS.

Chicago Board Generally Opposed to Tale Bearing.

Chicago, May 24.—Is it right to require one student to "tell on" another in school?

Attorney General Coleman of Kansas declares it is not, notifying the educational department of his state that pupils refusing to tattle to their teachers would be sustained by the courts.

Members of the Chicago board of education are divided in their opinions. In general they are opposed to tale bearing.

Mrs. Isabelle O'Keefe takes no middle position.

"I think the attorney general of Kansas is right," she said. "He must have children of his own. I am strongly opposed to encouraging tattling in school. It makes sneaks of children. They should be placed on their honor, and the influence of their teachers should be such that the guilty ones will confess. Any other policy will result in making bad men and women. As a general thing I believe it will be found that the teachers of Chicago are opposed to tale bearing, and dislike the students who resort to it as much as do the children."

Graham H. Harris took an opposite view.

"Under certain circumstances," he said, "it is right for school children to tell what they know about certain things, to the end that discipline may be preserved.

"Pupils should be taught to obey their teachers, and if their teachers should ask them to throw light on matters that interfere with the good of the schools, the students should not be encouraged in defying their guardians."

Dr. Joseph Stolz was inclined to agree with Mr. Harris, saying:

"As a general thing I am opposed to tale bearing in school, but there might arise certain contingencies that would require a pupil to tell on another in the interest of discipline and not one in which the law has any right to interfere."

Found a Cure for Indigestion.

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for indigestion and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. I am nearly fifty-one years of age and have suffered a great deal from indigestion. I can eat almost anything I want to now. —Geo. W. Emery, Rock Mills, Ala. For sale by all druggists.

WALDORF MANAGER

Surprises Uninvited Guests In the Servants' Hall.

New York, May 24.—One of the assistant managers of the Waldorf-Astoria strolled into the servants' hall of the big hotel a few nights ago and found twenty contented looking policemen sitting at a long table. They were all busy plying their knives and forks. They were not disturbed, but ate their fill, and one by one they left the dining room.

The manager began a quiet investigation. He learned that on one night as many as thirty policemen were uninvited guests of the hotel. The managers of hotels and big restaurants are always glad to supply policemen on hotel posts with what they want to eat. This is done all over the city. The man on the post is often of assistance to restaurants and hotels in case a customer makes trouble. When their posts were changed their invitations lapsed, but they didn't notice it. They continued to eat at the Waldorf, no matter where they happened to be on post.

One man who was transferred to Central park used to make frequent trips to the Waldorf to eat. When the manager learned all these things he let it be known that the hotel would hereafter refuse to furnish meals to policemen not actually on service on hotel posts. That order will hold good hereafter, and the hotel will save some money.

PROTECT YOURSELF.

And Cure Your Constipation and Intestinal Indigestion With Rea Bros." Cascarin.

The man whose system is fortified and protected by Cascarin is as vulnerable to the diseases of the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels as was that famous Greek, Achilles, to the weapons of his Trojan enemies. Nay, even more so, for even Achilles had one weak spot, which was, at last, the cause of his death. But Cascarin's protecting armor has no weak spot. We, whose liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels are protected by Cascarin are absolutely impregnable to such ailments as constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, insomnia, pain in the back and head, dizziness and lack of vitality, and he is unassailable because the liver and kidneys, stomach and bowels, from diseases of which such afflictions come, are put in good order and kept so by the judicious use of that infallible remedy Cascarin. Its effects are wonderful in such cases, and it never fails to cure and keep cured. Cascarin is the most wonderful cure ever offered suffering humanity.

NOBLEMAN AIDS

American Boys By the Establishment of Unique Club.

Keeps Youngsters From Streets and Teaches Good Citizenship.

New York, May 24.—In three small rooms at No. 306 West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street an interesting organization is flourishing. It is one of the most remarkable clubs under an individual supervisor that have been founded for the elevation of the boys of a great city.

The club is called the American Boys' association and its founder and patron is the Marquis Carlo Catlapani di Cordova an, Italian nobleman of distinguished lineage, whose family name has for generations been closely associated with philanthropy of all kinds.

Every evening the club members congregate in the rooms and are given lessons in fencing, French and drawing, and are taught first of all the essentials of being a gentleman.

And the members are not gilded youths who desire the knowledge of French, drawing and etiquette as a part of their paid for education; they are young men of 17 and 18 years of age the marquis has found roaming about the streets.

In the words of the announcement which is handed every new member, "The American Boys' association is established for the purpose of keeping boys out of the evil influence of the street and giving to them an opportunity of refinement, pleasure and instruction.

"Fundamental principles of the association are: Purity in thoughts and acts; to love one another as brothers; to look on the sunny side of life; to abstain from the use of profane language; to discourage with example and words smoking, chewing and the use of intoxicating drink, reading of sensational literature, and avoid congregating around saloons and street corners; to hold the highest conception of womanhood, by showing it in dealing with the other sex; to be kind to animals."

Working in the midst of the boys and devoting his time and money to the uplifting of the American youth is the cultured marquis, who is himself a man with an exceedingly interesting history.

"I believe that everything may be accomplished through art," said the marquis today, "and I am trying to bring an asthetic influence into the lives of boys whose only place of amusement and diversion is the street.

"I first picked up a few boys on the street and invited them to my home. Then the number grew so large that I hired the present clubrooms, and in a short time we are to move into a bigger hall on One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street.

No membership fee is charged—not one cent does it cost a member—and any boy in New York may enjoy the advantage of the club.

The members of the association idolize their nobleman instructor and friend and the good opinion of "The marquis" is their chief desire.

The marquis' remarkable history since coming to America, as well as before, has hinged upon his long legal struggle to regain possession of estates in Spain and Cuba.

The boys in the club regard him as a great hero, and consider as unnecesary the signed letter which is hanging on the wall from the lord mayor of the marquis' native town, telling of the marquis' high position and great philanthrophy in that place.

At the club meeting, when the boys' lessons are over, the marquis interests them in practical artistic talks—art as applied to everyday life.

Every Sunday the marquis takes four boys on a trip into the country, and four boys to the theater during the week. By giving the club members these "treats," and by making their club life of fun and entertainment, he believes he can win their confidence.

The fencing bouts at the club rooms are great sport, and several of the boys have become expert fencers.

"I want any boy who cares to spend his evenings pleasantly to join the club at once," said the marquis. "I only wish I could get every boy in New York to come."

When moving why not engage covered vans. It costs no more.

CUT UP AND BURNED BODY

Mrs. Taylor Will Tell How She Slew Her Husband.

Monticello, N. Y., May 24.—The second trial of Mrs. Kate Taylor, the Sullivan county murderss, who burned her husband's body in the cooking stove after shooting him, will take place at the present term of court. The sheriff is now subpoenaing the 200 men from whom the jury will be selected.

The trial will be a longer one than the last owing to the introduction of a great mass of new evidence ruled out before, and which formed the basis for the granting of a new hearing by the court of appeals.

Mrs. Taylor will take the stand in her own defense and tell how she killed her husband on the night of Jan. 25, 1903, and cut up and burned his body. Her own daughter, who is to be the principal witness against her, will also describe the horrible scene and will show, the state hopes, that her stepfather was not killed in self-defense.

Mrs. Taylor, according to her attorneys, has a peculiar faculty for reading character and they will permit her to arbitrarily challenge the talismen without question as to why she does it. She is by long odds the most composed and outwardly unconcerned person ever tried in the county. She spends her time in jail either sewing or reading, and is a most exemplary prisoner. Public interest is the trial is greater even than before the previous one, and every one in the county awaits the presentation of the mass of new evidence which was not allowed to be presented at the first trial, and which formed the basis of the decision by the court of appeals.

This evidence probably will take an entire day in presentation. Thirty witnesses will be called by Mrs. Taylor's attorney, former District Attorney W. W. Smith and Counselor John D. Lyons, to prove the previous character of Lafayette Taylor, the husband she killed.

Mrs. Taylor will not speak of the harrowing details of what followed the death of her husband, but District Attorney Frank Anderson, prosecuting for the state, will do so, missing no chance to describe the conduct of the woman—how she chopped the dead man's head from the body, and then, during two days, destroyed the body in the kitchen range. He will again put Ida May Dekay, the daughter of the prisoner by a former marriage, on the stand to prove this fearful story. The young girl says she saw her mother at the awful work.

Taylor was killed on the night of Jan. 25, 1903. The first trial, which lasted five days, began May 25. Mrs. Taylor was found guilty of first-degree murder on May 29, and on the same day sentenced to die in Dannemora in the week of July 5, 1903, but the appeal was taken, and on Jan. 25 last the new trial was granted.

Peter Yerkins, Mrs. Taylor's uncle, who was indicted as an accessory to the murder of Lafayette Taylor, is in Monticello jail awaiting the outcome of her second trial.

Ida Dekay, the defendant's daughter, testified at the previous trial that she overheard Yerkins promise eto give Mrs. Taylor a farm and live with her if she killed her husband.

EXPRESS COMPANIES

Bring Suit to Avoid Collection of Taxes.

Detroit, May 24.—Suit was brought yesterday in the United States circuit court here by the American, United States and Pacific Express companies to prevent the state from collecting the taxes levied on the companies under the ad valorem tax law passed by the legislature of 1901. The grounds are much the same as in the suits brought by the principal railroads of the state to test the same tax law and now pending in the courts. It is alleged that the ad valorem law is unconstitutional, and that the assessments of the companies under it are unjust and excessive.

A COSTLY VENTURE

The British Loss of Blood and Treasure In Thibet.

England Determined to Punish Oligarchy For Its Offenses.

London, May 24.—The British advance into Thibet is proving to be a costly venture. In blood and treasure the loss already has been heavy, and the anti-expansionists have taken up the theme and are inveighing against the expedition as a project, the history of which is likely to be written in red letters in Indian annals.

Sir Lepel Griffin, who had been in his day one of the most distinguished of British diplomats in India, once said in a burst of confidence that if wars on the Indian borders did not naturally arise, they would have to be "made." They are required, he contended, to keep the army in fighting trim and to provide opportunity for military distinction for the chiefs of that army, with is resulting showers of titles and decorations.

A few words will explain the motive for Col. Younghusband's expedition. Thibet is nominaly a suzerainty of China, two of whose representatives called Ambans reside at Lhassa, the capital. In 1899, with the tacit consent of China, the Indian government arranged a commercial treaty with the Thibetan authorities. The terms of this compact not proving satisfactory to the people of Calcutta, another arrangement was desired, and, the grand Llama assenting, representatives of both governments met, in the spring of 1893, a nd perfected another convention.

Under the arrangement Yatung, a town in the Chumbi valley, on the Indian-Thibet frontier, was opened for trade with an official from Calcutta and a Chinese official stationed there. By the terms of the treaty all articles, except munitions of war, drugs and intoxicants, were to pass free of duty for the first five years, and the import of tea from China was prohibited for the same period. The latter clause was intended to protect the Indian market for the consumption of Indian and Ceylon tea.

Affairs moved along amicably until 1902, when rumors reached Calcutta and London of Russian intrigues with respect to Thibet. It had been known that two years previously the czar had made advances to the grand Llama, and had sent him presents as "the lord and guardian of the Buddhist faith," a title generaly conceded to the Chinese emperor. It later became known, however, that Russia and China had entered into a secret pact affecting Thibet, some of the stipulations being that in the event of any trouble arising in Thibet, Russia, "in order to protect her frontiers," should have the right to dispatch troops to that country after notifying China.

This agreement, if carried out, would have made of Thibet a Russian province, but protests by Great Britain resulted in a denial being that such a treaty was in existence. The negotiations opened the eyes of British officials, however, who at once decided to checkmate the designs of the czar.

There must be interference at once to preserve the domain of the Delai Llama within the sphere of British influence, and with this purpose in view complaints were made officially to the Lhassa authorities that Thibetan compacts with the Indian government had been grossly disregarded, that the Thibetans had violated the English frontier and that trade obligations had been systematically violated. The Indian government further demanded a conference at Khamba Jong to have matters righted at once.

The Thibetans agreed, but when the appointed time came did not send suitable envoys. In fact, the English representatives reached Khamba Jong in July of last year. This place is about 30 miles on the Thibetan side of the frontier. The mission remained there until November, with no satisfactory developments, and the Indian government then decided that an advance should be made to Gyang-Tse, which is about 150 miles from Lhassa. The mission was instructed further to occupy the Chumbi valley, a wedge of Thibetan territory projecting between Bhutan and Sikkim, as a measure of military precaution. Col. Younghusband, with large reinforcements, started for Lhassa in November and crossed the Jalep pass on Dec. 13, 1903.

Thibet is a land of towering mountains and precipitous passes. It is called the Roof of the World, and the place at which the English entered it on their punitive mission is 14,390 feet above the sea level. The perils and privations of a winter march in the region can well be imagined. It took the mission nearly five months to penetrate as far as Pharl Jong, about half way to Lhassa, and it was near hariP, at a place called Garu, that the expedition met its first determined resistance from the natives. A battle was fought March 31 last with the Thibetans, in which the latter lost nearly 200 killed.

The English then boldly continued their advance, penetrating, after tollsome marches and exasperating brushes with the enemy, to Gyang-Tse, within 150 miles of Lhassa. At Gyang-Tse which is 13,000 feet above the level of the sea, the expedition virtually has been besieged, fighting daily battles with the Thibetans, who are reported to be armed with rifles of a superior European make.

Announcement was made in the house of commons by Premier Balfour that the government was determined the mission shall reach its objective point, but not a few persons here fear that it will be exterminated before it arrives at Lhassa.

The significant matter of superior European rifles in the Thibetans' hands causes the question to revert again to Russia. Of course the belief here is that the czar's government or its emissaries furnished the Thibetans with these weapons.

Oddly enough, a side issue to the ride question also obtrudes itself at this juncture. Hints are offered sagaciously that England herself, with the prime object of keeping Russia engaged elsewhere, and so divert her attention from Thibet, by indirect diplomacy caused Japan to take the firm stand she took in the negotiations with the czar's government, resulting in the present war.

Persons who oppose this view, however, point out that Japan actually began the conflict without notifying her aley, England, of her intentions and earnestly assert that this act shatters the theory of British provocation of Japan's bellicose attitude.

The fact remains, however, that at the time—last November—when the Calcutta officials finally determined that the Thibetans should be taught a lesson the strained relations between Russia and Japan had reached the breaking point and affairs rapidly were shaping themselves for the war now in progress. It was then believed, bath in Calcutta and in London, that stern interference could be taken with regard to Thibet without any danger of Muscovite interference and developments have shown that this forecast of affairs, including as it did the presumption that Russia would become seriously involved in the far East.

MATHEWS IS VERY WILLING

To Make a Maiden With $50,000 His Third Wife.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 24.—A prepossessing young woman with nothing but $50.000 to worry her and wanting someone of experience to help her look after it is the object of advances on the part of William Mathews, aged 70 years, who wants to make her his third wife. Mathews does not know her name. He has never seen her. But he has received her photograph through application to a matrimonial agency.

It occurred to Mr. Mathews, who lives in the Crouse building in South Warren street, one day last week, that since he was obliged to provide a housekeeper he might as well marry a woman who could look after his wants, and the salary which he is paying the housekeeper for her services could then be saved. The idea grew upon him, and after a sleepless night he wrote to an agency which offered lucrative positions in its advertisements.

A prompt response was made, and a correspondence with the young woman was instituted through a third party. A photograph was sent post haste.

In a letter which accompanied the portrait a description was given. It was as follows:

"She is a maiden without kith or kin, but a lover of home and children. She speaks several languages, and is worth in cash and negotiable securities fully $50,000. Her reason for marrying is that she wants a husband who will be good and kind to her to take charge of her affairs and relieve her of many worries incidental to business cares. Besides being absolutely alone in the world, she is pretty, intelligent and refined. The inclosed picture, lately taken, will give you an idea of her general appearance."

Mr. Mathews said:

"There is nothing definite to it as yet, but I think it is a good chance for any man. I might be too old a man to think of this marriage, but, say, that $50,000 is a pretty good lump."

JUDGMENT FOR TAIL

But the Horse Is Not Included.

Montclair, N. J., May 24.—Judge Raymond by deciding that the tail of Veterinarian R. B. Smith's old horse Bob is the property of the veterinarian and that all the rest of him belongs to A. W. F. Lehman, settled a contest that was likely to have called for the skill of surgeons had the differences between the two men not been patched up.

When "Bob" got so thin that he was almost transparent, the veterinarian gave him to Lehman with the understanding that the tail was to revert. In Lehman's pasture "Bob" got so fat and sleek and fine that the veterinarian wanted him returned. Judge Raymond's court was the scene of the struggle for the horse. Smith feared that Lehman wouldn't take such good care of the horse as the preservation of the tail demanded.

Judge Raymond found that the horse belonged to Lehman as far as the tail, which part of him belonged to Smith. Smith, however, was enjoined from taking his part of the property till it could be dissociated from the rest of the body without any suffering to the animal. Lehman was ordered not to abuse the tail, impairing its beauty or its length.

TO WED MRS. SINGER.

Aged Inventor to Marry a Rich Widow.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 24.—D. M. Smyth, a noted inventor, who is 71 years old, has caused a social surprise, in which interest will be taken all over the United States, by announcing his engagement to wed Mrs. H. M. Singer, widow of the famous sewing machine inventor, whose name is a household word in Europe and America. Mrs. Singer, who is 65 years old and possessed of millions, admits the engagement, but avoids talking on the subject.

Mr. Smyth, who formerly lived for 15 years in Pasadena, left a hotel there a few days ago for the East. He took nearly a score of friends into his confidence, told them of the happiness in store for him and said that Mrs. Singer will follow him shortly to his country place in the White mountains, where the marriage will take place.

Mr. Smyth has recently invested much money in a book gathering machine, which is the combination of many of his patents. His inventions in connection with the book sewing machine revoiutionized that branch of industry.

He is accredited with the invention of the gimlet screw, for which a patent was never taken out, Mr. Smyth giving it to the world. The method of decorating shoes with fancy stitching was made possible by a needle which Mr. Smyth devised.

Mr. Smyth has four sons, and also had a daughter, who died a few years ago. The sons are living in the East. Mrs. Smyth died about seven years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Singer were next door neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Smyth in Pasadena for several years and were close friends. Shortly before his death Mr. Singer built a mansion there. Mr. Smyth's present permanent home is in Hartford, Conn.

GUESTS FLED

From Dining Room When Gigantic Snakes Appeared.

Paris, May 24.—A number of diners at a fashionable hotel in Rue de Charenton were scared almost to death by the sudden appearance of an enormous snake in the dining-room. The guests made a rapid exit through doors and windows. An alarm was turned in and no less than six big snakes were discovered in the rooms and corridors of the hotel. The police found that the reptiles had escaped from an Arabian snake charmer, who had taken a small room in the hotel.

He happened to come in while the police were making efforts to capture the snakes, and no sooner had they caught sight of him than they started wriggling toward him, winding themselves around his arms and legs.

He insisted that they were absolutely harmless but the manager of the hotel did not take the same view, and insisted that he leave the house immediately.

SERVED THEIR TIME.

Sixteen Business Men Are Released From Jail.

Holdenville, I. T., May 24.—This town has been changed from tears and sorrow to great rejoicing by the return of sixteen business men and others from the Fort Smith Jail. During the February term of court the officers raided the club rooms and drug stores and caught about 100 people with liquor in the town. The club had a store of fine wines, and the drug stores did a land office business selling whisky by the drink. Things went well until the proprietors were taken before Judge Raymond at Vinita, who thought 100 days in jail and a fine of $5 and costs in each case was light enough.

When the train left Vinita for Fort Smith with the sixteen business men in a car with all kinds of criminals it passed through Holdenville, where the men were met by their wives and children, who wept as if their hearts would break. The prisoners have now served their terms, and upon their return they were met at the depot by a brass band, and were escorted through the streets by the elite of the city. Every mark of esteem and honor possible was shown them, and they say they have repented and reformed and expect to show the world henceforth that they are a law-abiding people.

This is one of the cases where prominent people stood before the bar of justice and pleaded guilty to a crime just the same as the ordinary bootlegger does every day in court. The punishment fixed by Judge Raymond on the prominent people was the same as that fixed for the common bootlegger. Judge Raymond has convinced the Indian Territory people that all lawbreakers look alike to him, be they great or small, and he treats them all exactly alike. They who move in the best society go to jail just as quickly for a crime from Judge Raymond's court as does the common criminal.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Market Slow and Prices Show No Recuperative Power.

Bradstreet Visible Supply Report Bearish—Flax Is Unchanged.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 24.—The wheat market today was slow and lacking in life. There were declines of ½c or more in all markets. In the early part of the morning the fine weather conditions made considerable impression, and there is reason to believe that the short interest has been pretty well eliminated. Later in the morning the Bradstreet report showed a decrease in the visible supply which was far less than was looked for, causing an increase in the bearish feeling. The Liverpool market was still closed today, but London was open and closed unchanged to ½c higher. Berlin was ½c lower and Buda Pest ½c higher.

In the Duluth market the July option lost ½c, in Chicago ⅞-1c, in Minneapolis ⅞-¾c and in New York ¾c. The September option in Duluth closed unchanged and in Minneapolis a shade lower.

Car receipts at Duluth were 14, against 33 a year ago, and at Minneapolis 85, against 116 a year ago, making a total for the Northwest of 99, against 149 a year ago. Chicago received 10 against 84 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 261,515 bus, last year 319,832 bus. Shipments 249,624 bus, last year 366,889 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 713,12. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 456,000 bus in the world's visible supply. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 2,345,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat an increase of 1,500,000 bus.

In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅝c lower. July oats closed ⅜-½c lower. Primary receipts od corn were 592,530 bus, last year 566,775 bus. Shipments 439,523 bus, last year 359,211 bus. Clearances were 36,507 bus. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 1,734,000 bus in the world's visible supply of corn.

In the Duluth market trading was very light and the range very narrow, the July option holding all morning between 94c and 94¼c. It closed ¼c off at 94c. The September option was unchanged at 81⅝c. The May price is merely nominal and is no longer considered.

Cash offerings were very light and for No. 1 northern prices ranged from ¼c over July to 3c over.

Flax was very dull and July closed unchanged at $1.03⅝. September and October closed ½c to 1c lower.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard, 96c; No. 1 northern, 94½c; No. 2 northern, 92c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 95c; No. 1 northern, 96c; No. 2 northern, 85½c; on track, No. 1 northern, 94¼@95c; No. 2 northern, 91¾@94¾c. Macaroni, No. 1, 91c; No. 2, 89c; May, 94½c; July, 94c; September, 81⅝c. Flax—In store, $1.07¼, to arrive, $1.07¼; May, $1.07; July, $1.03½; September, $1.03¼; October, $1.03½. Oats, on track, 41½c; to arrive, 41½c. Rye, on track, 69c; to arrive, 69c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 14; last year, 33; oats, 2; barley, 1; flax, 35; last year 22.

Receipts: Wheat, 6217; oats, 2227; barley 1449; flax, 8220.

Shipments: Wheat, 37,1600.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Lacked Support, a Weak Undertone Prevailing.

Chicago, May 24.—In the absence of Liverpool cables the wheat market here today lacked any material support and in consequence a weak undertone prevailed. The chief depressing influence was the excellent weather conditions throughout the greater part of the country. A diminished demand for the cash article was an added bear factor. July opened unchanged to ¼c lower at ¼c to 87⅜c, and gradually declined to 86¾@87⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 109 cars against 62 cars last week and 225 cars a year ago.

The weakness became more pronounced as the session advanced. An unexpectedly small decrease in the world's available stocks was the principal bear factor of late trading, although a sharp break in May had considerable influence. On reports of an improved export demand the market reacted somewhat from the low point. July closed with a loss of 7⅛@⅞c at 86⅜@½c after the price had touched 86¾c.

Prospects of increased receipts caused an easier tone in corn. Favorable weather and weakness in wheat also tended to induce some selling. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher, at 48¼c to 48⅜c, and sold off to 47⅝c. Local receipts were 312 cars, with 48 of contract grade.

Indications of a freer country movement caused quite general selling under the influence of which prices declined still further. After selling down to 47½c, July closed at 47⅝@47¾c, a net loss of ⅞c for the day.

In sympathy with other grains, oats were a trifle easier. After opening ⅛c lower, at 36@36¼c, July declined to 35⅞c. Local receipts were 224 cars.

Buying of lard by pit traders held provisions about steady in the face of an easier hog market. July pork opened 2½c lower at $11.10, advanced to $11.15, and then reacted to $11.07½. July lard was up 2½c, opening at $6.35. After touching $6.40, the price steadied at $6.37½. Ribs were up 5c at $6.45.

Close: Wheat—May, 95¼c; July, 86⅜@⅝c; old July, 87⅝c; September, 80⅛@⅜c; old September, 81⅝@82c; December, 80¾c. Corn—May, 47½c; July, 47⅝@¾c; September, 47¾c; December, 42⅜c; May, (1905), 43¾@47⅝c. Oats—May, 36⅝c; July, 37⅜c; September, 28½@⅝c. Pork—May, $10.87½; July, $11.00; September, $11.22½. Lard—May, $6.25; July, $6.32½; September, $6.47½@6.50; January, $6.25@6.45. Ribs—May, $6.30; July, $6.30; September, $6.57½. Rye—May, 73@75c; July, 66¼c. Flax — Cash Northwestern, $1.08; Southwestern, $1.00; May, $1.02; July, $1.03. Timothy—May, $3.05; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $10.75. Barley—Cash, 35@57c. Cash: Wheat —No. 2 red, $1.05@1.10; No. 3 red, $1.04@1.08; No. 2 hard, 94@98c; No. 3 hard, 84@96c; No. 1 northern, 98c@$1.01; No. 2 northern, 92@98c; No. 3 spring, 87@95c. Oats—No. 2, 39½c; No. 3, 38½c. Corn—No. 2, 48½@49c; No. 3, 47½@48½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: Well-posted wheat men now believe that practically all of the available supply of choice milling wheat in store at the leading points of accumulation throughout the country is in the hands of less than a half-dozen of the larger commercial millers, who are counting on needing it for actual grinding before the new grain is available. This view was made plausible by the large quantity of cash wheat—2,000,000 bus.—bought at Minneapolis late in the week by one of the large millers there. It had been known for some time one of the larger millers at Minneapolis not only owned a good portion of the large stock there, but was also buying the cash grain here to ship to his mills at Buffalo. Another large Buffalo miller also owns a good stock of the cash grain, and an Albany miller a much larger supply bought for May delivery. The impression at Minneapolis at the close of the week was looked upon rather as a capitulation of the milling interest there that had entertained a bearish view of the situation and had been publicly on record on that side for some time. This interest was evidently frightened at the demand for the cash wheat and was forced to overlook the present extreme dullness in the flour trade and make provision for a working supply of the raw material to keep until such time as the new grain was in condition for grinding.

In the local speculative market the sudden prominence given the short supplies of grain for May delivery brought the shorts to think about where the wheat was coming from for July. Taking the experience of former years, it will not seem hardly safe to rely upon receipts of new winter grain to furnish a stock sufficiently burdensome to keep prices from getting up to something like the May level. Although there was scarcely any public demand to reinforce the buying by professional speculators, it was an altogether easy matter for the bulls—lacking as leaders they were in power to absorb all the wheat the bears cared to sell them and to call for more besides. By the end of the week the shorts were in full retreat and anxiously attempting to cover.

Statistics up to the middle of this month —covering all except the closing two weeks of the old crop year—show that exports of wheat from America are about 73,000,000 bushels short of the previous year. Clearances are running extremely light, but are expected to increase with the arrival of the wheat now nearly 17,000,000 bushels more wheat on ocean passage than a year ago, a large portion of this is coming from Australia in slow sailing vessels. This may help to make weak markets abroad some weeks later. Just now the American exporter wishes to see a revival of the inquiry from abroad, and the flour man is hoping that the flour trade, dull for such a long time, may soon improve.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was scattered liquidation and poor support. There are the same indications that we have before noted of belated holders who bought on theory of a corner and are waiting for some one to put up the price. There was some wheat going around on May contracts today. July was a cent lower. The pressure came from liquidation by holders and found a market with the short interest pretty well eliminated and a poor support. Bradstreets was a bearish item, as something different had been expected and caused a good deal of selling. The market is not a broad one. Outside interest is on the whole inactive and small and professional traders are doing most of the business.

Corn—The principal weakness is in the May and reflects increasing arrivals and a diminshed demand. Local feeling is rather bearish on favorable crop outlook and the prospect of an increased movement. There is supposed to be a large dormant holding of July corn for New York account but if so it is making little apparent effort to sustain prices.

Oats—It was a very quiet market with nothing doing on an important scale. Holders of May are evidently meeting the demand from shorts and the cash situation is losing strength.

Provisions—On little lighter receipts and liberal shipments of meats, the market showed some strength early but it was met by selling through brokers evidently for local packing account and the improvement was lost. It is on the whole a dull market with large scattered outside holdings and a very limited short interest. Speculative situation is not favorable one.

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—Weather in the Northwest is cloudy, rainy and very cool. Snowing in the extreme Northwest. Our market opened strong, but the demand was not very strenuous; on the other hand, offerings were very liberal, resulting in a weak and declining market all morning with a few faint rallies. At this writing the market has recovered a fraction from the low point of the early session and is holding fairly steady. There is, however, no snap to the market. The weakness in the Chicago May this morning is causing a little feeling of uneasiness amongst holders of the July. We believe this weakness is only temporary and wheat should be bought on all such breaks like today. There is not much comfort to a short seller in these figures. Don't sell wheat short whatever you do, but buy it on all the breaks.

Corn and oats—Weak and lower in sympathy with the weakness in wheat. On anq further weakness would buy both corn and oats.

Provisions—Hog products opened strong this morning, the market did not hold, however, turning weak with the grain markets losing most of yesterday's gain. The buying while not aggressive is much better than the selling and we believe it is only a question of a short time when provisions will make a substantial advance.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Market Without Feature and Dealings on a Small Scale.

Liquidation of Stocks of Secondary Importance Was Depressing.

New York, May 24.—The lower prices for Americans in London this morning caused sympathetic declines at the opening of the stock market here of ⅛ to ¾. The market was entirely without feature and dealings were on a small scale.

Bear operators put out additional lines of stocks and forced the market to a lower level. United States Steel preferred fell 1¼ and St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie, Reading, Amalgamated Copper, Brooklyn Transit and other stocks declined from ½ to 1. International Pump yielded 1 and Kansas gained 1¼ and Wabash ⅞.

The decline reached about a point in St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Erie, Hocking Valley, Brooklyn Transit, Metropolitan Street railway, Sugar and Tennessee Coal. The selling pressure relaxed but the market fell into dullness and showed no disposition to rally. The Chicago Terminal stocks slumped suddenly, the common 1½ and the preferred 2¾. Bonds were irregular at noon.

A better tone prevailed during the midday hour, but there was not enough demand to cause much improvement in prices. Chicago Terminal broke to 14 and the bonds also slumped 3 points.

Noteworthy fluctuations were limited to stocks of secondary importance. The liquidation of the week was without effect on prices which continued to sag. Wheeling & Lake Erie 1st pfd fell 3½; Realty pfd, 3; Metropolitan Street Railway, 1⅝. The Chicago Terminal stocks suffered further liquidation.

The market steadied for a short time and Realty preferred rallied 1⅞. Prices then ran off to the lowest of the day. Amalgamated Copper, which had held well, yielded over a point and the leaders generally got 1 to 1½ below last night. United States Steel preferred showed the maximum decline. The closing was heavy and very dull, near the lowest.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: In spite of profit taking just before the close the tone of the market yesteradg was strong throughout and the short interest is evidently uneasy as the supply of stocks is not forthcoming to fill their wants. The general news cotinues extremely unfavorable, showing heavy decrease in railway earnings, which are necessitating a very large reduction in the working forces, thus throwing a great many men out of work. In spite of all this, I believe that a pretty vigorous campaign against the short interest has been started and that before this movement is over they will be run in. I therefore look for this rally to continue for some days longer, and think that stocks are still a purchase for a turn.

• • •

S. R. Dickerman to W. H. Laidley & Co.: We look for further bull support in Amalgamated Copper, Steel preferred, Atchison, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul and Pennsylvania and while prices may be irregular in the early trading, they should be higher later in the day and the stocks mentioned here should be bought on any recession. The strike of the Freight handlers here is not likely to influence the stock market and it is believed that there are some substantial stop orders a little higher up which will be unchanged by further moderate advances. Crop reports continue favorable and earnings are holding up better than expected the short interest in the market is of lage proportions and the profits are to be made in the long side.

• • •

T. A. McIntyre & Co.: We do not think underlying conditions sufficiently favorable to warrant the expectation of any immediate revival of active bull speculation and should prices advance a point or two further we would regard it as an excellent opportunity for reselling, and we would then advise turning over to that side of the market, because after the short interest has been covered the buying power will be found to be very limited.

• • •

Coe Commission Co.: The stock market opened fractionally lower and has ruled weak all morning. We had a fair advance yesterday and the decline today is only a natural reaction as the market is a very narrow affair these days. On all such breaks as today the better class of railroad stock should be bought.

• • •

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is disappointing, but I have not changed my opinion and I still believe in higher prices and think that stocks are a purchase for a turn on this decline.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has more than lost yesterday's improvement. The bullish feeling in Wall street was ephemeral and the market got no support from the outside. Stocks are not high, and that statement about comprises the favorable features. All the other tendencies are rather against the market for the time being. General shrinkage in business, consequent decreased earnings of properties, very little help from foreign buying, uncertainty as to gold exports and the probable stagnation of a presidential campaign are too much for the outside investors, and they are simply letting the market alone. The tendency seems to be a dragging one.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was dull and steady at the opening. The traders did very little and the commission business was light. In the afternoon there was some selling of the active stocks and prices eased off and there was little support. The market was weak until the close and without feature. We do not look for any great change for the present.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Today's decline in the general market appeared to be simply a matter of trading. There was less new buying at the opening than had been expected. The bears sold the market down. There is almost no public interest and until there is a market, cannot develop breaks. Copper quotations were a fraction higher in London. Amalgamated Copper showed selling pressure today, but interest is not extensive. The market may the market acts it would seem stocks are a buy on reactions and a sale on rallies of a point or two.

• • •

Paine, Webber & Co.: The directors of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of $10. This is the second dividend of this amount in 1904. The total amount paid in 1903 was $35 per share.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 24.—Close: Monday on call easy, 1¼@1¾ per cent; closing bid and offered at 1¼; time loans steady; 60 and 90 days, 3 per cent; 4 months, 3½@4 per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent. Sterling exchange, firmer with actual business in banker's bills at $4.86.00@4.86.10 for demand and at $4.84.0@4.84.10 for 60 days; posted rates, $4.85½@5 and $4.87@8; commercial bills, $4.84¾. Bar silver, 65⅝; Mexican dollars, 44¼c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds easy.

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 24.—Cotton market opened weak at a decline of 6 to 17 points following poor cables and good weather which caused liquidation by yesterday's buyers. There was a moderate show of bull support and some covering at the decline, however, and soon after the call the list rallied to about 1200 for July against 1278, the low point on call, while the new crop months also showed steadiness. Trading was moderately active at first, but later the market ruled rather quieter and about steady, though it was evident that sentiment was very nervous and unsettled with the trade showing a disposition to await fresh development either as to possible manipulation or in regard to the crop movement.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 13.35; middling gulf, 13.60; sales, 558 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 12.59; June, 12.85; July, 12.99; August, 12.56; September, 11.33; October, 10.93; November, 10.84; January, 10.86.

CROP CONDITIONS

Shown By the Weather Bureau's Weekly Summary.

Washington, May 24.—The following is a summary of the weekly crop report of the weather bureau:

While the fore part of the week was much too cool in the district east of the Mississippi, as a whole, the temperature conditions were much more favorable than in the preceding week, the states of the Missouri valley and the Rocky mountain and Pacific coast districts experiencing highly satisfactory temperatures. Generally light rainfall in the central valleys and over most of the Southern states permitted the favorable progress of farm work, complaints of interruption being confined mainly to the upper Ohio valley. Complaints of wet soil, however, continue from portions of the central Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys. Drought continues in the South Atlantic and East gulf states and over the southern plateau region, and the need of rain is beginning to be felt in Central and Eastern Texas and on the North Pacific coast. Frosts, more or less damaging, occurred on the 16th and 17th in the lake region, upper Ohio valley and Middle Atlantic states.

Corn planting has advanced very favorably, except in portions of the central Mississippi and Ohio valleys, where it has been prevented by wet soil. In Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, planting is nearly completed, but in Missouri it is only half finished and much remains to be planted in the Ohio valley, where this work has been greatly delayed. In the Central and East gulf states corn is generally backward and small, but has made good growth in Texas. Cutworms have proved very destructive in Kentucky, Tennessee and portions of the Middle Atlantic states.

Winter wheat has advanced favorably in Nebraska and Kansas and generally in Missouri, but in portions of the last named state, the outlook is somewhat less promising. Improvement is reported from Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, where, however, the condition of the crop is very poor. In the Middle Atlantic states the crop has made satisfactory progress and a general improvement is also noted.

On the Pacific coast winter wheat sustained slight damage from drying winds in California, but the crop continues to do well in Oregon and Washington.

Spring wheat seeding is practically finished except in North Dakota, where it is well advanced and the early sown is coming up and stooling well. In Southern Minnesota, Montana and the North Pacific coast, rain is needed to germinate the late sown.

The general outlook for oats in the principal oat-producing states is promising. Seeding is finished except in the extreme North districts and harvest is in progress in the Southern states. In the East Gulf states, light yields are generally reported and in Missouri a crop below the average is indicated.

Cotton continues backward and has made slow growth during the last week throughout the cotton belt, low night temperatures being especially reported as detrimental.

Nearly all reports respecting the grass crop are favorable.

MARINE NEWS

MAY REFER STRIKE

To the Civic Federation to Effect a Settlement.

Such Action Likely to Be Taken By Lake Carriers.

Cleveland, May 24.—The executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association was in session here today for several hours with a full attendance to discuss the deadlock with the Masters' and Pilots' association. Reports were received from all the principal ports on the lakes showing conditions as to the tie-up. It is understood that a majority of the members of the committee favor submitting the controversy to the Civic Federation for a settlement. It is believed that a decision to this effect will be the result of today's meeting of the committee.

DISCUSSES UNION.

Railroad Man's Opinion of Masters' Organization.

It is pretty generally hoped that the efforts of the Civic Federation at Cleveland to get the vesselmen and masters together will be productive of a speedy settlement of the differences.

A railroad man in speaking of the subject this morning said he doubted very much if the general public realized the import of the contention on the part of the Lake Carriers' association that for the masters and mates to belong to the same organization was inimical to its interests.

"As it is, the master is the only representative of the owner on the vessel," said he. "If I owned a vessel worth, say $250,000, and had a cargo in her worth as much more money, I would want to be very particular about hiring a man to take charge of that craft who would be absolute master of her the minute he would step aboard, for a master's word is practically absolute. At the same time that I would have him on board to be responsible for her safety, I would be held responsible for the misconduct of the boat in any way, or any accident by which she might bring harm to her crew or make a collision with some other boat which would cost several thousand dollars.

"Now the master and his two mates belong to the same organization, and I understand that some of the wheelsmen carry mates' papers also. Say there is one wheelsman on board with mate's papers. The captain, two mates and the one wheelsman would be members of the association, and out of the four the owner who has caused liquidation by yesterday's would be only represented by one man—the master. And he is in the same organization with the others. You see in such a case the owner of the vessel, even if the captain stood with him on all

GAVE THEM A CHASE

Second Eight Turns Out to Pace the First.

Talk of Yachting Regatta to Be Held In August.

Two eights were out last night at the Duluth Boat club, a "scrub" octet of shell pullers being gotten together to give the first eight a "run for its money." The eight has been doing faithful work ever since the new shell came and everything possible has been done to keep the men together and in good rowing condition.

The line of the eight has been changed in one instance, H. H. Peyton, who was fifth, having changed places with A. W. Puck, who was third. The line as it is now is as follows:

One, S. A. McPhail; two, Elmer Whyte; three, H. H. Peyton; four, W. H. L'Estrange; five, A. W. Puck; six, B. M. Peyton; seven, G. C. Colquhoun; stroke, George Gibson.

The boys are anxious for the new sweeps to arrive, and they are expected almost any time now. Sweeps cannot be had ready made, as they frequently warp and lose their shape when not in use. Last year some were obtained that had been made for some time and some of them were out of shape when they got here and had to be returned to the maker.

Reports that Madison is not in as good shape as it might be are discredited by old timers, who say that such reports are always thrown out as blinders by the college chaps. It is said one of the tricks of the game is to make the opposition bank on a weak contestant and get fooled. In such cases the scheme is said to be for those that are pretending to be poorly prepared for the contest to flock together, talk glum, look anaemic, and give out a general impression of being forlorn, and then go into the race and pull like steam engines.

The five yachts which are being built on special designs for members of the yacht club are expected to be out of the shop soon. It is said the makers have promised one for Thursday and one for Friday, and if some of them are turned out this week it would give the owners an opportunity to get out and give a trial wetting to the boats on Decoration day. The sails are understood to have arrived and the lead is being put in, so that the boats have only a short time from now until they are in use, barring accidents. One of the particular parts to be adjusted is the sailing gear, which has to be fitted to a nicety.

The Yacht club will have its first turnout June 6, which will be while the boat club eight is at Madison. There is expected at this time to be a parade, and maybe some contests.

Talk of a general regatta for some time in August continues. It is suggested that there be contests of all kinds, yachting, sculling, rowing and canoeing. While there are said to be but few people in this city who make a specialty of canoeing, there seems to be no doubt that enough people could be interested in such an event to make it highly interesting, and if some of the canoeists from Sault Ste. Marie could be persuaded to come for the occasion, the interest would be added to by their presence.

Such a regatta, it is claimed, could be run off in a single day, if everyone of the contestants was strictly up to the time mark. A preliminary might be gone through with the day before to facilitate making a schedule. If a good southwest wind could be arranged for on the day of the trials it would enhance thee vent generally.

Shells need pretty steady water to work in, as they do not meet swells readily, owing to lying so low in the water. A slight disturbance in the surface of the water will put them "awash" and spoil the work.

If the right kind of wind were blowing on the day of the regatta it could be held off Lakeside, which would give a freer course for everybody, and a large boat could be taken out to carry any of the public who desired to attend well enough to pay for the privilege.

ROBBERS WELL POSTED.

Mrs. Kiser Certain Jewels Will Be Returned.

Chicago, May 24.—Mrs. John W. Kiser, robbed of $20,000 worth of rare gems and jewelry, has dreamed that a man, well dressed, handsome, evidently a gentleman, came to her and returned the jewels. She is certain that the stolen gems will be returned, and she sits in her luxurious home expecting every moment that the jewelry will come back.

The dream, according to Mrs. Kiser, was so vivid that it cannot be wrong and, every time the door bell rings and the new butler announces a caller, she expects the realization of the dream.

The police do not believe in dreams. They declare that the robbery—the greatest diamond mystery Chicago has known since the famous Potter brooch case—was the result of a deep-laid plot.

Every development in the case, every fact turned up by the scores of detectives working to solve the mystery, indicates that there were three or more persons in the plot.

They knew that the chiffoneer key in Mrs. Kiser's boudoir fitted her jewel box; which she did not know. They knew that the family sat down at dinner at 7 p. m., and they knew that during the dinner hour only Mrs. Kiser's maid, Florence, was on the second floor.

Friday evening, while the family was at dinner, the telephone bell rang, Florence leaving her place on the second floor, answered the 'phone. A man asked for the coachman. The maid called for the coachman. He was not there. She returned to the house and informed the man that the coachman was out. He refused to give any name and rang off.

PROTESTANT METHODISTS

Consider Plan of Union to Embrace Several Denominations.

Washington, May 24.—The Methodist Protestant conference today officially received the plan of union to embrace the Congregational, the United Brethren and the Methodist Protestant denominations.

The presentation was made by the Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, of Columbus, Ohio, a Congregationalist and chairman of the joint committee, which formulated the plan. It was received with hearty enthusiasm by the conference, as was the endorsement by the Rev. Dr. William Weekley, of Dayton, Ohio, secretary of the committee, and a minister in the United Brethren church.

The esential feature of the plan provides for a general council, composed of representatives from each denomination on the basis of one for each 5000 members. The plan, although formulated last year, has not been acted on by either of the churches as a whole. For this reason the action of the conference, it was pointed out, was all important as an indication of popularity of the movement.

Both Dr. Gladden and Dr. Weekley were most optimistic of success. The frequent general applause of the expressions of this fact, together with the approval given President Tagg of the conference, in announcing his sincere conviction in favor of union, indicate favorable action.

At the conclusion of the addresses, the conference took a recess for an impromptu reception to the visiting committeemen. The plan will be referred to a committee on church union, to be announced by President Tagg today.

GILLESPIE DENIES

In Positive Language That He Killed His Sister.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 24.—In the the Gilespie murder trial James Gillespie was again on the stand today and was asked by his attorney these direct questions:

"Did you fire the shot that killed your sister, Elizabeth?"

"I did not."

"Have you any knowledge of who did fire the shot?"

"I have not."

He said further in reply to questions that he did not know that the Literary club was to have a meeting at his mother's house that night and that he was not out of the house and could not see the lights in his mother's house.

This ended the direct testimony.

On cross-examination the attorney used the report of the grand jury and questioned him closely on the matter. His responses were indifferent, often saying he did not remember what he said to the grand jury.

MOODY HAS THE HIVES.

Washington, May 24.—Secretary Moody was able to take a short drive today. The exact nature of his malady is not disclosed, but it is understood to be either the hives or a mild type of measles contracted during his recent cruise in Cuban waters. He is expected to be able to resume his duties in a few days.

ODELL SAILS FOR EUROPE.

New York, May 24.—Governor Odell sailed for Europe today. The governor said he was taking the trip for rest and will return on the same vessel, the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, so that he would be in Europe but five days.

NOLDEN IS HERO

Fans Fifteen Men In the Morning Game at Winnipeg.

Superior Defeats Champions, Scoring Ten To Canadians' Six.

Winnipeg, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Noldin, the pitcher loaned by Duluth to Superior, administered the first defeat of the season to Winnipeg this morning, and gave the "Champs" their first defeat.

He was invincible up to the ninth inning, and his benders kept the 'Peggers guessing. He established the record for the Northern league in the line of strikeouts, fanning fifteen men.

Today is a national holiday in Canada, and an enormous crowd of fans turned out to see the morning contest.

The visitors started after Bemis in the early stages of the game and by the end of the fourth inning had piled up a total of seven runs. During the remaining five innings Bemis showed better form, but the Superior men hit him when the hits were needed and three more runs were scored.

Noldin had the home batters smiting the air until the ninth inning. Fifteen men succumbed to his curves, and he assisted in retiring a couple more at first base. In the ninth, however, he let up, the 'Peggers by means of a batting rally and a couple of untimely errors by the visitors, tallied four runs. There they stopped, however, and the final score was 10 to 6 in favor of the visitors.

The pitching of the big southpaw was the best seen in Winnipeg this year. While the home team made twelve hits off his delivery, most of them come in the last inning when they were of little use, and during the remainder of the game the "Champs" could not come within hailing distance of his curves.

The two teams are playing a second game this afternoon.

The defeat of Winnipeg this morning leaves Duluth tied with Winnipeg for first place, for a time at least. Both teams have won three games and lost one, and the games at Crookston and Winnipeg this afternoon were awaited with interest.

The score by innings this morning was as follows:

	R.	H.
Superior	1 5 0 1 0 1 0 2 x	10	15
Winnipeg	0 2 0 0 0 0 0 0 4	6	12

DOES NOT PAY ALIMONY.

Richard Nixon Must Answer Contempt Charge.

Richard E. Nixon, a local dentist, has been ordered by Judge Dibell to appear at the special term of court, next Saturday, and show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court and punished for disobeying the court's order to pay his divorced wife, Minnie Nixon, a $20 per month alimony.

The order was issued on the affidavit of Minnie Nixon, who claims she was granted an absolute decree of divorce in September, 1901, together with the custody of her boy and alimony in the amount of $20 per month so long as she retained custody of the child and remained unmarried.

She alleges that Nixon has not paid any alimony since December, 1902, and that up to April 10, 1904, he owed her $320, which he has refused to pay.

She alleges that he has a lucrative practice here in Duluth and is well able to pay the amount of the alimony. She says the alimony is her sole means of support, except for the charity of relatives.

Eby G. Gridley is attorney for Mrs. Nixon.

HURT IN RUNAWAY.

Grand Lake Farmer and Nephew Involved In One.

"That is a pretty way to serve a fellow when he comes to town," remarked John Peterson, a well known farmer of Grand Lake, yesterday noon, when he picked himself up out of the gutter, rubbed an injured arm and ruefully surveyed the wreck of his farm wagon, which had just been run over by the Scandinavian Bakery team at the corner of Twelfth avenue West and Michigan street.

His nephew, who is visiting him from St. Paul, was rendered unconscious by the accident and was taken to St. Mary's hospital for treatment.

Mr. Peterson was driving into the city shortly after 1 o'clock when the team belonging to the bakery company having become uncontrollable by the driver, dashed directly against and over the wagon and its contents. The runaway horses are said to have practically cleared the wagon, but the bakery rig came against it with a crash and both vehicles were badly demolished, the occupants being thrown clear to the curb.

Mr. Peterson was formerly a tailor in Duluth.

APPOINTED DEAD MAN.

Queer Blunder Made By British Admiralty.

New York, May 24.—The admiralty has made the extraordinary blunder of appointing a dead man to an honorary post at Liverpool, says a Herald dispatch from London.

The mistake was brought to light through an announcement in the Gazette that the admiralty had appointed Dr. John Charles Ryle, bishop of Liverpool, as honorary chaplain in the Mersey brigade of royal naval volunteer reserves. Dr. Ryle, however, died June 10, 1900.

The present bishop of Liverpool is Dr. Chavess.

NEW NATIONAL BANK.

Washington, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The application of C. W. Teutbner, P. M. Joyce, Ole Scar, Walter Frederick and Samuel Beatty to organize the First National bank, of Kiester, Minn., with a capital of $25,000, has been approved by the comptroller of the currency.

THE INDIAN MEETING.

The Anniversary of Her Outbreak Against England.

The Indian empire as it exists today is one of the wonders of the world, says the Kansas City Times. A vast peninsula, as large as Europe, excluding Russia, with a population of 250,000,000 souls, isruled by fewer than 1500 alien civilians and a slender garrison of 75,000 Englishmen.

Everything runs smoothly enough. The millions of native inhabitants apparently accept British peace. Were it not for the series of events beginning one May Sunday morning, forty-seven years ago, it might be supposed that the empire might go on indefinitely, India taking without a murmur the sort of government doled out by the distant administrators in London.

The mutiny remains the great disturbing fact in the history of England in India. The history of that rebellion —for it was much more than a mutiny —must make the duration of British rule an uncertain problem.

In 1857 England was preparing to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the battle of Plassey in which Clive was accounted to have won the empire.

Early in the year there were signs of discontent in certain of the native regiments and several were disbanded. The ostensible grievance was that the cartridges of the new Enfield rifles were made up from paper greased in the fat of the cow and of the pig.

To the Hindu the cow was sacred. To the Mohammedan the swine was abhorrent. Both alike protested against the new cartridge, although they were assured that it had not been defiled with lard and that no sacred cow had been slaughtered in its manufacture.

In April several Bengalese cavalry regiments refused to use the cartridges. Eighty members were tried by courtmartial for disobedience and sentenced to imprisonment for ten years. On May 9 they were sent to jail. The next day the mutiny began.

In the Sixteenth century a descendant of the conquering Timur, at the head of a Mongol army, invaded India and established himself at Delhi as the Great Mogul. But in succeeding generations the Mogul empire went to pieces and in 1857 the nominal occupant of the throne was a weak old man who had yielded all his authority to the British.

Delhi is in North Central India, about a thousand miles northwest of Calcutta. A straight line drawn across India from Bombay on the west coast to Calcutta on the east might serve as the base of a triangle with two equal sides whose apex would rest at Delhi. Thirty-eight miles northeast of Delhi was the important military station of Meerut, and it was here that the mutiny burst out.

The native troops fired on their officers, killed a colonel and others, rescued their imprisoned comrades and then fled to the old capital of the Indian empire. The reigning descendant of Timur, a man of 80, they proclaimed emperor of India and straightway the mutiny became a national rebellion.

There were at that time 300,000 native soldiers and 43,000 British within the empire. About a third of the native troops and half of the British were in the districts affected by the revolt.

The mutiny spread rapidly. On May 30, the English in the important city of Lucknow were besieged in the grounds of the British Resident. Although they were hard pressed and their leader, Sir Henry Lawrence, was killed, they held out until relief came with Havelock on September 25.

Meanwhile came the tragedy of Cawnpore. This was a city containing about a thousand Europeans, fifty miles from Lucknow. When the mutiny broke out the Europeans took refuge in an old military hospital with mud walls. The little garrison, after a brave resistance against an overpowering force, surrendered under an agreement of safe conduct to Allahabad.

The mutineers, under the unspeakable Nana Sahib, broke their word and massacred most of the prisoners as they were embarking. The surviving women and children were afterward butchered and their bodies thrown into a well.

In September Delhi was captured and by the next June no city of importance remained in the possession of the mutineers. Desultory fighting continued, however, for two years longer.

The story of the greased cartridges as has been said, was a mere excuse. The mutiny was a revolt of the brown men against the white; of the subject against his ruler.

The military prestige of England had hurt by the failures of the Crimean war. It was known throughtout the native army that terrible blunders had been made in the Crimea and that a fresh war had broken out in China. The time was regarded as auspicious for getting rid of the hatred foreigner.

The intercepted letters of leaders of the revolt said not a word of the greased cartridges. They spoke only of the small number of English. The white grains, they said, were few and the black grains many. If they shook the sieve the white grains might disappear.

The head and front of the uprising were the Sepoys, the favored soldiers of the empire. They had been serving the East India company a hundred years. Their pay was just double what they could have earned in civil life and they were under lax discipline. In relation to their officers they stood as children to indulgent parents. Yet they turned against the English with implacable fury.

The empire of Delhi had been a Mahammedan power. But Hindus and Mohammedans alike acknowledged allegiance to the Great Mogul when he was proclaimed emperor in 1857. "There was not an Indian on the vast continent," says Mr. Meredith Townsend, "who did not consider the Sepoys Nationalists, and did not, even if he dreaded their success, feel proud of their new victories."

The British did secure aid, it is true, from the Sikhs and other natives. But it is a question whether this was not given out of hatred to the Sepoys as hereditary foes, rather than out of friendship to the English.

The questions inevitably suggested by the story of the mutiny are whether the same thing is likely to happen again; whether, if India was so discontented at the end of a century of British rule it is likely to be fully reconciled fifty years later.

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

According to the New York Telegraph the argument started when one of the men at the table said to the man at his side: "I wish you'd take your foot from the round of my chair. It always brings me bad luck."

The offender sneered and said he didn't believe there was anything in that superstitition; and added: "I lost a good pot once to a man who had a burned match stacked up against his cigar on the edge of the table. That's the only one of those notions I take any stock in."

"Well, for my part," said the third man, "I'm not what you might call superstitious, but I've seen more than one losing streak come from a guy's picking up chips that had been knocked off the table. I'd quit the game before I'd pick up a chip."

Up to this time the fourth man had said nothing. He was the oldest and best-dressed of them all. He was known as a prosperous "gam." No one could remember ever having seen him "on his uppers." Now he bit off the end of a fresh cigar, lighted it, and looked around the table with a quiet smile.

"I was as full of those ideas," he said, "as a 'yaller purp' is of fleas, but that was a long time ago. I don't see why a man shouldn't be as sensible in a game of poker as in a horse trade, or any other business transaction. I had an experience once that knocked every grain of superstition out of me. In fact, I may say it was that very superstition about not picking up chips that have been knocked off the table that put me on Easy street.

"I was younger then than I am now. I had been following the races and playing poker, faro, roulette, craps and any other game that offered action for my money. And I was all in. Honestly, I was down and out. I didn't have a cent in the world. I was hungry and without a place to sleep.

"From force of habit I dropped into a little poker place I knew of and watched the game. One of the players with his elbow accidentally knocked three blue chips to the floor. Nobody would pick them up.

"I saw my chance. 'Gentlemen,' I said, 'I'm not afraid to pick up those chips. Can I have 'em and sit in?'

"'Certainly,' they said.

"I got three trays and stayed, of course. I caught a pair of duces. I didn't have much to lose—three blue chips—and a whole lot to gain, so I bet my pile. Anyway, I'll stay till the cows come home on a full house.

"The others, having good hands and big staks, carried the game beyond my reach, but, of course, the betting had to be on the side. Well, I won. We played all that night, and at daylight I went to bed in the swellest hotel in town with over $200 in my jeens. And I haven't been broke from that day to this."

A novel exhibit at the St. Louis fair that will feature prominently in the aquatic line will be that of a number of freak specimens of fish; papier mache models of which have been prepared by a careful ichthyological taxidermist, says the Philadelphia Record. The originals of these may be seen at the New York aquarium. Owing to the very delicate nature of some of these fish it was thought inadvisable to transport them to the fair to exhibit. One of the most peculiar of these curiosities to be reproduced is the "silver hatchet," a specimen scarcely larger than a perch, less than a third of an inch in thickness, and nearly five inches deep from top to bottom. It is covered with a silvery pigment and its sides are fluted. Another remarkable creature reproduced is the "cryptopsaras;" a self-illuminating fish. Protruding from the top of the head, between the eyes, is a curious rod-like organ over a foot in length and dropping over the back. At the end of this rod is an egg-shaped bulb. Within about five inches of the tail is a second rod, at the tip of which is another bulb. These two lamp-like bulbs contain a phosphorescent matter, which enables the fish to make its own light.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

GEN. KUROPATKIN CUTS LAND COMMUNICATION BETWEEN GENERALS KUROKI AND OKU

Russian Commander Is Preparing For an Important Move.

Japanese Troops Again Resume Their Forward Movement.

Communication Between St. Petersburg and Newchwang Cut.

Paris, May 25.—5:45 p. m.—A dispatch to the Temps from St. Petersburg says Gen. Kuropatkin has cut the land communication between the armies of Generals Kuroki and Oku.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—6:10 p. m.—Telegraphic communication with Newchwang is interrupted and private messages for points south of Liao Yang are refused here at the telegraph office. The nature of the interruption with Newchwang is not known, but the cause for refusing messages south of Liao Yang is the complete absorption of the lines for military purposes.

Mukden, May 25.—According to the latest information obtainable, the Japanese have resumed their forward movement. Several columns are advancing, though the bulk of the invading army is still near Feng Wang Cheng.

There are persistent reports of a bloody battle having taken place between the Japanese army, advancing along the railroad from Pulantien, and the Russians, near Kin Chou, Liao Tung peninsula, resulting in the defeat of the Japanese with great loss.

Small parties of Japanese scouts have been seen northeast of Mukden, at a considerable distance, but no important body of the enemy has been located in this vicinity.

Liao Yang, May 25.—There are further rumors of heavy fighting at the advanced positions of Gen. Fock's forces on the Liao Tung peninsula, but the correspondent of the Associated Press has been unable to officially confirm the reports.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—There are indications that Gen. Kuropatkin is preparing to make a very important move against the enemy. One of the reasons for this belief is the sudden restrictions upon the war correspondents at the front. The prevailing belief here is that Gen. Kuroki's army is in difficulties.

CONTINUED SKIRMISHING

Between Russian Cavalry and the Japanese Troops.

Liao Yang, May 25.—There is continual skirmishing between the Russian cavalry and the Japanese. Cossacks are pressing the Japanese in the hills and by-roads, generally driving them back.

The general plan of the Japanese has not been divulged. They are apparently making time, awaiting the arrival of reserves from Korea, who have been delayed owing to the impassibility of the roads.

The Japanese are sending all invalids in the direction of the Yalu, to a central hospital.

The Chinese report the destruction of another Japanese battleship, off Port Arthur, but the report is unconfirmed and is not credited.

Several Japanese, who landed from junks near Port Arthur and started toward the town with the intention of dynamiting the docks, were captured and shot.

The Russian wounded are recovering rapidly. Several wounded soldiers deserted from the hospital and stole back to the front. A typhoon is raging off the coast.

STEADILY LANDING.

Some Troops Are Put Ashore Every Day.

Che Foo, May 25.—Chinese junks arriving from Taku Shan, a port lying southwest of Antung, report the landing of 6000 Japanese troops at Taku Shan on the 21st inst. Another junk from Pitsewo reports the Japanese landing a small number of troops there every day and building temporary barracks on Elliott island, where a hundred ships, including men of war and transports, have made a rendezvous.

Only small skirmishes are reported along the western shore of the Liao Tung peninsula, up to the 22nd inst.

Heavy firing was heard in the direction of Port Arthur yesterday, indicating that a land attack had commenced as the Japanese fleet is not to be seen off Port Arthur.

Dalny refugees say that General Stoessel has taken all the cash from the Port Arthur and Dalny banks, so that the depositors are unable to cash checks.

There are two Taku Shans on the Liao Tung peninsula. One lies about forty miles southwest of Antung and the other is situated midway between Pitsewo and Talien Wan bay. The former is the point at which the Japanese have been landing their troops and is evidently the one referred to above.

QUIET AT NEWCHWANG.

Fair Force of Russians Now In the City.

Newchwang, May 25.—A fair force is now patrolling the city with a field battery at the forts. It is unusually quiet here, with no exciting rumors of any nature. An efficient staff of native runners is unable to obtain any inkling of the Japanese movements and the Russians positively will not discuss their plans, since it is evident that Mukden is apt to change them at any moment. Commercial activity has been renewed in this section of the peninsula and inland travel proceeds unhampered by any restrictions.

Many vessels are arriving and departing for Shanghai, Hong Kong and other southern ports with bean cake and other products, the Russians exercising no supervision over inward or outward cargoes. Heavy freighting is going on over the Tien Tsin railroad.

NEW QUESTIONS

As to Mine Field Limit May Be Raised.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—The British and American press reports of possible protests against the laying of mines in the waters of the Liao Tung peninsula, because of the danger to international commerce, evokes much interest here, and it is a subject of general remark that there was no talk of protests while the Russian ships were being blown up, it only beginning after the Japanese ships met with disaster.

The government circles are inclined to think the reports of possible protests by the powers are confined to the press. Neither the British nor the American embassadies have received instructions on the subject. The indications are that if the question of laying mines beyond the three-mile limit becomes the subject of a formal protest, it will raise a new question of international law, growing out of the increased range of modern guns. The three-mile limit was established in the days when that distance represented the maximum range, but if ships can now lie eight or ten miles away and yet reach the coast with their projectiles, it is argued that the defenders have a perfect right to take such military measures as they choose within the range of the enemy's guns.

It is now definitely known that the Russian protected cruiser Bogatyr went on the rocks a fortnight ago at a place near Cape Gamova, where one of Admiral Seymour's ships went ashore several years ago.

OPENING OF PORTS

Had Been Under Consideration For Some Time.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—The Associated Press is informed on high governmental authority that the opening of all the ports of the Siberian littoral, although precipitated by the necessities of war, had been under consideration for months and represents a distinct policy inaugurated by Russia, looking to the development of Eastern Siberia. The effect of closing the former free port of Vladivostok had not proved a success and led to the consideration of the advisability of reopening it. Action in the matter was hastened by Vicecroy Alexieff, who telegraphed to the emperor advising the immediate adoption of the new policy.

The Associated Press is further informed that Russia has no intention of rescinding it upon the conclusion of the war, but that the ports will remain open to foreign commerce for an indefinite period, and in the event of a successful termination, the provisions of the decree will probably be extended to the territory covered by the Russian lease of the Liao Tung peninsula. Goods entering without duty can be shipped westward so far as Baikal, where the European Russian tariff will be imposed.

While the opening of Eastern Siberia to foreign trade will be of great advantage to the United States and Great Britain, the emperor's advisers were moved to adopt the policy strictly on account of its economic advantages in the development of Russia's far Eastern possessions.

THE BLACK SEA FLEET.

New York, May 25.—Intelligence has been received from St. Petersburg, according to a Times dispatch from Vienna, that fourteen vessels of the Black Sea fleet, are being mobilized and placed in readiness for service.

CAPTURE JAP SUPPLIES.

London, May 25.—The correspondent of the Morning Post at Mukden, under date of May 24, says it is reported there that Gen. Rennekamff's Cossacks captured the Japanese transport columns, thus leaving the Japanese army without supplies in a difficult country.

JAP CRUISERS IN SIGHT.

Che Foo, May 25.—Four Japanese cruisers and a fleet of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers passed midway between Port Arthur and the Miao Tao islands, at 4 o'clock this morning, but no sounds of firing have yet been heard. The Russians have again removed their guns and troops to forts at Newchwang.

EVACUATE FENG WANG CHENG.

Liao Yang, May 25.—It is reported from a Chinese source that the Japanees have evacuated Feng Wang Cheng and are occupying villages in the surrounding territory. There is no explanation of this move, but it is thought that it may be connected with the prevailing cholera epidemic.

HAIR TURNS GRAY

Strain Proves Severe on Defendant In Gillespie Case.

Evidence All In and Attorneys Are Making Arguments.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 25.—Long before Harry McMullen began his argument in the Gillespie murder case today the court room was packed almost to suffocation, while crowds stood around the building hoping to gain entrance or to hear the speeches through the open doors and windows. Although the weather is sultry, the court will occupy the courtroom and not go to the lawn as has been suggested. The continuous excitement is beginning to tell on the four defendants. Myron Barbour's friends say his hair is rapidly turning gray. James Gillespie is pale from his long confinement. Mrs. Barbour and Mrs. Seward enter the final ordeal of their trial with considerable bravery.

A RECEIVER IS REFUSED

Trenton, N. J., May 25.—Vice Chancellor Stevenson today filed an opinion, denying the application of John H. Pierce and others for the appointment of a receiver for the Old Dominion Copper, Mining & Smelting company. The suit grew out of the dispute in the management of the company with respect to the property of the United Globe mines of Arizona, which were absorbed by the Old Dominion company. Some of the original stockholders of the Globe company claimed that the Old Dominion was being mismanaged and that the property of the Globe company was thereby being depreciated in value.

The order of the vice chancellor not only dismisses the application for the appointment of a receiver, but also vacates the temporary restraining order made at the time the suit was instituted.

KOREAN MINISTER

At the Russian Capital Has Arrived at Berlin.

Berlin, May 25.—The Korean minister to Russia, Chin Pom Yi, who arrived in Berlin today from St. Petersburg, occupies an apartment in the Japanese legation. Surprise was expressed at the legation that the minister had delayed his departure so long, since Korea and Japan are allies. Contrary to the statement given to the press by the secretary of the Korean legation at St. Petersburg, it is not believed here that the minister will return to the Russian capital.

EVIDENCE ALL IN IN M'DONALD CASE.

Bedford, Ind., May 25.—The state closed its rebuttal evidence in the McDonald murder trial today, the last witnesses being called to contradict evidence given by McDonald's wife and others as to the details of his movements the night of the murder. There has been much comment on account of the failure of McDonald's lawyers to put him on the stand. The court said today he would not limit the arguments. The case will probably go to the jury tomorrow afternoon.

MEN ARE NEEDED.

Good Chance to Get Into Fire Department.

Four vacancies exist on the fire department at his time, which gives a good chance for able bodied men who can qualify for the places. The furloughs of the fire department began last month and the men are taking their vacations in rotation. The men are entitled to a week each, but often get more, some of them getting leave for four weeks.

However, they are only permitted to draw pay for one week of absence and the rest of the time must be taken by them at their own expense. Chief Black believes that with the number of good men thrown out of work by the present tie-up on the lakes there will be little trouble in filling the four vacancies above referred to. Firemen's regular duties are not burdensome and lots of men who would otherwise try for places on the fire force, it is said, are prevented from doing so by the mistaken belief that the civil service examination is a great trial.

HURTS PROCTORKNOTT.

Strike on Lakes Very Damaging to That Town.

Proctorknott is perhaps feeling the effects of the masters 'and pilots' strike more than any other single section of the city. Because there is no ore being hauled to the local docks a great many men in the Proctor railroad shops have been laid off, there being no work for them to do. Usually the ore cars and other rolling stock in need of repair keep a small army of men busy at the shops. Last year at this time there were about 150 men thus employed, while now there are only thirty or thirty-five at work. Thirteen men were laid off at the shops last night because of lack of work.

CONTRACTS SHOWN

Under Which Railroads and Coal Companies Fixed Prices.

President Truesdale Testifies Before Interstate Commission.

New York, May 25.—Contracts between the Guaranty Trust company of New York, the Temple Iron company and the six railroads included in the inquiry which are alleged to secure the Guaranty company as trustees against loss by binding the railroads on a respective percentage based on their tonnage of coal carried to the tidewater from the Temple Iron company's collieries, were produced by E. C. Hebbard, secretary of the Guaranty company, today, when the Interstate Commerce commission continued its inquiry into the methods of the coal carrying roads. These contracts were produced by direction of the commission following the examination of President Baer of the Reading company yesterday.

The first witness called today was President Truesdale of the Lackawanna system, who had been directed by the United States supreme court to answer certain questions propounded to himat a previous session last September. Mr. Truesdale said the price of Lackawanna coal at tide water was fixed by the officers of the company under his general direction. There was no agreement as to price circulars and the fact that prices were uniform, he explained by saying that one company would follow the lead of another as a question of policy.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 25.—Thomas W. Brennan and Daniel Tautis, farmers, have been killed by lightning, twenty-five miles east of here. The two were killed by a single bolt.

WOMEN'S CLUBS END CONVENTION

St. Louis, May 25—With the selection of the principal officers practically settled before the balloting began, and without any questions of unusual interest having been presented before the convention, the seventh biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which convened in the Odeon May 17, ended today after one of the most harmonious conventions in the history of the organization.

The fact that there was no opposition to the candidacy of those seeking the most important offices in the federation tended to prevent the usual interest and excitement incident upon the closing sessions of a large convention.

Mrs. Dimies T. S. Denison, president, who will retire with the closing of this convention, called the last session to order.

After considerable debate and the voting down of several proposed plans of assessment, it was decided to reapportion the annual dues, as follows:

The annual dues of clubs of fewer than twenty-five members shall be $2.50; of clubs of twenty-five or more members the dues shall be 10 cents per capita.

N. D. FARMER-BARON FOUND DEAD

Minneapolis, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.—Guido Von Steinwehr, 43 years of age and well known in this city as a German noble and North Dakota farmer, was found dead in his room in the Rogers hotel. Deputy Coroner Irvine performed an autopsy and found death was due to natural causes.

The dead man had been engaged in farming, near Hillsboro, N. D., with his brother William, and was well-to-do. He was a German baron and came of a long line of illustrious ancestors. His grandfather was a lieutenant general in the German army and his uncle, Admiral Count Von Steinwehr, is on the personal staff of the kaiser.

He was married and had a daughter, who is now about 8 years old. About three years ago his wife obtained a divorce.

PRESIDENT RETURNS FROM GROTON

Washington, May 25.—President Roosevelt arrived here at 10:35 o'clock this morning over the Pennsylvania railroad from Groton, Mass., where yesterday he participated in the prize day exercises of the school at which two of his children are students.

The president's car, with baggage car attached, traveled as a special train from Groton. Owing to the early hour of the latter part of the trip, and the fact that few people knew the time schedule of the train, there were no demonstrations along the line. Assistant Secretary Barnes was at the depot to meet the president, and a large number of detectives and policemen were present, while there was a small crowd back of the gates. Miss Roosevelt greeted the president at the train, and walked down the aisle of the train shed with him. She bade her father goodbye, however, as she, accompanied by Mrs. Waters, of this city, left at 10:50 over the Pennsylvania railroad for St. Louis. The president, in accordance with his invariable custom, stepped to the side of the engine cab and, grasping the hands of the engineer and fireman, told them he was glad to see them. The president then drove to the White House.

NEED WARM WEATHER

Boat Club Eight Anxious to Have Summer Kind.

Interest in aquatic affairs seems to be increasing all over the country, and this is making the makers of boats and oars, as well as other equipment in this line, very busy, and accounts for the delay to the new sweeps ordered for the eight who will represent the Duluth boat club at Madison.

So far the weather has been pretty cool for practice and Capt. Mahoney hopes there will be good summer weather very soon as it is needed for the best effects in sports. It not only gives more activity to the men and makes them feel more like working, but takes off the surplus flesh.

He calls attention to the fact that the best records in all sporting events are made in hot weather and that horse races, ball games and nearly all other such trials show better results in midsummer than at any other time.

The present weight of the eight now in practice is about 173¾ pounds per man and it is believed that they will row at about 170 pounds each, as they can probably get rid of pretty nearly four pounds each by the time of the contest two weeks from tomorrow.

Friends of the team say that an average of 170 pounds will compare favorably with the general run of university eights, and that at least so far as weight is concerned the Duluth representation will not be at a disadvantage. In training the men the effort is made to grade the weights so as to put the lighter men forward and thus incline the boat to point above the water, as she rides better and faster by this means.

SUITS FOR RECRUITS.

Local Station Has One Hundred Coming.

Fifty more suits for recruits have been ordered by the local recruiting station since last report, making 100 to come. The demand for equipment for men has never been so heavy as this spring, as enlistments have been numerous. When the 100 suits are in stock here it will be the largest number which has been carried in the Duluth office. Twenty-three men have enlisted in Duluth this month and fifty-three at Ashland.

A general order from Washington under date of May 11 has been received here directing the local office to send all communications to the military secretary, Maj. Gen. Fred C. Ainsworth, instead of to Adjt. Gen. Henry C. Corbin. Gen. Corbin is now commanding the Atlantic division and the military secretary has been appointed to receive and sent out all mail appertaining to the military business of the government.

Liao Yang, May 25.—The father, a corps commander, of the Japanese officer who yesterday committed suicide by disemboweling himself, has given orders to the men of his corps to capture a Russian officer alive.

THE CONSERVATIVES PREVAIL IN THE CONVENTION OF THE DEMOCRATS AT COLUMBUS, O.

THE WORST IN YEARS

Terrific Storm Visits Nebraska and Southern South Dakota.

Severe Snow Storm Rages For Twelve Hours In Montana.

Norfolk, Neb., May 25.—The worst rain and hail storm for years visited Northwest Nebraska and Southern South Dakota last night. The Northwestern and Union Pacific tracks are inundated in several places, a number of bridges are washed out and several thousand acres of crops are under water.

Helena, Mont., May 25.—The snow storm that began yesterday morning lasted twelve hours and was general over Montana and the Northwest territories. The snowfall ranged from one to six inches, and the lowest temperature was 27 degrees, at Marysville. The moisture will prove of great benefit, as the ground was very dry. Sheepmen do not report any loss. The most of them had twenty-four hours' warning of the approaching storm and all the sheep were under shelter.

Their Delegates Seated After Exciting Debate on the Floor.

Several Altercations Occur But Order Is Finally Restored.

Platform Refers National Questions to St. Louis Convention.

Columbus, O., May 25.—Previous to the assembling of the Democratic state convention today, the conservatives had won in the preliminary meetings. The committee on credentials last night had compromised the contest from Dayton by giving the Cox and the Dowling delegates one-half vote each, but before daylight this action was reconsidered and the Cox delegates were seated, thus giving all the 208 contested seats to the conservatives. The radicals insisted that they would present minority reports, and if defeated in the convention today, they would carry the contests to St. Louis. The weather was as high in temperature as the convention, and perhaps added to the excitement.

William L. Finley, as chairman of the state central committee, introduced Chairman Starr, who in part said:

"We are met here, not to destroy by personal bickerings, but to preserve the harmony of our best judgment."

He arraigned Republican rule in Ohio and the nation and held that it was tolerated by "the spirit of unreconcilable dissension in the Democratic party."

"Where is the Democrat whose cheek has not burned with anger, or whose head has not hung in shame, as he reads, or listens to words of vituperative vilification, libel and slander handled between warring factions, whether they be of Hearst, Parker, Cleveland, Bryan or otherwise? Is the mere preference of man a crime? Is it a greater crime for a Democrat to have a preference for Parker, for Hearst, for Cleveland, for Bryan, than it is for United States senators to sell the influence of their office for gain? Or for the administration to suppress the investigation of postoffice scandals lest it should injure the party, or for the president of the United States to disrupt the republic of Columbia in the interest of the Panama canal grafters?"

"We want yeoman service of Parker and his friends in the coming campaign; we want the energy and dash of Hearst and his friends in the coming battle; we want the oratory of Bryan and Cockran, the political management of Hill and Gorman and the mature judgment of Cleveland in the impending struggle."

"Democrats, let us here highly resolve that by this aid of Cleveland, Bryan, Hill, Gorman, Parker, Hearst, Johnson, McLean, without reference to previous conditions of political belief and financial differences, that Republican misrule shall cease, and that the rascals in high and low places shall be turned out and that a government of, for and by the people be restored."

The first demonstration of the convention was on the mention of Hearst's name. Then followed outbursts as the names of other national and state leaders were mentioned by Mr. Starr. There was a notable demonstration for McClellan as the speaker eulogized the mayor of New York at the close of his speech.

A. B. Anderson of Wapakoneta, presented the majority report on credentials, seating the 208 conservative contestants, signed by eighteen of the twenty-one members of the committee.

V. V. Leas, of Delaware, presented a minority report signed by three members of the committee seating the thirty-five radical delegates from Franklin county instead of the thirty-five conservatives.

Former Congressman John J. Lentz addresed the convention in favor of substituting the minority report for the majority report. Col. W. A. Taylor spoke for the majority report, both making severe charges while the galleries cheered. Several altercations occurred but order was soon restored by the sergeant at arms.

When Col. Taylor concluded there was a disturbance on the platform. Mr. Lentz took exception to what Col. Taylor had said and asked to see the papers Col. Taylor held in his hand. Lentz took them. Taylor grabed them back and a personal encounter in words followed until both men were put down. Lentz and Taylor both passed "the lie" repeatedly.

The minority report covered only the contest in Franklin county and the roll was called on substituting the minority for the majority report.

The ballot resulted in favor of the majority report.

The Ross-Taylor delegates kept their seats and the Nonrel-Lentz delegates retired while the conservatives cheered.

There was great cheering when Mayor Johnson announced 73 votes "yes" from Cuyahoga county. Charles F. Salen said the delegation stood 43 yeas; nays 30, but the chair recognized the unit rule and the vote was recorded as cast by Mayor Johnson. Other tests had been made in the committees by counties and districts, but this vote was the first test between the conservatives and radicals with the delegates as a whole.

Many on both sides rushed to the stage while the footings were being made.

The majority report of the conservatives on credentials was then adopted unanimously.

The temporary organization was then made permanent and the rules and order of business adopted.

The following platform was unanimously adopted by the committee:

The Democratic party of Ohio in convention assembled on this 25th day of May, 1904, in the city of Columbus, Ohio, while firmly adhering to all living Democratic principles, as time and again declared by Democratic conventions, recommend that the formal enunciation of purely national questions be referred to the national convention, soon to convene at St. Louis.

On state issues the Democratic party of Ohio offers the people relief from the political trust which has long controlled every department of the state government. Its owners have grown arrogant, reckless and corrupt; secure, they think, in the union of predatory forces against the people who are not organized in their own defense. The Democratic party promises, if entrusted with authority, to reduce public expenses and taxation, to save the property of the state, and to restore government by the people as designed by its founders.

We favor the improvement of public roads throughout the state, and commend the efforts of the Democratic minority of the last legislature in that behalf.

The Ohio delegation is directed to cast the entire 46 votes in the national convention as the majority of those present and voting shall decide, when such majority shall determine that course to be advisable.

FARQUHAR FAVORS TONNAGE BILL

New York, May 25.—When the Merchant marine commission resumed its investigation into the cause of the decline of American shipping today, Former Congressman John M. Farquhar, of Buffalo, spoke in favor of the tonnage bill of 1891, which failed of passage by congress. The bill provided for a bounty based on mileage covered by the ships. Mr. Farquhar said, that however inadequate the bill of 1891 was, it would serve at least as the entering wedge. He believed the question was strictly a commercial one and that it should be taken out of politics entirely.

RUSSIANS DIVIDED.

One Party Went Northwest, the Other East.

Seoul, May 25.—Col. Kioshita's column arrived at Niug Yeng, May 17, and found the Russians had divided, one party going northwest and the other going east.

The latter attacked Ham Heung. It was impossible for the Japanese infantry to attack the mobile Cossacks so the column returned to Anju, May 23.

The main commissariat base of the Japanese, which had been located at Chemulpo since the outbreak of the war, has been transferred to Seoul. Twenty-five officers and a large staff of non-commissioned officers and clerks have arrived here to take part in the work of provisioning the Japanese armies.

THE TOWN OF YAZOO CITY, MISS., BURNING

All Communication With the Town Is Entirely Cut Off.

Memphis, May 25.—A telephone report from Greenwood, Miss., says the town of Yazoo City, Miss., is burning and the last communication with the city was to the effect that the fire was completely beyond control. Trains loaded with fire apparatus are being rushed from Greenwood and Jackson. It is said twelve block of business houses and residences has succumbed to the flames. The fire originated in the block occupied by the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies and the telephone exchange and shortly afterward all communication with Yazoo City was completely cut off. It is reported that the residence of Hon John Sharp Williams, minority leader in the house of representatives, has been destroyed by the flames. Yazoo City is a city of 6000 inhabitants, located in the famous Yazoo delta. It is located forty-five miles from Jackson on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad. At 1 o'clock all efforts to secure communication with the town proved fruitless.

PLANS FOR SUMMER

Will Be Discussed By the Public Affairs Committee.

Progress Toward Raising Fund Will Be Reported On.

Many matters of general interest are to come before the public affairs committee of the Commercial club, which is scheduled to meet at 8 o'clock this evening at the club rooms.

The big fund for advertising the city in various ways and relieving the merchants and others of the city who care to avail themselves of the relief from various solicitors, which the plan will afford them, will be one of the main topics of discussion. The idea of this plan is to raise $15,000 to be subscribed in various amounts by the different business interests of the city and a committee has been working toward this end for some time past.

While such plans are always slow in being carried out, owing to the great number of people to be seen and told the plan, it is understood the committee has up to the present time made considerable headway and that the various people seem to have fallen heartily in with the idea, in most instances.

Such people as are asked to subscribe are supposed to give whatever they feel is a just amount, either based on their judgment of their ability to give, regardless of the size of their business, or on their relative individual importance in their line of trade. The collections for this fund are being made by one of the banks, which volunteered to do this part of the work. This relieves the committee of one of the most onerous and vexatious duties in connection with the plan, as the collection of money is a far different thing, frequently, from the securing of a promise to pay it.

For some little time the club has been getting names and addresses of people in the city who have rooms to let, which could be of avail for tourists who come to Duluth and it is expected that in a short time a liberal list will be on file at the club rooms which can be sent to any who are interested and write for information.

It has been suggested that the lake strike be brought up for discussion, and if it is, there will likely be some pithy opinions given on the situation by representatives of the business interests of the city.

Capt. C. L. Potter, B. Silberstein and J. I. Van Vliet have been appointed as members of the house committee for the coming year.

WEST DULUTH

Little Catherine Jordan, the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jordan, 228 Fifty-seventh avenue west, died at 7 o'clock last evening after an illness of three days. The case completely baffles the five doctors who have been consulted regarding it. Death was due to a spasm, apparently caused by a choking spell.

The child was in good health up to Sunday afternoon, when she nearly died as the result of a choking spell. Two doctors finally restored her to consciousness, however, and it was thought that she would entirely recover. She was again seized with a similar attack Sunday night, and the following day was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where an X-ray examination failed to disclose any obstruction in the throat.

It was thought that possibly the choking was caused by something the girl had swallowed. She appeared benefited by the treatment, and yesterday was pronounced out of danger, but in the evening was seized with another spasm and died before medical aid could be summoned. In the afternoon she was playing about the yard, and appeared to be in good health. The case is considered a most peculiar one, and physicians are unable to agree as to what actually caused death.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock from the St. James Catholic church. Interment will be at Calvary cemetery.

A NEW PRINCIPLE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

For years it has been the practice of medical men to treat patients suffering from piles by local, external applications. These treatments give but temporary relief, but have never affected a positive cure.

After months of research and study, accompanied by actual experience with various patients, Dr. C. A. Perrin arrived at a positive conclusion as to the exact action of the various parts of the bowel system, under different conditions, and when subjected to various prescriptions.

He finally prepared that wonderful internal remedy known as DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, which is put up in bottles, retailing at all reliable drug stores for $1.00 each. This internal remedy has been on the market for the past ten years, and in all of that time there has been but three cases where a positive cure has not been effected.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under a positive guarantee by the druggist making the sale, to refund the full purchase price, providing the remedy fails to cure. This is the absolute proof of its merit. Any man or woman who suffers from blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles can try this internal remedy with the absolute certainty that it will cost nothing unless it cures. Here is what one sufferer says of this wonderful remedy:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—I wish to thank you for the cure your wonderful medicine has done for me. I had the piles some five years, and under the advice of a doctor had them removed by the knife and felt free for awhile, but they returned and I at once got a bottle of your Perrin's Pile Specific and one bottle has entirely cured me, and I am as good as I ever was.

Yours truly,
JACK SULLIVAN,
October 16, 1902. Chicago.

Better get a bottle of your druggist today and get relief from present and future suffering.

FOURTH OF JULY.

The various committees appointed to arrange for the Fourth of July celebration in West Duluth held another meeting last evening and further talked over plans for the day. It was decided that the parade should form on Fifty-ninth avenue west, and march down Raleigh street to Central avenue, then to Grand and down Grand to Fifty-seventh, where it will turn and proceed directly to the grand stand, at the corner of Gosnold street and Fifty-sixth avenue west. Prizes will be awarded the societies presenting the best appearance and having the most men in line. The speechmaking and sports of the day will be at the grand stand.

PLEASING SURPRISE.

A pleasant surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Evanson at the home of Rev. O. M. Saevig, by the Young People's society and congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran church last night. The two were the recipients of several handsome presents, given as a token of the appreciation and esteem of their friends. A pleasing feature of the evening was the reading of an original poem, written by Louis Anderson, a member of the Young People's society, especially for the occasion. The Merrize quartet, of which Mr Evanson is a mmeber, rendered several selections, and Rev. Saevig made a few appropriate remarks in a happy vein. Mr. Evanson responded. A delicious lunch was served. The event was a most enjoyable one to all concerned.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Andrew Carlson and George Hollinger arrived in West Duluth this morning from Cumberland, Wis. They will be employed here during the summer.

Edward Warner, who has been laid up with a severe attack of rheumatism for several days past, is slightly improved, though still unable to leave his home.

Wanted, markers and sorters, West Duluth Steam laundry.

Clarence Skovett was a depature yesterday for Hibbing.

Mrs. C. G. Grisdale, of Fifty-seventh avenue west, left for Virginia, Minn., yesterday.

Chris Murphy has returned to Grand Marais after a brief visit with West Duluth friends.

Louis Winness is able to be about after an extended illness.

Joseph Mogllier has returned from a business trip to St. Paul.

Felix Collier, who has been visiting at Saginaw, Mich., is expected to return to his home in West Duluth today.

Fred Mayo is down from the range visiting with friends in West Duluth.

Charles Greeves returned today from the Dakotas, where he has been looking after his farming interests. Mr. Greeves says that though the seeding is unusually late, prospects for a large grain crop are good.

Carl Holter has returned from Salt Lake City, Utah, where he has been visiting his sister. Mr. Holter says that the Norwegians in the Mormon city held a big celebration on May 17. Most of the sons of Norway out there are Mormons, but the majority have only one wife, says Mr. Holter.

C. H. Martz has sold his handsome residence, at the corner of Thirty-ninth avenue west and Norton street, to Wm. Swanstrom. It is understood that the consideration was $5000.

George Salverson has returned to Knife river from visiting with friends in West Duluth.

The play, "Not Such a Fool as He Looks," produced by the West Duluth Social club at Great Eastern hall last evening was largely attended and was pronounced success. The members of the cast were well versed in their parts, and the affair was gone through without a hitch.

KILLED BY GAS.

Pittsburg, May 25.—While digging at Springdale today four laborers were overcome by gas. All were unconscious when taken out and three died later. The fourth is in a critical condition.

ILLINOIS FIGHT

Over the Governorship Is a Battle of Corporations.

Yates and Lowden Are Favored By These Interests.

Springfield, Ill., May 25.—Corporation influences have played an important role in the Republican governorship fight and will keep it up until a candidate is nominated. The convention has developed into a battle of the corporations, as well as the candidates, because big influences have been unable to agree on any one of the candidates, and, for this reason, the corporate influences have not been felt so severely in the convention.

Governor Yates has placed himself between two fires by political maneuvering that suggests the playing of both ends against the middle. The Decatur Manufacturers' association sent representatives to the convention to use every possible influence to defeat Yates' renomination. Three weeks before the convention assembled the association bitterly attacked Yates in a pamphlet issued to the public. The attack was based on the governor's dealing with the railroads and the manufacturers of the state in the latter's efforts to obtain a reduced freight rate, or at least a rate equal to that enjoyed by surrounding states.

Hearings were had for nearly a year before the railroad and warehouse commissioners, and a 25 per cent reduction had been promised, but it failed of realization, the pamplet declared, because of big contributions to the Yates campaign fund by the railroads of the state. To pacify the manufacturers, Yates' emissaries promised to remove Col. "Ike" Elwood from the railroad and warehouse commission, and, as soon as Yates was renominated, to put the 25 per cent reduction in freight rates into effect.

So important a political deal as this could not fail to reach the ears of the railroad scouts, and then there was trouble. Col. Elwood switched DeKalb's total vote from Yates to Lowden, and immediately the governor's lieutenants fell upon Elwood's neck to know the reason for the change. Elwood is said to have replied that, if he was to be removed from his job as soon as the governor was renominated, it would be foolish for him to assist in bringing about the renomination. Elwood refused to believe that he was misinformed about the executive promises to the manufacturers and demanded a signed agreement with Yates. Elwood does not care to longer remain a target for criticism, so he suggested that Yates promise in writing to name his man, Park Sedgwick, a banker of Sandwich, as his successor on the commission. The promise was duly executed and DeKalb county went back to Yates. But the double dealing was not without the knowledge of both the railroads and the manufacturers, and neither has much confidence in any benefits to be derived from renominating Yates.

The Pullman influences are working with Col. Lowden, and, because of that fact, a lot of rival, jealous corporate influences are against him.

Because of Hamlin's connection with the railroad and warehouse commission, as its attorney during Tanner's administration, he is not objectionable to the railroads, but the coal combine refuses absolutely to stand for him. The coal trust has a grievance because of Hamlin's action against it last winter, when with State's Attorney Charles E. Deneen, he went into the courts of Cook county and secured an injunction which sounded the death knell of the trust that had then sent the prices of coal up. Besides the coal trust opposition to his candidacy, Deneen is opposed by other big corporations which fared badly during his tenure of office as state's attorney in Cook county.

An army of insurance agents attended the convention, and they will come back next week to continue the fight on Hamlin. The big insurance companies, without exception, are opposing Hamlin's candidacy, because of his pronounced stand during his reign as attorney general against insurance pools and trusts. One of these suits is still pending at Belleville, in St. Clair county, and is likely to terminate disastrously to nearly a hundred companies that are involved. The fight is against a local board of underwriters, having power to fix prices for all insurance. While the insurance companies admit that the combination is a plain violation of the law, they say the combination is absolutely necessary to protect property and the insured, as well as themselves. Similar boards of underwriters are in existence not only in all the largest towns in Illinois, but all over the country. The Belleville case will furnish a test, and, if Hamlin's contentions are maintained, the boards of underwriters will have to go out of existence.

While the insurance companies are bitterly opposed to Hamilin, Yates, in a measure, is acceptable to them, because of the friendly disposition of his insurance department, which the insurance agents practically have controlled.

Already the Yates men are declaring that the adjournment of the convention for ten days was to their advantage. Holding a wrfitten agreement over Yates to appoint Elwood's man Sedgewick on the railroad board, the railroads believe they have the whip hand over the fulfilment of any promises made to the manufacturers, and they will use their influence to renominate Yates.

GOLF TOURNEY BEGINS.

Garden City, L. I., May 25.—With seventy-two entries, the largest ever made for metropolitan championship honors, the annual tournament for the title now held by Findlay S. Douglas, began here today in weather that was conducive to bringing out the best points of all the contestants.

AFTER THE $9,000,000.

New York, May 25.—Ricardo Arias and Dr. J. E. Morles, special commissioners appointed by Panama to receive $9,000,000 on account of the canal concession, arrived here today. Mr. Arias said it was the purpose of the commission to invest the money in first mortgage bonds in New York, or any other locality whereever obtainable.

SPEAKS AT HIGH SCHOOL

President Bohannon Talks In Behalf of Normal School.

This morning, in the chapel, President E. W. Bohannon, of the Duluth Normal school, spoke to the students of the high school during their chapel exercises and told them briefly of the work that the normal schools are doing. He said, in part:

"The first thing which I wish to impress upon your minds is that we do not accept students who come to us from other schools for the reason that they cannot make satisfactory progress in those schools. Some pupils seem to have the idea that since they cannot make their grades in the schools which they are attending it would be well for them to make a change, but we have come to an agreement upon this question and will not accept any such students.

"We have six courses of study, three for those who have not had a high school education and three for those who have. The first three consist of a Latin course of five years, a three years' elementary course, and a five years' English course. In these you are not particularly interested, but it is of the latter three that I particularly wish to speak.

"They consist of a kindergarten course of two years, an elementary graduation course of one year, and a complete graduation course of two years. I would recommend the elementary graduation course to only those who cannot afford the time or the expense of spending more than one year in school. I should advise every student who is not positively limited by these restrictions, to take a complete graduation course as many more studies can be mastered and the work more thoroughly done.

"Up to two years ago a student could not enter the university by means of a normal school diploma, but this is not now the case. A pupil who has a diploma showing that he has completed a two years' graduation course, will be admitted to the university as a sophomore, thsu enabling him to secure a still higher education and the combined advantage of the training afforded by the three classes of schools.

"Now a word about teaching. I don't believe that there is any occupation for which a young lady is so well fitted or that will suit her so well as teaching, although at present it is not as remunerative as it should be or as it will be. There is a large field here for properly equipped teachers. The normal schools all over the state are daily receiving letters inquiring for teachers at the best salary that is being paid. The demand is principally for the lower and middle graes of the public schools, and I sincerely hope that a large number of your graduates will come to our school next year to help supply this demand."

MILLERS MEET AT ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, May 25.—All the principal milling states were represented today at the opening session of the ninth annual convention of the operative millers of America. It is expected that between 400 and 500 of the members of the organization will attend the sessions of the convention, which will be in session several days. Flour bleaching and corn milling were among the subjects discussed today.

DETAILED TO HOSPITALS.

Tokio, May 25.—Drs. Hashimoto, Sato and Kikuchi, three of the most eminent surgeons of Japan, have been appointed superintendents respectively of the Tokio, Hiroshima and Matsuyama military hospitals. The government is securing the best talent available and carefully equipping hospitals for the treatment of both Japanese and Russian wounded. Dr. Hashimoto is the emperor's physician.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Fillbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

READY TO SHIP

Towers For Aerial Bridge Will Be On Way Soon.

Architect Turner Writes That Excellent Progress Is Being Made.

Word was received by City Engineer McGilvray this morning that the towers for the aerial bridge have been practically completed, and are now ready for shipment.

The news was received in a letter from C. A. P. Turner, the architect of the bridge, who has just returned to his home in Minneapolis from a trip to the plant of the Modern Steel Construction company at Waukesha.

"I was so much pleased at the progress of the work on the Duluth bridge," Mr. Turner writes, "that I felt it incumbent on me to write you and let you know of the good progress the work is making.

"The towers for the bridge are practically complete, and ready for shipment, with the exception of painting.

"The riveting on the truss work is making good progress and I was very agreeably surprised at the advanced stage the work has reached."

The towers are the first things necessary in the construction of the bridge and as soon as they are shipped the work of erection can be commenced.

There are many people in the city who have grown superstitious concerning the bridge, on account of the long delay. They assert that they will believe the bridge is a reality when they see the car running across the canal, but there appears to be little doubt now that the last obstacle has been removed and that the structure will be completed during the coming summer. The work of erecting the bridge can be quickly accomplished when the parts are all assembled on the ground. Mr. Turner stated that the erection could be completed within thirty days of the time when the parts were assembled here, if it were rushed.

The cabins of the car will be very handsomely finished. There will be two, each 30 feet in length and 7½ feet in width. They will be lighted and heated with electricity, and will accommodate about 100 passengers. Some of the designs for the interior furnishings have been received by the city engineer and they are very handsome.

NEARING END

May Term of Court Has But Little More of Life.

Summer Vacation Will Follow—No Court Till September.

The end of the May term of district court is now in sight.

Only two juries are now in session, one in consideration of a suit to recover the amount of a life insurance policy, and the second a suit to recover the insurance on a building. There are about two more jury cases that will come on for trial.

Disposition of the court cases began this morning in Judge Dibell's room, the case of Anson B. Miner against Richard Sellwood being called for trial. The action in which suit was brought to recover on a contract.

The criminal cases for the term were disposed of last Saturday, there being fifteen in all. Either a conviction or a plea of guilty was secured in every case. Nearly $200 was paid into the county treasury in fines.

Following is the setting of the court calendar, beginning with today:

Wednesday—Nos. 3, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 15 and 18.

Thursday—Nos. 22, 23, 24, 25, 30, 35, 36, 39, 46, 48, 55, 59, 64, 65.

Friday—Nos. 72, 83, 86, 96, 99, 100, 62, 101, 102.

This will conclude the May term calendar.

The next term of court will not begin until the first Wednesday in September, there being no sessions of district court during the summer months, after the cases from the May term are disposed of. As a consequence of the two months' vacation, June and July are always quiet months at the county courthouse.

Although the September term is so far off, already the note of issue of one new case has been filed with the clerk of court, for trial in September. There are several continued cases to come up in the September term.

SPANKED HIS NEPHEW

For This, Upon Mother's Complaint, Joseph Brown Is Arrested.

Because he spanked his little nephew, Joseph Brown was arraigned in the municipal court this afternoon to answer to a charge of assault.

Joseph Brown and George Brown are brothers. They live within a few doors of each other on Fourth street near Fourth avenue west. Joseph Brown is the proprietor of the Merchants' barber shop and George Brown owns the Lyceum barber shop.

George Brown has a little boy, and while the said little boy is the joy and pride of its fond parents, it is looked upon more or less as a nuisance by its Uncle Joe.

Yesterday Master Brown junior is claimed by Joseph Brown to have heaved a rock through his parlor window, whereupon Mrs. George Brown claims the uncle did wilfully and maliciously assault, beat and maltreat the said child "against the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota."

Joseph Brown claims he administered an old-fashioned spanking to the said youth to teach him the error of his ways. The lad went home and informed his parents of the treatment accorded him by his uncle, and Mrs. George Brown swore out a warrant for the arrest of her brother-in-law on the charge of beating and assaulting her son.

The defendant was arraigned in the municipal court this afternoon before Judge Windom. He waived the reading of the complaint, and pleaded not guilty to the charge. The hearing was set for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the defendant was released without bail.

PASSENGER OFFICIALS

Arthur B. Smith and G. W. McCaskey of Northern Pacific, Here.

Arthur B. Smith, assistant general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific, and G. W. McCaskey, traveling passenger agent, are here today from St. Paul making the rounds of the local railroad offices and improving their acquaintance on this end of the line.

Mr. Smith speaks encouragingly of conditions and says that a new feature at Yellowstone park this year will be two new hotels. One of these, at the upper geyser basin, is known as the "Old Faithful Inn," and is a sort of mammoth log cabin, as it will be built of logs. But it will have the accommodations of a hotel, containing 150 rooms.

At Yellowstone lake there will be another hotel much larger than the inn, with 250 rooms for guests. The railway people believe that the establishment of such ample accommodations for travelers will induce the springs to become more of a resort for extended sojourns of tourists than heretofore.

While nearly everybody who goes West tries to visit the Yellowstone park, not many people spend much time there, as the conditions have never favored it so much in a general way. But the introduction of the new hotels is expected to have a revolutionary effect.

WANTS CASE TRIED HERE.

Metropolitan Company Seeks Transfer of Reaney Case.

The Metropolitan Building company of this city, which constructed and controls the Metropolitan Opera house, has made application in district court for a change of venue in the action brought against it by William H. Reaney, in the district court of Ramsey county, for an amount he claims is due him for services as manager of the opera house about a year ago.

An affidavit from C. T. Fitzsimmons, president of the Metropolitan company accompanies the application. Mr. Fitzsimmons claims that he has been and is now a resident of this county; that the Metropolitan company has neither an office nor an agent outside of this county. He asks that the case be brought to the district court of this county for trial.

SKELETON FOUND

Road Repairer on Duluth Heights Found Man's Bones.

May Possibly Be Those of Former Indian Resident.

What may be the skeleton of an old Indian resident of the head of the lakes, was unearthed yesterday afternoon by John Stewart of Duluth Heights.

Mr. Stewart is the foreman of a gang of men employed in repairing the Highland road, which runs from the hilltop station of the incline railroad to the settlement at Duluth Heights.

Yesterday afternoon while the men were at work, one of them came across a human bone while excavating the gutter at the side of the road. Further search revealed a number of the bones which form the human body.

The remains were yellowed with age and it was evident that they had been buried a number of years.

The bones were shown to a local physician who said that they were undoubtedly parts of a human skeleton which had been interred for a long period of time.

There has never been a cemetery in the vicinity of the spot where the bones were found, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, and the bones are either the remains of one of the old Indian inhabitants of northern Minnesota, or of some body that has been buried without the knowledge or consent of the health authorities.

The men who made the find hold the former theory, and they believe they have stumbled across the grave of some old Indian chief who hunted about the head waters of Lake Superior when Duluth was yet unthought of.

"Men at work on Duluth streets have unearthed some queer things," said a facetious resident of the heights. "They have found signs of copper, traces of gold and silver quartz, but this is the first time that they have ever prospected for Indian chiefs. It is possible that they have struck a vein of them, and they should follow up the discovery, and incorporate. Think of the prospectus that could be drawn up for a company to explore for skeletons of dead Indians. 'Supply in sight practically unlimited. Ready market for product to be used for fertilizer on the farms in the great country to the north. Now is the time to buy. Stock will advance in thirty days.' Those people have a bonanza."

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

VATICAN EXHIBIT

Yet Unopened, Causes Much Interest at Fair.

St. Louis, May 25.—Considerable interest is being manifested in the seventeen unopened boxes containing the Vatican exhibit, which arrived recently, and are lying in the basement of the Antropology building. Inquiries have been made on all sides as to when the contents of the boxes will be placed on exhibition. The boxes will not be touched until the arrival of Francisca Cagiato, an attache of the Vatican, who recently arrived in New York and is now in Washington, and who will personally supervise the unpacking, according to stipulations agreed upon when the Vatican decided to send an exhibit. Jefferson guards watch over the Vatican boxes day and night, and will continue to do so until the arrival of Cagiato.

The display of relics in the Kentucky state building was completed today. A section of an oak tree, upon which Daniel Boone had carved his initials, which has been open to inspection for several days, was placed in a glass case today, as it was fast being damaged by souvenir seekers.

A large portion of one corner had been cut away before the inroads of souvenir hunters had been discovered.

Brule and Return $1.05.

DAMAGES GIVEN

Miss Lillian Hines Is Awarded $600 Against Mrs. Johnson.

Suit Brought to Recover $2000 For Slanderous Talk.

For calling Miss Lillian Hines "a dirty slob" and making other remarks, which were held to reflect on her moral character, Mrs. Florence Johnson, a West End woman, has been assessed $600 damages by a jury in district court.

Miss Hines, on the charge of libel, brought suit for $2000.

The case was tried in Judge Dibell's room yesterday. It went to the jury at 4 o'clock, a verdict being arrived at about two hours later.

The suit was the outcome of a meeting between the two women in the store and boarding house across Superior street from the Twenty-sixth avenue west car barn.

Because Miss Hines was sitting on the edge of a sofa where one of the boarders, a street car man, was lying down, Mrs. Johnson is claimed to have made a remark that Miss Hines and her companion construed as very derogatory to the character of any young woman.

The testimony of Miss Hines was to the effect that Mrs. Johnson even went so far as to slap her and break her glasses, while Mrs. Johnson alleged that she was assaulted by Miss Hines, and mentioned some back hair pulling.

Both women conduct boarding houses for street railway men, Miss Hines having started up in business since her trouble with her former employer.

SULLY & CO.'S ASSETS

Shown to Be In Excess of Firm's Liabilities.

New York, May 25.—The schedules filed by Sully & Co., in the United States district court yesterday, showed firm liabilities of $3,568,936, and assets of $4,119,627. Of the indebtedness, $1,369,462 are unsecured. The schedules mention $50,000 of indebtedness which, it is said, should be paid by other parties. The same $50,000 is mentioned in the assets as bills and notes held by the firm. There is due Sully & Co. in open accounts $68,334. It has, the schedule states, stocks and bonds margined in the amount of $29,100, and unliquidated claims to the amount of $1,298,250 and $2,167,490. Deposited in bank the firm has $445,848, and three memberships in the Cotton exchange of New York valued at $45,175.

Sully personally has an indebtedness of $341,039 and assets of $2,074,429. Of the former, $256,732 are unsecured.

The individual assets consist of real estate, $266,000; cash, $3684; notes, $1000; due on accounts, $1,475,820; bonds and stocks, $311,925; property in reversion, $11,000, and $3000 which he claims is exempted.

In the case of the other members of the firm assets far exceed the liabilities.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Joseph Hastings, 45 years old, was shot and instantly killed at Indianapolis Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Frank Hicks. The woman says Hastings insulted her.

While attempting to board an electric train en route from Berkeley station to San Francisco Tuesday, Professor Marcus J. Spinello, instructor of French and Italian at the University of California, was thrown under the wheels of a moving car and received injuries from which he died soon afterward. Professor Spinello was graduated from Yale in 1896.

W. J. Brewers, editor of the Onalaska, Wis., Record, was killed by lightning at his desk Tuesday afternoon. The Onalaska German Lutheran church was struck and burned to the ground and considerable other damage was wrought.

Rev. W. W. Armore, who killed his son last Friday by striking him on the head with a fence rail, because the boy would not come home, when he told him to, was brought to Owensboro, Ky., and lodged in the Owensboro jail. It is rumored that a mob is forming at Calhoun to lynch him.

One unknown man is reported as killed as the result of a terrific wind storm, accompanied by a deluge of rain which visited the town of Tara, Iowa, Tuesday afternoon. The wires are down and details are lacking. A number of buildings were blown down and nine Illinois Central box cars were blown across the main line track.

Despondent because of business trials, Julius W. Kortez hurled himself from the tenth story of the Columbia building, Louisville, Ky. His body was reduced to a pulp on the pavement below.

The badly decomposed body of a man was taken from the Calumet river at the foot of Ninety-first street, Chicago, Tuesday night and from articles found in the clothing it is supposed to be that of W. C. Pratt, secretary of the Elgin National Watch company, who disappeared Nov. 28, 1903.

John Bowen, John Conley, John Bedore and a man named McDonald, were drowned in the rapids of the Fayette river near Boise, Idaho. The four men attempted to come down the rapids in a boat and the boat was capsized.

Robert Mueller, aged 53, a resident of St. Louis, walked out to the city cemetery at Austin, Texas, Tuesday, sat down by the grave of his brother, J. C. Mueller, and blew out his brains, his body falling across the grave where it was found a few minutes afterward by one of the cemetery guards. Mueller left a note saying that he was driven to suicide by bad health.

OLD CHIEF DEAD.

Penio, of Ukiah Tribe, Was 107 Years Old.

Ukiah, Cal., May 25.—Charles Penio, the oldest chief of the Ukiah tribe, is dead at Cox ranchero, and the Indians are celebrating a death feast. Penio was 107 years of age, and ruled the Ukiahs long before the white settlers arrived, and the death of many whites lies at his door. He was judge and jury for the tribe, but was deposed, about twenty-five years ago, for killing Sam Warden. Warden and another Indian had quarreled over a game of cards, and the other Indian was killed. Penio was sent for and had Warden tied to a tree to be shot. He dodged the first bullet, which so infuriated the chief that he seized an ax and chopped off Warden's head. Penio was held in jail for several months, but none of the Indians could be induced to testify against him. Penio had always resented the encroachment of the whites, and was consideerd dangerous. He was buried in Indian style, with his pony and war implements.

GETS A FORTUNE.

Brooklyn Sugar Weigher Falls Heir to $400,000.

New York, May 25.—After having toiled more than thirteen years at two dollars a day as a custom house weigher in a sugar refinery here, Patrick J. Hennessy, of Brooklyn, has suddenly found himself to be the heir of $400,000. Hennessy became cognizant of his good fortune, through an advertisement inserted in a daily paper here by a firm of London solicitors who have in charge an estate left by Hennessy's uncle. The latter was a wealthy merchant of Melbourne. He went to Australia in his youth and the nephew sought his fortune in America, never having seen his benefactor since childhood.

IMPORTANT DEAL.

Large Tract of Redwood Timber Land Sold.

San Francisco, May 25.—The first important deal in redwood timber land in this state this year was effected yesterday, when a large tract of forest timber in lower Humboldt county was transferred to the Metropolitan Lumber company of Green Bay, Wis. Donovan & O'Connor, of Menominee, Mich., and Chas. Culbertson of Boulder, Col. The purchase price is said to be $900,000, of which a large payment has already been made. The tract, it is estimated, has in the neighborhood of 400,000,000 feet of timber on it.

Curse of DRINK

DRUNKENNESS CURED TO STAY CURED BY WHITE RIBBON REMEDY.

No taste. No odor. Any woman can give it in a glass of water, tea, coffee or food, without patient's knowledge.

White Ribbon Remedy will cure or destroy the diseased appetite for all alcoholic drinks, whether the patient is a confirmed inebriate, a "tippler," social drinker or drunkard. Impossible for any one to have an appetite for alcoholic liquors after using White Ribbon Remedy. It has made many thousands of permanent cures, and in addition restores the victim to normal health, steadying the nerves, increasing the will power and determination to resist temptation.

Indorsed By Members of a Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Anna Moore, Press Superintendent of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Los Angeles, Cal., states: "I have tested White Ribbon Remedy on very obstinate drunkards and the cures have been many. I cheerfully recommend and endorse White Ribbon Remedy, and advise any woman to give it to any relative suffering from drunkenness."

Sold by druggists, 50c and $1.00, and by Max Wirth, 23 W. Superior St., Duluth, Minn. Call or write. White Ribbon Remedy sent by mail.

SUING FORESTERS.

Beneficiary Seeks to Collect For Insured Life.

The suit of Ida C. Rupert against the United Order of Foresters was called for trial in Judge Ensign's room yesterday afternoon, and evidence is still being introduced.

The action is one in which it is claimed that the fraternal organization issued a policy for $500 to Emma Holmquist, in May, 1903, in which Ida Rupert was named as beneficiary. Miss Holmquist died in September last and her beneficiary claims that the fraternal order has refused to pay over the amount of the policy.

The United Foresters claim that at the time Miss Holmquist was insured she told the examining physician that she was in perfect health and had never been affected with pulmonary diseases. The fraternal order intends to produce testimony to show that she suffered from bronchitis and a chronic cough.

John Jenswold, Jr., represents Miss Rupert and C. S. Olmstead represents the Foresters.

WILL PAY SPEYER & CO.

Affairs of Lake Superior Company About Ended.

New York, May 25.—Final conferences have been held here between representatives of the Canadian improvement company and Consolidated Lake Superior company interests with a view to winding up the affairs of the latter and transferring the assets to the new company.

It is now expected that Speyer & Co. will be paid on Thursday next, and that the interests which will withdraw from any further participation in the syndicate will receive their money. When the Speyer loan is paid, the securities now held by that firm will be turned over to the Superior company, which was incorporated yesterday in New Jersey.

LUCKY MAN FINDS $5000 IN OLD COAT.

New York, May 25.—Five $1,000 treasury notes have been found in an old, moth-eaten coat purchased by Elmer Eckerson of Bogota, N. J., at an auction sale of unclaimed baggage in a railway station.

Neither the trunk nor the coat it contained bore any marks of identification. Eckerson was about to throw the garment away when he discovered the treasure carefully wrapped in oiled silk. The lucky buyer is 63 years old and will at once take a vacation in Europe.

BURN PIANOS.

Two Hundred Venerable Squares Are Cremated.

New York, May 25.—While 150 delegates to the National Piano dealers convention in Atlantic City waived red lights and danced in a circle, 200 venerable square pianos have been cremated to mark what the dealers term the passing of the old make of instrument. The bonfire, which was built in an open place on high ground, blazed like a burning house and was not extinguished for several hours.

MACHINISTS' STRIKE.

Chicago, May 25.—Five hundred machinists struck yesterday when the Goss Printing Press company and the C. F. Elms Engineering company refused to sign the agreement prepared by the International Association of Machinists. The agreement presented asks 32 to 37 cents per hour and Saturday half holiday in the summer months. The last offer of the employers was from 30 to 35 cents per hour for a 9-hour day, with no mention of a Saturday half holiday, and asked absolute freedom to employ unskilled labor on machine work.

TO BUILD ROADS

Aitkin County Man Suggests Machine For the Purpose.

Claims It Will Greatly Cheapen Cost of Construction.

Road repair and construction is now going on in a large number of localities in the county, where funds have been appropriated by the board of county commissioners during the last few meetings.

The late spring season was responsible for considerable delay in road work on account of the frost, which went out of the ground very slowly except in some districts where there was little timber to protect the ground from the sun.

Several thousand dollars have been appropriated from the road district funds for repair work and for the construction of new county roads and it is expected that the money available will carry most of the work well into the summer season.

Not much bridge building will be done this summer as compared with the last two seasons.

Owing to the heavy cost of construction through some of the swampy sections of the county, various ideas have been advanced from time to time by the commissioners and by the settlers as to the best methods of road building, those that will accomplish the most good for the least expenditure of money.

St. Louis county is in need of a great many new roads in order to give outlet to the settlers who are developing sections of the county into agricultural districts. The process costs a great deal of money, more, in fact than the commissioners have available for the purpose.

Owing to the numerous demands that have been made from so many localities for roads or for road improvement, it has been a difficult matter for the county board at times to decide just where the money available should be spent without doing an injustice to the settlers and farmers elsewhere.

It has often been wished that there might be some kind of a road machine that can be constructed at a moderate cost, be portable and which can construct roads rapidly at a minimum expense.

Along this line, E. P. Moore, an Aitkin county man, has advanced an idea that is being considered with great favor by the county commissioners in a number of the Northern Minesota counties and which has been called to the attention of the St. Louis county commissioners.

The road machine that he has in mind, is a specially constructed contrivance that will cost in the neighborhood of $3500, or cheaper where several machines are built at a time.

He suggests a forty horsepower, double cylinder, high pressure engine that will weigh about 3000 pounds, with suitable winches and gearing that will weigh an aditonal 2000 pounds.

This machinery is to be mounted on skids for convenience in moving from one place to another, the skid with its load to be swung to a truck with high wheels and wide tires.

The engine is to have a modern water-tube boiler, which is estimated to weigh 4500 and which is mounted on skids in the same manner as the engine.

Two good skids about sixty feet long are placed on each side of a ditch to be made, about twelve feet apart and with a steel rail on the top of each for the truck or carriage that is to be run back and forth by means of a steel cable that runs over the rollers to the steam winches.

The carriage will have a shift sideways for the plow, of about nine feet, and a downward shift of three and one-half feet below the surface. The conveyor will take the dirt to the middle of the road from the plow.

The skids, with the boiler forward, then the engine and machinery and finally the long skids for the truck track will be attached while working and will run out about eighty rods of one-incn steel cable. The forward end will be fastened to a stump or some other object that will act as a "dead man." The end of the machine is fastened to a powerful geared winch and the truck with the plow and dirt conveyor is started forward on the track, the plow and dirt conveyor putting the dirt in the road. The truck is pulled back by a quick movement and the process repeated until the ditch is deep enough, which will be about 8 feet wide, 3½ feet deep and 4 inches wide on the bottom.

As soon as the work is done in the one spot the forward steam winch is started and the forward cable rolls up about fifty feet, sliding the whole rig ahead, when the road making process is again gone through, the machine making fifty feet of road at a stretch. It would have a steam winch with a strong hook and cable to tear up grubs or roots the plow could not cut.

Stumps in the course of the ditch would have to be pulled out ahead by means of a stump puller. It is claimed that this style of machine would require an engineer, a fireman, a plowman and a man with a team to haul water and fuel.

The machine, it is said, will cross bogs and swamps, will not mire down or make balky horses, and will report for duty every morning.

With such a machine it is claimed that a mile of road, with a two to three-foot grade, can be made in every three or four days. The labor would cost about $12 per day and the actual cost per mile would not be over $50 for ditching and grading.

Under ordinary circumstances the cost of making ditches with a ditch-making machine is about 50 cents per rod. With two ditches, one on each side, a mile of road would cost about $320 under the old methods of road making, to say nothing of the trouble and inconvenience.

There are many localities in St. Louis county where it is claimed the ditching is all done by men and teams, and the cost of road-making greatly exceeds $320 per mile.

There are three road districts in the county, and if three road-making machines were ordered the total cost would probably be in the neighborhood of $9000.

With miles and miles of county road yet to be constructed, it is admitted there is a possibility that a large amount of money might be saved in the long run and the roads be constructed much faster had the county some practical road machines.

ACREAGE IS DECREASED

North Dakota Report Says Late Seeding Has That Effect.

The North Dakota crop report for the week ending Monday says that wheat seeding is so well advanced that most of the crop is now in, but that owing to the lateness of the season considerable land that was to have been sown to wheat will not be. It also reports that flax seeding is very slow. The report says:

"The past week was quite favorable for farm work. Generally clear, pleasant weather prevailed, with occasional light to medium heavy showers at widely separated places; the wind was fresh to high most of the time, rapidly drying out low lands that had been too wet to get on to work. Light frosts were frequent, but did no harm.

"Wheat seeding advanced rapidly during the week and the most of the crop is now in, but there will be considerable land that will not be sown as intended, owing to the lateness of the season. Seeding of oats, flax, millet and barely is general, although not much flax has been put in yet. Plowing for and planting corn is also in progress in all sections.

"Wheat that was sown early, and even that sown a week ago, is up, and in practically all sections growing rapidly; that first sown is up from three to six inches high, and in some places high enough to hide the ground. The plant appears strong and healthy, and is making good root.

"Rain would be beneficial in the western part of the state to sprout late sown grain, and in portions of the Red River valley, where a crust has formed on the top of the ground, a little moisture would be beneficial, as the crust is hard enough to prevent grain being seeded to the best advantage.

"Grass is thriving in all sections and growing rapidly. In most places it affords ample pasturage for stock now."

The Minnesota report says: "The temperatures were rather low early in the week, with frosts reported in southeastern counties on the mornings of the 17th and 18th; later in the week the temperatures were considerably higher, being above 80 degrees at many places on the 20th, 21st and 22nd. There were showers in southwestern counties on the 16th, but elsewhere the weather was dry till the widely distributed showers of the 21st and 22nd. The heaviest rain seems to have been in the vicinity of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

"Wheat seeding is finished in the Red River valley; oat seeding is nearly finished, barley seeding is well advanced, and flax seeding is going on well. Early wheat and oats are growing nicely. Flax, barley and millet will be seeded on the lands which could not be seeded to wheat because of their being wet till late in the season. Elsewhere all the small grains are seeded, except small scattered areas of barley and flax, which will be seeded on new land or on the dried out lowlands. The wheat, oats and barley are growing well, and beginning to stool; some early flax is coming up.

"Corn and potato planting are well advanced, and the early planted are coming up, though some of the earliest planted corn rotted in the ground and had to be replanted. Winter rye is somewhat spotted. Pastures are doing fairly well, but warm rain is needed to bring on a rapid growth. The hay meadows in the southeast need rain. Some clover of last year's seeding is thin. Apples and plums are in full bloom, and strawberries are coming into bloom."

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdtown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free. Reg. sizes 50c, $1.00.

REFUSED TO FIGHT DUEL; DECORATED BY THE POPE.

New York, May 25.—The pope has conferred decorations on two office holders of a Catholic student association who were deprived of their posts, says a Times dispatch from Vienna, for refusing to accept challenges to duels. In view of the refusal of the Austro-Hungarian military authorities to countenance the propaganda of the Austrian anti-dueling league in spite of the exalted patronage it enjoys, the action of the pope is considered significant.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

DISCOVERS NEW BASCILLUS.

New York, May 25.—Castellani, the bacteriologist, has discovered the bacillus of dysentry, says a Times dispatch from Colombo, Ceylon. He is now conducting the final experiments and will shortly read a paper on the discovery before a medical association.

BIG CUDAHY PLANT DESTROYED.

Los Angeles, May 25.—Fire last night destroyed the local branch packing house of the Cudahy Packing company, located near the Los Angeles river bottoms. The loss is estimated at about $300,000 and the insurance at $265,000. The fire broke out in the lard department and spread with remarkable speed. A call was sent in for all the engines available, but notwithstanding all efforts possible by the entire department the buildings could not be saved. The origin of the fire is unknown.

SEARLE IS WILLING

To Become a Candidate For the State Supreme Court.

St. Cloud Judge's Aspirations May Affect Collins' Chances.

St. Paul, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge D. B. Searle, of St. Cloud, to all intents and purposes is a candidate for the Republican nomination for justice of the state supreme court. He was in St. Paul yesterday looking the field over and during his visit had a conference with both Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, and Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud.

The entry of Judge Searle into the judicial contest is of more than usual significance, because despite his efforts to keep out of the gubernatorial contest, his candidacy will have a direct bearing on the fight between Dunn and Collins. Although Judge Collins is friendly to Judge Searle and would not openly oppose his candidacy, as a matter of fact the St.

JUDGE D. B. SEARLE.

Cloud candidate for governor views with alarm the growth of the boom in favor of his fellow townsman.

Geographical location is not everything in a gubernatorial contest but it counts for a good deal. If Judge Searle, for instance, should be nominated the first thing in the convention, in accordance with the plan of nominating the justices of the supreme court first, Judge Collins of the same congressional district, county and city, would be decidedly handicapped when it came to the gubernatorial contest. Republicans of the outlying districts would argue that Stearns county is not entitled to both a place on the bench and the governorship.

The same motives that inspire the Collins men to look with disfavor on the candidacy of Judge Searle influence the Dunn men to work for Searle. The supporters of Mr. Dunn say they are not mixing in any other contest than the governorship, and it is a safe guess that they are not staying awake nights worrying over the probable effects of Searle's entry into the judicial race.

When Judge Searle's name was first mentioned, the Collins men treated it as a joke, saying that it was purely a move on the part of the Dunn men who wished to harass Judge Collins in every way they could. Judge Searle, however, did not look on the mention of his name in a humorous light; in fact he received assurances of support from many members of the bar in the Sixth congressional district, Collins men as well as Dunn supporters. His friends became so enthusiastic in his favor, that he is a receptive candidate for the place.

A strange feature of the whole matter is that Searle has been credited by a large number of people with being a Collins man. Probably he feels friendly to Judge Collins, but his entry into the judicial contest is naturally inimicable to the interests of the St. Cloud candidate for governor.

It is easy to imagine a still more far-reaching effect of Judge Searle's candidacy. Should Judge Searle develop marked strength in Stearns county and the Sixth congressional district, greater strength than Judge Collins has shown so far, it will not be improbable for the Searle men to say to the Collins men: "You have no show on earth of nominating Judge Collins. Fall in line for Judge Searle and help us get a place on the supreme bench for Stearns county. Of course we should like to see Judge Collins nominated, but it is easy to see that Judge Searle is the more popular man, and for the sake of the welfare of the county, give up the gubernatorial fight and unite with us for a place on the bench."

R. C. Dunn, in a recent meeting at Minneapolis, took occasion to express his views on the present system of taxation in Minnesota. He said among other things:

"I certainly think that the public service corporations in this state should be taxed according to their gross earnings, only I would tax them higher than 3 per cent. I would make the tax 5 or 6 per cent. There are too many rich tax evaders in this state. Public service corporations receive many benefits in the municipalities in which they exist, and the only fair basis of taxation is on gross earnings. I want to see the rich man and the rich corporation pay as high a percentage of the taxes as a man who owns a little home.

"I don't want to see the man with a small home pay 5 or 6 per cent and the rich man or corporation pay less than 1 or 2 per cent of the actual valuation. If a big corporation earns several millions of dollars a year, let it be taxed fairly on its earnings, and if the year is a poor one and the concern only makes a million or so, let it be taxed at that. As I said before, there are far too many rich tax evaders in this state, and I notice that every one of them are opposed to my candidacy."

The anti-Hearst men in Minneapolis have started a campaign to defeat the New York publisher in Hennepin county. They have opened headquarters in 505 Century building, and Ed A. Stevenas is in charge. Elijah Barton and F. G. Winston are urged as delegates to the national convention from the Fifth district.

J. W. Thomas, Wisconsin railroad commissioner, who was in St. Paul yesterday, does not fear that owing to the split in the Republican party the Democrats will carry the state next fall. He says that Governor La Follette will not lose any more Republican votes next fall than he did two years ago when he defeated Mayor Rose of Milwaukee by 45,000 votes.

FALLS INTO HARD HANDS

Boy on Reform School Parole Abused By Employers.

A case of alleged cruel treatment of a 15-year-old boy by a farmer, living near Grand Rapids, has just been investigated by Humane Officer Withrow.

The boy was sent to the farm to work by the authorities at the state reformatory. He had been released from the reform school on parole, and was sent to the farm to work for one year, on the understanding that if his conduct was good during that time he was to be released from the custody of the institution.

He spent the winter with the farmer, and this spring he wrote to the authorities at the reformatory that the treatment that he had received was more than he could bear. He stated that the man was married to an Indian woman, and that he was treated like a beast by the couple.

On several occasions he claimed that he was forced to walk to Grand Rapids, a distance of four miles, in a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, and with very inadequate protection from the cold. He stated that the farmer would beat him unmercifully whenever he failed to please him, and that he could stand the life no longer.

Humane Officer Withrow investigated the case, and found enough truth in the boy's statements to cause him to be returned to the school, and another place will be found for him.

The lad's name is Edward Rinker. He was sent to the reform school from Minneapolis, where his parents live. Mr. Withrow stated this morning that he found the boy in very unpleasant surroundings, and that there was little doubt but that he had been cruelly treated and made practically a slave by the farmer and his wife. He stated that the boy was compelled to sleep in a place that was scarcely fit for an animal, and that his surroundings were anything but conducive to a reformation in his conduct.

Remember the postponed dance of the Feli-o's club at Lincoln Park pavilion tonight. Everybody cordially invited. Tickets, 50 cents.

CONDUCTOR KILLED.

Mobile, Ala., May 25.—An excursion train on the Mobile & Ohio road was fired into today near Yellow Pine, Ala. Conductor S. W. Askew of Birmingham was fatally wounded, dying soon after. Joseph Richardson, the flagman at Meridian, and a negro passenger, were struck by bullets and seriously wounded. The train was runing from Mobile to Meridian.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—Default having been made in the payment of the sum of twenty-two hundred five and 59-100 ($2265.59) dollars, principal and interest, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Lucy M. Kennedy and W. A. Kennedy, her husband, mortgagors, to Maria Dewey, mortgagee, bearing date the tenth day of May, 1900, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of St. Louis, and state of Minnesota, on the eleventh day of May, 1900, at 4:30 o'clock p. m., in Book 190, of mortgages, on page 62.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Marie Dewey, mortgagee, to Rolla Porter Chadbourn, by written assignment dated the 23d day of September, 1903, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds, on the 21st day of April, 1904, at 8 o'clock a. m., in Book 147, of mortgages, on page 417.

And no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz.:

All the tract or parcel of land lying and being in the county of St. Louis, state of Minnesota, described as follows, towit: Lot numbered thirteen (13), in block six (6), Lester Park, First Division, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the register of deeds in and for said county and state, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said St. Louis county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the tenth day of June, 1904, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five dollars, attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated April 27th, A. D. 1904.

A NOBLEMAN'S EXAMPLE.

The local columns of yesterday's Herald conveyed the information that the young men about town, many of whom are without homes, are contemplating the organization of a club where they can spend their leisure hours in mind improvement and the enjoyment of the society of their fellows. It is a worthy move and should be encouraged. Much good can be accomplished by such an organization as it will have a tendency to make better men and more worthy citizens of its members if properly conducted.

In the same issue came news from New York that an Italian nobleman of philanthropic character has organized a club known as the American Boys' association, the entire expense being met by himself. He picks up the boys and young men of the streets and aims to impart nobler life ideals by teaching them purity of thoughts and acts; to love one another as brothers; to look on the sunny side of life; to abstain from the use of profane language; to discourage with example and words smoking, chewing and the use of intoxicating drinks, reading of sensational literature, and avoid congregating around saloons and street corners; to hold the highest conception of womanhood, by showing it in dealing with the other sex; to be kind to animals.

Furthermore he teaches them fencing and provides them with other means of physical development; takes them on excursions to the country that they may learn the beauties of nature and find good in everything; takes them to theaters, where they may learn wholesome lessons and gives them opportunity for refinement, pleasure and instruction.

It is just such organizations as this that The Herald believes should be established at different points in every city. There is great and pressing need for several such clubs in Duluth. They might be made self-supporting, too, if the proper effort is made. Surely there are a sufficient number of philanthropic men and women in Duluth who would gladly give part of their time to this noble work if somebody would only take the lead and pave the way.

The Y. M. C. A. is doing a good work along this line, but obviously it cannot cover sufficient territory and is unable to reach those boys whose needs are greatest. The boys' clubs The Herald has in mind should be so conducted that no matter whether a boy has a penny or not he would be made welcome and the place made so attractive that he would take pleasure in spending his idle hours there.

The Rev. Sunderson, who was formerly pastor of the Oneota M. E. church, undertook the management of such a club and made quite a success of it although he did not have the means to equip a proper club room and for that reason the organization lapsed when he was sent to other fields. When millions are annually being given away for charitable purposes it would seem that a sufficient sum to equip a number of boys' club rooms in Duluth might be easily raised.

If it were possible for the municipality to provide and maintain such club rooms it would be a matter of economy in the end because it would decrease the cost of reformatories, jails and prisons.

A CONVENTION OF DOTARDS.

The declaration of principles adopted by the convention of Fremont voters in their meeting at Jackson, Mich., recently, is in several respects very weak and puerile. It consists mainly of a lot of platitudes which, while well-meaning in themselves, have no particular bearing upon the present political situation. The platform as adopted shows that it must have been prepared by men in their dotage if they had any purpose of formulating a document that would be of influence in shaping the affair of the Republican party. Here it is in brief:

The whole people and not an oligarchy must rule.

Unrepresentative government, now so much in vogue, which defies party platforms and the expressed wishes of the people, and by bribery with money and offices, controls conventions and caucuses and breeds corruption and scandals, is to be condemned.

A direct primary election law, to include all officers and apply to the whole state, must be enacted.

The office must seek the man and not the man the office. He who asks for office discloses his unfitness to hold it.

The right to hold office is confined to those best equipped to discharge the duties, and not to those who most desire it.

Only those should be retained in office who have proven themselves honest, competent and faithful servants.

Whoever accepts a consideration for his vote is unworthy of his citizenship.

Buying nominations is un-republican, debauching to public morals, destructive to patriotism and a menace to liberty and republican government.

The right of a man to sell his labor where and to whom he pleases is the essence of free labor. The boycott should have no place on American soil.

Labor has the undoubted right to organize and insist upon a just wage.

Corporate power must be the servant and not the master of the people.

As many of the Southern states have disfranchised the negro, while still he is reckoned in fixing the congressional apportionment of those states, congress is called upon to enforce the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution.

Starting out with the assertion that a direct primary law is needed, the very next paragraph says that he who asks for office discloses his unfitness to hold it. Could there be anything more silly or idiotic than that? How would it be possible to make nominations under a primary law if nobody asked for an office? What is there wrong, or disgraceful or unfitting in a person seeking a situation from the people?

The main purpose of the great Jackson convention of Fremont voters appears to have been the organization of a mutual admiration society of has-beens. Outside of the demand for a primary election law not a single solution was offered for the evils that afflict the people at this time.

THE COVERED PATROL WAGON.

In many American cities a movement to have police patrol wagons covered so that the occupants will not be exposed to public view has met with success. The Duluth patrol wagon is not yet covered, although the state law provides that it should have been done by Feb 1. However a cover is now being prepared and will soon be in place.

If only the guilty and the vile were compelled to ride in these conveyances perhaps it would be just as well to have them exposed to the view of the public so that they might be known and shunned of all men. But oftentimes men guilty of no crime, and others who have committed minor indiscretions, young girls and boys, are compelled to ride in the patrol wagon to the police station, exposed to view of the curious. Many a young girl who has taken her first downward step might be saved from a career of vice and degradation, but for the humiliation and shame of such a public exposure.

Furthermore, the patrol wagon is more often used for hauling the drunken man to jail than for any other purpose. Usually he is a pitiful object and has arrived at such a degree of boisterousness that he is in a constant struggle with the officers until landed. Such sights as these it is well to hide from the public gaze. They can do no good to the rising generation. They see enough horrible examples for their warning. Besides, like the young girl offender, the drunken man may have committed his first offense of the kind. Perhaps the experience of a police court fine may serve as a warning that will bring him to an abrupt about face and permanent reform. Would it not be better if such as these could be kept from public view?

The city council has been slow to appropriate the necessary money so that the law could be complied with. However it has been done and there should be no further delay in effecting this reform. It should have been done voluntarily years ago without waiting for any state law.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

If there had been a primary election law in Illinois giving the people power to nominate their own candidates for state offices, there would have been no deadlock in the Republican convention of that state.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate corrects a mistaken impression that has gone broadcast as to the reasons why the missionary society did not accept the legacy provided for it under the will of the late W. W. Cooper, of Kenosha, Wis., who perished in the Iroquois theater fire last December. The editor says: "The comments of the daily press were based upon the assumption of a reporter, who was entirely ignorant of the facts in the case." The Advocate states that the reasons for rejection of the legacy were strictly economical, based upon the conclusion that the society could not afford to accept the same upon the conditions attached to it in the will. Secretary Leonard says, in a note published later in the Daily Christian Advocate: "The fact of his having lost his life in a theater was not mentioned either in our finance committee or in the board of managers." Here is another instance where the over-zealous reporter made a readable story at the expense of truth. There will come a time when the reading public will tire of the newspaper that panders to the sensational to the exclusion of veracity and accuracy.

The Brooklyn Eagle announces that betting on the races at the track is not nearly so "bad" as betting on the same races in a poolroom. Then if that is so the buying of wheat in the bin is not so "bad" as betting on the price at the board of trade. There is a good deal of flapdoodle about this pool-room business. It is difficult to see wherein it is worse to bet in one place than another. The real vice is found in the cheating and gouging that usually accompanies the game of chance. If the pool-room is a cheating place it ought to be suppressed Likewise the board of trade or the bucketshop. There is no business in which the element of chance does not enter. Even the man who loans money on real estate security bets that the land will be worth the amount of the loan when the day of maturity arrives. And he sometimes loses. An honestly-conducted pool-room ought to be just as legitimate as an honestly-conducted board of trade. The dishonest operator ought to be punished—the honest one let alone. Some day the American people will get over the notion that it is their duty to protect other people against their own financial folly.

According to certain reasoning, where the "Iowa idea" is kicked out of a Republican convention it is because there is no demand for it among Republican voters. Where it is adopted by a Republican convention, it is because of a desire to catch Democratic voters. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways for a "stand-patter."

If Mayor Fay keeps his promise those Virginia saloonkeepers and bartenders will at least have opportunity for one day of rest in seven. And that in itself is more than recompense for being compelled to keep closed doors on Sundays. If the parties most directly effected could only realize this and join in a movement for earlier closing and a day of rest, and for strict observation of all laws, they would not only promote their own welfare in the matter of health, but would win the respect and esteem of the general public and would place the saloon business on a respectable basis, which would pay better in the end.

There are many people who will agree with ex-Governor Black of New York in these statements, recently uttered anent the indiscriminate warfare against the pool rooms of New York: "This seems to be a golden age for the appropriation and expenditure of contingent funds wherewith to make men moral. To war against vice has come to be a fad, if not a profession. The agents of the reformers are fierce in their efforts to run down some fellow who is guilty of taking a bet on a horse race; or to hurry to prison some unfortunate woman who is suspected of being other than what she ought to be. Meanwhile, criminals who have committed deeds of far more heinous character are overlooked. The whole thing reeks of hypocrisy and pretense. It is not the level."

HOTEL GOSSIP

Frank W. Martineau, who is representing the Rogers Bros., who are to be in Duluth shortly with their show, has a large mail and consequently carries many stamps.

"Most people out in the West use 25-cent books, according to my observation," said he, "but it would be a waste of time for me to monkey with them. I carry the dollar size, as they last longer, and even then I occasionally buy a half dollar's or a dollar's worth on the side when I want some for immediate use. It saves the trouble of tearing them out of the package.

"That reminds me that I have never seen in the West the stamp slot machines that we used to have in the East. There was a friend of mine interested in them, and I remember he told me how much money they expected to make, but as the machines have all disappeared lately—at least I have not seen any of them for a long time—I guess the government did not take kindly to them. They were regular nickel-in-the-slot stamp machines and would serve you with two 2-cent stamps for a nickel, leaving a cent, or 20 per cent of the gross receipts, for expenses and profits.

"Maybe the people found them too expensive, for a good many people would think twice before putting an extra cent in an investment of a couple of 2-cent stamps.

"Went down to the St. Louis hotel to look up a young friend of mine who is with the 'Gamekeeper' company, Frank W. Leary, and when I was looking over the register I noticed the name on the book of E. J. Boyle, of Rush City. I did not know whether that was intended to indicate Rush City, Minn., or some other state, but I was pretty well pleased to know there is a real Rush City, for a few years ago there used to be a play of that name, a sort of Wild Western arrangement. It was a good show, though, of its kind, with lots of fun in it.

"As I remember it, it was a show gotten up with the idea of showing the development of a boom town, and one of the leading characters in it was taken by an actor named Joseph Ott. He was a very good comedian, and I believe he was a brother of Theresa Vaughn, who was probably the most famous stage beauty of her time some years ago. She was not of the same type as Lillian Russell, who was a contemporary, being a slight woman. This she made a most charming appearance, I can tell you, and was a good actress. One of her most attractive features were her hands, which a man cannot well describe, but I know that from the audience the people used to watch those hands very carefully, and she used them very gracefully, too.

"But to get back to Ott. He used to do some very original things, and in this part in 'Rush City' he represented a land agent who was always hustling around separating willing people from their coin of the realm.

"It is one of the most venerable stunts in stage work for some member of a team to come on the empty stage and look around and say, 'I had an appointment to meet a friend here. I don't see him anywhere, so suppose I had better wait a while. Just to pass the time away I think I'll amuse myself by singing a little song.'

"Well, Joe had a take-off on this that was the best thing I ever saw of the kind and burlesqued it to the queen's taste. There was a street scene well to the front of the stage and Ott, all dressed up in flashy, real-estate-agent clothes, would walk briskly on and salute the audience.

"Then he would begin to look around and as he would see no one on the stage, would say, 'A friend of mine was to meet me here, but he don't seem to be in sight. Supposed I ought to wait for him. Guess I'll sing a little tune to amuse myself. But let me see if I have time.'

"Then he would pull out his watch and look at it. 'No, by George I have not got a minute to spare.' And he would leave the stage. The trick always took the audience so well that they would make him come back. Then he would sing."

Among the Skibo people in the city are Mrs. J. F. Symington, at the McKay, and F. C. Laird, the lumberman at the Spalding. It is said that Skibo is the only station of the name in the United States (if not in the world). It was formerly called St. Louis, until the misdirection of mail intended for it to the Mound City in Missouri caused agitation for a change of name, which resulted in the selection of Skibo.

Two leading figures in the state arrived at the Spalding from Minneapolis. They are Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones and State Senator Smith, and they are here to look over the political situation, getting pointers from Senators E. B. Hawkins, T. M. Pugh and others.

Mr. Jones admits that he is a candidate to succeed himself and says he has no opposition so far as he knows, but prefers to get out and look at the situation rather than to trust to chance to keep him in favor. He says he does not care to discuss the fight for governor and that so far as Governor Van Sant is concerned, he has never heard that official discuss the matter. He says it is generally understood that Van Sant is not a candidate.

Senator Smith would not discuss politics but said the present lake strike has one good feature, in that it impresses the public with the magnitude of the lake traffic, and its importance in various directions.

THE "EXCLUSION" MANIA.

Christian Register: A very curious spectacle is presented when a Jew in America makes a vehement demand for the exclusion of the Chinese. One would think that the sufferings of the Jews under exclusion acts, and other limitations of their liberty to work for a living and to enjoy the proceeds of their labor, would have made them tolerant in regard to other races. Such a spectacle as a Jewish workingman urging the exclusion of the Chinese is a wonderful illustration of the persistence of racial prejudices and dislikes. It reveals, deep down underneath religious antagonisms and industrial strife, the grooves of racial antagonisms that go back to the primitive ages. Christmen and Jews alike protest against the injustice which they suffer at the hands of governments and nationalities to which they are subject. But, instead of learning the lesson of tolerance from their own sufferings, some of them agree to inflict upon the Chinese every social and industrial disability of which in their own case they complain.

Were it not for racial prejudices which have become irrational and injurious, all men would see and acknowledge the fact that, for the education of the world and for progress in political science and social well-being, it would be well if all intelligent and well-educated men and women in all classes, all nations and all races, were free to travel everywhere throughout the world. Now we let into the United States Buddhists, Brahmins, Parsees, Hindus and Turks without discrimination and without restriction. But we draw the line to exclude hundreds of thousands of the most intelligent, capable and well-trained people of Asia because they are Confucian and Chinese. Now who can doubt that it would be well for China and well for Europe and America (and that we should all be the wiser for it) if all the men in China of the intellectual grade of Wu Ting-fang or Ko Kun-hua, formerly professor of the Chinese language and literature in Harvard college, or our present Chinese minister at Washington, with scores of others, graduates of our colleges and universities, and hundreds more, highly cultivated gentlemen, were allowed perfect freedom to travel, to observe our institutions, to learn the ways of civilization, to give us the result of their observation, and to report the same to their countrymen?

AN OLD STORY.

New York World: The acquittal of James Newman, indicted for manslaughter in the first degree for shooting and killing Wilbur Van Tassell for "breaking up his home," is the repetition of a verdict which puts the "unwritten law" above the statute law. It also raises again the old question, "What good?"

In this case the faithless wife, dressed in mourning for her dead paramour, unblushingly admitted on the witness-stand her infidelity, giving as a reason that she "loved Wilbur better than Jim." She gave her testimony in a very pert manner and "laughed lightly" as she left the stand.

And this is the sort of woman for whom a respectable man and "kind husband" became a murderer! What has he gained except publicity for his shame and the life-long memory of a crime? Is his "broken home" mended? Will he take the flippant and faithless woman back? Is his "honor" vindicated by killing the man whom his wife confessed that she freely and eagerly ran after?

If "injured husbands" would do a little rational thinking before resorting to the pistol, and try to find in their inner consciousness a saving remnant of self-respect, there would be fewer fool homicides and farcical verdicts.

The History of Today.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: "Primarily," said Editor Watterson to the National Editorial association, "the daily newspaper is the history of yesterday."

True, if it is published on the morning of the day after, but if it is published on the evening of the day the events it reports happen, it is the history of today. Col. Watterson overlooked the afternoon newspaper.

The evening newspaper is the history of today; the morning newspaper is the history of yesterday, and today's news is popular with the reading public.

Following were some editorial comments of The Herald of the issue of May 24:

The Oklahoma boomers are on the rampage again.

Just catch on to the latest Chicago combination, Blaine and Logan! It won't work.

Delegate Raymond will probably succeed himself as Dakota's representative in congress.

There is already a big split in the anti-monopolist party, of which Ben Butler is the presidential nominee.

Delegate Raymond's bill to increase the representation in the legislative bodies of Dakota, meets with general approval in the territory.

Pat Donan is looming up more prominently than ever as a candidate for governor of Dakota.

J. E. Knowlton says he has not yet decided to accept the position of alderman tendered him by the council. Joey seems to think the honor is hardly worth the amount of labor the office requires and his head comes pretty near being level. But the duty one owes to the dear people should be borne in mind.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Washington Star: "He is an egotistic person."

"Very. He is one of those people who cannot think of a higher compliment than the remark, 'I agree with you.' "

Washington Star: "I am strongly inclined to think that your husband has appendicitis," said the physician.

"That's just like him," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "He always waits till anything has pretty near gone out of style before he decides to get it."

Philadelphi Press: I ain't got no doubt," said Mr. Holer, "but what I kin git that there job as consul at that place in England. It'd be cinch, too."

"Oh, yes," replied Pepprey, "if you can learn to speak the language."

Philadelphia Press: Tess—Mr. Sloman is such an excitable individual; so effervescent, as it were.

Jess—I should think you'd be the last person in the world to call him effervescent.

Tess—Why?

Jess—I notice you haven't succeeded in making him "pop."

"Next:" P. Nurious—What a great big nose that big brown-haired girl has.

Si Stey—That's Miss Goldbonds. She is worth two millions in her own name.

P. Nurious—I always did admire a prominent nose; it denotes character. Introduce me.

Chicago Chronicle: Mrs. Goodleigh—I can give you a suit of my husband's, but it will be about six sizes too big for you.

Wandering Willie—Thank you, madam, but I must decline to accept it. I am too much of a patriot to desire to be mistaken for an Englishman.

Tit-Bits: Mabel—What a perfectly exquisite bonnet, dearest.

Ethel—Oh, I'm so glad you like it. I was so afraid you wouldn't. Are you sure you like it?

Mabel—Sure? Oh, perfectly. I always did adore that shape. Why, I had three just like it—when it was in fashion.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Paul Globe: If it be a fact, as it is, that Cuba, had she been treated as were the Philippines, would have been as hostile and as alien as they, it is likewise true that we have only to treat the Philippines as we have treated Cuba to create there, notwithstanding the existence of actual war, a feeling akin to what the Cubans cherish. Let those people understand that they are to have a future of their own. Tell them that the United States does not mean to hold them forever captive. Say to them that we earnestly and practically support the principles on which our own government is founded. Declare that they, too shall have their independence guarded by our protecting care, aided by our material resources, but free politically from our interference or dictation.

Given those conditions, we should undoubtedly find the Philippines less than a generation from now, petitioning for annexation as a favor, instead of bearing arms against it as a curse. Politicians have done an evil turn for the Philippines, for the United States and for liberty. The experience of Cuba points out to them and to us all eloquently a more excellent way.

Minneapolis Tribune: There is danger of all sorts of grave international complications in the case of Mr. Perdicaris, a resident of Morocco, born in New York of Greek parents, who with his British stepson, has been captured and held for ransom by Moorish brigands, should an American warship start from a Spanish port with a Swedish gunner's mate and join forces with an English torpedo boat, manned by a North of Ireland crew.

St. Cloud Journal-Jress: The unpardonable offense committed by Governor La Follette, of Wisconsin, is his contention that railroad rates should be fair and equitable. He has the enemity of the railroads because he would have the freight rates revised to give the inland towns the same chance to do business as it given the large cities, and he has the opposition of the big lumber companies, paper manufacturers, brewers, and other big shippers, because he would do away with the rebates that make it possible for the big concerns to crush their smaller rivals. He is hated by the corporations because he believes in fair play for all big and little. The corporations are determined to crush him, and it is certainly humiliating to Republicans outside of Wisconsin to see that some of the most eminent of the party leaders are heading the bolt against him, and making Democratic success almost assured.

Tower News: The fight for the Republican nomination for governor in this state between R. C. Dunn and Judge Collins goes merrily along and meanwhile the voters are learning several things about both candidates which is leading them to think strongly of throwing their support elsewhere.

Red Wing News: When the Democrats meet in St. Louis, they will not fail to give proper consideration to the availability of John Sharp Williams. No boom has been started for him and none need be. If he appears to be the best man the convention will turn to him. We have a growing conviction that it is the most likely nomination.

Grand Marais Herald: Some of Duluth's good citizens are again making war on Sunday baseball. It is not because these good people's Sunday meditations are disturbed by the game, but they want to makes other people be good according to their ideas of goodness. It's a narrow minded notion that people can't be good and have fun, too.

Carnegie's Purpose.

Pittsburg Dispatch: The Carnegie hero fund commission held its initial meeting in this city yesterday and perfected the formal organization of Mr. Carnegie's original and unique philanthropy. It is worthy of note that this meeting furnishes a statement to correct—what was previously known to be erroneous—the assertion of some people so anxious to criticise that they did not take the trouble to inform themselves, namely, that Mr. Carnegie is proposing to stimulate heroism by paying for it. The resolutions of the commission as well as Mr. Carnegie's original letter show that the first purpose is to provide for the families of men who are killed or injured in heroic attempts to rescue or benefit their fellow men. Mr. Carnegie's endowment is of unusual character, but it certainly deserves to be fairly understood and treated on its merits.

PICKING OUT THE CHORUS.

New York Sun: Divers Washington dispatches report a large area of perplexity in the White House as to the selection of the orators who are to have the happiness to second the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt in the Chicago convention. The Hon. Harry Stillwell Edwards, postmaster at Macon, Ga., is to be the first seconder. He has been formally ratified by the president. Presumably, Postmaster Edwards will dilate upon Mr. Roosevelt's long devotion to civil service reform and his aversion to the pernicious activity of federal officeholders in primaries, state conventions and national conventions.

Mr. Edwards will speak for the South. The spokesmen of several other sections of our common country have yet to be chosen. For the political compass is to be thoroughly boxed. North, north by east, nor'-nor'east, nor'east by north, and so on—all the cardinal and sub-cardinal points must point with pride at our illustrious soldier, statesman, patriot, author, economist, moralist, anti-inaithusiastist and man. But the compass is small and the spouters are many; and many of them are ineligible.

For instance, the Hon. Joseph Cotton, who grows in the Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas, yearns to testify as to the wild yearning of the Banana Belt and the great Northwest for more years

Theodore.

Mr. Cotton's lungs are good. There is no doubt of his zeal. But the boll weevil of monopoly is in him. It is urged that it would be unwise to select a representative of the Standard Oil company and the United States Steel corporation." Not only unwise, but unthinkable. The chief duty of such henchmen of peif is to pay up and shut up. They may sign checks to the educational fund, but they must make no sign in the national convention. Unobtrusive benevolence is their sphere.

So, off goes Joe Cotton, with the anti-trust hook in his cervix, and on comes the Hon. Charles Axel Smith, the millionaire lumberman of Minneapolis. There is a great "Swedish-American" vote in those parts. Mr. Smith was good enough to be a McKinley elector in 1896. But times have changed. Besides, Smith is no orator, as Rogers is.

So Charles Axel revolves himself into silence; and Rogers, of St. Paul, appears. The trail of the trust serpent is on Rogers. The leprosy of plutocracy has not yet attacked Rogers. He is a "spellbinder" of tremendous output. "He has no entangling alliances with the trusts." He "has made no secret among his friends that he desires the honor of seconding Roosevelt's nomination for the purpose of furthering his candidacy for a federal job in Washington."

Plainly, Rogers is eligible. So one Northwestern seconder is secured. Mr. Roosevelt is said to want still another seconder from the Tropic of Gopher. Our old friend, the Hon. J. Adam Bede, of the Vermillion range and rhetoric, is the man. The venerable Bede is not a delegate, but it will be easy to get him into the convention. He is rather wiry for so solemn a business, but, no doubt, he has "settled down" since the waggish years when he used to wear birch bark "pants" and send us samples of this wooden wear.

Now England, the Middle West, the Rockies, the Pacific slope must also speak with most miraculous organ. Who shall the organ be? The discrimination against Duluth Cotton and Axel Smith shows where the real trouble comes in picking out the Roosevelt chorus for Chicago. Though Republican orators speak with the tongues of men and angels, they can't go on the eligible list if they are smeared with trust tar. The same process of elimination which the president has used in Minnesota has yet to be applied in New York. However the president's heart may bleed for the results, he is bound to accept them with Roman sternness. The Hon. Elihu Root must be rejected. The Hon. Frank W. Black must be rejected. No man guilty of entangling alliances with trusts, no man guilty of being a "corporation lawyer" is worthy to "present" to the delighted thousands at Chicago the name of the austere and implacable leader of the Republican New Thought, the judge and executioner of trusts.

JONES IS ACTIVE

Lieutenant Governor Does Not Believe In Resting Quietly.

Comes to Duluth In Interest of His Candidacy.

"I am an active politician and don't believe in sitting around and waiting for my friends to do the work," said Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones today. "It appear to me that a man in office who wants to continue to serve the people ought to show the same interest in his propspects as the man who is making his fight for the first time.

"My campaign is, in consequence, just as active as if I were not now in the office, and I am trying to get around and see as many of my friends as I can, just the same as if there were seven or eight other candidates in the field. I am working just as hard as if the opposition were on all sides.

"My visit to Duluth is to see some of my friends, political and otherwise, as I have a number of them here and have always had a friendly interest in the city. If you will look in the legislative manual and glance over the committees I think you will see that by the selection of committees Duluth was given good treatment in this respect, and the senators from this section are on the most important committees.

"If anything I believe the Zenith City has a better representation in this direction than she has ever had before, and as a consequence I can come up here and have nothing to be ashamed of in respect to my selection of committees.

"The Republican contest for the governorship seems to be pretty well settled as between Dunn, Collins and Eddy, and while I don't know just how Mr. Eddy's strength is devolping, I am pretty sure he is not losing any ground. He is a good campaigner you know, and a worker. He is a great man to get out in the country districts and get acquainted with the people.

"All the noise that has been made by the Republicans so far in the fight does not appear to have disturbed the Democrats and they do not appear to be interested in the state situation at any point where I have visited, at least they do not appear to be putting forth any active effort.

"As to national politics, there is no doubt of the unanimity of the state for President Roosevelt for the nomination. But I should not be surprised to see a split in the St. Louis Democratic convention. While Mr. Bryan's course in some things may not have been to the exact pleasure of all his friends, I believe there still are a lot of Democrats who will follow him or his desires, in the national affairs.

"The fights in the state matters in Wisconsin and Illinois, which are normally Republicans, might weaken them for the national Republican event, but that is not certain. In a general way the situation is far and away in favor of the Reoublicans."

TALK WITH PARKER

Thinks He Is Big Enough Man to Be President.

Told Friend He Is Proof Against the "Swelled Head."

Chicago, May 25.—A New York special from Walter Wellman to the Chicago Record-Herald says: Judge Parker has spoken at last. He has opened his mouth and declared that he thinks he is a big enough man to be president of the United States. It is true, the judge was not speaking for publication, and it would not be quite fair to hold him responsible for all that he is alleged to have said. But his remarks, which come to hand through the kindness of one of his friends, are interesting and may start some good-natured discussion. This friend, a lawyer of New York city, has known the judge many years. They were boys together. Not long ago the lawyer was at Albany to argue a case before the court of appeals, and as the court adjourned for recess Justice Parker sent his friend a note suggesting that they have luncheon together for old-time's sake. During the meal the talk was of the familiar and informal sort, as may be judged by the report of it which the lawyer gives. He asked Judge Parker:

"How do you feel over the prospect that you may become president of the United States? Do you think you can manage such a big job?"

"I have no doubt about it," replied Justice Parker. "I have no fear that my lack of familiarity with life at Washington will seriously handicap me. If I am elected I believe I can fill the job. I may not know all about it now, but I can learn it. There are men from whom one may learn a great deal about the presidency before taking the office, and the rest will come after one gets in. I feel about the possibility that I may become president of the United States just as I did when I took the office of chief justice of the court of appeals. I realized that I was the youngest man on the bench and I said to myself: 'Parker, what you want to do is to go slow for a time and keep your mouth pretty well shut till you get onto your job.' And I followed that rule. I am following it now as to this presidential talk and shall continue to follow it for a time. There is one thing I feel quite sure of," added Judge Parker, according to his lawyer friend, "and that is that no matter what happens, nothing can swell my head."

I leave it to my readers if this plain and simple side light on the character of the man who stands the best chance to be the Democratic nominee for president is not a most interesting one. It shows Judge Parker as he really is when the dignity of the ermine and the mystification of the receptive and silent candidate for a great honor are thrown aside. It gives us a glimpse of the modest, reticent though not timid man himself. He feels that he is big enough for the presidency, and at any rate eis determined to do his best if the fates call him. True, there is something quite queer about the judge's suggestion that if nominated he knows some place to go to get hints as to how the presidency should be managed, and I confess I am not altogether clear as to what he meant by that.

Possibly his lawyer friend did not correctly quote him, though his version wears all the verisimilitude of substantial accuracy. The politicians who do not like Judge Parker very well will probably conclude that he had David B. Hill in mind when he said he knew where he could get instructions. But to my notion it is quite as probable he meant he would ask Theodore Roosevelt about it. You will remember that Mr. Roosevelt and Judge Parker are warm personal friends. They were quite chummy when Col. Roosevelt was at Albany as governor. If the judge should happen to be nominated and elected, I doubt not his old friend would give him plenty of points if he were only asked to do so. Which reminds me that we have fallen on curious days in our national politics. Everyone knows that Mr. Roosevelt did not know much about running the White House when fate called him. But he has worked and studied and struggled, and is now fully up to his job. If the Democrats nominate and succeed in electing Mr. Parker, we shall have another president who frankly confesses in advance that he has the business to learn.

The New York friends of Judge Parker feel strangely confident he is to be the choice of the Democratic convention at St. Louis. They are reckoning upon getting the support of Ohio at the convention to be held this week and with Ohio added to the long list of big northern states friendly to Parker, they say there is virtually no doubt the South will come in pretty nearly solid for him, and that will mean his nomination on the first, or at the latest, on the second ballot. I hear from Albany that David B. Hill is absolutely sure of Parker's success and Mr. Hill is a pretty good politician as everyone knows. He is so confident the Tammany people cannot do him any harm he has advised Judge Parker to stand pat —or, rather, to permit Hill to stand pat for him—in the struggle against Murphy and his people. Mr. Hill tells his friends he does not fear the opposition of Tammany at St. Louis. He cannot get excited over the danger that Tammany may convince the remainder of the country that Judge Parker would be a weak candidate in New York. The national Democrats have heard such growls from Tammany ere now. In fact they have heard them so often they have become accustomed to them and they would hardly know what to think if Tammany were to show up calm and peaceful and without swinging any tomahawks in the air. Mr. Hill is confident the national Democracy will virtually ignore Tammany, and say to the braves: "O, you fellows always come here with your local quarrels, and we don't care anything about them. We'll nominate the man who has the solid delegation from New York back of him, and then you can go home and fix it up, this you have done in the past."

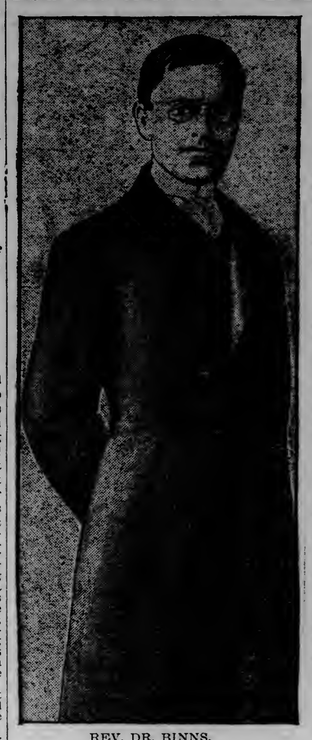
Careful inquiry satisfies me Hill is pretty nearly right in his general conclusions, though he may be a little too truculent in his treatment of Tammany. He encourages McCarren and Grout in their war on the organization, and if one could believe coeverything he hears this is a struggle to the death between them. Down in Wall street, where they know so little about politics, they think they see an eternal feud between Hill and Murphy and the organization cutting the Parker ticket all to pieces next November. It is on this Wall street largely bases its conclusion that Roosevelt is sure of re-election. This latter deduction may turn out to be correct, but I do not believe it is warranted in the New e York quarrel Hill's idea, and this also has become Parker's idea, is that the trouble can be adjusted after the nomination is made. The Parker people will go to St. Louis telling the delegates from all the other states that after the convention and before the election comes round, peace will reign in New York and the Parker ticket will carry the state by 50,000. Judge Parker had wanted to fix everything up before the convention but I hear he has deferred to Hill and concluded to let Tammany sweat till after the nomination is made. If he be made the nominee he will then take up Tammany's grievance and see how he can adjust it. And it is a very simple grievance, easily appeased. All Tammany wants is an assurance that if Judge Parker gets into the White House he will not permit the federal patronage to be used against the organization in New York city and Brooklyn. When the proper time comes, Tammany will get this assurance, and the war will be over.

There have been many hints in the higher political circles here that Judge Parker and David Bennett Hill are not getting on as sweetly as of yore. I can find little or no evidence on which to base any such conclusion. In fact, the men who know them both intimately say there is no basis for the rumor. Judge Parker is showing a disposition to have something to say on his account, and to listen to other advisers besides Hill. David Bennett is not by any manner of means the entire show. But beyond this there seems to be only conjecture to support the theory that they have had a break. The one bit of evidence sustaining the rupture theory—and that is exceedingly unsubstantial—was brought from Albany by the Mr. Hornblower whom President Cleveland once nominated to be a justice of the supreme court. Mr. Hornblower and Judge Parker are warm friends. After a visit to the judge and a conference on political matters Mr. Hornblower came back to New York, and a friend asked him how Hill was getting along with his Parker boom. "Poor Hill—poor Hill," repiled Hornblower. What was meant by this anyone may guess. It cannot mean that Mr. Hornblower thinks the Parker boom is wilting, because it is well known he believes the judge is sure of the nomination. If it means anything it must mean that in his opinion Mr. Hill is riding to a fall if he thinks he is going to be a general and particular manager of Alton B. Parker, presidential candidate and possibly president. Many of the best informed politicians here believe it will be found impossible for Parker and Hill to trot in double harness, and that a smash-up is sure at some stage of the game, but it will be well to wait and see if it is really to be "Poor Hill."

CHINESE WANT FUGITIVE.

Hong Kong, May 25.—Four Chinese gunboats and two torpedo boat destroyers have arrived at Macao, the Portuguese settlement in Kwang Tung province, to support the demand of the viceroy of Canton for the extradition of a fugitive from Chinese justice. The government of the Portuguese settlement is preparing to resist a landing by the Chinese.

EMINENT CLERGYMEN



REV. DR. BINNS.

Rev. Dr. Binns, Methodist Minister and Temperance Advocate, of Philadelphia, Who Was Going Into Consumption Was Completely Cured by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

"As a temperance advocate and minister of the Gospel, I desire to make a brief statement in regard to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I was completely run down from overwork and overstudy, was apparently going into consumption, and my doctor told me I could not get well unless I used a tonic-stimulant of the best class. He recommended Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

RECOMMEND

"At first I hesitated to take it on account of the name 'whiskey.' My condition, however, was so serious that I was prevailed upon to begin on it at once. This was about a year ago. I took it, perhaps, three months, and it entirely cured me of my throat and lung trouble. I have found since that your whiskey is not regarded as a whiskey in the usual meaning of the word, and that it is used as a medicine by many clergymen. I have no hesitation in advising all who are sick and run down to take Duffy's."—Rev. S. E. Binns, D. D., Germantown, Philadelphia. Feb. 29, 1904.

FIRE AT BLACKDUCK.

Two Residences Were Burned to the Ground.

Bemidji, Minn., May 25.—At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon fire broke out in the residence of D. H. Congdon, at Blackduck, and before the flames could be quenched Mr. Congdon's residence and that of J. D. Jones adjoining was burned to the ground. Practically nothing was saved from the Congdon house, but a good share of the household goods was saved from the Jones residence.

VALUE OF A KISS.

Jury Fixes It at One Hundred Dollars.

Baltimore, May 25.—A jury yesterday, in the superior court fixed the value of a kiss at $100 in the case of Ellen Von Bouren, aged 16, against Frank Bohager. According to the girl's story, she had called upon Bohager at his office for employment, when he kissed her and told her to go to work next morning.

A Startling Test.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c, at all druggists.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Bessemer Taxpayers Object to Reduction of Mine Valuation.

Bessemer—The valuation of the Tilden mine was lowered by the city equalization board from $350,000 to $275,000. Three years ago this mine stood at $1,200,000, but has been gradually reduced. Taxpayers are disgusted with the action of the board, as it means taxes will be higher than last year, when they were $4 on every $100 assessed. The general manager of the steel trust, in insisting upon the reduction, stated that the Tilden was practically exhausted and would close down for good another year. Other taxpayers will appeal to the state tax commission.

A new sawmill is to be built on the D. S. S. & A. R. R., where it crosses Black river, about three miles northeast of this city. O. J. Blanchard and associates, of Ohio, are heavy land owners in that section, and have decided to cut their timber and dispose of the land to settlers.

Ontonagon—What is believed to be the most modern and complete sawmill in the upper peninsula is that of the Ontonagon Lumber and Cedar company, which has just gone into commission. It is equipped with two bandsaws and a thirty-four-inch gang, and has innumerable contrivances for handling logs and lumber economically and expeditiously.

Halstead—J. F. Buehler & Co.'s sawmill and lumber yard was destroyed by fire. Loss $50,000, with no insurance.

Calumet—The drives are coming along nicely and mills are resuming operations in all parts of the peninsula. The streams are high and there will soon be plenty of logs at all manufacturing points.

Menominee—The committee on salaries of the Menominee city council recommended at this week's meeting that the salary of the municipal judge be $1500 per annum, the same as last year. The council adopted the report.

An agreement has been reached with the shingle weavers by some manufacturers and two of the mills that have been closed have already resumed operations with union crews, the Hamilton-Merryman company and the H. Witbeck company putting their plants in commision again. Other mills will probably start in a day or two.

Gladstone—The Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company will operate its mills at Gladstone all winter "on time and a quarter. For this year, at least, its contracts warrant continuous work, but the outlook generally is not encouraging and it is feared that another year the cooperage business may feel the effects of a depression that has already affected other branches of the lumber industry.

Christian Peterson a Yankton Farmer, Drowns In the River.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—Christian Peterson, a farmer, single, and aged 43, was drowned in the river here Sunday. Peterson went to the river soon after 7, and not returning, a search was instituted. Four hours later the body was found in the river close to the shore.

Harry Eller, formerly of this place, is here for the summer from Chicago.

Frank Ware, a short-change man, who worked his graft very boldly at Lesterville, Tabor, Hanson and other neighboring towns, was nabbed here. He pleaded guilty to petit larceny and was fined, with costs, $33.

Miller—Col. John H. King, of Huron, is authority for the statement that Governor Herreld, Attorney General Hall, Maj. Stewart and Judge Gaffy have each applied for the position of attorney in this state of the Northwestern railway, the place vacated by Coe I. Crawford.

Thomas Hook, aged 17, who ran away from his adopted parents several weeks ago, cannot be found. He took a shotgun and it is feared he may have shot himself.

J. C. McCool, a farmer, was knocked down by lightning, but soon rallied. His buildings were struck at the same time.

Pierre—Thomas Brown, of this city, has presented to the state historical society the barrel of a gun which was carried by his great-grandfather, John Williams, in the English service in the revolutionary war. Mr. Williams was allowed to carry the gun home to England, and upon his 102rd birthday presented it to Mr. Brown, who, after serving in the Crimean war, brought the gun to America in 1856. In 1881 Mr. Brown settled in Dakota, and in 1889 had the gun converted from a flint lock to a percussion lock. In 1889 the gun was in the fire which destroyed the Brown home in Sully county, leaving only the barrel.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—There is a movement to convert the money received from the state insurance fund into a relief fund for the firemen. It amounts to about $2000 annually, and heretofore has been divided between the three volunteer organizations and used for banquets. City Treasurer Mitchell holds that the city is entitled to the money and asserts he will hold out the present annual payment until ordered to return it to the firemen, on the ground that the city virtually has a paid fire department. The discussion of his position led to the suggestion to establish the relief fund.

The local land office officials have held the entry of Charles Rudio for a Stutsman county quarter section for cancellation. His claim was contested by William Cavanaugh on the ground that it had been abandoned. Thomas Hutton started a contest against William Gorman, who had made an entry in Dickey county. He failed to prosecute and the case has been dismissed.

Ann Oderkirk, of Casselton, has secured a divorce from Stephen Oderkirk on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. They conducted a hotel at Casselton for many years.

Percy Stark and Joseph McMullen, boys in the Catholic orphanage, went west to kill Indians. They were rounded up at Casselton and started back on the next train, but seem to have slipped away and escaped.

Denhoff—One-fourth of the business section of this town burned. The loss was total, amounting to $12,000. The burned district includes a livery stable, meat market, two bowling alleys and the principal hotel.

VIOLATED STATE LAWS.

Charge Against Montana Coal Company's Superintendent.

Butte, Mont., May 25.—Attorney General James Donovan has caused the arrest at Red Lodge, Mont., of Robert Pettigrew, general superintendent of the Northwestern Improvement company, on a charge of violating the state laws.

The attorney general accuses Superintendent Pettigrew of preventing the employment of one Nathan Smethurst as check weighman, because Smethurst had not been engaged by any member of the company. Pettigrew was released on a $500 bond and his hearing set for June 1.

The outcome will be watched with the greatest interest by the unions of the Northwest and the arrest of Pettigrew at the instigation of the attorney general of the state is regarded as a signal victory for them. The merits of the dispute are before President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America.

The arrest of Pettigrew is the outcome of the trouble which caused the recent strike of 600 miners in the mines here. The Northwestern Improvement company operates all of the coal mines of the Northern Pacific Railway company, its principal offices being at Tacoma and St. Paul.

Washington, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following rural carriers have been apointed: Burtrum, Minn.—Regular, H. Walker; substitute, George D. Walker. Little Falls—Regulars, A. R. Longfellow, Jesse Niles and Floyd Niles; substitutes, Martin Scott, Annie H. Niles and Archie E. Niles.

AFFLICTED BY BLINDNESS

Was Wealthy German, Waiting For Letter From Girl.

New York, May 25.—The physicians of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, at Thirteenth street and Second avenue, are greatly puzzled over one of the most extraordinary cases of blindness ever brought to their attention. The patient is Fritz Henry von Schoeninger, formerly a wealthy man of Darmstadt, Germany, who has been living at No. 123 Broome street.

Until a fortnight ago Schoeninger's eyesight was perfect. His eyes never had troubled him and he never had worn glasses. One night, about ten days ago, shortly before retiring, he felt a peculiar sensation in his right eye. He gave it no thought, believing it some slight affection. When he awoke next morning his eye troubled him greatly, and he started to bathe it in cold water. A moment later he discovered he was blind in the affected eye.

A few days later the other eye became irritated, and he went to the infirmary. The surgeons told him he was getting blind. A consultation of physicians will be held at the institution today to diagnose Schoeninger's case.

Schoeninger came to New York from Darmstadt about two years ago under romantic circumstances. He was a man of wealth and owned a large estate on the banks of the Rhine. The property was valued at $300,000, from which he received a comfortable income. His father, ninety-five years old, and his mother, aged eighty-five, lived with him.

About five years ago Schoeninger met a young woman in his native city. They fell in love, became engaged. The wedding day had been set and arrangements for the marriage begun. One day the lovers quarreled. Thinking his case hopeless the distracted lover disappeared one day and sailed for America. That his aged parents might not worry he wrote them from New York. Each week he thought would bring a letter from his sweetheart asking him to return.

Weeks and months went by and still no word came from the woman he loved. His ready money had gone by this time and he was too proud to go home or write for more. He pawned his fine clothes and jewelry and with the proceeds he lived for a time. He could find no employment. And when he thought his cup of misfortune was full, he was stricken.

The young girl whom he left two years ago would marry him if he returned to her, he believes, and his uncle, Charles Schnair, in business here, is trying to induce him to leave New York and consult specialists abroad. Schoeninger says, however, his return depends on the decision of the physicians.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Last evening the second of the lectures by Professor Edward Howard Griggs was given at the First Methodist church. The subject was "St. Francis of Assisi," and critics have agreed that it is the finest of Mr. Griggs' lectures. It is marked by the same poetic idealism that made his first lecture so delightful, and a larger audience listened to him. He said in part:

"We are to hear tonight the story of one of the greatest of the world's moral leaders, one whose immediate function and service it is to come nearer the life of the ideal and bring it nearer to the lives of the people. Democracy needs leadership. When laws are passed a leader is needed to cultivate the morals of the people, making the execution of the laws possible. A leader of fine moral worth is needed in a democracy more than in any other form of government, for the brines that are placed in the way of the leaders of the people are such as to be almost impossible to avoid. The white light that falls on the ruler of a kingdom is not as searching as the great white light that is constantly on he who would lead the common people. The man at the front of a democracy is molded by the people. He is a representative of their thoughts and ideas, and so the need of a moral leadership in all times and with all peoples is plain.

"The organization of the world's forces of today has been equalled at no time in history. The combinations of the industrial and mechanical world dominate and oppress man until he feels that he is but a small blind part of a great mechanical whole. It is expressed everywhere until the individual, feeling that he counts for nothing, loses his self-respect. The capital of a nation always has been and always will be the sum of its manhood and its womanhood. It never has been more, and thank heaven it never can be less. The character of a people needs to be studied. The function of the moral leader is to bring the inherent good in the humblest nature to the front. The capacity for truth and good is in everybody, and it is for the moral leader to bring to consciousness their ability for good. Plato expressed the greatest of thoughts, but can be understood by all. The greatest thoughts of man are the simplest and are universal when once expressed.

"The function of a great moral leader is the assumption of the direct guidance and reform of a people; their direction when evolution has hopelessly crystalized, hopelessly stopped, and revolution must follow. He is out of harmony with the society of his time, he must be misunderstood, and suffer. And the test of the real social leader, one who is true to the ideal before him, is not the willingness but the gladness with which he assumes his burden of suffering. The persecution of the reformers of today is more subtle than in the time of the rack and stake, but none the more keen.

"In the life of St. Francis of Assisi we study the life of the most perfect Christian since Christ. He was of the century following the dark period that engulfed all Europe. He was of a century of philosophic thought and religious awakening, of the period that began with St. Jerome and ended with St. Francis. He was born in 1181 or 1182 and died in 1226, at Assisi, a little rambling Umbrian town. His father was a wealthy traveling cloth merchant and Francis was raised in a frivolous and happy life with the young people of his neighborhood. His education of books was small, he read with difficulty and could scarcely write. He led a life of pleasure seeking until his young manhood, when in a war on a neighboring place he was taken prisoner for a year. The ultimate questions of life which come to most everybody in life assailed him and after his return home the why and whence and whither of his life continued to be his thought. He left his home and went to a small country chapel in the neighborhood where a figure of Christ on the scaffold exerts a strong influence on the modern pilgrim. To Francis with his zeal the eyes looked into his and if he heard not with the physical ear he at least heard in the innermost chambers of his soul, 'Francis, build my house.' He took the message literally and began immediately to repair the chapel which had tumbled down in parts.

"The virtues which in this day is so often overrated common sense, was not one of Francis. He took a horse from his father's stables laden with silks and merchandise and sold it and used the money for the church. This was the final rupture between his father and he gave his life to the church. He became a marvelous power in reaching the hearts of his hearers and many wished to follow in his footsteps and so unconsciously and unintentionally an order was formed. The church dignitaries realized the power he was among the people of the country and prevailed upon him to attend himself to the teaching and they would look after the organization. He agreed but many of the rules introduced by the others were he thought, directly against the teachings of Christ. So, later, he resigned his ministership and became a private member of the order, heartsick at the failure of his ideal and confused by the rules permitted by his intellectual superiors, but which he felt were against the direct teachings of Christ.

"After his death it was considered wise by men of a latter time to abolish his order, and so you say he failed. But no thought or word or deed of truth can pass into failure. It must have some good. Francis, all uneducated except for the teaching he received under the stars and from the whisperings through the pine woods, from the song of the birds and the tinkle of the brook as it dropped from ledge to ledge, is a light today to his followers. To those who do not wear his gown or live to those who even have not heard of him, the life lived by St. Francis years ago is an influence for good.

Handsome Reception.

The reception given yesterday afternoon by the Ladies' Literature class in honor of Edward Howard Griggs was a most delightful affair and in spite of the disagreeable weather a large number who had so much enjoyed his lecture of the evening before called to meet the man. The affair was given at the home of Mrs. H. C. Marshall, of East Fifth street. Receiving were Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. C . A. d'Autremont and the guest of honor. A number of the members of the class assisted throughout the rooms. The table in the dining room was prettily decorated and here Mrs. Frank Adams presided, assisted by Miss Antoinette d'Autremont, Miss Helen Marble, Miss Wilhelmina and Miss Frances Woodbridge.

Events of Interest.

In honor of Miss Jack, Mrs. J. N. McKindley entertained at a charming little luncheon today at her home, 1024 East First street. The table was prettily decorated in pink roses. The guests were:

Mesdames:
James McAuliffe, D. H. Day,
W. R. Jarvis, Nickerson, of Boston.
Misses:
Holmes, Crowley,
Morris, Simonds.
Rogers,

The Flaaten School of Music will give a recital this evening at the Lyceum. The feature of the affair will be the appearance for the first time in Duluth of the large juvenile orchestra. The concert master is Edwin Bergh, who will also play a solo, the fine Svendson "Romance." He is but 18 years old and tonight is practically his first appearance. He is considered a musician of fine promise.

THE EVENING STORY.

The Duplicity of Warren Langford

By Edgar Welton Cooley.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The romance really began at the time Joel Augustin and Warren Langford first met. That was at Mount Sinai Theological seminary, where they were students.

As the years of their collegeship went by, they became fast friends. In devotion to their profession and the firm belief that they had been called to tend the Master's sheep, they were identical, but in temperament they were the antipodes of one another.

The Rev. Mr. Langford was nervous, impulsive and inclined to be emotional, while his brother in the church was quiet, deliberate and a great stickler for dignity.

In the same year they were graduated, on the same day they were ordained, and at the same time they received their first ministerial assignment.

It was the last named event that caused them their first pang of mutual regret, for hundreds of miles separated their initial parishes.

Duty and the promise of a liberal salary, to be promptly and regularly paid, called the Rev. Mr. Langford to Fairhaven, Mass., while the Rev. Mr. Augustin found that the portion of the Lord's vineyard in which he had been selected to work lay at Loogootee, in the state of Indiana.

With a hearty hand press and many an earnest God's speed, they bid each other adieu and went their respective ways.

In the course of a few years, however, a humble and rather penurious resident of Loogootee went into his back yard to bore for water. He struck oil and things began to boom along the White river.

The price of real estate climbed so fast that one could see it move, and everybody in the erstwhile drowsy town seemed mounted on springs—for everyone was on the jump. Things moved fast in Loogootee, for everything was well oiled, and the slow and deliberate aroused little else than contempt.

Under these circumstances it was not, perhaps, surprising that the members of Rev. Joel Augustin's congregation awoke one morning to the conviction that their pastor, while his spirituality and his capabilities were unquestioned, lacked the push and rapid-fire action essential to the new Loogootee.

They desired a trip-hammer that pounded with lightning speed on the surface, rather than a dredge that moved ponderously, but went to the bottom of things.

By a strange coincidence, a growing displeasure for the Rev. Warren Langford had been gradually maturing in Fairhaven.

Fairhaven took life easily. The village was content to sleep peacefully beside the blue sea and let the world move as it would. Chautauquas, lyceums, women's clubs and psychological societies touched elbows for want of room. Culture was the scales on which all men were weighed and brain foods had a ready sale.

The Rev. Mr. Langford's sin was one of omission rather than of commission. His sermons were marvels of eloquence and diction, but he parted his hair on the side and was short on dignity.

If necessary, he would not have hesitated to take off his coat to fight for the Lord, but he was ill at ease at an afternoon tea. In brief, he was the embodiment of force and energy, but did not work well in a groove that was clogged with the accumulations of centuries of idleness.

The secretary of the national ministerial bureau of the church received by a certain mail two letters. One was from Loogootee, Ind., and the other from Fairhaven, Mass.

The first reported that the local minister, Rev. Joel Augustin, was in the habit of delivering dignified, philosophical sermons, while the congregation desired living, breathing, hustling actualities. The second stated that the congregation at Fairhaven was tired of listening to the rumblings of rhetorical earthquakes and would like a pastor who could pass out a few theological bon-bons. And above all things, he must be dignified.

When he read these letters, the secretary of the national ministerial bureau decided that Fairhaven and Loogootee could swap pastors to their mutual advantage; that Augustin was a name evidently intended to grace rose-scented and lavender-colored invitations, while Langford, being more of a commercial name, seemed to suggest the activity of the oil belt.

So the edict went forth, and the change was made.

Now, in Fairhaven-by-the-Sea, one woman, who, it must be admitted, was not a member of the Sorosis, had been wooed and won by the Rev. Mr. Langford. To her, therefore, the pastoral change was not hailed with delight.

Her tears were many and copious, but she finally found hope in the repeated assurances of fidelity upon the part of her clerical lover.

So they parted, and the Rev. Mr. Langford journeyed westward to the land that flowed with petroleum, if not with milk and honey. And at the same hour an eastbound train bore the Rev. Mr. Augustin toward the realm of philosophical investigations.

In Philadelphia, by previous arrangement, the two old college chums spent an hour in each other's society, discussing their seminary days, imparting to each other courage for the future, and forewarning each other of the virtues and failings (particularly the latter) of the congregations over which they were being sent to preside.

And in the last moments of their chat, while about to board their respective trains, the Rev. Mr. Langford said:

"By the way, Brother Augustin, there is a young woman in Fairhaven—a very dear young woman, you know—Miss Menice Montgomery, for whom I wish to elicit your most attentive care. We—that is to say I—look forward with pleasure to the day she is to become Mrs. Langford, you know. In the meantime I confide her to your spiritual guidance."

The Rev. Mr. Augustin smiled and a light twinkled in his eye.

"I am delighted at the news, Brother Langford," he replied, "and beg to extend my most hearty congratulations. Believe me, I shall take particular interest in the lady's welfare, for the sake of my dear friend."

After which they shook hands and again wished each other Godspeed. But before they finally were forced to part by the stentorian announcement of the traincaller, the Rev. Mr. Augustin pressed a letter into the hand of his brother in the ministry. "Read it at your leisure," he shouted, as he hurried to catch his train.

When the Rev. Warren Langford had arranged himself and his belongings comfortably in his section of the Pullman, he took from his pocket the letter the Rev. Joel Augustin had handed him and opened it. As he read his eyes sparkled and his mouth broadened to a grin. For this was written:

"Dear Brother: You are journeying to Loogootee, where dwells the fairest daughter of Indiana. Her name is Rosalin Roe, but some day, the Lord willing, it will be Rosalin Augustin. I would beg that you keep a ministerial eye upon her; neglect not her spiritual guidance, and do a brother's part to make her pathway rose-bordered but thornless."

The Rev. Langford delayed replying to this note until he was well established in Loogootee and had become personally acquainted with the young woman referred to.

Then he wrote the Rev. Mr. Augustin a letter more enthusiastic, perhaps, than was absolutely necessary. For Miss Roe was tall and slender, had jet-black hair and eyes that were soon haunting Langford in his dreams.

As the months went by he appeared more and more zealous in keeping his promise to Augustin—a duty which seemed to demand that he spend much of his time in Miss Roe's company.

One twilight hour in June, while she was pinning a rose upon his coat, her raven hair brushed his cheek, and, alone that night, he came face to face with two facts—his love and his duplicity.

His sudden and passionate love of Rosalin Roe burned in his veins, but the cold perspiration ran down his forehead when the thought of his perfidy to his affianced bride in far-away Fairhaven and to his bosom friend, the Rev. Joel Augustin.

The struggle was a bitter one, and each succeeding day but added gall to his cup. He fought madly to conquer his new love, but his flesh, alas, was weak, and the black hair and sparkling eyes of Rosalin formed a combination that was impervious to all resolutions.

Another summer passed—a summer that was full of delightful twilight strolls and long midnight hours of agony and self-reproach—and then he wrote a letter to the Rev. Joel Augustin, in substance saying:

"I am unworthy the name of friend. I am a miserable weakling, who has forgotten the vows of brotherhood in the presence of a woman's smile. Duplicity and treason throb in every drop of my blood. Constancy hath no part in my being. I am a stranger to all that pertains to honor, for I, who long ago plighted my love to a woman and pledged fellowship and brotherly solicitude to a comrade of the cross, have been false to both.

"I love another, and that other is she whom you were to wed.

"Nor is that the extent of my infamy. I have asked her to become my wife and she has consented. The event is to occur next month. I cannot ask your blessing; I only ask the forgiveness of you both."

He mailed this in fear and trembling, but before time for an answer he received something by mail which made him smile, then laugh, then go in search of the girl with the black hair.

It was the announcement of the wedding of Rev. Joel Augustin and Miss Menice Montgomery.

LAW MAKES GIFT

To a Servant Punishable as a Crime.

Boston, May 25.—The state legislature has aimed a deadly blow at the perquisites of household servants, butlers and others who are interested with the marketing and purchasing for the establishments with which they are connected.

The custom, which had its origin in presenting children with sticks of candy and has grown into an elaborate system of commissions to servants, has been made a misdemeanor punishable by fines ranging from $10 to $500, and by imprisonment not to exceed one year.

The law provides that whoever gives any gratuity or any servant who receives a gift under an understanding that he shall act in any particular manner in relation to his employer's business, shall be subject to conviction and punishment.

The manufacturers who have been compeled to share profits with servants or purchasing agents, are responsible for the measure.

GREAT NORTHERN

Extension to Be Pushed Beyond Strathcona.

Crookston, Minn., May 25.—It is learned that Strathcona will not be the terminal point of the Great Northern extension from Thief River Falls this summer, as announced. The road will be pushed on immediately to some point nearer the international boundary line. Right-of-way has been secured for a distance of twelve miles north of Strathcona to a point near Grenebush, Roseau county. Another townsite will be platted at this point, in addition to those of Holt, Ingalls and Strathcona. Grading will be pushed on to Roseau this coming summer and the line will be completed to that point next spring.

Is Far Reaching.

"The strike on the lakes is having a much wider effect on the business interests than just in the immediate Northwest," said a local railroad official yesterday.

"It must be remembered that the coast cities, Seattle, Spokane and Portland, receive most of their Eastern shipments by way of the water route to Duluth. The railway companies have given notice that no more shipments can be routed by the lakes, until further notice.

"All the shipments of goods from points east of Chicago, to the Pacific coast points, are now made by an all rail route."

SPINSTERS' CLUB

Panic Stricken By Appearance of a Mouse.

Philadelphia, May 25.—A horrid mouse broke up the meeting of the Spinsters' club, of Germantown, while "Man" was under discussion. The meeting was in Hesson hall and in full sway when a squak and a cry of "Mouse!" caused a panic.

Miss Grace Kennedy, the president, was first out of the door. Miss Gertrude Lausher, who had been warning her fellow members not to trust man, was a close second.

The spinster's club is an organization of independent girls for the purpose of abolishing marriage and "man" from the face of the earth.

A YANKEE PERIL

Scares the Canadians and a Great Cry Is Raised.

Opposition Is Making a Play For the Labor Vote.

Ottawa, Ont., May 25.—The employment of Americans on the surveys of the national transcontinental railway is a safe card to play for the labor vote and the opposition is making the most of it. Canadian organized labor is sure and has been for a long time over the number of Americans taken on the surveys, and in many leading branches of industry on the one hand, and the sharp enforcement against Canadians of the American alien labor law on the other, and the new developments are a godsend to the Conservative party.

The opposition members of the house of commons are afforded an opportunity of which they have promptly taken advantage to pose as the particular champions of labor, sacrificed, as they claim, by a government which cares nothing for the interests of the toiling masses.

Sir William Mulock, as minister of labor, has come in for repeated attacks in parliament, and the Conservative press has taken up the cry from one end of the Dominion to the other, and if people were to believe all that is said and written there is an organized conspiracy of American managers of Canadian railways to flood the country with American labor.

A frightful picture of the dread possibilities of American control of the new Canadian transcontinental railway system was conjured up in the house in the debate on the Pacific bill. Mr. Maclean, East York, showed how easy it would be for the dreaded American magnate to capture the road by buying up Grand Trunk stock in the open market. Whether those designing individuals decide the proper time has arrived to run the transcontinental to suit themselves, all they have to do is to go into the market with a few millions and the job is done.

Control once secured by them, all Canadian traffic can be diverted to the American roads, and the $150,000,000 or so for which the government has made the country responsible will be converted into capital for building up American ports, railways and greatness.

Labor leaders in parliament are working up an agitation against the intended imperial labor bureau of the Salvation Army, which proposes to send homeless and helpless unemployed men in Great Britain to Canada and the other colonies. Mr. Preston, the Canadian commissioner of immigration in London, England, has enthusiastically indorsed the scheme as "a magnificent project."

The bureau is denounced as an organization to make Canada the dumping ground of the drunken and immoral classes in the old country, and for their children, and the government is warned that if the outlined plans are carried out without the most rigid inspection, inquiry and safeguards, it will be fought tooth and nail by the organized labor of the Dominion.

The waste of time in parliament this session by speakers who talk to make campaign capital has been the subject of serious remonstrance by sober minded members who go in for economic reform. It costs the country $28 a minute to run both houses from the opening of parliament to prorogation.

American tourists to the ancient city of Quebec this season will find the work of repairing the fortifications nearly completed. The old town line walls are practically restored. The chief engineer of the militia department reports that the restoration of the citadel walls will necessitate a large expenditure for some years to come, though considerable progress has been made in this also, notably on the walls facing the river and the different bastions in the citadel.

A new patented rifle and automatic registering target has been shown to the military authorities here by an American, Orlan C. Cullen, of Washington, D. C. The ball bearing bore, and the target is the one invented by Col. Peters of Toronto. The British military attache at Washington, it is said, recently had a series of exhaustive tests of the rifle and was much pleased with the results.

The falling-off in the exports of Canadian products, which set in during the winter demoralization of the railroads, continues. For the ten months of the fiscal year, there was a decrease of over $3,000,000. The decrease was not in leading exports only, but in all articles of Canadian production.

There was a small increase in exports through Canadian ports of foreign products of close on $2,500,000. In imports there was an increase for the ten months' period over 1903 of some $11,000,000, but in the month of April the turning point was reached in this branch of trade, too, and there was a decline as well as in exports.

KILLED WOMAN WHO WOULD NOT ELOPE.

La Porte, Ind., May 25.—Jerry Duggins, who will be hanged early in July, has made a confession. He says Mrs. Ramsey, of Terre Haute, whom he murdered, with her two children, refused to leave her husband and elope. Duggins says it was for that reason he drew a razor from his clothes and cut her throat and the throats of teh two children, who were sleeping. He is apparently without remorse for his crime.

KENNEDY COMPANY.

The Kennedy Stock company presented "Check" again last evening and tonight will repeat it for the third and last time.

"THE GAMEKEEPER."

The Butte Miner said of "The Gamekeeper," which will be at the Lyceum Thursday:

"Thomas J. Smith is a handsome young actor and a good singer of Irish songs, and the audience at the Broadway theater last evening warmed to him and the play in the presentation of which he is the star. 'The Gamekeeper' is well designated on the bills as a beautiful Irish comedy drama. It is a reminder of some of Joe Murphy's creations, especially as Mr. Smith has much of the ability and gifts of song of that popular actor, who is no longer going the rounds of the show towns in this part of the country with his sterling plays, holding up the mirror of life in the Emerald Isle."

"A GIRL FROM DIXIE."

"A Girl From Dixie" will be seen at the Lyceum Saturday afternoon and evening. It is more of a comedy set to music than a musical comedy, though some of its songs, it is promised, are exceedingly catchy.

CLASS CONFIRMED.

Bishop Morrison Officiates at St. Luke's Church.

The rite of confirmation was administered to a class of fourteen by Bishop James D. Morrison at the St. Luke's Episcopal church, Nineteenth avenue east, last night. The class was presented by the rector, Rev. Roderick J. Mooney. A total of thirty-three persons have now received the rite of confirmation at this church in the last nine months.

After confirmation exercises, Bishop Morrison preached an eloquent sermon, taking as a text: Cor. ii; xii; ix—"My Grace Is Sufficient for Thee; For My Strength Is Made Perfect in Weakness." He traced the history of confirmation from its origin and explained its philosophy. He spoke particularly of the great work accomplished by Rev. Mooney since he became rector of the church.

BRYAN HAS LOST

The Support of Congressman Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Omaha.

Bryan Thus Deprived of Influence of the World-Herald.

Lincoln, Neb., May 25.—William J. Bryan is very much chagrined at the attitude Congressman Gilbert M. Hitchcock, of the Second Nebraska district, and Congressman Hitchcock's newspaper, the Omaha World-Herald, have assumed toward him.

Immediately upon his return home from Washington after the adjournment of congress, Mr. Hitchcock, in an interview printed in the Omaha Bee, said: "I shall hold aloof from the factional fight in the Nebraska Democracy. There is no good reason why I should enter it, either personally or by means of my newspaper. Such a course will leave me free to support the Democratic nominee, whoever he may be." Mr. Bryan was very displeased at another statement made by Congressman Hitchcock in the same interview, to the effect that in his opinion Judge Parker, of New York, is the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency.

For several months prior to Congressman Hitchcock's return home from the national capital the World-Herald took a very lively part in the factional fight in the Democratic party in Nebraska, strenuously espousing the cause of Bryan and Bryanism and bitterly attacking Democrats who are opposed to the reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform by the St. Louis convention. Mr. Hitchcock's newspaper was in the midst of this factional fight when Mr. Hitchcock returned home from Washington, and gave it out, not only that he himself would take no part in the fight, but that the World-Herald would henceforth take no part in it.

This announcement meant, in plain words, that the support which the World-Herald had been giving Mr. Bryan in his struggle for control of the coming state Democratic convention would be withdrawn. Nor has Mr. Hitchcock failed to keep his word.

It may scarcely be said that there has been an open "break" between Mr. Bryan and Mr. Hitchcock, but that there is a coolness not to be disputed. To what degree this coolness is due to the circumstance that Mr. Bryan turned Mr. Hitchcock down when he was a candidate for appointment to a seat in the United States senate several years ago is not known. It lay within Mr. Bryan's power to send Mr. Hitchcock to the senate. Mr. Hitchcock and ex-Senator William V. Allen, a Populist, were practically the only candidates for the appointment. The governor virtually left the appointment to Mr. Bryan. At the last minute Mr. Bryan wired the governor to appoint Allen, and Allen was appointed. Mr. Hitchcock had confidently expected the appointment, and counted upon Mr. Bryan's support. His disappointment was keen, but he accepted his defeat gracefully, and has treated the matter with dignity ever since. He never has exploited the grievance he must have felt, and must still feel, and supported Mr. Bryan loyally in his candidacy for the presidency four years ago.

As for Mr. Bryan, he is by no means insensible of the loss he has sustained, and his friends here in Lincoln know that he is feeling blue over the situation that has developed within the last week or two. The World-Herald wields a powerful influence in Nebraska politics. The loss of that influence will be felt keenly by Mr. Bryan in the fight he is now waging for control of the coming state convention.

Meantime the fight against Bryan and Bryanism, which was started by his old-time political friends and supporters in Nebraska and they are rallying to his standard with a measure of enthusiasm, knowing that he has the fight of his life on his hands. But the reorganizers maintain stoutly that he is not going to have things his own way in the convention. It is perfectly safe to say that he will meet with a more stubborn opposition there than he ever has encountered before in his own state, and it is generally conceded that the only thing that can give him victory is the general desire among Democrats in Nebraska to spare him humiliation at home. All signs point to the liveliest state convention in the history of the state at Omaha June 1. Lined up against Mr. Bryan on nearly every proposition of vital importance will be men who in former years have stood loyally with him. These men are now his bitterest political enemies. They are determined to get his scalp.

LAND CONTEST RULING.

Local Officials Decide Timber and Stone Case.

The Duluth land office officials yesterday decided the land contest case of Samuel A. Gordon against Edward Minehan by rejecting the timber and stone filing of Minehan, and his proof thereunder, and issuing notice to make final proof, under the stone and timber act, to Asa D. Brooks, a junior applicant. Minehan is allowed thirty days in which to appeal from the decision, and no final certificate will issue to Brooks until the final termination of the proceedings. The east half of the northwest quarter and the east half of the southwest quarter of section 35-57-21 was the land involved.

Minehan made a timber and stone filing and it was allowed and placed on record. In November, 1903, Samuel A. Gordon filed a sworn protest against the allowance of Minehan's application, on the grounds that the latter was seeking to get possession of the land for the interest and benefit of another, one Matthew Jones. Last March Brooks made a timber and stone application for the same land, and was held junior to two preceding claims. Gordon later filed a withdrawal of his timber and stone application for the land involved, but did not withdraw his protest, insisting, on the contrary, in putting in testimony in support of his protest. At this stage it was proven to the satisfaction of the land office officials that Gordon's claims that Meinhan was not getting possession of the land in good faith, and that the money for the venture was being furnished by another, were correct. They accordingly decided that Gordon having no further claim to the tract, because of his withdrawal, Brooks, the junior claimant, being the next in line, was entitled to make final proof.

In the contest case of Robert M. Stitt against Andrew Hanna, involving a quarter section in 30-61-22, the local officials yesterday rejected Stitt's application for contest.

J. J. HILL'S VIEWS

As to Causes of the Decline of American Shipping.

Has Had Sufficient Experience In Building Ocean Steamships.

New York, May 25.—James J. Hill, president of the Northern Securities company and of the Great Northern railway, appeared yesterday afternoon as a witness before the merchant marine commission, the joint congressional committee which is investigating the causes of the decline of American shipping, in order to suggest measures for remedial legislation.

"The first thing necessary," said Mr. Hill, "is to create a desire in the people of this country to own ships. It is a purely commercial question. If there is a profit in it, people will engage in it; if a loss it is a question how long people will stick.

"Our conditions on the high seas as a nation, seem hard to meet. On land, in spite of high rates of labor the United States has been able to work out a system without an equal. "Why we are not able to do this on the high seas, is not clear to me, and as far as I have investigated it I believe that no amount of direct bonuses will build it into a life worth living.

"What the country wants is a market. Outside of our agricultural products, cotton, grain and oil, there are very few things we can export because the cost of production is so high. We cannot sell them. If we could carry those products in our own bottoms it would be a source of great profit.

"They can build ships in England much cheaper than here. Citizens of other countries have owned ships for the last forty years to a greater extent than we.

"I have had experience in building two ships, the largest freight carriers in the world, and I don't want any more.

"I would rather undertake to build 1000 miles of railroad than two ships. It has taken four years instead of two, through strikes and other delays.

"If we are going to buy a merchant marine out of the treasury of the country it won't last long. We must give people confidence to invest.

"In Japan they have built up a large marine; they have paid for tonnage but I do not remember the details.

"Our business on the Pacific is hard; we have to compete with all nations and they are fighting hard for the Oriental trade. And I think that we have placed obstructions in the way of this trade. We cannot comply with the regulations placed on us and compete with ships of other nations. We have been forced out.

"I don't think you will have much of a success of buying a merchant marine; it won't stay with you. You must get people interested, but there does not seem to be much disposition on the part of the people to go into shipping."

In answer to a question of Representative McDermott, Mr. Hill said that his two big ships cost 28 or 30 per cent more to build here than abroad, adding:

"Besides we have very few sailors even on pleasure ships. Go to Puget Sound, the heads of the unions are the boarding house keepers. A man who is dead broke and broken down by excesses is the man sent to us. Same way along shore, you hire 200 stevedores, good competent men, and tell them to come next day. They don't come as long as they have money; the others are sent.

"Suppose your firemen leave your ship at some port. What are you going to do? Hire Asiatics and the result is that while you are nominally sailing under the American flag you are sailing under a foreign flag. You might just as well try to catch a blackbird in the air as to make those firemen come back.

"A foreigner might come in and take away our coast trade. But let me tell you that on the lakes the lowest rates are paid that are paid anywhere in the world. Six years ago wages were high, but ingenuity and despatch gave the best service in the world."

Mr. McDermott pressed the question of governmental aid.

"But is the government able to go far enough?" asked Mr. Hill.

"If you will admit foreign built ships free," he said, "you will get a merchant marine quickly.

"How are we going to get back a merchant marine?" asked Mr. McDermott.

"If you are willing to put a tonnage tax on all that goes to a foreign market, everything that goes out of the country, even to new markets, I think you would get the ships. That would come out of the people.

"The ship subsidy campaign started in about thirty minutes. I had induced the Japanese to take our cotton to mix with theirs, so that it would make a better yarn. The Boer war broke out and we could not get ships on the Pacific coast. I had to cancel an order for 60,000 bales of cotton in December. I came on East and saw Senator Fairbanks and Senator Hanna. I asked why we could not get ships to carry our goods. Senator Hanna said he would see me in the morning, and he did. The result was that he opened his campaign in Ohio for the ship subsidy.

"Then your remedy?" asked Mr. McDermott, "is an export bounty?"

"Yes, that is it."

"You seem to be very pessimistic over the outlook," said Senator Gallinger.

"That is because I have looked at it from a purely business standpoint. I built those two ships simply as a regulator—to try the experiment.

"There are only two courses open; either an export bounty or government assistance, which would rise into very large figures."

"Then you are convinced that we shall have to give some sort of government aid or go out of business?" asked Senator Lodge.

"Exactly. If you fix a limit of ten years on the subsidies the favored party must make the cost of his plant in the ten years. Otherwise he will sell out to the other fellow."

"How much do you think would be required for the subsidy?" asked Senator Mallory.

"Oh, $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 would get a lot of tonnage. You might take it out of the river or the harbor bill. But I tell you the great big navigation tonnage is going to be steel rails."

"That Japanese line you spoke of," asked Senator Lodge, "is very skillfully subsided, is it not?"

"I talked to Ito about this; he was with me two or three days and is very capable. If there is a bounty for the line it is so skillfully covered up that I was not able to discover it."

The word Egg-O-See

Spelled in the greatest number of ways

Try how many different ways you can spell Egg-O-See and it will be easy for you to get one of the 745 cash prizes running from $1.00 to $100. Divided as follows:

To the one sending the greatest variety of spellings	$100.00
To the second sending the greatest variety of spellings	75.00
To the third sending the greatest variety of spellings	50.00
To the fourth sending the greatest variety of spellings	25.00
To the fifth sending the greatest variety of spellings	10.00
To the 740 sending the next greatest variety of spellings $1.00	740.00

The prizes will be sent out immediately after the close of the contest.

The competition is open to all. The only conditions being that for each five different ways of spelling Egg-O-See you must send in one of the little printed folders, same as used in the school children's drawing contest, found on the inside of each package of Egg-O-See. For instance if you have 15 different spellings it would be necessary to send three folders. Be sure and write your name and address plainly. The spelling must be such as could properly be pronounced Egg-O-See. The school children to whom we have paid thousands of prizes for drawings can all enter into this contest with equal chance of gaining a prize. Save the little folders in the Egg-O-See packages and make out as many ways of spelling as you can, and then ask your parents and friends to add to the list. Here are a few ways of spelling Egg-O-See: Eg-O-Sea, Egg-Oh-Cee, Egg-O-Sy, Eg-O-Cie.

EGG-O-SEE

We offer these prizes to more thoroughly familiarize the people with the merits of Egg-O-See, the best of all flaked wheat foods. It is now generally conceded that flaked wheat is the most healthful and convenient of all foods, and Egg-O-See is displacing 90 per cent of all other kinds, because of its superior quality and cheaper price.

WOMAN NEAR BURIAL ALIVE

Twice Placed In Coffin and Prepared For Interment.

London, May 25.—It rarely falls to the lot of a human being to be twice placed in a coffin and made ready for interment. Yet there is a woman in England who has had that experience. She is Mrs. Heighman, and recently related her adventure to a company of friends. She at present is enjoying the best of health at her home in Holland road, Kensington. She has been subject to cataleptic trances. Had thrice has been in imminent danger of being buried alive.

The story of her first escape is best told in her own words. Its terrible realism only finds a parallel in the awe inspiring imagination of Poe.

"My first trance," Mrs. Heighman said, "was brought about by shock. I was told that all my property had been lost. The news was quite unexpected, and it sent me into hysterics.

"Then I lapsed into insensibility, and at the end of two hours my limbs began to assume the rigidity of death. My eyes were open, and I could see what was happening, but I was unable to move hand or foot, or to show that life had not left my body.

"Imagine my horror, then, when, after being left for twenty-four hours, I was taken from bed and rolled on the floor. Pins and needles were stuck in my body in order to see whether blood would flow. Fortunately I could feel no bodily pain, but the strain on my mind was terrible.

"After this every one gave me up for dead. 'Poor lady, I am afraid she is now out of all earthly suffering.' I remember hearing the doctor say. Oh, the terror of that moment!

"Worse, however, was to come, for the order for my coffin was given. When the undertaker's men came to measure me I tried to shriek aloud, but not a sound came from my bloodless lips. I could not have been more helpless had the angel of death in reality taken my soul. The final agony came when my coffin was brought into the room.

"At the sight of that grewsome object placed by my bedside I felt as if my brain—or what was left of it—would finally break under its futile efforts to assert itself.

"I then lapsed into unconsciousness for the first time for forty-eight hours.

Mrs. Heigham then related how her daughter, who had never quite given up hope, arose from her bed in the middle of the night to visit her mother for the last time.

The girl was unable to sleep owing to an ever recurring presentment that her parent had not really passed away, and, fitly enough, it was this midnight visit that really saved Mrs. Heigham from her awful fate.

As she gazed with tearful eyes upon her mother's still form she thought she saw a movement of the eyelids. Hastily summoning the servants, she had a bottle of strong smelling salts to Mrs. Heigham's nostrils, and in her agitation spilled part of the contents over the unconscious woman's face.

"At this," concluded Mrs. Heigham, "I heaved a deep sigh and suddenly sat up in my bed, saved by my daughter's love and energy."

Few will envy Mrs. Heigham her remarkable experience. She now possesses the death certificate signed by the doctor who attended her, and, though the memories attached to it are fraught with such horror, she would not part with the document for a great deal.

Mrs. Heigham's subsequent attacks were not quite so serious, but in both cases she was at first thought to be dead—by all but her devoted daughter.

Curiously enough, Mrs. Heigham has herself taken degrees as a doctor of psychology, and in face of the foregoing facts it was startling to her her announce that she had "no fear of death for many, many years to come."

Chronic Sores Eating Ulcers

A Constant Drain Upon the System.

Nothing is a source of so much trouble as an old sore or ulcer, particularly when located upon the lower extremities where the circulation is weak and sluggish. A gangrenous eating ulcer upon the leg is a frightful sight, and as the poison burrows deeper and deeper into the tissues beneath and the sore continues to spread, one can almost see the flesh melting away and feel the strength going out with the sickening discharges. Great running sores and deep offensive ulcers often develop from a simple boil, swollen gland, bruise or pimple, and are a threatening danger always, because while all such sores are not cancerous, a great many are, and this should make you suspicious of all chronic, slow-healing ulcers and sores, particularly if cancer runs in your family. Face sores are common and cause the greatest annoyance because they are so persistent and unsightly and detract so much from one's personal appearance. Middle aged and old people and those whose blood is contaminated and tainted with the germs and poison of malaria or some previous sickness, are the chief sufferers from chronic sores and ulcers. While the blood remains in an unhealthy polluted condition, and the sore will continue to grow and spread in spite of washes and salves, for the sore is the outward sign of some constitutional disorder, a bad condition of the blood and system, which local remedies cannot cure. A blood purifier and tonic is what you need—something to cleanse the blood, quicken the circulation and invigorate the constitution, and S. S. S. is just such a remedy. It counteracts and removes from the blood all the impurities and poisons, and gradually builds up the entire system; and when the blood has been purified the healingprocess begins and the ulcer or sore is soon entirely gone. S. S. S. contains no mineral or poisonous drugs of any description, but is guaranteed purely vegetable, a blood purifier and tonic combined and a safe and permanent cure for chronic sores and ulcers. If you have a slow-healing sore of any kind, external or internal, write us about it, and our physicians will advise you without charge. Book on "The Blood and Its Diseases" free.

SSS

Wheeling, W. Va., May 28, 1903.

Some years ago while at work, I fell over a truck and severely injured both of my shins. My blood became poisoned as a result, and the doctor told me I would have running sores for life, and that if they closed up the result would be fatal. Under this discouraging report I left off their treatment and resorted to the use of S. S. S. Its effects were prompt and gratifying. It took only a short while for the medicine to cure up the sores, and I am not dead as the doctor intimated I would be, neither have the sores ever broken out again, and some 12 years have elapsed since what I have described occurred.

STANDARD OIL

Company Is Sued By Widow For Fifty Million Dollars.

Husband Invented Process For Rendering Kerosene Non-Explosive.

Boston, May 25.—One quarter of a cent on every gallon of kerosene oil manufactured by the Standard Oil company since 1874 is what Mrs. Benjamin Greenbough claims is due her, as the executor of her husband's estate. She has entered suit against the great corporation, and the amount she hopes to wrest from it is estimated at $50,000,000.

The suit is for royalties on a product of Greenbough's inventive genius. To him is attributed the present commercial utility of kerosene, on the ground that he invented the process which rendered it non-explosive. Mrs. Greenbough asserts that her husband transferred his knowledge to H. H. Rogers and Pratt, his partner, at a stated figure for royalties, which were paid only for a short time.

Mr. Rogers has been served with papers and will be obliged to defend the suit. The real defendant is the Standard Oil company.

Back in 1874 Rogers and Pratt were humble men in the oil world. They had for some time been working at various ideas looking toward the purification of oil well products, and particularly the manufacture of kerosene.

Mr. Greenbough, it is claimed, came to the pair with his invention. They accepted it, and the inventor, who was also shrewd in a business way, bound them to pay him a quarter of a cent royalty on each gallon of the oil manufactured.

Then began the rise of the oil business. The profits of Mr. Greenbough were huge. He had received more than $500,000 on account of royalties, and could have spent the rest of his days rolling in wealth, when he determined on a big strike.

He fitted out a big ship with lamps and oil and started from New York on a voyage to the Pacific to dispose of the goods.

He made enormous profits, selling the ship load in South American ports. On his return voyage, however, the ship ran into a hurricane and was lost at sea.

The family, on settling up the estate, did not come across the agreement with Rogers & Pratt, and knew nothing about it.

But a short time ago Mrs. Greenbough found out about the old-time contract, and saw how millions had been lost in the years since her husband died. She determined to bring the suit.

Rogers & Pratt turned Greenbough's patent process over to the Standard Oil company as so much capital when they went into the corporation.

It is claimed that every gallon of kerosene oil manufactured by the Standard Oil company up to the present time is made under the Greenbough process.

Mr. Greenbough was a very remarkable man. At the time of the civil war he invented a death-dealing explosive called "Greek fire," something said to be like lyddite of the present day.

The Northern artillery used it with great success until a great cry arose about the use of such a death-dealing explosive, and humane people demanded that its use be discontinued by the Union army.

This was done, but the Southern men had heard of Grenebough, and they got a proposition to him to sell them the recipe.

He told his wife of the offer, and she was indignant and declared that she would starve before she would allow him to do anything against his country.

Mr. Greenbough refused the offer from the South, and later the Russian government made an offer of $1,000,000 to Greenbough if he would sell the recipe to them and prove the utility of the explosive.

But Mrs. Greenbough refused again, and declared that the death-dealing fire should not be given to the world.

FATHER OBJECTED

To Taylor's Attentions and an Elopement Followed.

Ashtabula, Ohio, May 25.—Mrs. George H. Taylor, of Canton, 20 years old, is the eldest daughter of Dr. D. E. Bottorf, a prominent physician of this city, and formerly of Mansfield. A couple of years ago Mr. Taylor came to Ashtabula from Cleveland and opened a merchant tailor establishment. After about a year he discontinued his business here and went to Canton. During his stay here Taylor made the acquaintance of Miss Grace Mottorf, and mutual admiration soon ripened into love, but the girl's father considered with disfavor a proposition that the two marry, and prohibited the young man calling at the house.

About a year ago Miss Bottorf left her home ostensibly to visit in another city. She was met in Cleveland by Taylor and they were married in the Hollenden hotel. A telegram to the parents imparted the news and the bride accompanied her husband to Canton. Mrs. Taylor has since made several visits to her parental home, and the husband has visited her on these occasions, but their meetings were always at the home of friends, the doctor never having countenanced his son-in-law.

MATERNAL CARE

Of an Old Hen Preferred By Kittens.

Bayonne, N. J., May 25.—People of this city are enjoying a remarkable example of the perversion of the maternal instinct in a black Spanish hen, the property of Jeremiah Lisk, which has taken under her care three tiny kittens.

Mr. Lisk's son was looking for eggs in a loft of the store where his father keeps some chickens, when he found the hen covering two black kittens and one gray one.

Disliking to have his veracity questioned, Lisk placed the sitting hen, with her adopted kittens, in a straw-filled box in his store window. The hen, kittens and mother cat live in harmony, but the kittens cling to the hen in preference to the mother cat. The hen will not desert her feline charges for an instant, and clucks to them as if they were little chickens she had hatched. The kittens caress the old hen, and with faint "me-ows" respond to the hen's clucks.

It's folly to suffer from that horrible plague of the night, itching piles. Doan's Ointment cures quickly and permanently. At any drug store, 50 cents.

The Beverage of Health

Schlitz

Pure beer—Schlitz beer—is the best drink in the world for you.

The malt is a food; the hops a tonic. The alcohol—only 3½ per cent—is an aid to digestion; a healthful stimulant.

The most healthy nations in the world—the most hardy, most energetic—drink the most of it.

But the beer must be pure. Impurity means harmful germs. That is why we brew Schlitz in absolute cleanliness—why we filter even the air that touches it and sterilize every bottle.

And the beer must be aged. Green beer causes biliousness. That's why we age Schlitz for months before we market it.

Schlitz beer is absolutely pure; it can't harm you. Ask for the Brewery Bottling.

Attacked By the Claims of an Italian Doctor.

Asserts World Famed Sonnet "Opportunity" Is His Product.

Chicago, May 25.—In the June number of Suggestion, is a communication from Dr. Nicoll Gigilotti of Erie, Pa., in which he claims that the world famed sonnet "Opportunity," attributed to the late Senator John J. Ingalls, was written first by him, Gigilotti, in Italian in 1887, and was successively printed in La Sveglia, at Naples, Italy, Mignon of Naples, Flora Mirabilis of Turin, and Le Conversazioni della Domencia of Milan. He gives the poem in Italian as he wrote it and a rough English prose translation of it, and with the exception of the conclusion his poem and Ingalls' are wonderfully similar.

Dr. Gigliotti says that he reprinted the poem in La Giustizia, published in Denver, and sent Ingalls a copy of it with a rhythmic translation made by him and revised for the English part by Martin Battle, a distinguished follower of the late Henry George.

The second publication of the Italian original was in the Mignon of Naples, June 12, 1888.

Dr. Giuseppe Coloni writes to Suggestion certifying to having published in the Flora Mirabilis of Turin, Dr. Gigliotti's sonnet, "Il Fato," in 1887, or 1888, and adds that it was translated into Greek, into French by Mme. Sampson, into German by Knaon, and into English by C. Bourges Watson.

Dr. Gigliotti has published three books of poems, but singularly enough the sonnet, "Il Fato" did not appear in any of them, for the reason, so he says, that he was "not satisfied with its literary polish." The admirers of Ingalls cannot understand why, if Dr. Gigliotti was not satisfied with its literary polish, he printed it in the Denver paper and sent a copy of it with a translation to Senator Ingalls. He does not explain in his letter whether or not he knew Ingalls previous to this, or why he singled him out as the recipient of his alleged poetic effusion.

The Italian sonnet claimed by Dr. Gigliotti is here printed:

IL FATO.

Arbitro io sono dell' uman destino,
Fama, grandezza, amor mi son vassalli,
Per campagne e citta folle cammino,
Batto a ogni porta, e corro nuovi calli.

Se in letargo, ti desta. Se nel vino
Le cure affoghi e ti son dolei i falli,
T'alza a mi segni. Il fato son Meschino
Chi non viene con me. Gli do cavalli.

Giole, grandezza, onor, donne e piacere.
Tutto gli obbedira men che la morte.
Vieni. Approfitta del mio buon volere.

Solo una volta io batto alle tue porte.
Io non ti seguo—rispos' io—il pensiere
Sol rende l' uomo avventuraato e forte!

And here is his own rough English translation:

THE FATE.

Master I am of human destinies:
Fame, greatness, love are my servants.
Cities and fields foolishly I walk;
I knock at every door but once, and I run to new pathways.

If sleeping, wake. If feasting,
You try to kill your troubles with wine and sin.
Rise and follow me. I am the fate.
Woe
To whom does not follow me. I give him horses.

Gold, fame, honor, women and pleasure.
He will conquer every foe, save death.
Rise; hang to the opportunity which I offer to you.

I am revengeful. I knock unbidden but once at every door.
I stay here "Leave me alone," I answered; "thought,
And thought alone, makes every man happy and strong."

Mr. Ingalls' sonnet, which has gone the rounds of the whole English press and has been embalmed in many anthologies, is here reprinted:

OPPORTUNITY.

Master of Human destinies am I!
Fame, love, and fortune on my doorsteps wait.
Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate
Deserts and fields remote, and, passing by
Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late,
I knock unbidden once at every gate.
If sleeping, wake; if feasting, rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury or woe,
Seek me in vain and uselessly implore—
I answer not, and I return no more.

BORED FOR WATER

And at Nine Feet Depth Found Oil.

Oxford, Ohio, May 25.—Oil has been struck on the farm of Clifford Moore, six miles southwest of Oxford, at a depth of nine feet. The find has caused great excitement among his farmer friends, and the land adjoining has advanced in price.

Moore was just finishing the sinking of the well for water, when a peculiar odor arose. A match was applied, and a brilliant blaze shot up into the air. A jug containing a quantity of the fluid and water has been sent to J. B. Dickson at Indiana Harbor, Ind., to be analyzed.

KING OSCAR

Borrowed Money to Pay His Railway Fare.

Geneva, May 25.—King Oscar, of Sweden, and suite discovered they could not ride on the Swiss Republic's railways deadhead. Oscar left Aix-les-Bains in the royal car. The railway officials demanded tickets. He displayed a telegram from headquarters reading: "Charge King Oscar for twenty first-class fares for transportation of the royal cars."

After an argument the king and suite offered to pay, but found they had not enough money. On their promising to pay the official let the train proceed. At Lausanne the train was held up and the royal cars cut off. The king was informed that Switzerland is a republic and sovereigns must pay or not ride. The money was borrowed in town, the royal cars were recoupled and the train proceeded.

BULLETS AND NAILS

So Numerous Log Could Not Be Cut.

Oxford, Ohio, May 25.—The old elm from which Joe Spivey, the Kentucky outlaw, dangled for a few moments, seems to be quite a Jonah.

It was taken to the sawmill yesterday to be ripped into lumber from which checker boards and other articles were to be manufactured. The engine was starte, but when the saw plowed its way for about two feet into the log the machinery stopped still. Several attempts were made to start it again, but were fruitless.

The old trunk was then dumped aside on the lot, when J. L. Wright, with his axe, hewed it and found hundreds of cast aside to rot. The log has been cast aside to rot, ending the last chapter of the Henry Corbin and Joe Spivey tragedies.

HEART WILL TELL HER

When She Meets Her Missing Mother.

Baltimore, Md., May 25.—The immigration authorities have been seeking several days to find the mother of a ten-year old girl traveling alone from Hungary to Ashtabula, Ohio, who arrived here Friday on the steamer Brandenburg, from Bremen.

She told Commissioner Weis that her name is Maria Pavlek, that she is 10 years old, and that she came from Hungary.

"My mother," she said, "is in this country and I have come to find her. Five years ago she came here, leaving me with my grandparents, both of whom died a short time ago.

"A lady got a ticket for me and I understood that my mother was living in Ashtabula, Ohio, and I made up my mind to come to this country to see her. In Bremen I told a lady what I intended to do and she asked a man on the ship to look after me and gave me $5 to procure something to eat with when I got on this side."

The Commissioner asked her if she would know her mother and she answered: "I might not know her face, but this would tell me (placing her hand on her heart) that she was my mother if I ever get near her."

The little traveler is being taken care of in the Locust Point detention house.

NURSED "STAR BOARDER."

Now Mrs. Ketcham Learns He Was Detective.

New York, May 25.—"Play-acting" as a fine art of private detective in one of the sensational features of the divorce suit of Frank V. Ketcham against Lyle Dellegar on the calendar of the Supreme Court for this term.

Mrs. Ketcham is a prepossessing woman of less than 30 years, who lives with her mother at 161 West Eighty-first street. Her husband is a son of George E. Ketcham, a wealthy retired business man of Yonkers. They have been married three years, and the wife avers her husband abandoned her a year ago when they were living at her mother's home.

Pretended illness on the part of a man who turned up in the role of a star boarder at the house in Eighty-first street, Mrs. Ketcham alleges, was used in a plot to entrap her into a false situation.

This man, whom she supposed to be her friend, was taken suddenly ill in a street car, as it appeared to Mrs. Ketcham and the rest of the passengers, and was assisted into a hotel, where his fair companion remained with him in the avowed capacity of nurse. When the door of the room was burst open by the husband and others, dramatically proclaiming, "Now, we have all the evidence we want!" Mrs. Ketcham understood that her friend was a private detective.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

SAW HIS MOTHER

Fall Into Well and Boy Saved Her.

Nashville, Ind., May 25.—Willie Sullivan, aged 13, after a heroic struggle, saved the life of his mother, who had fallen into a well while drawing water with a rope. He saw her fall, rushed to the well and lowered the rope to which his mother, in eight feet of water, held. Willie was not strong enough to pull her out and obeyed her instructions to tie the rope around a post and get a ladder. A ladder was soon lowered and the mother climbed out.

ALABAMA IS FOR PARKER

Delegation Will Vote as Unit—Hearst Men Scarce.

Chicago, May 25.—A Birmingham, Ala., special to the Tribune says: Alabama will be the first state called in the St. Louis convention, and there is therefore unusual interest in the position it takes on the presidential question. The delegation will go to the Democratic national convention entirely uninstructed. The twenty-two votes of the state will be cast under the unit rule, and the chances are they will be given to Judge Parker on the first ballot, and will remain with him at least as long as he seems to be the leading candidate.

Cleveland has many friends in Alabama, but the anti-third term sentiment is extremely strong. Gorman has a good deal of strength in the state, and the delegation might easily combine upon him. Olney, strangely enough, is extremely well thought of by the business interests, especially here in Birmingham. Nobody knows him, but they all admire him because of his record during the Cleveland administration.

Hearst has little or no following in this state.

DANGER FROM YELLOW FEVER

Panama Canal May Introduce Disease Into the Philippines.

Washington, May 25.—Dr. Richard P. Strong, director of the biological laboratory at Manila, P. I., has a paper in the fourth annual report of the Philippine commission, about to be published by the bureau of insular affairs, showing how the Panama canal may become a factor in introducing yellow fever into our Eastern possessions and the entire Orient.

He shows that the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and the Philippines, will be exposed to the importation of cases of yellow fever or of infected stegomyia fasciata (the mosquito that carries the fever) unless the disease can be banished from Panama.

The disease often follows the lines of commercial maritime travel and many instances are on record of the introduction of the disease by vessels into hitherto uninfected regions.

The paper states: "One need glance only for a moment at the map and then at the statistics of cases of yellow fever in numerous seaport towns during the past year (1902) to be again impressed by the relationship existing between commerce and yellow fever. During the past year among the seaport towns of the eastern coast of the Western continent, Port Limon, Progress, Vera Cruz, Tuxpan, Tampico, Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Manaos, Perambuco, Para and Paramribo, and among those on the western coast, Panama and Guayquil have all been frequent sufferers from this scourge.

It does not seem improbable, therefore, that unless extreme precautions are taken against vessels passing from these regions and bound for ports in the far East, infected ships, and even cases of yellow fever will be conveyed from the above mentioned cities to Honolulu, or even directly to Guam, Hong Kong and the Philippine Islands.

WISCONSIN MAN

Suicides Because Wedding Day Was Postponed.

Chicago, May 25.—Lost belief in his sweetheart's sincerity was given as the cause of suicide of Enos Ropp, in Madison, Wis., Sunday evening, by his relatives at Irving Park. Young Ropp was to be married Friday, in Bloomington, but his funeral took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence. Ropp loved Miss Jessie Johnston, a belle of Bloomington, a childhood sweetheart, who postponed the wedding day several times.

After the last postponement he said that he was afraid that the young woman would never marry him and did not care to live longer. Miss Johnston sent word that she desire to see the face of her wooer again and that she would attend the funeral, but she was not permitted to look upon the form of the dead boy, as the mangled condition of the body made it impossible.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Crookston.
Superior at Winnipeg.
Fargo at Grand Forks.

Crookston, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—After a most sensational garrison finish, Duluth succeeded in taking the second victory from the home team, when the latter appeared to have the game well in hand.

The feature of the game was the playing of Captain Frank Martin, who astonished his team mates by going into the box and pulling the White Sox out of a bad hole. In addition to this he rapped out a home run in the seventh inning, bringing in Corrigan and had another clean single to his credit.

Gehring started in to pitch for the visitors, but his curves were not as effective as they were against Fargo. The Crookston batters fell on him hard. One run was scored in the first inning and three in the second. Then "Hauk" was sent to the bench and Martin stepped into the box and took possession of the sphere. While his curves were not a mystery to the home batters, he pitched a steady game, and backed up by excellent fielding he managed to hold the home team to two runs.

In the sixth with the score 6 to 0 against them, the visitors commenced to play ball. Koukalik drew a base on balls, and Lagger and Quillan singled, scoring "Coke."

In the seventh the batting rally was continued. Corrigan was resting peacefully on the initial cushion, where he had been sent by Thomas with four bad ones, when Martin came to bat, and sorting out a good one banged it on the nose for four bases. A couple of singles and two untimely errors by the home players let in two more, and the visitors were but one to the bad.

The eighth was not productive of anything, but in the ninth the unexpected happened. Gehring and O'Leary, the first two men up, were easy outs, and the crowd was commencing to make for the gates, when Corrigan drew a base. The crowd paused, and when Martin laced out a clean single, sat down again. Corrigan had gone to third on the single, and Martin had no difficulty in stealing second. Another hit and some loose fielding on the part of the home team let them both in, and the visitors were one to the good.

When Carlysle, the first Crookston batter up in the ninth, swatted one of Martin's curves for three bases, the crowd stood up and tore things loose. Novacek, the next batter, drove a terrific liner at Zink. It was tagged for two or three bases, but the big first baseman let out a couple of links and reached it. Carlysle was hitting only the high spots on his way to the coveted gutta percha and Zink completed the double by a pretty throw to the third bag. Witte was an easy out at first.

"You never know when you have that bunch beat," wailed a Crookston fan, as he wended his way home after the game. "They don't know when they are beat themselves."

TURN THE TABLES.

Winnipeg Defeats Superior—Enormous Crowd Present.

Winnipeg, Man., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Before a holiday crowd of nearly 6000 fans, the "Champs" took revenge on Cameron's "swamp-jumpers" for the defeat in the morning game.

The home team got a bad start, and it looked like a second victory for the longshoremen in the early stages of the game. Dalquist, who was in the box for Winnipeg, pitched winning ball, but he was given wretched support, and at the end of the fifth inning the score was 4 to 1 in favor of the visitors.

But Gilbert, who had been doing good work in the box for Superior, let up in the sixth, and the "Champs" fell on him for four runs, putting him down and out. Simmonds, who replaced him, did but little better, and he failed to hold the peggers. The winning run was not scored until the ninth.

The enormous crowd filled the grand stands and bleachers and covered the sides of the field, making ground rules necessary.

FARGO SHUT OUT.

Grand Forks Takes Revenge For Monday's Defeat.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—To every dark cloud there is a silver lining. After the terrible exhibition of ball which was played here with Fargo Monday, it was the blackest of black clouds, but the fans who journeyed to the ball park today witnessed one of the fastest games that has ever been played on the local diamond. The dark cloud proved to be lined with silver when O'Brien handed the visitors a shut out.

Grand Forks had nothing to spare. The Tigers were unable to send a man across the plate a second time, and only one man saw the third corner after the score. The Forks got their score in the fourth inning. With two men out Martin came to bat and got a safe hit, the first hit. He stole second, and Dunn got to first by being hit by the pitcher. Then came Capt. Cole, it was up to him to make a hit. He is generally reliable in a pinch, and he sent the little sphere sailing safely over the short stop's head, for a two-bagger. Martin crossed the home plate for the only score in the game.

Souders was on the firing line for the visitors, and he put up an excellent sample of ball. In five different innings only three men faced him. Only one man saw a base in the fifth and eighth, but two men filled on bases in the fourth. Two two-baggers and three singles were all the Tigers could touch Souders for, and only one man drew a pass. Martin was the only man to steal a base.

On the other hand, O'Brien has a little better tale to tell. Thirty-three men faced him in the nine innings, against fifty-four to face Carriveau the day before. O'Brien got seven of them on his list and passed two. Traeger took a two-bagger, and Meinka stole a base and took two hits. This was all that Fargo could do with the little fellow.

Werden made the only error for Fargo and for it there was no excuse. Dillon sent an easy one to Lynch, who put it over to Perry Werden, but the game was young and the big fellow was not as yet awake.

Newmeyer will be on the slab for the closing game of the series. Fargo will have either Mehl or Lemka.

SHY OF PITCHERS.

Duluth's Twirling Department Is Badly Demoralized.

The White Sox are up a tree for pitchers.

A telegram received this morning from Captain Frank Martin reads as follows: "Koukalik hurt. Can't pitch. Must have Owens."

Manager Watkins of the Minneapolis team was communicated with by telephone, and asked why "Rusty" Owens was not allowed to report to the team at Fargo in time for the opening game. He stated that he had been forced to retain Owens several days longer than he had expected, but that he would report to the team in Winnipeg on Thursday.

The news was wired to Martin, and he will make his arrangements accordingly.

With Koukalik out of the game, the team has but two pitchers to rely on, Shaw and Gehring. Schooley has not yet been proven and he may fall down badly on the next game. Martin himself went into the box yesterday at Crookston. Shaw had pitched the preceding game, and when Gehring went to the bad there was no one to fall back on, except Schooley. None of the fans knew that Martin could pitch anything but a straight ball, and his ability to take the pitcher's position in cases of emergency was a complete surprise.

If Owens reports to the team in time for the Winnipeg series, the White Sox should take two games out of the three as they have done at Fargo and Crookston.

Shaw will probably pitch the game today against Crookston, although Schooley may be given another opportunity to show what he can do, and Shaw saved for the first Winnipeg game.

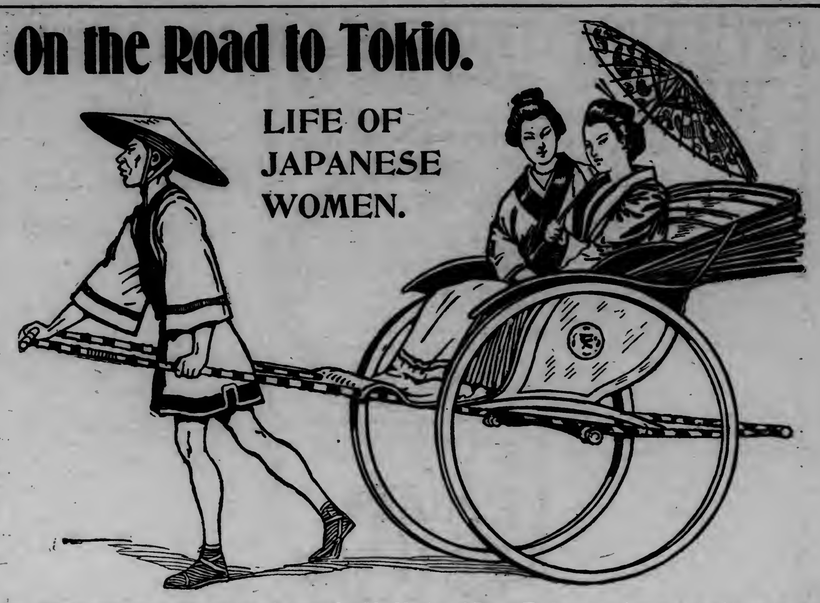
LIFE OF JAPANESE WOMEN.



THE Japanese women do not have the freedom of our American women before marriage, but in some respects they have an advantage over our women—for they usually enjoy perfect health. They follow from infancy the rules of the Jiu Jitzu, which teaches them to eat properly, breathe properly, and exercise rationally, then too they live in the out-door air—sleep in paper houses, which, in fact, is almost like living outdoors—take frequent baths and live like children in the sense that they throw out of their lives the cares and worries which make our women old before their time. Living simple lives—close to nature—on very plain food—without the social trammels—the confining dress—corsets and the many health destroying practices of our more modern civilization, as a consequence they grow up without those distressing ailments which are so pravalent among our woman-kind. It was not meant that our American women should suffer as they do—from month to month—with pains and drains which make their life miserable, but owing to our modern modes of living such conditions are more the rule than the exception. The woman is on the road to health who appreciates her bodily needs—and is willing to follow others who have been through the mill of experience. Take a case in point—that of Mrs. Martin:

"I write you to let you know I received your kind and ever welcome letter and your kind and fatherly advice," writes Mrs. Ida Martin, of Berry, Ky. "I commenced your treatment the next day after receiving your letter, some months ago, and followed your advice as closely as I could. Am glad to say I am in better health than have been for years. Believe I suffered from every disease that any over-worked, run-down woman could. Was not able to do anything, could not get one good night's sleep; had heart disease of the worst type. A disordered liver was one great trouble, and, passing through change of life, it seemed to cause me excruciating pain in breast and shoulders. I had no appetite, could not sweep nor do any housework. I took treatment from three of the best doctors in our town but grew worse every day, so I decided to write to Dr. Pierce for advice. I took the medicines just as you advised and continued until I had taken six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription.' I know that your medicines did more for me than all the medical treatment I had ever taken."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription balances the circulation, relieves pelvic congestion, stops wasting and weakening drains and gives new tone and vitality to the weakened organs. Nearly every tonic and remedy for women on the market to-day contains alcohol, which gives a temporary stimulation, very grateful to the worn out patient, but when the inevitable reaction comes on the disease is worse than ever. Dr. Pierce early recognized that alcohol was a poison and should not be used in treating sick women. There is not a particle of alcohol or any narcotic in Doctor Pierce's medicine. They have the most remarkable record of cures made by this word-famed remedy ever placed to the credit of any preparation especially designed for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Wheat Market Shows No Strength and Closes Lower.

Foreign Markets Lower After the Holidays —Flax Dull.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 25.—The wheat market continued its downward course this morning. The foreign markets which have been closed since last week were open and were lower. Liverpool being off ½@⅝c. London was unchanged to ⅞c lower. Paris ¾@⅞c lower and Antwerp unchanged. Crop advices are generally favorable both at home and abroad.

In the Duluth market there is no demand for grain to go all rail, there being signs now that boats may be running soon. Some has been chartered at 8c and while that rate is regarded as high it is better than the rail rate.

The July option in the Duluth market lost ¾c, in Minneapolis ⅝-¾c, in Chicago ¾-⅞c and in New York ⅞c. The September option in Duluth lost ⅞c and in Minneapolis ⅝-½c.

Car receipts at Duluth were 5 against 16 a year ago and at Minneapolis 101, against 92 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 109 against 108 last year. Chicago received 20 against 28 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 195,000 bus, last year 254,000 bus. Shipments 230,000 bus, last year 255,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 141,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½d lower. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅛-¼c higher. July oats closed ¼-⅜c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 472,000 bus, last year 572,000 bus. Shipments 527,000 bus, last year 505,000 bus. Clearances were 70,0 bus.

Trading in wheat was very dull in the Duluth market. July opened ⅝c lower at 93⅝c and advanced to 94¼c at 10:25. It settled back to 93⅞c at 10:40 and held at that point until about the noon hour, when it started downward again and touched 93¾c at 12:40. The close was at 93¾c, which was a loss of ⅜c. The September option closed ⅝c lower, at 91⅝c.

Cash offerings were light and No. 1 northern ranged from ¼c to 3c over July.

Flax was very slow. The July, May and September prices closed ¼c lower, nd October was unchanged.

In oats there was an advance of ½c, and rye lost 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard, 96¼c; No. 1 northern, 95c; No. 2 northern, 92½c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 96¾c; No. 1 northern, 95½c; No. 2 northern, 93c; on track, No. 1 northern, 93¾@93½c; No. 2 northern, 91¼@91½c; macaroni, No. 1, 91c; No. 2, 89c; May, 95c; July, 93½c; September, 91½c. Flax, in store, $1.07; to arrive, $1.07; May, $1.06⅞; July, $1.03¼; September, $1.00; October, $1.00½. Oats, on track, 42c; to arrive, 42c. Rye, on track, 68c; to arrive, 68c. Cars inspected—Wheat, 5; last year, 16; oats, 1; flax, 15; last year, 1.

Receipts—Wheat, 2366; flax, 20,462.
Shipments—Wheat, 13,216; oats, 37,500.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Bearish Sentiment Prevails In the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, May 25.—Sentiment in the wheat pit today was bearish due to perfect weather and to weak Liverpool cables. Trading was largely of a scalping nature. July opened a shade to ⅛@⅜c lower at 80¾c to 80⅞c, sold up to 80¾c, but eased off again to 80⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 125 cars against 82 cars last week and 131 cars a year ago.

The market continued weak throughout the entire day. Bearish crop reports from the Southwest were accompanied by numerous selling orders from St. Louis. The weakness of May had a depressing influence on distant deliveries. After selling down to 85¾c, July closed at 86c, a net loss of ⅜@⅝c.

The same influences that governed the wheat market were the ruling factors in corn. Covering by shorts caused a slight rally after an opening decline. Initial sales on July were off ¼c to ¼@¾c at 41½c to 41¾@42c. The price later advanced to 42⅛@42⅝c. Local receipts were 200 cars, with 23 of contract grade.

A firmer tone developed on a persistent demand from provision interests. July closed with a gain of ¼@¾c at 47⅞c, after touching 48c.

Oats were influenced by the action of corn, showing a little firmer feeling after an opening easiness. July opened ⅛c lower at 37⅝c and sold up to 37⅞@38c. Local receipts were 101 cars.

Provisions were strong on buying of July lard by a leading packer. The opening was barely steady due to an easier tone in the hog market. July pork opened 5c lower at $10.90, and advanced to $11.05. July lard was a shade up at $6.30@6.32½; the price later touched $6.37½. Ribs were off 2½c at $6.37½, but advanced to $6.42½.

Close: Wheat—May, 95c; July, 86c; old July, 87¼c; September, 80¼@⅝c; old September, 81¾c; December, 79⅝c. Corn—May, 47¼c; July, 47⅝c; September, 47⅜@47½c; December, 42½c; May (1905), 42c. Oats—May, 40⅜c; July, 38⅛c; September, 30⅝c. Pork—May, $11.05; July, $11.15; September, $11.37½. Lard—May, $6.30; July, $6.37½; September, $6.55; January, $6.35. Ribs—May, $6.37½; July, $6.47½; September, $6.62½@6.65. Rye—May, 72c; July, 65¼c; September, 64c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.06½; Southwestern, $1.06; May $1.02; July, $1.02½; September, $1.06. Timothy—May, $3.65; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $10.75. Barley—Cash, 33@57c. Cash: Wheat—No. 2 red, $1.06@1.08; No. 3 red, $1.03@1.07. No. 2 hard, 94@96c; No. 3 hard, 80@86c. No. 1 northern, 96½@99c; No. 2 northern, 94½@96c; No. 3 spring, 86@95c. Oats—No. 2, 39½c; No. 3, 38½@39c. Corn—No. 2, 48½@49¼c; No. 3, 48@49c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—May wheat was very erratic, selling up to 98c early on recovering of a few scattered shorts. The tone of July and September was on the whole heavy although there was some show of early strength. Foreign markets all came lower after the close of several days. The whole cash situation is dull. Outside interest in a speculative way is very slow and the market is without much pressure from short selling. There is practically no bear contingent left. Broomhall cabled that advices from Southeastern Europe concerning the crops are more favorable.

Corn—The general tone was strong. The strike in Buffalo harbor is settled. This caused some covering by shorts and some scalping buying for a rally. The general market is, however, dull both in a speculative and cash way.

Oats—It is affected by much the same conditions as in corn. There is probably a larger short interest in oats than in corn and a few local traders are trying to take advantage of this to work the market higher.

Provisions—The buying seemed to be for local packing acount. It comes from houses which have heretofore been bearish and may be only in the way of covering shorts. Receipts of hogs are about the same as last year and the shipments of larrd and meats greater.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—Wheat was a small, dull, nervous market, with a heavy tone the latter half of the session. The May fluctuated over a range of 3¼c on a trade aggregating less than 100,000 bus. The early firmness was attributed to the decline in the cowels. The weather today was perfect. General rains are forecasted for the Ohio valley and the middle West and Northwest tomorrow. The cash demand, which was been the streng feature, was slow today. Receipts are increasing somewhat, but are still light. A Duluth message reports stocks there of No. 1 northern absolutely exhausted. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 11 cars.

Corn—Covering by local shorts held the corn market steady today. The buying was based on predictions of rain through the sections where a movement is reported. A local pit crowd also rather favored the long side. Receipts were 200 cars, with 502 estimated for tomorrow. The cash market was steady. Country movement continues liberal and outside points, which in normal demand supply a large part of the consumptive demand throughout the South and through Pennsylvania and New York stats, are replenishing their stocks. This trade has for the past few weeks been supplied from Chicago, and this accounts for the large out movement. From now on, however, the consumption demand will run along the normal channels. The elevator strike at Buffalo has been settled, but the differences between the lake carriers and the masters' association have not yet been adjusted.

Oats was dull but firm at a slight advance, and this description comprises about all that can be said of today's market. The demand is still rather slow. The cash market was steady at ¼c lower. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 130 cars.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: Cash wheat premiums everywhere were fast disappearing yesterday and it was plain that the keen edge of the demand for the option grain to fill May deliveries have been dull with no shipping or milling demand to enliven the market. It was not remarkable that prices of the May delivery, with only five more days to run made a sharp decline, as the open interest remaining in this market was slight, there was no incentive on the part of the bulls to rush prices up. The effect on the more active speculative futures wass depressing. Disgusted holders were unloading and there was more disposition to make short sales.

• • •

Coe Commission Co.: Our market opened weak a fraction below yesterday's close and was rather weak early. Shorts covering caused a rally to a fraction above the opening. Offerings at the advance were liberal and the demand became rather slack, which resulted in early decline forom the top prices. At this writing the market is fairly steady at about the low point of the day. Est demand is from shorts covering. The Sept. option is attracting attention and the investment buying is mostly in that month. Weather could be better although crop news is rather good from most all sections. On any further decline advise buying both the July and Sept.

• • •

Bradstreet: Among the more important decreases reported this week not included in regular visible are 496,000 bus. at Chicago private elevators, 152,000 in Manitoba, 125,000 at Omaha and 57,000 at Louisville. There is a increase of 53,000 reported at Coteau Landing.

INACTIVE MARKET

Trading In Stocks Dull and the Changes Unimportant.

Early Declines Recovered and Close Was at Best.

New York, May 25.—Rather free offerings carried opening prices in stocks today a fraction below last night all around. Declines ran to ½ in a number of the leaders. Metropolitan Street Railway lost a point and Locomotive preferred 1½.

The market halted for a while, but as the opening loss did not invite purchases, selling was resumed. Union Pacific was conspicuously weak, yielding a point to 82¼. Other favorites dropped below their first prices and there was renewed liquidation of the Erie. New Haven declined 1¼. Continental Tobacco preferred and Snuff preferred gained ⅞. Prices rallied before 11 o'clock.

Prices held more firmly in the absence of selling pressure, and a number of prominent stocks rose slightly above last night, notably Brooklyn Transit, which gained ⅞. The market was exceedingly dull and uninteresting. Bonds were steady at noon.

Prices were well sustained despite the dullness and a few of the specialties rose further. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific were decidedly firm.

It was hard to distinguish any movement of prices. Prominent railroad stocks ruled very near to yesterday's close with the general level below.

In the general sagging tendency Metropolitan Street Railway reacted again to the lowest after having recovered its early loss. Republic Steel preferred lost 2. Brooklyn Union Gas 1½ and St. Louis Southwestern preferred and Chicago Great Western preferred "A" 1. The market hardened again. Metropolitan and West Side Elevated ipreferred jumped 4. The closing was about steady, but listless.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was quiet without much activity or feature. It opened rather weak owing to general laying off of men by several of the large railroad corporations, but as there was no very general selling it settled into dullness. Brooklyn was strong on reports of increased earnings and the American Smelter stocks received good support at advancing prices. Towards the close the traders began to buy a few stocks and the market closed strong. The net changes for the day were unimportant.

• • •

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: I am inclined to look for a little more than a traders' market in the immediate future. Stocks are probably a buy on moderate weakness and a sale on rallies. The big move this summer will in my judgment be downward. But we may get a fairly strong market and the public whacked into buying, up to about the time of the Republican convention. The weakness was rather a good sign than otherwise yesterday as Tuesday is reaction day in bull markets.

• • •

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market yesterday was very disappointing, closing at the bottom. It is to be noted, however, that there was no real liquidation. The selling came from traders who had gone long Saturday on the advance caused by the good bank statement and the buying by the short interest and who dumped their stocks Monday morning when the advance petered out. They then promptly went short and hammered the market all day long. The trading was confined to the room and the movement was just as professional as the previous ones have been for so long. It seems as if the decline had now gone about far enough and as if a rally was due this afternoon.

• • •

Coe Commision Co.: The stock market is fractionally lower than yesterday's close. The early sentiment seemed rather bearish, traders being rather inclined to play for further declines. After the first hour's trading, the market recovered the most of the early loss on some shorts covering, and at this writing is holding steady. All these decs like today should be taken advantage of by the good dividend-paying railroad shares.

• • •

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market has been irregular today and except in special stocks the net results were not important. Early declines were subsequently recovered during the later part of the day. There was an irregular advance. The close was strong at about best prices of the day. Few of the leading stocks, however, showed much of an advance, Brooklyn was the strong feature running up sharply on what seemed to be very good buying. Amalgamated Copper and Steel preferred showed strength. Among the railroads St. Paul and Union Pacific scored good recoveries. There was very little news and the trading was altogether professional. $2,250,000 will go abroad tomorrow.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Peine, Webber & Co.: The market again refused to be sold down. A fairly good rally followed a weak opening. Quotations moved in such narrow limits that there were no profits worth mention. Coppers was off fractionally in London, Amaglamated acted better than yesterday. Other coppers without feature, there is as yet nothing to encourage anyone in the market. The market ought to improve, however, and we think it should be watched.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 25:—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 4 points. This was a very fair response to the cables, with the new crop months relatively easier under liquidation following generally favorable weather accounts and talk of possible showers in the dry sections of the Eastern belt. Trading at first was rather less active than of late, and sentiment seemed very mixed, with a disposition to wait for some sign of the absence of rain. Operators of this the market showed rather an easier tendency soon after the opening, led by the new crop months, which were sold off on the expectation of rain in the eastern section, with the general list at the end of the first hour 6 to 10 points lower.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points lower. Middling uplands, $13.20; middling gulf, $13.45. Sales 434 bales. Futures closed barely steady. May, $12.63; June, $12.65; July, $12.82; August, $12.33; September, $11.18, October, $10.76; November, $10.66; December, $10.66; January, $10.66.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 25.—Close: Money on call easy at 1¼@1½ per cent; closing bid 1, offered 1¼. Time loans easy and dull; 60 and 90 days, 2½@3 per cent; six months, 3¾@4 per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4¼ per cent. Sterling exchanges firm, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.85@4.86.95 for demand and at $4.84.80@ $4.84.90 for 60 days; posted rates, $4.85½@4.86 and $4.87½@8; commercial bills, $4.84¾. Bar silver, 65¾c; Mexican dollars, 48¼c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds steady.

SPURRED BY LOVE.

Interesting Story About the Late J. L. Dodge.

The Boston Globe of May 19 contained the following interesting, though partially incorrect story regarding the late John Langdon Dodge:

Mr. Dodg's life history reads like a page from the record of the world's most successful men. Born on a drear and poverty stricken farm in New Marlboro, in the Berkshire hills, he won by his unaided efforts a fortune of nearly $1,000,000.

Romance played a large part in Mr. Dodge's success. He was spurred on by love. It is related that when Mr. Dodge's father "gave him his time" at the age of 21, the young farmer went to the home of a young woman with whom he had been "keeping company" for some months and asked to marry the daughter.

"You marry my daughter You!!" exclaimed the father. "Why, you can't support yourself even—let alone a wife!"

"Wait," answered young Dodge, hotly. "Just wait. I'll be able to buy and sell you twice over in two years."

Dodge started west the next day. He started in as a peddler of clocks from house to house, working his way as he went, and reached Duluth, Minn., less than two years later with a small capital.

Though he had but the ordinary education obtainable in a country school, and that less than six winters, young Dodge invested his hoard so skilfully that in less than a year he was a financial power in Duluth. A quarter of a century ago it was believed Mr. Dodge owned nearly a quarter of the business section of that city. He got his first start then by buying up the stock of a failing bank, instilling new vigor into it, until the stock went away above par.

The next year Mr. Dodge returned to New Marlboro and married Miss Laura Stevens. She died in 1870. After ten years in the West, Mr. Dodge came to Great Barrington. He was elected a director of the National Mahaiwe bank in 1889 and its president in 1854. He served just fifty years as president, retiring Jan. 1 last.

FOR STEALING ICE.

Mrs. Herzog, of Pork Point, Is Accused.

Charged with the crime of "wilfully stealing, carrying away and appropriating to her own use 50 pounds of ice valued at the sum of 20 cents," Mrs. F. P. Herzog of Park Point is on trial this afternoon in the municipal court before Judge Windom.

The bill of complaint states that the act took place last Sunday afternoon. The defendant claims that it is a spite case instigated by her husband. An action for divorce is now under consideration in the district court, and Mrs. Herzog claims that her husband was responsible for the action of the complaining witness, who is the owner of an ice house adjoining the residence of Mrs. Herzog.

MARINE NEWS

OFFERS OF BOATS

Grain Men Can Get Them at Five Cent Rate.

At Least One Charter Is Made at That Figure.

The vessel situation is showing some slight signs of clearing and there is a strong opinion that the differences that now exist between masters and owners will be adjusted within a few days and the boats be running.

Some tonnage is being offered for grain, but at a high figure. Five cents is asked for wheat, and at least one charter has been made at that figure. Shippers naturally are not inclined to pay as high a rate as that, and will only make charters where it is imperative.

The fact that some tonnage is offered, however, is taken as a hopeful sign. The boats offered are not lumber carriers, but of a class to get the regular insurance rate.

TO START BOATS.

The Lake Carriers' Association Notifies Its Members.

Cleveland, May 25.—The executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association has wired the members of that association "to start your boats as soon as you are ready."

It is understood that enough men have been secured to start some of the boats and these will be got on way as soon as possible. The members of the committee will not make known their plans, but they expect that the advice to start the boats as soon as possible will be followed in a number of cities. The number and names of these boats will not be given out until they have left port. A number of the masters of the boats have been aboard for several weeks expecting a settlement with the Lake Carriers' association. It is understood that some of the masters to be taken into service will be men who have commissions, but have not sailed for some years, but have been employed in other lines of marine work. Regarding the efforts of the Civic Federation to arbitrate the differences between the Lake Carriers and the masters and pilots, Mr. William Livingstone said last night that no arbitration can be had so long as there is a principle at stake. "If it were a question of dollars and cents," he said, "we might avail ourselves of the offices of the Civic Federation, but not under present conditions. We are willing to furnish all information of our side of the case that we are asked to, but an attempt to bring us together, so long as conditions are as they are, can have but one reply, a refusal on our part to submit the case to a third party."

SEVERAL BOATS WILL SAIL

Saxonia and City of Superior Among Them.

Cleveland, May 25.—"While there may be some developments very soon, there is nothing that can be given out for publication at this time," said President Livingston of the Lake Carriers' association, when asked today concerning the situation in regard to the deadlock between the Lake Carriers and the Masters' and Pilots' association.

From another source it was learned that several vessels enrolled in the Lake Carriers' association, will clear from Lake Erie ports before the day closes.

Among these boats are the Saxonia, lying at Buffalo, and the City of Superior

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE

Stores, Banks and Public Offices Will Be Closed.

Next Monday will be Memorial day and will be generally observed in Duluth as a holiday by all the union clothing, shoe and departmental stores, the banks, board of trade and public offices.

Services will be held in the Armory, which will be attended by all of the members of the six local posts of the G. A. R. A band of forty pieces will be in attendance to render a fitting musical program.

The school children will be given a whole holiday, and will be addressed on Friday afternoon by members of the G. A. R. posts on patriotic subjects.

Over $100 has been collected by the finance committee appointed by Mayor Cullum to raise funds to assist the old soldiers in their efforts to observe the day in a fitting manner. This will be expended for the music and for flowers with which to decorate the graves of the dead comrades.

CITY BRIEFS.

Parlor theater—Burlesque and vaudeville.

Have your window boxes filled at Seekins & La Borious' greenhouses.

Dance at Lester tomorrow night.

Work was commenced this morning on the construction of the storm sewers on Tenth and Twelfth avenues east. When the manhole at the corner of Twelfth avenue and Superior street was uncovered a cake of ice six inches in thickness was found.

Parlor theater—Follow the crowd tonight.

Tomorrow the government inspectors of steam vessels will visit the following boats of the Pittsburg Steamship company: Elwood, Roman, Zenith City, Queen City and Hill. At the offices of the company it was stated that these inspections were not an indication of expectation of immediate resumption of traffic, and that no word had been heard from Cleveland.

Dancing at Oatka Beach Pavilion tonight, LaBrosse's Orchestra.

In the golf contest yesterday at the Northland club Mrs. Jones and Mrs. T. W. Hoopes were the winners. The contestants and their handicaps were: Mrs. Jones, 9, vs. Mrs. P. M. Shaw, 8; Mrs. T. W. Hoopes, 9, vs. Mrs. T. F. Cole, 2.

A rate of $24 to New York was put in yesterday by the South Shore road, for the purpose, it is said, of meeting lake competition. It is customary to put in this rate every summer when passenger traffic begins on the lakes.

Dance at Lester tomorrow night.

PERSONAL.

A. Patriarche, traffic manager of the Pere Marquette road, was here yesterday from Detroit. Mr. Patriarche's name is somewhat misleading to those who do not know him, for he is not venerable nor deliberate in his business, but a comparatively young man, and a worker for business.

Mrs. J. Holstien will leave tomorrow afternoon for a visit with friends and relatives in Chicago and the Twin Cities.

Mrs. H. C. Liedel, of Eleventh avenue east, who returned ill a few days ago from a Chicago visit, is reported much better.

L. M. Willcuts, collector of customs, has returned from his Western trip.

H. S. Bryan, superintendent of motive power of the Duluth & Iron Range road, was here today on his way home from Chicago.

General Freight Agent W. W. Walker, of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, leaves this evening for Chicago.

M. S. Burrows goes to Chicago tonight.

Mrs. J. W. Lang goes to Minneapolis tonight for a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Errington start tonight for Butte.

Agent Martin Adson of the D., S. S. & A., is expected to return from Spokane Saturday.

Decision Postponed.

Decision as to whether the trunk lines might accept their proportion of the lake and rail rate on flour east of Chicago was postponed until Friday at the Chicago meeting. It is not known whether this was the result of failure to agree, or a belief that navigation would soon be able to take care of the business.

It is believed in some quarters that the latter is the more likely, as if there was no chance of the boat lines taking it, the steam lines would be out for the business.

STUDENTS OBJECT

To Having Examinations During University Week.

Milwaukee, May 25.—A Journal special from Madison, Wis., says: At a special convocation today, President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin, announced that there would be examinations during jubilee week. The announcement was hissed by the students who strongly disapprove of the ruling. Placards have been posted on the campus by the students strongly denouncing President Van Hise's action.

PT. ARTHUR FIRED ON

Japanese Fleet Bombarded City Again Tuesday Morning.

Russians Desecrate Tombs In Land of the Koreans.

Che Foo, May 25.—A portion of the Japanese fleet bombarded Port Arthur at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The attack was witnessed by a Frenchman who left Dalny on the night of May 22, arirving here tonight. He says that eight large warships circled before the entrance to Port Arthur, firing broadsides at intervals of ten minutes.

Up to the time the Frenchman left Dalny everything was quiet there, but an attack on the part of the Japanese was expected shortly. The military and civil officials of Dalny were ready to leave. Only a few civilians remain there. The attempt was made about a fortnight ago to destroy the docks and piers at Dalny, but was not successful, and after the receipt of the news of the loss of the Japanese battleship Hatsuse, Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, commander of the military forces at Port Arthur, ordered that the docks and piers be not destroyed.

The Japanese are in force at Pitsewo and Kin Chou and are ready to march down either side of the peninsula toward Port Arthur.

The German steamer Che Foo was fired on by a Japanese cruiser in Pechi Li gulf today. She misunderstood the signals of the cruiser. The Swedish steamer Karin also was fired on during last night while off Liao Tien Shan promontory, but it is not known whence this fire came.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—No confirmation is obtainable here of the report from Che Foo that Port Arthur was bombarded yesterday by the Japanese fleet, but with telegraphic communication interrupted, the authorities here are not in a position to question the accuracy of the statement made.

Chicago, May 25.—A special to the Daily News from Chee Foo says: While cruising in Society bay this morning, the Fawan ran across a Japanese fleet of four cruisers and four destroyers. The vessels were evidently assisting some landing party. From Chinese junks in the bay it was learned that heavy fighting is in progress ashore in the neighborhood of Port Arthur.

DESECRATE TOMBS.

Wanton Act Of the Russians In Korea.

Seoul, May 25.—A telegram has been received here from Gensan, on the east coast of Korea, saying that the Russians, after an engagement with Korean troops at Ham Heung on May 19, burned the shrines and the royal mausoleum, which were erected there by the founder of the present Korean dynasty in the year 1364, and which were regarded as sacred by the Koreans. This apparent wanton desecration of tombs in a land imbued with the spirit of ancestor worship has caused excited denunciation of the Russians on the part of the Seoul officials.

Ham Heung is on the coast of Korea and about fifty miles north of Gensan.

The Cossacks which are believed to be at Kiong Song have, according to Korean reports, about twenty guns with them. If this is true, this artillery probably is composed of trans-Baikal horse batteries, several of which were attached to the First corps at Vladivostok before the war.

A Japanese, who has returned here from Yongampo reports that there are only a few Japanese troops there. The people are quiet, but they do not welcome the Japanese occupation because of the severity of the military authorities. The Russians left many thousand feet of useful timber at Yongampo. There are not more than 1,000 soldiers in the garrison at Seoul. Barracks which heretofore were filled are now vacant, the troops having gone north to Anju.

The local gendarmes are being transferred to Yongampo, Wiju and Antung.

CORRESPONDENTS HELD BACK.

Washington, May 25.—The secretary of state has received the following cablegram from Ambassador McCormick at St. Petersburg:

"I am informed by the foreign office that foreign correspondents will not be admitted to the front by order of the general commanding. They remain at Mukden or Newchwang."

LAST REPORT FROM STOESSEL.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—The last reports received by the general staff from Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, dated May 19, say no Japanese troops had landed till then below Kin Chou. While the war office does not discredit the persistent rumors of fighting at Kin Chou, it has no information of any collision since May 16, when Gen. Fock made a reconnaissance in force to determine the strength of the enemy. The general staff is inclined to believe that it will require some time for Gen. Oku to prepare for actives operation against Port Arthur. Siege guns are considered an absolute prerequisite, as the water at Kin Chou is too shallow to permit heavy warships to get within effective range. The movements of the Cossacks in the rear of Gen. Kuroki are being carefully guarded.

There is no official confirmation of the reports that the Japanese have abandoned Feng Wang Cheng.

CAR ACCOUNTANTS MEET.

Washington, May 25.—At today's session of the association of transportation and car accounting officers organized here yesterday, numerous reoprts were submitted and the question of adopting standard blanks and other papers recommended by the American railway association was considered.

At 3:53, the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

FIRE UNDER CONTROL.

Loss at Yazoo City May Reach $2,000,000.

Jackson, Miss., May 25, 1 p. m.—A telephone message just received here from the edge of Yazoo City says the fire which started there at 9 o'clock this morning is still burning and is beyond control. Chambless White was killed and Mayor Holmes badly injured while fighting the flames. It is now thought the loss will $1,250,000.

The Illinois Central passenger depot is on fire, together with many cars standing in the yards. It looks as though the whole town is doomed to destruction.

2 p. m.—The fire is now believed to be under control. The loss is roughly estimated at $2,000,000. The fire destroyed everything from the river on the south, a distance of 12 blocks and 3 blocks wide.

BUILDING ACCEPTED

Furnishing of Children's Home Will Begin at Once.

The new building for the Children's Home has been accepted by the building committee of the home board and is now being cleared and made ready for the furnishing. The building is located at Fifteenth avenue east and Fifth street and is very handsome in appearance.

The women having in charge the furnishing have their plans completed and the work well in hand. As practically nothing from the old quarters could be used, all the furnishing will be new. The greater part of it has come to the board as gifts from those wishing to share in the building up of this excellent charity. There are some dormitory beds still to be provided and anyone wishing to give one may address either Mrs. J. H. Crowley or Mrs. John G. Williams, who are looking after the furnishing of the building.

All articles promised the home may be sent to it on Saturday and Monday and thereafter. The committee has purchased every article going into the home from Duluth people, and has placed the orders with as many different firms as was possible.

The building will be closed to visitors from now until the opening reception which will be announced later.

The following articles constitute a dormitory bed and the cost of each complete is $25. All iron institution bed with woven wire springs, 1 first class felt mattress, 1 feather pillow, 1 rubber sheet, 4 cotton sheets, 3 pillow cases, 1 pair all wool blankets, 1 pair white cotton blankets, 2 spreads, 1 yard carpet, 1 chair.

PRESBYTERIANS RESCIND VOTE

On the Divorce Question and Pass New Resolution.

Are Now In Line With the Other Protestant Churches.

Buffalo, May 25.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States, today reopened the discussion on divorce and marriage and by a two-thirds vote passed a resolution which puts the Presbyterian church in accord with the stand taken by all other Protestant churches, but which leaves it unbound by the restrictions of the Roman Catholic church.

Rev. Dr. Young, of Pittsburg, presented the new resolution, which is practically a substitute for the second section of the recommendation of the committee on marriage and divorce, which was eliminated by the assembly on Monday. Gen. Prime, of Yonkers, moved to have the substitute of Dr. Young referred to the committee on church policy, but his motion was lost.

The denominations concerned are the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States, Presbyterian church in the United States of America, the Methodist Episcopal church, the Baptist church, the M. E. church (South), the Alliance of the Reformed churches holding the Presbyterian system; the synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church, the Reformed Church in America, the Congregational churches, the Universalist churches, the Unitarian churches, the Reformed Presbyterian church (general synod) and the Cumberland Presbyterian church.

The remainder of the first session of the Presbyterian church of the United States today was devoted to the discussion of the report of the standing committee on foreign missions.

During the day the standing committee on publication and Sabbath school work and the special committee on territorial limits of presbyteries, will make their reports.

PRESBYTERIANS AT DALLAS.

Dallas, Texas, May 25.—When the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church met today, it was with the hope that the question of church union would be disposed of by tonight.

In the devotional exercises at the opening of the session references were frequently made to the great question at hand and special pleas were made for divine guidance in its solution.

The debate was marked with great earnestness on the part of the speakers. The nice feature of the question was strongly emphasized, many delegates holding it as their belief that the diversity of views of the northern and southern churches on this point are too wide for an agreement.

ONE DEAD, ONE DYING, AS RESULT OF DAKOTA FEUD.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 25.—As a result of a pitched battle six miles west of here in South Dakota, Clarence Chilleau is dead, and his brother Albert is dying in a Sioux City hospital. John St. Pierre, who confessed he did the shooting, is in jail here. The tragedy was the result of an old feud. All three men are farmers.

COOPER WANTS TO RETIRE.

Washington, May 25.—Rear Admiral Cooper, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, has requested that he be relieved of that command and placed on the retired list in the early fall. It is probable that Rear Admiral Sterling will succeed him.

ON TRIP OF INSPECTION.

Washington, May 25.—Secretary Cortelyou of the department of commerce and labor accompanied by Mr. Weaver, his confidential secretary, and Frank P. Sargent, commissioner general of immigration, left for New York this afternoon on a trip of inspection of various bureaus of the department. They will be absent about ten days. Assistant Secretary Murray will be acting secretary during Mr. Cortelyou's absence.

JAPANESE FORCES STORM AND CAPTURE CITY OF KIN CHOU, NEAR PORT ARTHUR

Town Was Fortified and Protected By Mines and Entanglements.

Japanese Troops Are Now Within Ten Miles of Port Arthur.

Cossacks Are Said to Have Captured a Number of Japanese Guns.

London, May 26.—A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio says the Japanese have stormed and captured the town of Kin Chou, about thirty-two miles north of Port Arthur.

In an earlier message the Tokio correspondent of the Central News cabled that Japanese spies had ascertained that the Russians had guns at Kin Chou and numerous mines and wire entanglements at all the points where a Japanese attack was expected. The fighting is said to have taken place today.

7:07 p. m.—The correspondent of the Central News at Tokio cables that the Japanese atacked Nan Qwan Ling, on the narrowest part of the Kwan Tung peninsula yesterday and drove back the Russians by main force.

The attack on Kin Chou, the dispatch adds, was begun at dawn today and by noon Kin Chou was in the hands of the Japanese, who occupied the castle. The fighting continued during the afternoon and was of the most desperate character. It is believed the casualties were heavy.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—Viceroy Alexieff telegraphs that a report is current that Port Arthur was bombarded May 24, but says he has not received any official confirmation of the rumor.

It is reported that Gen. Rennekampff's Cossacks, who are operating on the line of Gen. Kuroki's commands, have made an important rapture of some of the enemy's guns, which were being taken forward to Feng Wang Cheng. No other details are given. This report comes from the members of the emperor's suite.

Che Foo, May 26.—There is a rumor current here among the Chinese that the Japanese are now within ten miles of Port Arthur.

A letter received here from a Japanese correspondent says the Japanese landed a regiment of troops at Kerr bay, northeast of Talien Wan bay, Liao Tung peninsula, May 19.

There was a violent storm in the gulf of Pechli last night. A fleet of four ships passed here at noon going east.

MOVEMENT OF JAP TROOPS

Shown In Report of Kuropatkin to the Emperor.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—Emperor Nicholas has received the following telegram from Gen. Kurepatkin, dated May 25:

"There has been no general change in the direction of Feng Wang Cheng or the peninsula of Liao Tung with reference to the disposition of numbers. It is established that 40,000 Japanese troops have been concentrated at Feng Wang Cheng, and that there are four line regiments and fifty guns at Pian Lin.

"The advance of small detachments of Japanese towards Siu Yen had been observed. It is carried out very slowly and with great percaution.

"A force of 3000, including infantry of the line and guards and three squadrons of cavalry, advanced May 22 along the Siu Yen road, between Sedzehoge and Saluzalpudza, on the left bank of the Tayang river. At the same time there was a simultaneous advance of the enemy from Feng Wang Cheng and Pian min towards the lower course of the Tayang river, on the way to Lung Weng Mia.

"The advance guard of these columns crossed to the right bank on May 22, and one column of three companies and one squadron occupied the Liao Tai pass, fifteen miles from Su Sen, on the Takushan road and the neighboring villages of Onalsa and Kwangfu.

"On May 22 an intermediate detachment, comprising a battalion of foot soldiers and one squadron of cavalry occupied Picknniff, on the right bank of the Tayang river, on the Takushan road, seven and a half miles from Sudlaputz."

MANY WARSHIPS

Will Be Built By Russia at Once.

New York, May 26.—A naval program extraordinary is reported by the Russian correspondents of the London Times to be under consideration by a special commission recently appointed. Its exact extent is kept secret, but it is known that Russia intends to lose no time in laying down an unusually large number of vessels of various types, while in addition to the submarines under construction or undergoing trial, it is generally thought in naval circles that at least ten will be laid down with as little delay as possible.

The Russian minister of marine is said to have given especial attention to submarines and to have offered inducements to submarine engineers expert to evolve an improved type.

A fleet of vessels, including two coast defense ships have been engaged for several days outside Kronstadt in various exercises, including torpedo practice.

The commanders of the vessels have been enjoined to pay especial attention to the training of the gun crews, and the paramount importance of rapid andaccurate shooting has been insisted upon.

FINEST HOSPITAL TRAIN

Ever Constructed Starts For the Far East.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—The empress' hospital train started on its journey to the far East today. Among those at the station to witness its departure were Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, the heir presumptive, and Duke Peter of Oldenburg, the emperor's brother-in-law. The train is the finest railway hospital ever constructed. It consists of two sections, the first composed of fourteen ambulance cars fitted with every appliance for the comfortable transportation of the ill and wounded. The second section contains two operating cars supplied with every adjunct of the modern operating room—tiled interiors, capable of instantly cleansing, disinfectants, stores, instruments, bandages and adjustable operating tables. These cars are intended to be detached from the train and sent to various points wherever they will be of the most use along the line.

The remainder of the train contains a library, chapel and bath rooms, including a special electric bath, an X-ray car, with dynamos and all apparatus and a kitchen car, from which all the patients are fed. There are also cars containing a dispensary, sterilizing and disinfecting apparatus, a water distilling plant and ice manufacturing machinery.

There went out with the train three doctors, four Sisters of Mercy and three assistants.

The empress not only furnished the entire train, but furnishes $500 monthly to aid in the purchase of delicacies for the sick.

The imperial family from Tsarkoe-Selo is going to Peterhof June 6, where Emperor Nicholas will remain for the rest of the summer.

He will not occupy the grand palace, but the smaller Alexander palace, in the imperial park. On account of the war, the emperor will not go to Kierniewice, Russian Poland, as usual, this summer.

Four hundred additional passenger cars in European Russia will be used for war purposes and the work of the Red Cross society.

The detailed official report of Viceroy Alexieff of the torpedo destroyer fight of March 9, in which the Stereguechtchni was cut off and sunk by Japanese cruisers and the fight of the following day, in which a Japanese torpedo boat was sunk by a torpedo, is published here. The viceroy lays stress upon the great delicacy of the destroyers and torpedo boats and the ease with which they are disabled by a projectile in the engine room. The whole of the engine room crew of the Vlastnini were driven to the deck by the escaping steam and the boat was saved only by the heroism of the engineer, who, though burned and scalded, went down below and succeeded in again getting up steam.

Although the loss of a Japanese torpedo boat on March 10 has not been admitted by the Japanese, the viceroy positively and officially affirms this.

No big army maneuvers will be held in European Russia this year. Instead all regiments will go into camp until September. A feature will be made of target practice.

COSSACKS AMBUSHED.

Fall Into Trap Prepared By the Japanese.

Liao Yang, May 26.—A wounded Cossack who arrived at the village of Sayolentsi, reports that a fight took place north of Takushan on May 20, in which the Japanese ambushed a sotnia of Cossacks and nearly wiped them out.

The Cossacks were patrolling to the north of Takushan for a distance of eighteen miles when they fell in with two squadrons of Japanese cavalry, who retreated. The Cossacks followed and fell into an ambuscade, a body of Japanese infantry being concealed behind a small hill.

Commander Deckromesheff ordered his men to draw their sabres and cut their way out, when his horse was shot from under him. He had just time to order the Cossacks to scatter when he fell wounded.

The Japanese then closed in on two sides, firing volleys at close range. The two remaining officers fell and the Cossacks retreated with the loss of three officers and thirty men.

BATTLE REPORTED.

Engagement Said to Have Occurred at Sansuripo.

Che Foo, May 26.—A junk which left Dalny on the night of the 23rd and which arrived today reports that the Japanese army had then reached Sansuripo, which is north of Dalny and southwest of Nangalien.

The Rusians offered a stubborn resistance to the advance of the Japanese and a battle was fought at noon on the 22nd at Sansuripo. The result of the battle was not learned by the bearers of the news. The advance of the Japanese indicates that they have recovered from the reported reverse at Kin Chau. The Russians at Talienwan have prepared to destroy the town upon the arrival of the Japanese. The Russian plan is to have the troops on the Liao Tung peninsula fall back to Port Arthur after harassing the invaders.

From the best information obtainable it is learned that the Japanese have landed near Kin Chau and are advancing along the railway to Port Arthur. Those that landed at Pitsewo are traveling donw the East side of the peninsula to Dalny and those that landed at Takushan are going to reinforce the Feng Wang Cheng army.

SENSATIONAL STORY

Concerning Alarming Condition of Affairs In Russia.

London, May 26.—The Standard publishes a dispatch from a Russian correspondent in whom the paper says it places great confidence, containing most sensational statements regarding the alrming condition of Russia as a result of the war. The correspondent asserts that disturbances in various cities have been followed by wholesale executions without any civil trial. It is stated that 600 persons have been hanged in Warsaw alone and that many others have been hanged in Kronstadt and Moscow. At the latter place the troops buried eighty coffins containing the bodies of those who had been hanged. The bodies were buried secretly in the dead of night, presumably in the woods. This correspondent asserts that the war has resulted in the utter paralysis of all business and says that even the most cheerful-minded are drawing ominous conclusions from the significant fact that regiments stationed in European Russia have been retained in their places and that only the reserves have been mobilized for the front. The Standard in an editorial says it publishes this correspondent's statement under all reserve, but it thinks there are many indications, such, for instance, as the sinking of the battleship Orel, that the formal disaffection of the population of Russia has been greatly stimulated by the war.

Said to Have Turned Securities Into $500,000 In Cash and Fled to Avoid Trial For Grand Larceny.

New York, May 26.—Dr. Richard C. Flower, whose bail bond for $23,000, furnished by a woman interested in his mining companies, was declared forfeited a few days ago, is reported to have sailed for Central America at least a week ago to avoid answering charges of grand larceny in connection with mining schemes. He is said to have gone away disguised as an invalid. According to information received at the district attorney's office, Flower, before leaving, emptied several safe deposit boxes in his name about town, and disposed of gilt-edged securities which he owned for at least $500,000 in cash.

Flower is under indictment on five charges of grand larceny in connection with a mining swindle of gigantic proportions. These indictments were handed down two years ago. Trial of the case has been delayed from time to time for various reasons, the chief of which was the trial and conviction of Edward E. Mills, Flower's lawyer, who was charged with attempting to bribe Mr. Garvan in the effort to get posession of the original indictments against Flower.

When Flower was arrested bail in the sum of $23,000 was furnished by Mrs. Cornelia Storrs, of Westbury, Conn., a widow of a former deputy controller of this city. It is said Mrs. Storrs is unsecured by Flower. She invested large sums in his mining schemes.

Flower's swindles were conducted through the medium of the Arizona Eastern and Montana Ore Development company, and Blue Ridge Mining company, of which he was the organizer and head. It is alleged the stock of these companies is practically worthless. Flower represented that the companies owned and operated vast tracts of mining land equipped with expensive apparatus all over the country.

An incident mentioned in connection with the Flower case is the death of Theodore Hagaman at the Waldorf-Astoria in 1900. Mrs. Delabarre, who formerly was the wife of Hagaman, declared about a year ago that she had invested nearly $500,000 received from Hagaman's estate in Flower's ventures. When suspicions created by Hagaman's death were made known it was contended he had died from poison and at the request of relatives his body was exhumed.

Professor Witthause was engaged to make a chemical analysis of the stomach. His report was that emblaming fluid used by the undertaker made it impossible for him to say if poison caused death.

Dr. Flower has a police record from Mexico to Boston. He has been a spirit medium, clergyman, lawyer, professional hypnotist, organizer of the R. C. Flower Medical company, and promoter of dozens of short lived stock concerns. As head of a medicine company Dr. Flower held forth a panacea for all ills and sold thousands of bottles at $1 a bottle, cost price 2 cents. The Flower Medical society, with a huge sanitarium in Boston, grew out of this success, which for a time paid dividends of $1 a month. In time it failed.

Dr Flower's record in the courts began in Chicago in 1893. He was indicted there for obtaining $46,000 by false pretenses from Nathaniel C. Foster, a wealthy lumberman of Fairchild, Wis. He was never tried. After this Dr. Flower made his headquarters in New York city. His subsequent record follows:

Jan. 12, 1901.—Dr. R. C. Flower and W. J. Ashton, promoters of the Arizona, Eastern and Montana Mining company, disappeared from the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, where they had been living, after floating more than $1,000,000 of stock.

Feb. 27, 1903.—Dr. Flower, alleged to have had shady connections with settling the estate of Theodore Hagaman, of New York. Charges were made that there was a plot to get the fortune, which amounted to $1,500,000, and that Dr. Flower secured $250,000.

May 7, 1903.—Miss Mary E. Stanford, sister of the late Leland Stanford, of California, died, heartbroken and penniless, at Montclair, N. J., after failing under the hypnotic influence of Dr. R. C. Flower and investing her fortune of $25,000 in stock of the Arizona, Eastern and Montana Mining company.

March 13, 1903.—Dr. Flower was arrested in New York on the charge of larceny of $25,000 and attempting to bribe Police Inspector Titus.

March 26, 1903.—Dr. Flower was indicted in New York for the larceny of $500 from Mrs. Belle Gray Taylor, who put that amount into Lone Pine stock. He was held in $50,000 bail.

DIED FROM FAST

Member of Sun Worshippers Succumbs to Awful Ordeal.

Miss Eloise Reusse of St. Paul Dead In Hospital.

Chicago, May 26.—Miss Eloise Reusse, of St. Paul, Minn., who became insane here while undergoing the ordeal of the so-called "Sun worshipping fast," is dead in the state hospital for the insane at Elgin. Dr. Frank S. Whitman, superintendent of the hospital, says that death was due to acute mania induced by starving.

During the fast, which is said to have lasted forty-one days, deceased is said to have been subjected to torture by means of needles and the application of lotus oil.

TROUBLE IN SIGHT

Repitition of Great Paper Mill Strike May Occur.

Order to Return to Long Hour Schedule the Cause.

Appleton, Wis., May 26.—Notice has been served on all employes of paper mills now running under union schedule in the Fox river valley that on June 4, there will be a return to the old schedule of long hours and that Saturday nights off are abolished. The notice affects several hundred men, women and children. It is feared that long and serious trouble will ensue, with possibly a repetition of the great strike of two years ago. The mill owners stated today that the reason for their action is that the short hour schedule was granted with a proviso by which the union undertook to secure a similar schedule in all competing mills before May, 1903. Although this was not done, the employes were allowed to contiuue until now on short hours. Competition will permit such conditions no longer.

CHALLENGE YALE AND HARVARD.

London, May 26.—The Oxford university Athletic club, on behalf of Oxford and Cambridge universities, has sent a challenge to Harvard and Yale to hold an athletic meeting in London this summer.

FLEET AT THE AZORES.

Washington, May 26.—Rear Admiral Barker has reported his arrival with the Kearsarge, Alabama, Maine and Iowa at Horta, the Azores. One of these vessels probably will be ordered at once to Tangier in connection with the kidnaping of the American, Perdicaris.

THE UNITED CHURCH

Of Presbyterians Opens Business Session at Greenville, Pa.

Large Number of Reports Were Made and Accepted.

Greenville, Pa., May 26.—At its business session today, the United Presbyterian general assembly elected unanimously as moderator, Dr. J. W. Witherspoon of Allegheny, Pa.

When he had been escorted to the platform, Charles J. Watson, of Philadelphia, secretary of the board of foreign missions, presented him with a gavel made from wood taken from mission houses in Egypt and India and made by boys in a Hindoo mission school.

A number of overtures were received from the presbyteries of Xenia, Smithson, Ill., Pittsburg, Concordia and Conemaugh, after which the committee on narrative and state of religion reported seventeen more congregations and a net gain in membership of 2494, the total membership is now 138,145.

Total contributions for all purposes were $1,967,444, or $100,000 more than last year.

The board of home missions reported that while the work of the past year was highly encouraging, it was more desirous that the church should realize more fully and clearly the magnitude of its unfinished work in this country. The missionary duty of the hour surpasses in importance and irgency every other duty of the church and the home mision work is not second in importance to any work that is being carried on. There never was a time when, there were so many and such urgent reasons for carrying it forward aggresively, courageously and with abounding liberality. The net increase in the membership of the missions last year was 1815 and the payments to presbyteries were $12,000 more than for 1903. The total expenditures were $104,784.

The report of the board of Freedmen's missions showed that 118 missionaries were employed, including thirteen ordained ministers of whom nine were colored. The total number of pupils in the schools was 3231, and the number in the Sabbath Schools 3200. This is a smaller enrollment than that of 1903, and was occasioned by the health conditions in the vicinity of some of the stations. The interest in the work of evangelization in all the stations was good, and in some a very great awakening was experienced. No new congregations were organized.

The board of church extension reported receipts of $111,476, and disbursements of $116,599, the balance on hand May 1 being $3661. Attention is called to the gravity of the present situation. When the fiscal year closed there was an available balance of only $513.50 in the general fund. An appropriation of not less than $75,000 was asked for.

The statistical report of A. G. Wallace, stated clerk, contained the following: The net gain in the congregations in America is 1970, a little over 1.7 per cent. The movement of the population has changed somewhat, but the drain upon thec hurches continues. In the synods of Iowa and Nebraska there has been a decrease in the membership and the Second Illinois and Kansas synods have little more than held their own. In the extreme East the loss has been less than in former years. The movement from the Middle West is to places further west and to the wheat districts of Canada. The presbyteries have struggled, and sometimes in vain, to maintain the old congregations.

NO MORE CORRESPONDENTS

Will Be Allowed to Go to the Front.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—Viceroy Alexieff has decided not to allow any more foreign newspaper correspondents to join the Manchurian army, at least for the present. None of those at Mukden have yet been allowed to go to Liao Yang, much less to the front, and when permission is granted, it is possible that some sort of pledge will be exacted which will require them to remain there until the end of this year's campaign, on the ground that if they depart at will, they would take away information concerning the Russian dispositions, equipment, guns and transportation facilities which would be published beyond the jurisdiction of the Russian military censors, and might prove of great value to the enemy.

BOILER EXPLOSION BLOWS BIG TOW BOAT TO PIECES, KILLING THIRTEEN; INJURING OTHERS

Shocking Accident on the Ohio River, Near Louisville, Ky.

Large Pieces of Ill-Fated Boat Were Blown Hundreds of Feet.

Nearly Every One on Board the Craft Was More or Less Hurt.

Louisville, Ky., May 26.—Thirteen persons were killed, three fatally injured and five hurt by an explosion of boilers which totally demolished the tow boat Fred Wilson, off Riverview Park today. The dead:

CAPTAIN JOSEPH PRICE, Pittsburg.

UNKNOWN WHITE MAN, believed to be a Pittsburg insurance agent traveling with Captain Price.

WILLIAM QUINN, steward, Pittsburg.

ALBERT MILLER, pilot, Pittsburg.

SHERMAN SHIVELY, second engineer, Pittsburg.

FIRST COOK, name unknown.

JOSEPH WARREN, colored, Middleport, Ohio.

WILLIAM THORNTON, colored, Middleport, Ohio.

——— PATRICK, portion of body found on coal boat.

FOUR WHITE DECKHANDS, names unknown.

Fatally injured: Emma Williamson, chambermaid, burned; J. Lettercouth, deckhand, Wellsburg, W. Va., scalded; Cliff Johnson, Tyrone, Pa., burned.

Injured: William Timmons, watchman, scalded, serious; John Miller, deck hand, Pittsburg, nose broken; —— Codley, kitchen helper, burned; Chas. R. Nadal, pilot, injured about head; William Miller, Allegheny, bruised about head.

The Wilson was the property of the Monongahela Coal & Coke company and left Pittsburg last Friday with six barges, twelve coal boats and four flats bound for Louisville. She arrived here about midnight, had proceeded down the river and was about to tie up, when the explosion occurred. The cause of the accident is not known. The boat had just put about to back a tow into a landing place, when the accident happened. Henry Sykes, first mate, could give no explanation of the cause of the accident. He and Chief Engineer Walker were the only men on the boat who escaped injury. Neither man could give the name of the deckhands, nor did they know the name of the passenger who was making the trip with Captain Price, save that he came aboard at Pittsburg, and that they had gained the impression that he was in the insurance business. He is described as a man past the middle age.

Herman Shively, second engineer was blown through the side of the Wilson and landed twenty-five feet away on top of a shanty boat. Father Cunningham was one of the first to arrive at the scene of the explosion and gave extreme unction to several men who were dying.

The police and hospital ambulance and the automobiles of the morning newspapers carried a corps of physicians and nurses to the scene which is four miles from the heart of the city. The injured were taken to the residence of Col. John E. Whallen until they could be better provided for at the city hospitals. Mr. Whallen's house, which is about 150 yards from the river, was badly damaged by the explosion, but none of the family were injured. The front doors were splintered, the chandeliers in the drawing room were shattered and nearly every window in the hous was broken. Col. Whallen sent the first word to the city and he used his private yacht in rescuing those blown from the boat.

The Wilson was built eighteen years ago and was reconstructed in part last year. She was valued at $25,000. She was insured in the "Special insurance," which all boats of the coal combine carry. Her length was 174 feet, 30 feet 8 inches beam.

The Wilson was literally blown to pieces and her hull sank in eighteen feet of water. The heavy pieces of her boiler were found almost 500 yards from the bank and her flag floats from the top of a tree near Riverside Park, where it was blown with a piece of wreckage.

Those of the crew who were saved are: Lewis Walker, chief engineer, Pittsburg; Henry Slykes, first mate, Pittsburg; Frank Egan, Allegheny; John Busha, Alegheny; Thomas Dinwiddie, residence unknown; George Morrow, second fireman, Middleport, Ohio; Jacob Botzell, Pomeroy, Ohio; Frank Knight, Middleport, Ohio; W. K. Gilbraith, Braddock, Pa.; Walter Bates, Middleport, Ohio; Peter Kane, Pittsburg; James Jones, Wellsboro, Ohio.

All of these with the exception of Walker and Sykes were more or less injured.

Pittsburg, May 26—The unknown man killed in the explosion was William Holland, a business man of Braddock, Pa., and a neighbor of Capt. Price. Mr. Holland was on a pleasure trip as the guest of Capt. Price.

The first intelligence of the disaster came through the Associated Press, and the officers of the company are now making an investigation. Capt Price was a river man all his life, and was considered one of the best masters in the employ of the company. He was worthy captain of the American Association of Masters and Pilots. His wife is seriously ill at their home at Braddock, and it is feared his death will seriously retard her recovery.

PAPAL NUNCIO FAILS TO MAKE DIPLOMATIC CALLS AT PARIS

Paris, May 26.—The absence of Mgr. Lorenzelli, the papal nuncio, from the callers at the foreign office on this, the regular diplomatic day was construed by his colleagues as being further evidence of the interruption of diplomatic relations between the holy see and France. As dean of the diplomatic corps Mgr. Lorenzelli has invariably headed the visitors.

Foreign Minister Delcasse informed the ambassadors that M. Nisard's recall from his post as ambassador to the vatican was absolute and unqualified. The minister gave evidence of interest to learn what relations the other governments sustained towards the vatican. Owing to the similarity of the institutions of France and the United States, he particularly inquired concerning the details whereby church and state were kept entirely separate in the United States. Although the French government's future intentions have been exactly defined, the members of the diplomatic corps are satisfied that relations with the papal nuncio here will be suspended, not by giving him his passports, but by advising the nuncio that it is not considered necessary to carry on further relations with the holy see while Nisard is absent from Rome.

UNDERTAKER WOULD ROB WIDOW

New York, May 26.—Mrs. James S. Gookins, widow of a son of the late Chief Justice Gookins of Indiana has been compelled to call upon the police to force an undertaker here to surrender her husband's body.

Col. Gookins, who was a well known civil engineer and a jurist, died suddenly at a hotel here, Monday. When Mrs. Gookins and her son arrived here from Chicago they found the body had been removed by an undertaker who demanded $280 for his services. Other undertakers told the widow $20 was sufficient for the office he had performed and she refused to submit to the extortion. The undertaker declared he would send the body to the morgue and the police were called upon. They acted at once, and the undertaker surrendered.

FULL OF BULLETS.

Lad Says He Was Held Up and Shot.

New York, May 26.—William Roehn, 18 years old, has been found in a patch of woods, near Queens, L. I., with five bullets in his body, just below the heart. The lad is still alive and likely to recover.

Roehn says he was held up while out walking, by two men. Upon finding he possessed only 11 cents and a cheap watch, he asserts, they emptied a small revolver into his breast—one man holding his arms while the other did the shooting. The police express a belief, however, that Roehn tried to kill himself.

LOAN OVERSUBSCRIBED.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, May 26.—The $11,000,000 5 per cent gold loan of the republic of Cuba was subscribed here this morning. The books were closed at 10 o'clock because the loan was heavily oversubscribed. The subscription price was 98.

AITKIN MAN KILLED IN A STREET FIGHT.

St. Paul, May 26.—A special to the Dispatch from Aitkin, Minn., says: G. Howell died today from injuries received in a street fight which occurred last night. C. L. Daniels, who, it is alleged, struck him on the neck, is under arrest pending the action of the coroner's jury.

CARRIERS APPOINTED.

Washington, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harry M. Logan, Louis J. Shaffer, Harry A. Burt, Albert E. Joslyn, T. F. Bell, have been appointed regular, and F. B. Logan, Cora J. Schaffer, Dexter Downs, Sarah S. Joslyn and Harris Noggle, substitute rural free delivery carriers at Royalton, Minn.

DELEGATES ARE LEAVING.

Dallas, Tex., May 26.—With the all-important question of church union disposed of, there was but little business left for the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church to attend to and delegates began leaving the city today.

Monday next, Memorial Day, our store will be closed all day in honor of our soldier dead. We wish to pay tribute to the memory of the heroes of both the blue and the grey whose deeds of valor and self-sacrifice are written upon the pages of history.

PLANT IS HERE

The Tar Macadam Mixer, Bought By City, Is Received.

The Contract Provides For Test of Thirty Days.

After many weeks of delay the city's new tar macadam mixing plant arrived from Toledo yesterday afternoon and is being unloaded this morning.

The mixing plant was ordered by the council last October. It will cost the city the sum of $8250.

Under the contract with the Toledo firm which furnished the plant, it is to be successfully operated for a period of thirty days from its arrival and passed upon by the city engineer at the end of that time. If the city engineer approves of it, the money will be paid over, but if any defects are found they must be remedied.

The mixing plant will immediately be made use of by Contractor P. McDonnell on the East Superior street paving contract. The city will furnish a competent engineer to run the plant, and the sum of $20 per day will be paid the city for its use. This sum will just about cover the expense of running the plant, the maintenance and the interest on the money invested.

The purchase of the plant will enable the smaller contractors to compete with the larger ones in bidding for paving contracts, as they will not be compelled to go to the expense of acquiring their own mixing plants. In this way it is hoped that there will be keener competition among the contractors and lower prices for tar macadam pavement.

Whenever the city's plant is not rented to the different contractors it can be used by the city in repair work on the different streets in the city.

The plant is portable and can be easily transferred from one part of the city to another.

The council also has under consideration a plan to purchase a portable stone crushing plant for repair work on the streets. The board of public works claims that the city can crush its own rock for use on the streets in Lakeside and the East End much cheaper than the price charged by the West Duluth crusher for the rock delivered on the ground.

The matter will come up for action at the next meeting of the council.

Found It Dull Here.

J. Edwin Hall, of Chicago, representing the Galena Signal Oil company, a branch of the Standard, left for home last night after a short visit in the city. Mr. Hall represents that branch of the business which has to do particularly with the steam and electric railroads, and in speaking of business conditions, said he was surprised at the complaint of dullness in this part of the country, as things appeared to be moving along comparatively well elsewhere. When told that the dullness in lake business was the principal cause of the difference in conditions locally, he said he could appreciate that it would be a decided factor.

LOOK OVER THE LINES.

Messrs. Lowry and Goodrich Come to Duluth.

Thomas Lowry, president of the Twin Cities Rapid Transit company, and C. G. Goodrich, president of the Duluth-Superior Traction company, were here today and, in company with Luther Mendenhall, a leading stockholder in the local lines, took a trip in the private trolley car St. Louis to that section of the line on Superior street which is being repaved, beginning at Sixteenth avenue east.

Messrs. Lowry and Goodrich returned to Minneapolis at 1:55 p. m. Mr. Mendenhall said the visit of the gentlemen was merely to look the lines over a little, and that there was no special significance to it.

SENSATION IN MONTANA

Two Poor Butte Miners Make Fabulously Rich Find.

Butte, Mont., May 26.—One of the mining sensations of the day is the fabulously rich find made by Schumacher and Olson, Butte men, on the Butcher Boy claim at the head of Carmen creek in Lemhi county, Idaho. The sensational discovery consists of a colored streak of ore about eighteen inches in width. Through the rock the gold is shot in almost countless numbers of small nuggets, glistening before the naked eye and of purity that enables the yellow metal to be cut like so much wax. Many of the small granules of gold are worth several dollarss and under the miner's candle glow with the steady pale luster of the precious metal.

Several other streaks have been encountered and a conservative estimate of the values of the gold leads places the figure in the thousands of dollars. The news of the strike has caused a ripple of excitement in mining circles of the northwest and a rush to the scene is predicted. At Red Rock, Mont., on the route to Carmen creek, the gold fever is at a burning heat and prospecting parties are preparing to leave for the Carmen mountains.

The geological conditions of the Carmen creek country differ from those of the famous Thunder Mountain section, the mineral veins appearing to be of a fissure formation rather than of a blanket character.

Schumacher and Olson, the owners of the Butcher Boy claim, are poor prospectors, and their delight over the prospect of developing one of the richest producers in Idaho can be compared only to that of a school boy just out on a vacation. The two miners kept their discovery a close secret until they had located about 400 acres, a large tract of placer ground, mill sites and water rights.

UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Yazoo City Is Placed to Protect Property.

Yazoo City, Mo., May 26.—Yazoo City is under martial law as a result of yesterday's conflagration. Several negroes who were caught in an attempt to steal salvage have been arrested.

Two military companies patrol the burned district. The loss is variously estimated at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 and the insurance probably will approximate 50 per cent of the less.

The residence of Hon. John Sharp Williams, the minority leader in the house of representatives escaped the flames.

MEMBERS OF RELIEF PARTY

Were Those Who Were Suffocated In Coal Tunnel.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 26.—All but one of the ten men killed and all of the forty overcome by the sulphurous fumes in a tunnel of the Summit branch colliery of the Susquehanna Coal company, at Williamstown yesterday, were members of a relief party.

Enoch Morgan was the first man killed. The rest of the victims were members of the rescuing party, which at one time was made up of more than 100 men.

Before the relief train had traveled any distance the rescuers started to explore the mine and in a short time these men were tottering and falling to the ground fatally stricken or seriously overcome. The lights which the miners carried were of little good because of the large amounts of gas and in the death reeking atmosphere and with practically no light, a number of men partly overcome, fell into a stream of water which flows along the track and what the gas left undone drowning completed.

Two Cases Settled.

Two cases set for trial at the present term of district court have been settled and dismissed by stipulation.

The case of J. H. Lunz, of Two Harbors, against Steven Larson, one in which Mr. Lunz sought to recover a balance of $1040.90, alleged to be due on a contract for merchandise, was settled on the basis of $200 paid over to him by Mr. Larson, neither party to have the costs. A. N. McGindley represented Mr. Lunz and John Jenswold, Jr., represented Mr. Larson.

The suit of Paine & Nixon against the W. G. Close Hardware company was dismissed on a stipulated settlement. This was a loan action for recovery on goods alleged to have been sold.

New Companies.

Three concerns filed articles of incorporation with the county register of deeds this morning. The Howell Mining company, capital stock $50,000, purposes to do a general mining and quarrying business. The incorporators are Charles Howell and W. D. Edson, of Duluth, and Louis Hanitch, of Superior.

The Missabe Quarry and Contracting company, of Hibbing, is incorporated by James Geary, William Wearne and Robert F. Berdie, all of Hibbing. The capital stock is $25,000.

The S. W. Matteson estate, which filed papers in this county this morning, filed the original papers in St. Paul, April 13, 1896. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000 to do a general realty business and its incorporators are Charles S. Matteson, Louis D. Matteson and Carl Taylor, all of St. Paul.

RAILROAD NEWS

Northern Pacific Meets South Shore's Summer New York Rate.

Railroad Which Does Not Suffer From Lake Tie-Up.

Effective today, the Northern Pacific met the rate of $24 to New York, for first-class passage, introduced yesterday by the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic. Other lines will follow suit as fast as authorized. It is likely that the rate will stay in effect all summer, as this is about the time that the South Shore puts in a low tariff every year. But the rates this year are lower than last year by $2.

The summer rates last year, with New York at $26 as a base, were withdrawn by the South Shore Nov. 26, and put into effect again Feb. 10. The new tariff reduces the rates issued Feb. 10 from $2 to $3. The officials of the road do not give any statement as to cause of the reduction, but it is supposed to have been caused by a desire to stimulate traffic.

Owing to the hard, long winter and the lake strike, it is said that passenger earnings are not all that they might have been, and that the company is attempting to even up a little. The South Shore has also announced a series of June excursions to Lake Erie points at low rates.

DOES NOT HURT IT.

Railroad Whose Northwestern Business Holds Good.

C. H. Smith, traveling freight agent of the Indiana, Illinois & Iowa railroad, is in the city today looking up his northern railway friends. Mr. Smith says his company does a fine business contributed by this part of the country, especially in the winter, much of the summer traffic being diverted from his territory by the lake traffic. This summer has been an exception so far, owing to the strike, although business is light to a certain extent.

"We are longer than most of the belt lines," Mr. Smith said today, speaking of the Indiana, Illinois & Iowa, "and our tracks reach 200 miles from South Bend westward to Zearing, and forty miles northward to Benton Harbor. We handle about 125,000 cars per year, so that we are something more of a trunk line than some of our competitors.

"Ours is the most southerly of four well known lines that tend to encircle the Chicago district, next inside being the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern and the Chicago Terminal and Chicago Junction roads being more local. The disadvantage of the junction roads is that they have to carry 40,000 pounds for the same money as they would a larger amount, in many instances, while we get paid on tonnage. Of course the junction men have business from individual firms that pays them well.

"We have a connection with a list of fast freight lines that numbers forty-eight, although some of them operate over more than one line that we connect with. We get business from a large list of Eastern roads and from a good proportion of the Western ones as well. We get a great deal of nice business from this territory, especially from the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. On our Benton Harbor end we move a great deal of fruit in season, and the excursion passenger business in the summer, especially on Sundays, is enormous."

CONGER JURY SELECTED.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 26.—A jury was secured today in the superior court for the trial of Eugene B. Conger, charged with conspiracy in connection with the Lake Michigan water deal. Trouble was expected in securing the jury. Three special venires were called.

HERBERT INDICTED.

Chicago, May 26.—Stephen Herbert, formerly butler for J. J. Kiser, accused of taking jewels valued at $12,000 to $15,000 from the Kiser home, was indicted by the grand jury today. Mr. Kiser and several policemen testified against the man. Detectives were sent to Providence, R. I., to bring back Herbert, who will not fight extradition, it is said.

NOT WORTH THE TROUBLE.

Young Men Fail to Get Bounty For Dead Wolf.

Two young men who shot and killed a full grown wolf seven miles north of the new village of Ashawa, the other day as it stood eating the carcass of a deer killed by the wolves, were much disappointed to learn that they could not collect the bounty paid by the state and county until they have gone through the proper red tape proceedings laid down by the law and believed as necessary to prevent possible fraud.

Ashawa is in an unorganized town and is without a clerk. In such case the applicant for a bounty must take the wolf carcass before the nearest town clerk, and skin the animal before that official, being then given a certificate with the signatures of at least two witnesses attached to it. This certificate when presented to county auditor with the pelt, is good for the $15 bounty.

The young men declared that to get the wolf to the nearest town clerk, who resides at Virginia would entail an amount of labor far more than $15 and they would not take the trouble to go there. If they took the carcass to Virginia for a certificate they would have to carry it about 37 miles. This would be no easy job, particularly as the wolf is as large and heavy as a large dog.

MARYLAND FOR GORMAN

National Delegates Elected at Democratic State Convention.

Baltimore, May 26.—The Democratic state convention in Maryland met in this city today and elected delegates to the St. Louis convention. The delegates at large are United States Senator A. G. Gorman, State Treasurer Murray Vandiver, Gen. L. Victor Baughman and John Poe.

No instructions were given but the delegation is solidly in favor of the nomination of Senator Gorman for the presidency.

The platform denounces the Republican party for its dangerous departure from the cardinal principles inculcated by the fathers of the republic, advocates tariff revision, criticises the "imperial" policy of the Republicans and demands independence for the Filipinos, denounces departmental fraud and corruption at Washington, calls for national retrenchment, criticises President Roosevelt's methods in Panama negotiations and his dictatorial course towards congress.

Though the delegation was not instructed for Gorman, the convention adopted a resolution strongly commending his course in congress.

SWALLOWED A NEEDLE.

It Came Out Through Young Woman's Thigh.

Minneapolis, May 26.—A special to the Tribune from Luverne, Minn., says: Miss Altha Ackley has just removed a needle from her limb which she swallowed last January while sewing. She found the rusty point of the needle protruding through the skin on the front of her thigh. She attempted to remove it with tweezers but in doing so broke the needle in two and later removed the remaining piece with a darning needle. The young lady feels no evil effects from the incident, which is the most singular ever heard of here.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE MEETS

Discusses Policy, Courthouse Site and Other Important Matters.

Capt. Potter Makes Criticisms on Aerial Bridge Approaches.

Owing to the absence of many of its members, the public affairs committee of the Commercial club had only a small representation at the meeting last night, fifteen out of the forty members being present, as follows: T. W. Hugo, chairman; Julius H. Barnes, secretary; George H. Crosby, E. C. Little, H. B. Knudsen, J. A. Ferguson, J. B. Erd, A. H. Comstock, Ward Ames, Sr., C. L. Potter, G. L. Douglas, Jr., Judge Page Morris, W. B. Silvey, Rev. R. J. Mooney and Frank Crassweller. Secretary Eva of the Commercial club was also present, as he is secretary ex-officio of all Commercial club committees.

W. B. Silvey, in speaking of the committee's work in promoting the city's good, advocated the appointment of an expert in public movements to help the committee and carry out its plans. He knew the possibility of discord if there were two secretaries, but he believed the work could be pushed without any friction, and that the committee would authorize any necessary expense to push the work on all lines.

E. C. Little favored the employment of an extra man, and said more outline could be cared for than now, as the right man could help push all branches more effectually.

"I don't think we want to go into any such plan at this time," said Mr. Knudsen. "Some of us who have been working on the outside know how hard it is to get money. We want to spare all the expense possible. The right man would cost $2000 to $2500. We go to the jobbers and ask them for a contribution, and they want to know what we are going to do. They ask us a thousand and one questions. We tell them we are going to do pretty nearly everything, and we can't afford to spend so much money out of their contributions to hire somebody else. If it is necessary to get help, let us hire an assistant to the secretary at $50 or $60 per month."

Judge Morris wanted to know if Secretary Eva was not ex-officio secretary of all committees, and the chairman said that he had been absorbed for the work.

"I think he's got a little more than he can stand up to," continued the judge. "But I believe in having one head—one boss. I think we ought to give him an assistant. We could give him the directions for work along the lines the committee might desire, and he could direct the assistant. I must say the work of the committee has been attended to excellently up to this time, though."

J. A. Ferguson agreed with Judge Morris about the quality of the secretarial work, but did not believe in being extravagant about getting extra assistance. Owing to the difficulties he had encountered in getting money on the outside, he believed in being very conservative about spending it, and if the present workers were willing to take care of the duties, he believed in having them continue.

If the committee was content with putting up signs of when the street cars would run, and other distinctly local affairs, Mr. Silvey said he was quite willing to admit that the organization was ample and complete, but he had always had in mind broader grounds to work on. He believed if the work of other similar clubs was studied that the committee would find that it was not accomplishing all the people might reasonably expect.

"I notice by the paper that our friend Mr. Mooney confirmed some people at his church last night—quite a large number of them," he said. "I should say that as a business proposition, if we could look upon it from that standpoint, that Mr. Mooney was accomplishing something—getting the results. I don't know where he got these people, but he got them, and it looks as if he was making some chips fly in the West End.

"Speaking of chips reminds me that we are working something like a little poker game, with the chips going from mine to Mr. Hugo's pocket, or some one of the others of us. I'd like to get into the game with St. Paul for instance, and get some of its chips in my pile."

Mr. Silvey instanced Milwaukee as a place where great work had been done in the last couple of years in getting conventions, whereas prior to that time that city had had practically no more conventions than this, the increase being due to the method of work. He had been talking to a man from Evansville, Ind., who told him how new industries had been induced to come to the town, seventeen of them having been secured recently. The man who told him had formerly lived in Superior. While he believed the methods and results elsewhere had been studied to some extent, he thought very little had been accomplished. It would take a man with some responsibility and some money to spend to properly represent the club at conventions where there was an opportunity of getting results. He did not want two factors or two heads, but believed the work could be strengthened by an additional worker.

Mr. Ferguson preferred to creep before climbing, he said, and did not believe in paying a money bonus or something equally foolish to attract industries that might not prove worthy. He believed members of the committee could do more toward getting things than some one else hired by them. St. Paul, Minneapolis and Milwaukee had markets of their own and Duluth had not, for sustaining big industries. The purely local enterprise that grew up at home are the best, from his observations, and he noted the Zenith Furnace and the Union Match company as examples.

G. H. Crosby was in sympathy with Mr. Silvey and advocated more effort on certain lines, and thought enterprises could not be brought unless properly approached and shown what Duluth had to offer.

The chairman asked him to give an instance of what industries he thought might be worked for, and he replied that he thought there was a good location here for a pulp mill, as there was 40,000 horse power in the St. Louis river and lumber people would agree to supply such an enterprise with wood to operate on for from 10 to 20 years.

• • •

Rev. R. J. Mooney said he had lived several years in the west and watched public movements. Sending a man out to attract enterprises, he thought, savored too much of western boom methods. He thought if a pulp mill could be secured for this vicinity that paper mills could be brought, as they make paper from the pulp.

"As a clergyman I have a gerat deal to do with the poor people, and I think you will understand that Duluth is not a city attractive for the working people, the dependent people, owing to teh lack of work of a steady, lasting character for them. The wage earner is a serious factor in the building of a city. We cannot build a city of monied or learned people but have to have the workers. Today I spend considerable time on the case of a good family, the man being worthy in every way and the wife a noble woman. But he has been unable to obtain work but about 50 per cent of his time. But happily I see by the paper that the blast furnace and one other plant is to start up and will give work to men the year around.

"I believe in putting a big expense account at the committee's disposal to prepare definite information for the definite seeker. The paper manufacturers in the east must move. I know one creek in New Hampshire where you could not go five miles without striking a paper mill and many of these have disappeared. One went to California. It makes paper to wrap fruit.

"Within the last two or three months I know of several families that have left the city owing to the lack of work obtainable. They thought this was a fine city, with its excellent schools and churches, and would like to have stayed."

A. H. Comstock said that owing to the power company not having matured its plans within the time expected, some of the enterprises connected with its development could not be worked for and had to be deferred. About 90 per cent of the letters the committee received, he said, were of people who would like to come to Duluth, but were more desirous of obtaining some Duluth capital than anything else. Most local capital which had been sought, he said, had been a failure. He spoke of the comparative attractions of Portland and Duluth, to Duluth's credit. He said the Oregon city was undoubtedly one of the finest on the coast, with fine homes, but in detail he found Duluth to have many advantages. All the Duluth jobbers practically had freight cars at their back doors.

• • •

Mr. Crosby reported that the committee appointed to raise the $15,000 advertising fund had met with a hearty response and believe it could raise the entire amount within three more weeks, or two, if there was urgent need for it in the shorter time. Mr. Hugo suggested the chairmen of sub-committees as a committee on disposal of funds. This was agreed to. Mr. Little was opposed to spending a part of the money until it was assured, as it was unfair to get a few "easy ones" to subscribe and then lag.

Mr. Knudsen gave a few experiences with individuals who treated the committee with scant liberality, particularly one man who was asked for $125 and gave $25.

Mr. Ferguson urged that the money of the liberal ones be not spent for the benefit of the "tight" ones, as far as possible.

• • •

Bert Fesler, representing the state Democratic convention, which comes June 22, wanted to know if the committee cared to use any of the fund in helping to entertain the visitors at that time. He said the convention would be the most representative, geographically and otherwise, ever held in Duluth, with every county having delegates and many people who had never before been in Duluth.

Over 1000 delegates were expected, but the rate would not be confined to them, and he believed it safe to say that each person coming would mean, on the average, an expenditure here of $5. He said the local Democrats had no axe to grind and that it was a Duluth proposition. He desired to get the matter before the state, through the press, if the committee should decide to take some steps in the matter.

"We recognize that we have no rights in the disposition of the money. We don't ask to spend any, nor do we ask any say as to how it shall be spent, but in case there is any arrangement by the club we wish to be able to give it publicity for the benefit of those who are coming or might be induced to come. I would suggest a boat ride around the horn, or a boulevard drive as a means of entertainment, although the latter might be too expensive. We would like to keep them here as long as possible. The convention will start at 2:30 p. m. and the attendance would arrive on the morning trains, unless they were to be entertained in the morning, which would probably bring them on night trains. As the meeting will probably last into the evening, if they were not entertained in the morning of the convention, it would probably be better done the next day."

On motion of Mr. Knudsen, with Mr. Ferguson seconding, the chair was instructed to appoint a committee to confer with the local Democracy on the point.

Secretary Eva reported that the State Music Teachers' association was asking the committee to pay $50 for the use of the Methodist church during its meeting here. The club had originally agreed to furnish a hall, the armory being in mind. After securing the meeting it was found the convention would not accept the Armory, as they wanted a three-manual organ in their convention hall, hence the hiring of the church. The matter was referred to the committee which will meet the Democrats.

Mr. Crassweller wanted the question of the court house site considered before adjourning.

"We have the federal building at Fifth avenue west and First street, the city hall at Superior street and Second avenue east and the court house at Sixth avenue east and Second street," he said, "and as people who have business with one usually have business with the other it makes it very inconvenient to have the three so widely separated. The expenditure of a few hundred thousand dollars is a matter of moment. The county commissioners have ordered the condemnation of the other half of the present location, and I am afraid that if they go ahead it will block my plan to get the matter considered. I move that a committee of five be appointed to meet with the committee of the West Duluth Commercial club and the committee of attorneys which was appointed some nights ago."

"Has there been any investigation of the cost of a site down town?" Judge Morris inquired.

"Not so far as I know. What we want is to keep them from tying the matter up so that nothing can be done in some other direction."

"Isn't there a chance of losing the title to the present ground, if they go down town? I don't favor an excursion down town on a wild goose chase before we know the cost or anything else about the prospects of a down-town location."

Mr. Crassweller replied to this that the time and money expended in a year by attorneys and others to get to and from the present site was more each year than a new court house would probably cost in another location. He said that a new court house would probably last for fifty or seventy-five years and that a place for such a long time was worth debating. He did not feel like favoring the location of a courthouse at the present site for that length of the future.

"Think of the good exercise and the effect on your health in making the journey to and fro as it is now," Judge Morris suggested.

"As to that we would probably get even better air out at Lakeside and might as well go out there, if we are going to have a court house for the benefit of our health more than anything else. We don't build business blocks in the suburbs. Judge Morris is comfortably located down town in the federal building where he is easy of access to everybody and where he can get in and out conveniently. And, too, he has plenty of time to go back and forth. It's not like when he used to practice law and had to take his time to the trips, and he does not have to charge his clients up with his time and carfare as he did then, either."

Judge Morris said he had serious doubts as to the advisability of moving the court house. He understood the jail alone cost $70,000. Mr. Little said if this was the case it was a very poor one for the money.

"Before you get through it will cost you $500,000 for your change of location," the judge asserted. "You put it down town it will be blocked in where no one will see it. It will be lost and no advantage will be had from the standpoint of beauty. Leave is up there on the hill and it will be a pride and an ornament to the city to the end of time."

Mr. Silvey preferred to see it down town.

It was determined to have a committee confer with the county commissioners.

Capt. Potter made a statement about the inadequacy of the approaches to the new bridge over the ship canal. He said the grade would be about 8½ per cent and fairly steep, much such as on Third avenue west by the Kitchi-Gammi club. This made no place the loaded teams would have to go up, and there was no landing place and no gates. They would have to halt on the grade if the bridge was not ready, and start on the grade when it was.

For foot passengers there will be steps and at the top of these a landing eight feet long and six feet wide, and if the car was not ready they would have to wait. There is no shelter provided. If the place became crowded by people wanting to see the ferry, as it was likely to, some were liable to be pushed off. A woman with a baby carriage would have a hard time getting up the steps, or would have to take the team road, in which case a team might be delayed and back down on the baby buggy.

Capt. Potter said he had suggested a coping on the sides of the approaches, but that the authorities did not seem to see the urgency of it. He believed the approaches should start farther down Lake avenue and run back 25 feet from the government lot. He suggested that there be a grade for foot passengers, instead of steps, and some shelter in case they were halted for the car to come into place, which would no doubt be the case frequently.

There are no gates designed for the tops of the approaches. To increase the facilities of the approaches and lengthen them would increase the cost at least 50 per cent and possibly 100 per cent, the present estimate of expenditure being $8000. The approach will be of two concrete walls, filled and paved. The chairman was authorized to appoint a committee to wait on the council in the matter.

The meeting was then adjourned.

THE TICKET NOMINATED

Ohio Democrats Name Candidates and Elect Delegates.

Columbus, O., May 26.—The Democratic state convention nominated the following ticket:

Secretary of state—A. P. Sandels, of Ottawa.

Supreme judge—Phillip J. Renner, of Cincinnati.

Clerk of supreme court—Peter Mahaffey, of Cambridge.

Dairy and food commissoner—Quintin M. Craviatt, of Wooster.

Member of the board of public works—William H. Ferguson, of Springfield.

Electors-at-large—J. F. McDowell, of Millersburg and J. F. Pearson, of Woodsfield.

Delegates-at-large—Wm. S. Thomas, of Springfield; John A. McMazon, of Fayton; E. H. Moore, of Youngstown, and Charles P. Salen, of Cleveland.

There were three presidential elements involved. The Hearst men originally wanted instructions, but finally limited their opposition to the unit rule. The friends of Col. J. Kilbourne of Columbus, who was the Democratic candidate for governor three years ago, wanted "endorsement."

The friends of Judge Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, who was attorney general under Cleveland, wanted neither endorsement nor instructions, but the unit rule.

The Harmon men won out.

The platform, the briefest in the history of such state literature, was adopted as it came from Cincinnati, with the exception of the 2-cent fare plank that was added at the instigation of Mayor Johnson of Cleveland, in the committee.

The rural delegates, who were cooperating in other matters with the conservatives, voted for the 2-cent fare plank, also from the cities, who insisted that it would be inconsistent this year to defeat a resolution which was a feature of the state platform last year. The vote, however, was very close on the 2-cent fare resolution, and the majority for the unit rule was only 65 out of a total vote of 723.

ELOPEMENT FRUSTRATED

Federal Officials Stop Runaway Port Arthur Young People.

Love laughs at locksmiths, but not at the United States immigration officials. The fell laid plans of Cupid in regard to Miss Bertha Smith, a young Fort William lass and John Knox, of Port Arthur, were frustrated yesterday by the ruthless hands of the local board of immigration.

Knox and Miss Smith, who is but 16 years of age, arrived yesterday afternoon on the steamer Mabel Bradshaw. He had furnished transportation for the young lady and their actions aroused the suspicion of the steward, who notified the customs authorities as soon as the boat arrived in port. W. E. Dean, the local immigration inspector, investigated the case, and after a severe cross-examination it developed that they were engaged to be married.

Neither of them had any baggage to speak of and Knox admitted that his financial affairs were not in a very satisfactory condition. Knox was informed of the severe penalty attaching to abduction, but he denied that his intentions were otherwise than honorable and he agreed to return to Port Arthur with the girl if given an opportunity.

The girl was placed in the care of the matron of the steamer and the two runaways will return to Port Arthur today, where they will endeavor to obtain the consent of the young woman's parents to their marriage.

CUMBERLANDS ARE FOR UNION

Southern Presbyterians Finally Take Favorable Action.

Dallas, Texas, May 26.—The complete union of the Cumberland Presbyterian church with the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, was favored last night by the general assembly of the first named church, in a vote which was closely contested, and after a heated debate of two days and a night. The vote was 162 for and 75 against, a majority of only five over the necessary two-thirds. The result of this test of the two elements in the church was little short of dramatic. The commissioners to the assembly had listened patiently since Tuesday morning to the arguments presented. Those arguments hinged in the main upon the three points: As to whether or not the doctrine of predesination was a part of the doctrine of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, as to dorsement nor instructions, but the unit whether or not other races should be admitted to equal rights in the church in certain instances, and the question as to whether or not the educational standard of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America was too high.

Up to the night session, all of those various features had been argued by the opponents. The best talent in the church participated in the debate. The close last night was between Judge Joseph H. Fussell, of Columbia, Tenn., and the Rev. Dr. S. M. Templeton, of Clarksville, Texas.

EVERY BUSINESS HOUSE

In Yazoo City Was Destroyed By the Fire.

Jackson, Miss., May 26.—With every business house of any importance in ashes, together with a large number of private residences, the principal hotel and the passenger depot, Yazoo City, a town of 6000 people, forty-five miles from Jackson, rested last night after one of the most exciting days in its history.

The fire started at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning and burned until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, destroying a total of 200 houses. The burned district is three blocks wide and twelve blocks long. The estimates of the loss are between $1,600,000 and $2,000,000.

BRUSH NOT MURDERED.

Suicide Established and a Murder Mystery Exploded.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 26.—What seemed to be a sensational murder mystery in this city turned out to be only an ordinary suicide, but not until the whole police department had put upon it several hours of the hardest kind of work. The body of Joseph Brush, a farm hand, near Grand Mound, whose parents live in this city, was found in Riverside park, a bullet hole in the top of his head. Careful search was made and no revolver could be found.

Later one of the officers ascertained that some boys had found the man in the park at 10 o'clock on the previous night. He was then breathing heavily and they supposed he was drunk. One of them picked up the revolver and carried it to his home, failing to report the matter to the police. It was found that the revolver had been fully loaded, but that one of the chambers contained an empty shell.

NOVEL INSURANCE

By Which Estate of Marquis Is Enriched.

London, May 26.—A curious case of insurance has come to light in connection with the late marquis of Donegal. The policy was taken out in 1890 against issue being born to the marquis, who at that time was in his 70th year and was living apart from his wife.

The marchioness, however, died, and the marquis married again in his 81st year. A son was born and is now a few months old, the youngest member of the peerage. For a single premium of $655 the sum of $12,500 will be paid.

An official of the insurance company said that such insurance was frequent and the rate was extremely low, as the companies rarely had to pay. This, he said, was the first time they had ever been called upon to do so.

Get Electric Shock.

While playing in the vicinity of a steel pole supporting the feed wire of the street railway company, at Second street and Second avenue west, some small boys were given a severe electric shock last evening, when they came in contact with the pole. The current is said to have been of sufficient strength to knock them down.

Officer Cameron investigated the complaint made by citizens and found the pole was charged. The insulation had been worn from one of the cables and it came into contact with the pole. Officials of the street railway company stated that the current was not strong enough to cause a fatality.

Woman's Nightmare

No woman's happiness can be complete without children; it is her nature to love and want them as much so as it is to love the beautiful and pure. The critical ordeal through which the expectant mother must pass, however, is so fraught with dread, pain, suffering and danger, that the very thought of it fills her with apprehension and horror. There is no necessity for the reproduction of life to be either painful or dangerous. The use of Mother's Friend so prepares the system for the coming event that it is safely passed without any danger. This great and wonderful remedy is always applied externally, and has carried thousands of women through the trying crisis without suffering.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Last evening the last of the three lectures of Edward Howard Griggs, was given at the First M. E. church. The subject was "The Problem of the Divine Comedy" and was perhaps of greatest interest to the members of the class as "The Dinvine Comedy" will be the subject of their next year's study. He said in part:

"Every phase of symbolism treated by Dante in his Divine Comedy is found in the first canto. He presents here the problem the greatest thesis of which he wil ltreat and masters difficulties that will be found later in the poem. It is not until one has read and studied the rest of the Comedy and comes back to the first canto that the realization of what he has done in this first part is born on one. Dante was of the century of which St. Francis of Assisi was the end, a most productive century. He was born at Florence in 1265, exiled in 1302, a heart sick wanderer for nineteen years and died in 1321.

"There are two periods of Dante's life that may be considered; the first, his young manhood before his exile, as a leading poet of his country, a prominent statesman and to the fore in philosophic thought; the second period that which gave birth to The Divine Comedy. It is said that part of the work was written before his banishment, an dit may be so, but certain it is that it was finished, revised and polished during this time. Certain it is that this work came out of the two fold tragic time of his life, the breaking up of his vocational life and the shattering of his worldly ambition, that left a lasting bitterness in his life.

"Through art he realized the ideals of his broken life. In 'The Divine Comedy.' Dante has given a way of life not only for himself but for those who study the poem. Dante, Shakespeare and Goethe have realized the ethical interpretation of life, have achieved the great beauty of execution, posesed the philosophic insight of life, and achieved a wonderful mastery of ethical form. In 'The Divine Comedy' the avowed intention of the lesson is practical not theoretical. The knowledge of people he has displayed in the comdey is not of those of another world but of people that you and I know. It is the knowledge of a world he understood and knew about.

"The work of a genius is great because he is more human than the rest of us, not less. Dante was a man of hot passions, intense feelings, deep-hearted patriotism; he loved deeply, observed intently. To understand the consciousness of Dante, to unravel the problems he has built the reader must first put himself in the Middle Ages. And then two questions must be asked. 'What did Dante mean to say of human life' and 'What does that teach in terms of my own life, in this life and time.'

"The time of the opening of the first canto is symbolical. It is Good Friday evening of 1300. The anniversary of the day Christ entered the infernal regions and the beginning of a new century. Both full of meaning. The verse form is that of three-fold rhyme. An English example of this verse form, difficult in our language but comparatively easy in the Italian, is Browning's 'The Statue of the Bust.' The verse form is of stanzas three lines in length, the last word of the first and third lines rhyming, and the last word of the second line rhyming with the first and third of the next stanza, and so on as long as you like. The form was also significant to Dante's mind of the trinity.

"Some poets excel in the music of their poetry. Edmund Spenser is one of these. His poetry appeals to the ear sense, and it is the one with a fine ear that enjoys his work. Others appeal to the reader with their wonderful imagery. Dante does both. The music, fairly a funeral knell in parts, and the marvelous beauty of his imagery are unsurpassed.

"In the middle ages and in modern literature the exploiting of one's grief overmuch has been a fault. Dante does not do this. He does not tell of his griefs in 150 exquiiste cantos. There is an iron reserve about him that may just suggest to some the heart aches and sorrows. His poem is a wonderful corrective and he dwells on the evil only to show the good that comes out of it."

Parts of the poems were read and a fuller explanation dwelt upon. In speaking of art dealing with sin, Mr. Griggs says: "I do not know how far art should deal with sin, or if at all, but I do know that if it is to be treated of it must be as Dante has done it. The form of art is made loathsome and horrible both outside and inside. The harm comes in presenting the debasing and terrible sin with an attractive outside. No villain was made by following Iago, no children have become ungrateful by reading of Gonerel and Regan. If it is to be presented, it must be with its fitting covering."

JUVENILE ORCHESTRA

Makes Fine Impression at Flaaten Recital.

A good musical attraction rarely ever fails to find an appreciative audience at the Lyceum. When these, always popular offerings, are of the quality of the concert given last evening by Flaaten's Musical Conservatory String orchestra, in addition to their being home talent, the attendance at the house is generous, as well as appreciative, and last night the crowd that applauded the several numbers was not only large, but remarkably liberal in the instant and hearty bestowal of praise.

The performance exhibited a quality that fully justified this generous assemblage, and its spontaneous and enthusiastic praise. The orchestra is one of commendable strength, embracing among its clever young people more than one with unusual talent. All acquitted themselves with remarkable credit.

There are over seventy pieces in the organization, many of the instruments in the hands of children under 12 years of age, and to bring music that is really good from this aggregation requires no little skill. Gustav Flaaten, director of the orchestra, evidently possesses the required amount of skill and patience, for the numbers played by the orchestra, as well as by individuals, were entirely satisfactory and showed careful training and practice.

Most of the solos were by boys and girls under 15 years of age. The first was a piano solo by Victor Anneke, played in a very creditable manner, as was the following number, a violin solo by Miss Helen Jenswold, "Ballet," by Danbe. A particularly pleasing number was the fifth, two violins and a piano, played by Misses Steele, Newell and Roy Flaaten. Miss Clara Richardson, by the compelling force of good singing, in her vocal solo, gave much pleasure to the audience. Miss Georgia McAdams showed taste and skill in her piano solo. Another number calling for a generous amount of applause was that rendered by the string quartet, consisting of Messrs. Bergh, Young, Olson and Sidwell. Miss Emily Smith attracted a considerable share of praise by her delightful violin solo, played with unusual skill—"Carmen Fantasie," by Bizet-Lange. No less acceptable were the piano quartet, by Misses Smith, Fadner, Gill and Mrs. G. Flaaten, and the piano solos by Miss Florence Gill and Miss Elsie Smith.

Edwin Bergh, a boy still in his teens, rendered with intelectual force the beautiful "Romanza," by Svendson. The movement is a very difficult one, though exquisite when rightly rendered, as by this young musician. His appears to be a hand destined to be that of a master and capable of evoking great emotion from the little instrument.

Mrs. Flaaten, Miss Clara Richardson and Miss Adele McClaran, members of the faculty, assisted the pupils. Miss McClaran's appearance was of particular interest from the fact that she has but recently returned from Boston, where she graduated with high honors from the Emerson college of oratory, taking the course in elocution and reading. A remarkable broadening of her talent is noticeable and her readings, "A Little White Rose" and "Ardelia in Arcadia," gave much pleasure, and were given with delightful effect and artistic finish.

PAYS WARM TRIBUTE.

Appreciation of the Late Mrs. Sarah B. Stearns.

Duluth has a particular claim and interest to Mrs. Sarah B. Stearns, who lived for so many years in Duluth, and her death a few months ago roused remembrance of the fine work she did here. A tribute is paid to her in the May number of the Courant, and it will be of interest to many in Duluth.

"To the Editor of the Courant: I am impelled to call the attention of your readers to the passing of a woman to whom the women of today owe more than they know for the freedom which is allowed them in individual development. I refer to Mrs. Sarah B. Stearns, who died recently in Los Angeles, Cal., but who spent six years of her life in Rochester, Minn., and twenty-three years in Duluth.

Mrs. Stearns was the first young woman to knock for admission into Michigan university, in 1858, and one who was largely instrumental in getting that institution opened to women in 1871. Mrs. Stearns was not only a brave and deeply cultivated woman, she was a womanly, mother-hearted woman, capable of warm, enduring and disinterested friendship. Those who knew the woman's heart as I knew it realize how little the many biographies of her reveal the rare personality.

"The National Encyclopedia of American Biography gives a detailed sketch of her life and achievements, but I wish in these columns to pay a tribute to the woman herself.

"JULIET SCHUMAKER,

Kennebrook-Wing.

A very pretty home wedding occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kennebrook at 102 East Sixth street last evening when their daughter, Miss Ida May, and Charles A. Wing were united in marriage by Rev. S. C. Davis of the First Baptist church. Only a few intimate friends were present. The house was prettily decorated with ferns and flowers and a dainty lunch was served after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Wing will reside for the summer at Camp Dellwood on Park Point.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Edgar Markell, Miss Ruth Markell and Porter Markell returned Tuesday evening from California, where they spent the winter. They are at their summer home, "Witchwood."

THE EVENING STORY.

A LITTLE BLUE BUTTERFLY

By Julia Truitt Bishop.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Lindy ran like a lapwing from the kitchen door, where her father had just read aloud the letter he had brought from town, to the hammock which was lazily swinging between the two oak trees in the corner of the yard. Her face was glowing through its freckles, and her lips were apart, for she panted as she ran.

"Miss Marg'ret!" she cried tumultuously; and the young lady in the hammock raised her head a little way to look at her with surprised eyes. "Miss Marg'ret—he's comin' again—the gentleman that was here las' summer—we've jes' got a letter—father, he's goin' right back to town to meet the train—oh, Miss Marg'ret, he's comin' again!"

Miss Margaret, stripped to the the girl's flushed and palpitating joy, was a little pale and cold. She lay back in the hammock now, with both hands clasped behind her head, and looked at Lindy's burning face.

"And to think I would have called you a quiet, lifeless little thing, if I had been asked a few moments ago!" she said. "The gentleman who was here last summer? I don't remember to have heard you speak of—of any such here as that. A summer boarder, was he? I wonder if he was as tired of everything in the world as I am. But you are a surprise, Lindy."

"Oh, he's comin' back!" cried Lindy, clasping her sunburned hands in a kind of ecstacy. "There goes father to town, right now—an' mother's fixin' up his old room!"

"Lindy, I am ashamed of you!" said Miss Margaret, with half scornful laughter in her eyes. "I thought all the time it was Dave Lorry—and now do you mean to throw Dave's love away for some city man whom you hardly know—who comes out here to amuse himself—they all do that, city or country, with the exception of a Dave here and there, and nobody cares for the Daves!"

"Dave!" repeated Lindy scornfully. "I think I see myself noticin' Dave Lorry—great, big, hickwoodsy thing like that!" The flush had dropped from her forehead, but still dwelt in her cheeks—twin roses which made freckles or sunburn of no account. Her dark blue calico waist, ill-made and ill-fitting, was turned in as to the neck and rolled up as to the sleeves, displaying a throat and arms that filled Miss Margaret with envy while she looked. She had been there an entire month, and had not once noticed them until now. But then—she had spent most of the time out there in the hammock, fighting her own battle and trying to learn endurance. She had barely taken notice of the pretty country girl before whom big, awkward Dave was offering sacrifice in vain. Miss Margaret, looking straight at Lindy, went off into thoughts that hurt. When she came back again Lindy had her hands clasped and was crying with deep, beseeching:

"Oh, my clothes are so awful! I haven't got a thing that's fit to be seen! He din't never seen me dressed up yet. Oh, Miss Marg'ret, if you only would!"

"If I only would what?" asked Miss Margaret with a start.

"If you'd only let me fix up—in one of your dresses—jes' for this one evening—" bleated Lindy, with a sudden dew of longing in her pretty eyes. "I'd like for him to see—how I could look—if I only had a chance."

There was piteous supplication in Lindy's voice. For a moment Miss Margaret lay still, looking at her, and through her at something beyond. She was thinking, with a dull ache at her heart, how pretty the country girl was, and what a safe little nook Heaven had given her to be happy in, and how little happy she was, struggling to get away—just as other people did in other nooks. After a little she rose up, with a weary laugh.

"I brought only one of my pretty gowns with me," she said. "People don't need such things in the country—but I brought it because—well, because of what happened once when I had it on. But now I am going to give it to you, so that I may never think of it again. Come on—we will meet you in brave array by the time the conquering hero comes—we will make a little blue butterfly of you, so that he can see how pretty you are."

The little blue butterfly fluttered and gasped in front of the mirror in Miss Margaret's room. The round arms were bare and the white neck rose like a lily stem from amid the floating, filmy, shimmering blue. Miss Margaret had taken the bonny brown locks out of their stiff plait and had coiled and puffed them at the top of the dear-like head; and now she stood back, amazed at her own handiwork.

"Oh—ain't it pretty!" cried Lindy in a low tone that was almost a sob. She had asked it of the image in the glass. She had forgotten that Miss Margaret was there. She had forgotten that Miss Margaret had ever been.

In a moment she heard Dave's voice in the kitchen, and stole softly out, willing to let him see what a creature of light and air she really was—how far removed from his homely life. Her mother had gone into the dining room and was making a great clattering there with the dishes. Dave started up from his chair and looked at her with a strained, frightened look on his face.

"What you got on all that borrowed finery fur?" he demanded in a tone that he had never used to her.

"It isn't borrowed, Mr. Lorry—it's mine—it's been given to me!" she retorted, tilting up her indignant little chin and sailing around him haughtily.

"You look—I don't know how you look with such things on!" he said, almost with a groan. "We're all plain workin' people, Lindy. Take 'em off!—please take 'em off—you don't know what things it makes me think of—do take 'em off, Lindy."

"I'd like to know what you've got to do with it!" said the butterfly out of the midst of the blue cloud, frowning at him, and yet laughing, too, because she knew she was so pretty, and because another man was coming in a little while and he would see how pretty she was.

Even while she fluttered around the room, she heard them coming—the sound of wheels and her father's loud, jovial tones. He would come in through the kitchen, as he always did—her father always would bring people in through the kitchen. Not now—she could not see him at once—and the butterfly fled wildly through the house and out into the porch in front, where the moonlight caught and held her. Miss Margaret, gray-clad within and without, drew further back into the shadow of the vines, so that she could look at the radiant thing palpitating there in the moonlight.

But what was this?—there was her father's voice in the kitchen—but some one was coming in at the front—and Lindy turned her back to the moonlight lest he should see how her heart, her foolish heart, was shaking her from head to foot. And then—

Lindy lay still in his arms with the silly butterfly soul half swooning out of her. He was talking in broken sentences against the crown of bonny brown hair—and what was that he was saying? She steadied her reeling brain and tried to listen—

"They told me you were here, Margaret—and I could not stay away longer—we must make it up—what is life worth without you? And you knew I was coming, and put on the dear blue gown to wait for me? Why, Margaret—I am not sure I would have had the courage to speak if I hadn't seen the blue gown, Sweetheart—don't let's quarrel again! It takes too much out of a man's life."

He felt the light form begin to move, slowly and faintly.

"Let me go!" the girl whispered, with her face still away from him. "I'll see you again—after a while. Let me go—yes—we won't quarrel any more."

He did not let her go very readily, but she broke away from him and ran into a darkened room. He drew his hand across his eyes, and perhaps it was because of the happy mist there that he went into the house without noticing the gray figure that trembled and wept in the shadow of the vines.

"But why did you change your gown?" he asked afterwards of the gray figure which sat on the step beside him in the moonlight. He did not care for the gown now, with Margaret's head on his shoulder; but it was worth while to ask, for this was another of the mysteries which made it impossible for an man to understand a woman.

"You had seen it—that was all that was necessary," she answered, very softly.

It was the voice of Lindy's mother that brought her out of her hiding place.

"Come, Lindy, you'll have to clean up," it cried fretfully. "I'm clean fagged out, an' I want to set out at the door awhile and cool off.

Lindy came slowly into the kitchen, winking against the glare of the tin reflector. She wore a blue calico waist, turned in at the neck and rolled up as to the sleeves; and she was very white. Dave's lowering face lighted up as he looked at her.

"Lindy"—he was standing close beside her—"Lindy, I'll wipe the dishes for ye, so's you can get through quick."

The little blue butterfly which had danced and fluttered before him for such a brief space was gone. A wave of color came into the white face, but she surrendered the cloth without a word. Her silence filled him with vague trouble.

"Don't mind what I said about the fine dress, Lidy," he said, with the gentleness of a giant who feels that he is unexpectedly handling a small thing whose wings are easily broken. "It jes' made me feel kinder—as if—you was so far away from me—and anyhow, I think ye look purtier like ye air now than anybody else does with all the finery they can put on."

The flush in her cheeks deepened and spread.

"I ain't goin' to put on the fine things any more, Dave," she said, humbly and a little wistfully. "I don't keer half as much about 'em—as I thought I did." And then, with a swift—sh glance into his face, she added: "An' it hasn't put me—so fur from you Dave—it's done—jes' the other way!"

"Take keer you don't break none o' them dishes, Lindy!" called the suddenly aroused voice of Lindy's mother from the back door.

"PE-RU-NA TONES UP THE SYSTEM IF TAKEN IN THE SPRING"

SAYS THIS BEAUTIFUL YOUNG GIRL.

MISS MARJORY HAMPTON, OF NEW YORK.

Miss Marjory Hampton, 2616 Third Avenue, New York City, writes:

"Peruna is a fine medicine to take any season of the year. Taken in the spring it tones up the system and acts as a tonic, strengthening me more than a vacation. In the fall and winter I have found that it cures colds and catarrh, and also find that it is invaluable to keep the bowels regular, acting as a gentle stimulant on the system. In fact, I consider it a whole medicine chest."—Miss Marjory Hampton.

PURE BLOOD.

Blood Impurities of Springtime—Cause, Prevention and Cure.

Dr. Hartman's medical lectures are eagerly scanned by many thousand readers.

One of the most timely and interesting lectures he ever delivered was his recent lecture on the blood impurities of spring.

The doctor said in substance that every spring the blood is loaded with the effete accumulations of winter, deranging the digestion, producing sluggishness of the liver, overtaxing the kidneys, interfering with the action of the bowels and the proper circulation of the blood.

This condition of things produces what is popularly known as spring fever, spring malaria, nervous exhaustion, that tired feeling, blood thickening and many other names.

Sometimes the victim is bilious, dyspeptic and constipated; sometimes he is weak, nervous and depressed; and again he may have eruptions, swellings and other blood humors. Whichever it is, the cause is the same—effete accumulations in the blood.

Nothing is more certain within the whole range of medical science than that a course of Peruna in early springtime will perfectly and effectually prevent or cure this almost universal affection.

Everybody feels it in some degree.

A great majority are disturbed considerably, while a large per cent of the human family are made very miserable by this condition every spring.

Peruna will prevent it if taken in time.

Peruna will cure it if taken as directed.

Peruna is the ideal spring medicine of the medical profession.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

FORESTERS MUST PAY

Verdict For Life Insurance—Fire Company Also Loses.

A verdict of $513 was returned by a jury, yesterday afternoon, in favor of Miss Ida C. Rupert against the United Order of Foresters.

The action was one in which Miss Rupert sued to recover the amount of a life insurance policy, issued to Miss Emma Holmquist, by the Foresters, and in which Miss Rupert was named as the beneficiary. Miss Rupert claimed that after the proofs of death were furnished the organization refused to pay over the amount named in the policy.

The Foresters made a defense on the ground that Miss Holmquist did not give accurate data as to her condition of health, when examined by a physician for insurance.

In Judge Cant's room yesterday, the jury awarded Barney O'Rourke $875 damages against the Western Assurance company of Toronto, Canada. Mr. O'Rourke claimed $560 due on a fire insurance policy on his building that burned. The company contested the claim on the ground that O'Rourke's estimate of the loss was too high.

TEXAS PAVILION.

Unique Building Dedicated at World's Fair Grounds.

St. Louis, May 26.—The feature of today's program was the dedication of the Texas state pavilion.

The Texas building is one of the most unique on the grounds. It is located just south of the German government pavilion on the edge of the plateau of states nearest the large exhibit palaces. It is constructed in the form of a five pointed star and is one of the most elaborately finished and decorated of the state pavilions.

The National Lumbermen's association, which has been meeting in the House of Hoo Hoo, adjourned today. The most important action taken at the convention, was the appropriation of $16,000 for the use of the credit rating bureau of the association.

VARDON HAS LUNG TROUBLE.

New York, May 26.—Harry Vardon, the golf expert, has had a serious setback in health, according to a Herald dispatch from London. It will prevent his taking part in the forthcoming championship tourney, and in fact may necessitate his practical withdrawal from the links. His lungs are understood to be seriously affected.

ONE WORD IN TIME

Is Better Than Two Afterwards. A Chance to Profit By a Duluth Woman's Experience.

It is a strange thing how people will put away an opportunity until too late; it's only little things that go to make up our every-day existence; the trouble is we don't pay sufficient attention to them. Backache is a little thing. Sometimes it comes after a hard day's work, or a slight cold. It will pass off, you say; it's only the result of overtaxing my back. It isn't the fault of your back, but your kidneys. The exertion or straining has interfered with their delicate mechanism. You call it backache, but it really is kidney ache. If the kidneys are not relieved, chronic disorders set in, and this is where the "little thing" should not be passed over. A Duluth woman has learned to appreciate what delay means.

Mrs. William Lynn, of 120 Third street west, says: "I suffered a great deal for many years with pains through my back and kidneys, specially if I caught cold or over-exerted myself. I tired very easily, and often when working about the house my back hurt me so that I was obliged to sit down and rest myself. I tried many remedies, but could get nothing to relieve the trouble. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended, I procured a box and commenced using them. They acted like a charm, and in a few days I was much better. I continued the treatment until the trouble was banished, and since then I have felt splendid."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box.

THE PREACHING OF ANARCHY.

The question whether the preaching of peaceful and philosophical anarchy is of danger to the American people was not in dispute in the case brought in behalf of Anarchist Turner to prevent United States officials from barring his entrance to this country. The only question there was whether the law barring all foreign anarchists was constitutional. The supreme court properly decided that it was, for if it was unconstitutional so would be the laws prohibiting the entrance of criminals, paupers, the halt, the blind and the lame as well as Chinese.

Whether or not it is wise to bar philosophical anarchists who do not preach force or murder is another matter. Discussing this point a writer in the Toronto Sun says: "Anarchism, taken literally, means nothing violent or criminal. It expresses the belief that human nature left to itself is good, and that the world would do better and be happier without compulsory laws or government. It was the dream of Shelley. It, or something like it, was the dream for a time of Coleridge, Wordsworth, and Southey. It is the dream of the truly lamb-like Kropotkin. To treat a mere visionary as a criminal is absurd. We might as well imprison a man for believing in the near advent of the millennium, which would certainly put an end to government and police. If an anarchist commits murder, hang or electrocute him. If he incites to violence, imprison him. Of the three presidents who have been assassinated, McKinley alone was the victim of anarchism. Lincoln was the victim of Southern vengeance; Garfield of private malevolence. The McKinley tragedy seems to have hurried the Americans into panic legislation, inconsistent with their allegiance to liberty of opinion. No law that you can make or penalty that you can threaten will restrain a political madman any more than it will restrain a mad dog."

All this is true. The man who preaches only peace, no matter how revolutionary his theories, should not be held responsible for the violent and criminal acts of others. It is a question whether anything is gained by the exclusion of such men as Turner. The need of some sort of government is so plainly evident to the masses of sane people that there is no danger of the overthrow of a republican form of government if all the philosophical anarchists in the world were turned loose among the American people. Under the present law even such a peace-loving Christian and philanthropist as Tolstoi might be prohibited from admission to America. It is plain that this would not only be an uncalled-for injury to the great Russian, but it would be an injury to the free people of the United States.

But the preaching of anarchy generally leads to violence and murder. The Chicago anarchists who were convicted of the Haymarket massacre protested innocence of any complicity in the crime. Yet somebody threw the bomb and evidently some one who was influenced by their teachings. For proof that they were not entirely free from the murderous instinct of anarchists generally, it is only necessary to refer to the fact that one of them blew his own head off—with a bomb.

There can be no doubt that the government is justified in prohibiting speech that may lead to crime. It ought to severely punish any speech that encourages mob law and lynchings. On that ground it is justified in prohibiting the speeches of American anarchists who preach violence as well as prohibiting the entrance of foreign anarchists who preach violence. There its prohibition ought to stop if the discrimination could be accomplished justly and safely. But the trouble in making a law of this kind is in drawing the line. Admission of Chinese has proved generally of disadvantage to the American people. At least they believe it has. Hence all Chinese are excluded except those who come to study or to visit. The preaching of anarchy has generally been productive of crime, hence congress decided to bar all foreigners who confess to a belief in anarchy. Is it to be blamed? Emma Goldman never openly preached assassination and yet the anarchist, Czolgosz, confessed that it was a result of listening to her teachings that led him to take the life of President McKinley. When such effects are so closely related to such causes, is it not well to remove the cause as far as possible even if some injustice may be done in individual cases?

While the American people should revere and hold sacred the right of free speech, is it wise to be too finicky about the means employed in suppressing a cult at once so foolishly impractical and so dangerous to the welfare of society? When the millennium arrives there will be no need of government, because then every man will deal as he would be done by, but the millennium is a mighty long ways off. In the meantime society has a right to protect itself both by organized government and the suppression of those who seek through organized crime to abolish organized government when it is maintained by the popular will.

A RUPTURE WELCOME.

There is a serious rupture between the government of France and the Vatican at Rome. Recently President Loubet of France paid a visit to King Victor Emanuel of Italy and the pope immediately entered a protest because of this recognition by France of the temporal power of the king of Italy. The French government resented the papal protest and at once withdrew its representative from the Vatican. It is claimed, too, that the papal secretary of state gave further offense to France by omitting from the protest to that government certain strong statements which he inserted in a circular to the other Catholic powers.

In all probability the French government rather welcomed the rupture and is prepared to make the best of it with a large body of Socialists in that country who believe that church and state should be divorced as far as the public schools are concerned, while perfectly willing that the state shall continue to support the church itself.

The desire of these voters is that the Catholis schools shall be closed, although they are not supported by the government, so that the education of their children shall be free from religious control. Why it is necessary to close the Catholic schools in order to obtain that result is not manifest to Americans, who believe in the freedom of parents to send their children to whatever schools they may desire, as long as the American language is taught to the pupils. But conditions in France may suggest that such drastic measures are necessary and it is evident that the government is in sympathy with the plan. The recent action of the Vatican gives them an opportunity to use this as an argument against church interference with educational matters, and the outlook is that the government will be sustained by the people. It may be that President Loubet made his visit to the Italian king with the express purpose of bringing about present conditions.

THE BILLBOARD NUISANCE.

Newspapers are always at a disadvantage in discussing the matter of billboard and similar advertising because of the implication of selfishness. No doubt much of this comment is selfish in its character, but the fact remains that the billboard has many objectionable features outside of its relation to the alleged curtailment of newspaper advertising. The Herald believes that it has but little effect one way or the other upon newspapers for the reason that while it may deprive publications of certain lines of advertising, it incites others to advertise who wisely use the columns of the newspapers in preference to the unsightly and ineffecient billboard.

The Providence Journal, speaking of the esthetic feature of the billboard nuisance in a recent issue said: "Considering the activity of the agitation in behalf of civic betterment in Springfield, Mass., people have often been surprised at the unsightly objects that are allowed to disfigure that city. Monster billboards flaunt their advertising near park entrances and in other conspicuous localities, and the only agitation in favor of their suppression thus far has seemed to originate from moral rather than esthetic notions in case of theater advertising. But the park commissioners have now taken up the matter, and propose to test the application of the law passed last year allowing such bodies to condemn unsightly billboards as nuisances when they interfere with the purposes of the parks. Considerable difficulty has been experienced by those attempting to force such laws in New York and Boston, but there is no doubt that when public sentiment becomes fully awakened advertising nuisances will be much more satisfactorily regulated."

When park boards become convinced of the unwholesome and marring effect of billboards there is at least no implication of selfishness on their part, because if they were men of that character they might be induced to withdraw their objection in return for a small reward. But they evidently oppose billboards solely because of their unsightliness and they are justified in making strong objection to them on that account.

If billboards are unsightly at park entrances (and who will deny it?) why are they not equally so when spread all over the vacant spaces on city streets? Why should the rocks and dead walls of Duluth be plastered over with flaring and gaudy caricatures upon art that offend the artistic sense and destroy the natural beauty of the landscape? During storms of wind billboards are also a menace to the safety of foot passengers, and the time may yet come when the city will be compelled to pay heavy damages as a result of permitting these rickety structures to line the streets. They are certainly as dangerous as overhead and roof signs, and should be classed in the same category.

Instead of being restricted in Duluth this nuisance appears to be growing and soon there will hardly be a vacant space unadorned. Why?

A memorial stone is now being erected in the Schorfieide, near Zehdenick, on the spot on which the German emperor stood when he killed his 1000th stag. The stone which weighs some fifty tons, bears the inscription: "Our most illustrious margrave and lord, Emperor Wilhelm II, stood here on the 20th of September, Anno Domini 1898, when slaying his one thousandth stag of twenty tines." It is very appropriate, this memorial stone. For who else but a "war lord" would consider the killing of 1000 stags a meritorious exploit?

A Saratoga man says that the free use of electricity in the industries affects the climate and is responsible for the severe weather that visited the Atlantic coast last winter. He further claims that it is ruinous to the agriculture of that section. That is a hard thing to believe, although he claims that science proves it. The general public will be disposed to wait a while before ordering the disuse of electricity.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Mart Adson, agent of the South Shore, returned this morning from a trip to Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane, Helena, Butte, Anaconda and other Western points.

"I was surprised at the number of people from Duluth and other Minnesota points that I met on the coast," he said. "There was not one of those cities that I visited nor any time that I got into a train, but what I found some old familiar face, and outside of the traveling and the strange buildings and streets it was much like being at home. I had a fine trip and found everything prosperous in the far West. There was fine weather out and back, save on the return trip when we struck a good deal of snow from Anaconda eastward. The Montana towns seems to be doing very well and holding their own. Helena, if anything, was a trifle dull. I brought back a Chinese pheasant with me. They are very numerous out on the coast."

Unreasonable Americans in Cuba.

Havana Post: The New York Sun scores American tourists who come to Cuba expecting to see gratitude shown them on every hand. The Sun has told a truth, and told it well. The only possible criticism of what the Sun has said is that it is not nearly strong enough. Many American tourists who come to Cuba not only want the Cubans to deal out gratitude to them on every street corner and at every meal, but to hear them talk one forms the impression that they would like the Cubans to bow down and worship them.

These tourists, too, if they get cheated in a business transaction, no matter if it is the buying of a Panama hat or a Spanish fan, rant about the ingratitude of the Cubans, although the one beating them may have been a Spaniard or even an Italian.

It is to be hoped that the Cubans will not judge the Americans as a whole by such examples, for those who talk the loudest about the ingratitude of the Cubans, in all probability, were the strongest opposers of the war which freed Cuba, and the strongest criticisers of those who went to the front to fight that Cuba might be free. Those Americans who sacrificed themselves for the cause of Cuba Libre, who either fought in the Cuban army or volunteered in the American army, are not among those who complain of Cuba's treatment. Instead, the complainers are those to whom Cuba owes no debt.

Points By Pease.

Anoka Union: Wish the weather would be of the kind that matches Bob Dunn's temper.

When a man is hit in a tender spot he gets mad. Goodness, isn't Bob Dunn mad.

Unless all signs fail, the man who has got a job today better stick to it. Already the labor supply exceeds the demand.

You often hear of Republican votes electing a Democrat, but not often Democratic votes electing a Republican. Funny, isn't it?

People are disgusted with the campaign tactics of both the Collins and Dunn factions and have begun to clamor for a new man. Let's have him, by all means.

The rich man when he gets drunk as a lord, goes to a convenient select club. The poor man goes to the lock up. It's the difference between wealth and poverty.

For a party which has no earthly show for success, the Democratic is making a great touse in finding a candidate to be led to the slaughter. No matter who is nominated, Theodore Roosevelt is sure to be elected.

Keeping Milk Pure.

Brooklyn Eagle: Dr. Darlington has notified the milk dealers that through the summer all milk above 50 degrees will be condemned by the Board of Health. This order ought to reduce the death rate among children during the summer months and it ought to do something to prevent the need for bureaus for the distribution of sterilized milk, for which appeals are made every summer. One of the greatest dangers from milk comes from the use of chemicals to preserve it, in the same way they are used in "embalmed" beef. If the dealer must keep his milk below a temperature of fifty degrees chemicals will not be needed. The dealer will have to use ice to keep milk cool and he is not likely to pay for ice and chemicals both. The ice will keep the milk sweet for a reasonable time and will make it safe also. The health commissioner seems to have solved a troublesome problem.

Annabel Lee.

It was many and many a day ago,
In a town by the Yellow sea,
That a maiden lived near a Russian port,
And her name was Annabel Lee:
She stood aghast at the whiskered lads,
"But they're awfully cute," said sne.

And one of the officers came to woo,
Braving the general's wrath:
When evening came he was lurking around,
Down by the garden path.
And Ann lurked, too, though she sadly thought:
"These Russians need a bath."

The romance thrived; but it soon broke up,
For as they together sat,
The officer said, as he took her hand—
The hand so chubby and fat—
"Ah, Annabelinski Leeskioff——"
And Ann couldn't stand for that.

A SPRING IDYL.

"Come, gentle Spring, Ethereal Mildness, come!"
You'll find me in my overcoat, close to the grate, at home.
My order's out for a ton of coal—I thought I had enough,
But two weeks I've been burning chips, splinters and such stuff;
Each day the weather soems to be getting "wus and wus;"
And 'twixt the sneezes and the coughs is now and then a cuss.

Say, Spring, you don't seem to know ball season has begun,
And players need the limbering of a soft May sun
To lubricate their stiffened joints and open up their ports.
And draw big crowds to root and yell when they make their scores.
It's time for low necks and shirt sleeves, not furs, we all agree,
Nor overcoats, nor mittens, nor winter lingerie.

Have you got sidetracked somewhere, or stuck in oozy mud?
Or unavoidably delayed by wind or storm or flood?
Or are you basking at your ease in Porto Rican clime,
Hawaii or the Pallippines, our Islands in the brine?
If so, there should be issued sharp, mandatory summons
For your appearance here forthwith, to answer your shortcomings.

The Old Story of an Old Debt.

Chicago Tribune: While going to his work the other morning and mediating upon the fact that he owned a big doctor bill and had only $7.25 with which to pay it, Mr. Rufus Geddes, an Evanston carpenter, was accosted by a plainly dressed stranger.

"You're Mr. Geddes, aren't you?" asked the stranger.

"Yes, sir," he replied.

"Used to live in Milwaukee, didn't you?"

"I did."

"Do you remember lending $30 to a man up there named Humphrey Johns about nineteen years ago?"

"Yes, I remember that distinctly."

"He never paid it, did he?"

"Never."

"Well," pursued the stranger, with emotion, "I am Humphrey Johns. I have never forgotten that debt, and I am going to pay it with interest some day, but I'm a little hard up just now. Do you suppose you could lend me a half dollar for the sake of old times?"

Fatal Sunday Morning.

Detroit News: For the man of healthy mind, who accepts his lot in the world patiently and tries to work out his appointed task hopefully and courageously, the future has no terrors. He does his best and trusts that the eternal justice will reward him as he deserves. To him the Sabbath is a day of rest and recuperation. He spends it, according to the view he takes of its purpose, and takes up his work again on Monday with refreshed bodily vigor and renewed hope. The melancholiac's perverted mental activities cannot stop. Rest is an impossibility in his case. As soon as his occupation drops from his hands, he has time for brooding, which is merely mental self-consumption. He magnifies trifles into mountains, and by morbid anticipation makes the future a terror. Sunday is his day of dread because he has time to think. Sunday morning is the time when many of these unfotunates seek to end their existence by suicide.

The city engineer is at work making estimates of the cost of grading two blocks of Michigan street and one block of First street, between First and Second avenues west. The general impression around town is that Phil Graff will be elected delegate to attend the Chicago Democratic convention. He has worked hard to obtain it and it would not be surprising if he succeeded in his purpose.

Capt. F. C. McManus of the schooner Oroton writes to the Chicago Tribune from Duluth with reference to what he terms a "rapidly growing evil." He complains that all vessels and steamers loading grain at this port are subjected to unnecessary delay because Duluth shippers will not suffer their grain to be loaded during a fog. Capt. McManus concludes his letter by stating that coarse freights, such as coal and railroad iron, are handled with remarkably good dispatch, the iron by Capt. BEDE'S POETRY.

Utica Press: J. Adam Bede, of Minnesota, now a member of congress, who made so many friends in this city on the occasion of his recent visit here and speech at the chamber of commerce dinner, was formerly a newspaper man and published a weekly in Northern Minnesota known as Bede's Budget. The following taken from an exchange will be of interest. The first verse is from Puck and the second and longer from Bede's Budget:

Several years ago when the prohibition question was being bitterly agitated in Georgia, supported by Henry W. Grady and Senator Colquit, both of whom are now dead, and with whiskey flowing freely in the campaign, the editor of the Budget indited a few lines to the Kegofbugjuice, using as his text a short ditty from Puck, a la Hiawatha, and printed it. We are now asked to reproduce the lines, which with this explanation we give as follows:

He killed the noble Mudjokevis;
With the skin he made him mittens,
Made them with the fur side inside,
Made them with the skin side outside;
He, to get the warm side inside,
Put the inside skin outside;
He, to get the cold side outside,
Put the warmside furside inside;
That's why he put the furside inside,
Why he put the skinside outside,
Why he turned them inside outside.
—Puck.

They unplugged the Kegofbugjuice
That was plugged with Cobofornus,
With the prohibition statute,
With the little paper ballot,
Far down in the realm of Georgia,
In the land of Monsieur Grady,
In the hunting ground of Colquitt;
Then they rolled the plugside downside,
Rolled the bungside upside downside,
Turned the jugside inside outside,
Turned the wetside from the inside
To the inside that was outside,
And drank deep the tribe of Antis,
Drank the dark-blue Africanus,
Drank the blear-eyed, red-nosed Paleface,
Drank the horde of Ignoramus,
Till they turned their inside outside,
Till they felt their jugside subside,
Till their wife and little child sighed.
That's why they spe'd the Kegofbugjuice,
Why they rolled the plugside downside,
Rolled the bungside upside downside,
Turned the jugside inside outside,
Turned the wetside from the inside,
To the inside that was outside.
Why they turned their inside outside,
Why their wife and little child sighed.
Far down in the realm of Georgia,
In the land of Monsieur Grady,
In the hunting ground of Colquitt,
For the curse they couldn't all quit.

THE REWARD OF INDUSTRY.

Boston Herald: It has been said that in Great Britain three out of every four men over the age of 65 are either in the workhouse or in the receipt of charitable assistance. George R. Sims quotes the statement and makes the grim comment that in a high state of civilization old age is a crime. Old age, however, in this period of the world's history is not a matter of the pears; many workers at 40 are practically old men and viewed with suspicion by their employers; nor have these workers often been able to save money for their declining years. The more faithful their service, the more unremitting their labor, the sooner gray hairs and enforced idleness. The young Napoleons—and there are so many of them!—are impatient even of middle age and of middle-age methods. In Germany the government has some consideration for those that have worked hard, even if corporations are forgetful, unsentimental, bowelless, and the pension system is on a humanitarian basis of compensation and recognition. What is there for a man of 45 or 50 to do when he is discharged, because young blood is needed in the business? The ejected has known a faithful life or routine; he can accommodate himself with difficulty to a new task, if he is so fortunate as to find opportunity for the experiment. Of course, there is the cheap and ready talk about the survival of the fittest—but who are the fittest? Let us first define terms.

Money in the Right Place.

New York World: Replying to the World's showing of the unparalleled extravagance of congress under President Roosevelt's administration, the Springfield Union says:

"Suppose the government expenditures under President Roosevelt have exceeded by $883,000,000 those under President Cleveland, what of it? Would the World have locked up this vast revenue in the vaults at Washington, or would it have thrown it back into circulation through the medium of great public improvements?"

The World would have done neither. It believes that revenue should be regulated and limited by the wants of the government economically administered. It believes that "unnecessary taxation in unjust taxation." And it believes that the right place for every dollar not needed for the just purposes of economical government is in the pockets of the men who earned it—not in the "vaults at Washington," nor "thrown into circulation" through extragant jobs, demoralizing pensions or jingo "expansion."

The Brave Little Man.

All torn, but sweet, is the old straw hat,
As it hangs on the rack in the hall.
There's mud from home on two little shoes
Where he played on the hills last fall;
There's dust on the kite and the little stick horse
Stands still as ever he can,
Listen, perhaps, in the corner there
For the voice of the brave little man.

There's never a song of bird, nor bloom
Of rose that blows in the spring
Nor shout of boy, nor gleam of sun
But where some tears will cling,
There's never a flash of the evening star
On the hearthstone's fireside
Of winter night but will bring some tears
For the brave little man that died.

Kind friends they were; we kiss them for him,
And lay them out of sight—
The two little shoes, the torn old hat,
The little stick horse and kite;
And down in his pocket, a rusty nail,
A bit of chalk and string,
A broken knife, an alley or two,
Oh! the birds, the bloom and the spring,
And star of God at morning's song,
Noontime and twilight tide,
One sweet little face, some tears will come
For the brave little man that died.
—Leslie's Monthly.

Decadence of the Drama.

Marquette Mining Journal: In these days, when there is so much prating about the decadence of the American drama and so much of it justified, it is quite comfortable to know that Otis Skinner is among the brave minority of actors who remain consistently true to artistic ideals of their art, and still persist in producing plays worth the while. And they are among the most prosperous of player folk, a fact that in itself goes a great ways toward refuting the popular managerial argument that the public is given that which it most wants.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: When a girl reads in a novel about one who has eyes like stars she gets up and peeks in the mirror.

Snuggling up to a man always makes him think he's big and strong, and the woman who does it knows it.

When a woman is nursing a sick husband she hasn't any doubt she is performing a conscientious duty when she wakes him up to ask him if he is resting well.

There never was an idiot man yet who could understand that because a girl can sit under a becoming lampshade and do fancy embroidery when she is engaged is no proof that when she is married she will be able to roll up her sleeves and make plain bread.

ELKS MAKE HIT

Their Minstrel Show a Hummer and Delights Large Audience.

Local Artists Appear In Songs, Dances and Various Stunts.

The Duluth lodge of Elks entertained its members and friends last evening with a delightful minstrel show, followed by a social hop.

The occasion is one that the Elks have been looking forward to for some weeks past and the attendance taxed the capacity of the hall.

The minstrel entertainment was along the usual lines, including chorus singing, songs and dances and jokes, and the talent displayed by certain of the Elks was quite remarkable.

T. P. Getz, who originated and gave "The Night in Bohemia" entertainment as an Elks' benefit some time ago, was the interlocutor, and he filled the position with the ease of a professional.

The end men, who were finished off in burnt cork, were Dr. Frederick Paxton, Leslie Hubbell, Paul Clarkson and William Aronson. Messrs. Aronson and Clarkson did some pleasing stunts in song and dance acts. The jokes were largely directed toward members of the local lodge and were received with evident marks of appreciation by the victims and their friends. The costumes of the end men were sufficiently startling to satisfy the most exacting spectator.

Although the members of the minstrel troupe had but three opporunities to rehearse, they acquitted themselves creditably and the program went off without a single hitch.

The chorus singing was good, and was accompanied by Flaaten's orchestra. Solos were rendered by William Gorrie, Charles Durrance, Charles Applehagen and William Cleland, the last named having a large repertoire of funny songs.

Mr. Gorrie appeared in a specialty make-up and gave a musical selection on a mouth organ hidden in a tin water sprinkler.

William Oreck gave a pleasing exhibition of clog dancing and fancy steps.

Another song and dance specialty was given by "Clark and his Lizzie," but the burnt cork complexions and taggery were sufficient to disguise the performers from all recognition by their friends.

T. P. Getz gave some character sketches and songs and Stanley and Lela Lamb, the child entertainers, who have been heard at the Elks' socials on former occasions, made a great hit with their songs and dances.

One of the musical events of the evening was the rendition by Flaaten's orchestra, for the first time in public, of Carl Raymond's new overture.

About 150 remained after the minstrel part of the entertainment and engaged in dancing.

KENNEDY COMPANY.

"Check" closed its half week run last night at the Metropolitan, playing to a large audience. Tonight the sensational melodrama, "Streets of New York," will be presented. This is a particularly strong play with strong situations, startling climaxes and the funny comedy. Several important changes have been made in placing the company and a fine production is promised. The specialties will be changed.

"THE GAMEKEEPER."

"The Gamekeeper" an Irish comedy drama in which Rowland and Clifford, starring Thomas E. Smith, will be the offering at the Lyceum this evening. "The Gamekeeper" is being highly commended by the press for its representation of real Irish characters and its refusal to make nonsensical caricatures of that nation of keen wit and unflinching integrity. Mr. Smith is said to be an artist in his line and to have been surrounded with an excellent company.

"A GIRL FROM DIXIE."

Sam S. Shubert, Nixon & Zimmerman's company, presenting Harry B. Smith's "A Girl from Dixie" comes to the Lyceum Saturday afternoon and evening. The entire New York production with all the original electrical effects will be used the same identically as given during its successful run of three months in New York.

ISABEL IRVING.

Miss Isabel Irving, who is announced to appear as Virginia Carvel in "The Crisis" at the Metropolitan on May 30 and 31, has won her place by sheer hard work and artistic striving. She began her career when little more than a child as a member of the famous company of Augustin Daly. Then she went to the Lyceum theater in New York as leading woman, then as leading woman with Charles Frohman's company of comedians; then in the same capacity with John Drew, and finally she blossomed out as a full-fledged star under the management of James K. Hackett, something over two years ago. During the past two years she has made a really notable success in "The Crisis."

GROWING LENGTHWISE

You want the children to grow, but not all lengthwise. When they start that way Scott's Emulsion will help them to grow right—with due plumpness and outward proportion, and with inward vigor and good spirits.

The Emulsion increases digestive power and strengthens the vital organs to get the best and make the most out of all the other food. It gives a kind of help that every growing child ought to have.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

TEN MEN ARE SUFFOCATED

By Gas From Engine In Coal Mine Tunnel.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 26.—A telegram received at the Suspuehanna Coal company's offices in this city last evening states that ten miners were suffocated by gas and sulphur fumes rom a small locomotive this afternoon in the workings of the summit branch Coal company at Williamstown.

The victims included Michael Goldeen, general inside foreman of the company, and nine miners and laborers.

The tunnel in which the disaster occurred is one mile in length and is used by the coal company to convey the coal mined in the workings in the Bear Valley to the breaker in the Williams Valley.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon General Inside Foreman Golden and about fifty miners boarded a load trip which was about to be hauled from Bear Valley to Williamstown. Everything went all right until about half of the journey was made when some of the men attracted the attention of the engineer, who at once stopped and it was found that nearly every man in the party on the cars had been overcome by the gas and sulphur which emanated from the stack of the locomotive and floated back over them. The engineer at once crowded on all steam possible and the unconscious men were hurried to the Williamstown end of the tunnel. Every possible effort to resuscitate them failed.

The tunnel had been in constant operation for more than forty years and this is the first accident of any kind that has happened in it.

The names of the dead thus far ascertained are:

MICHAEL GOLDEN, general inside foreman.
GEORGE RAIDLE, master mechanic.
JOHN KURNEY.
JOSEPH PUNCH.
ENOCH MORGAN.
ALBERT NAU.
FRED JAMES.
ADAM SCOPPENHEIMER.
JOHN FREDENICH.

At the evening session Atlantic City was decided upon as the place for the next annual meeting of the council.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, Editor. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

GAMES TODAY.
Duluth at Winnipeg.
Superior at Fargo.
Crookston at Grand Forks.

The White Sox will open a series of three games with the "Champs" at Winnipeg this afternoon. It will be a struggle to the finish, as the three games should land either one or the other of the two teams well in the lead.

Duluth will make a desperate effort to take two out of the three games as they have done at both Fargo and Crookston. "Rusty" Owens will probably pitch the first game of the series this afternoon. Manager Van Praagh received word this morning that Owens had left Minneapolis for Winnipeg and would report in time for today's game. If he is not too much fatigued by his long trip he will be put in the box. Shaw and Gehring will be available for the other two games, Koukalik having pitched yesterday.

If the Sox can take two out of the three games they are pretty certain to come home in first place. The fans scarcely hoped for anything better than an even break on the present trip and that is already practically assured, with good chances for two games out of three.

Manager Van Praagh stated this morning that there was no truth in the story that Martin had been recalled by Minneapolis, and said that the Duluth captain would remain with the team. He has been playing great ball on the present trip and should prove to be one of the most popular men on the team.

"Joe" Wilkes has been ordered back to Duluth. He was not feeling in good trim, the cold and damp weather having affected him, and he will await the return of the team here.

Arrangements for the opening game are progressing nicely. The aldermen and city officials will all be invited to be present, and the usual band and parade will be forthcoming.

LOSE THE THIRD.

White Sox Taken Into Camp By Crookston.

Crookston, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crookston broke its string of defeats yesterday afternoon, and took the Duluth team into camp by the score of 8 to 5, before a good crowd of enthusiastic fans.

Sorenson, the young man who was released by Grand Forks, was in the box for the home team, and while he was hit freely, he managed to keep the hits scattered. Quillin and Martin got triples and Corrigan a double, while eight singles were made from his delivery.

Koukalik pitched good ball, but received poor support. Ball had an off day at short stop, and let three good chances escape him, while Martin and Quillin were also guilty of errors.

The game was the kind that is dear to the hearts of the fans. It was a slugging match from start to finish, in which the home team had a little the better of it both in the field and at th bat.

Things looked dopful when the visitors led the score by a strong batting rally in the fourth inning, but Crookston still had some hits coming and the sixth and seventh innings resulted in four more runs.

Lagger, Carlyle and Thomas made catches of the sensational order.

PLAYING GREAT BALL.

Fargo and Grand Forks Have Another Daisy.

Grand Forks, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The last game of the Fargo series was played here yesterday, and it was nearly as fast as the 1 to 0 game the day before. The visitors were unable to find Newmeyer until the seventh inning, when Perry Werden, the first man up, lined out a three-bagger. Lynch, the next man, sent an easy one to Sharne and was thrown out on first. Edwards was the next man, and the fans held their breath. He hadn't made a hit since the series started, but for once history aided not in forecasting the future. He lined out a nice one, the third hit of the game, and "Little" Perry came waltzing home with the first score of the game. The next two men went out without going to first.

The Tigers saw that it was up to them to do something. They tried hard to get a man across the plate in the sixth inning. Martin, the first man up, touched Lempke for a three-bagger, slick and clean. Dunn went out on first and Cole gave a fly foul to the catcher. Hanrahan had two strikes, and Martin made a desperate chance to win or tie the score, and slid home but was called out. The Tigers sent a man home in the seventh, and a two-bagger by Dunn in the eighth with Martin on second tells the sad tale of defeat in a well-played game by the visitors. The score.

NOLDIN AGAIN DOES IT.

Duluth's Loaned Pitcher Wins For Superior.

Winnipeg, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Once again did Mr. Noldin, of the "Swamp Jumpers" make the home team bite the dust. The big southpaw was invincible and his curves kept the home players tearing big chunks out of the Canadian atmosphere in their futile efforts to hit the elusive sphere. While he did not begin to equal his record of fifteen strike-outs, he kept the "Champs" hitting them into the mits of the fielders, and only five safe ones were chalked up against him. With men on bases Noldin was a mystery to the home players and not a man made the tour of the bases.

Converse, the St. Paul acquisition, was wild at times, although he pitched fairly good ball. The work of both teams in the field was good, with the exception of the two catches dropped by Dalquist. The feature of the game was the fielding and batting of Chandler, who had two singles and a double to his credit. Noldin also had a nice clean single and six accepted chances in the field chalked up opposite his name.

Off the Bat.

Home a week from today.

• • •

Ball had an off day yesterday. It was his first this year.

• • •

As long as Winnipeg got licked also, what's the difference if it helps Crookston out of a hole?

• • •

O'Leary managed to connect with the ball three times yesterday, while Martin, Quillin and Koukalik each had two to their credit.

• • •

It's a dull day when the report of a game does not contain a mention of a "clrcus catch by Lagger" as one of the fielding features.

• • •

Koukalik has won one game and lost one. Shaw has the same record, while Gehring and Martin each have one victory to their credit.

• • •

Noldin is doing better work for Duluth than he did before he was released to Superior. By winning the two games against Winnipeg he has allowed his old team mates to step into first place.

• • •

The Duluth Fashions will meet the strong Two Harbors nine Sunday and Monday. The former game will be played at Two Harbors and the Monday game at Duluth.

• • •

The Big Duluth team will go to Ashland for two games in that city on Sunday and Monday.

• • •

This time last year Duluth was at the end of the league standing, but it was the other end.

• • •

Three straights from Winnipeg would about conform with the wishes of the average fan, and then nobody would kick if they dropped one game to Grand Forks on the way home.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The westbound Union Pacific train No. 3, known as the Overland Flyer, was wrecked near Hallville, Wyo. The entire train left the rails, one car turning completely over. All the passengers were badly shaken up, but none was seriously injured. A broken rail caused the wreck.

The fruit growers of the Santa Clara valley suffered almost incalculable loss from high winds that at times blew almost a hurricane. It is believed that more than one-half of the ripening cherry crop is destroyed and that from 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 pounds of prunes are on the ground.

E. T. Allen, a sewing machine agent, is under arrest at Everett, Wash., charged with forgery at Oskaloosa, Iowa. Allen admits forging notes to the extent of $5,000. He conducted a music store at Oskaloosa. He says he dabbled in stocks and forged to make good his losses.

James R. Keene's Delhi, Odom up, and favorite in the betting at 3 to 2, won the Belmont stakes of $14,850 to the winner, at Morris Park Wednesday. Delhi, the son of Ben Brush-Veva, was not pushed during any part of the distance of one mile and a quarter, and won by four lengths. Graziallo was second, with Joan A. Drake's Rapid aWter third.

The officials of the Union Pacific today completed a settlement of hours and pay with the telegraph operators of the system and a new schedule was signed. The negotiations have been in progress for three months. The details of the settlement are not made public, but it is stated that the telegraphers were granted better hours and increased pay in a large number of places.

The postoffice department has received bids for carrying the mails from Valdez to Tanana, Alaska, via Fairbanks and China, a distance of 620 miles, and back, from Oct. 1 to May 31 each year, from next October to May 31, 1905. The contract doubtless will be let to Oscar Foote and Joseph F. Grant, of Alaska, whose bid, $21,945 a year, or $1372 a round trip, was the lowest received.

Passenger train No. 2 on the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific was wrecked about 4 o'clock between Haughton and Sibley, La. Two postal clerks and a negro brakeman were killed and a number of persons hurt.

William Rodenbach, of New York, champion amateur heavyweight, was given the decision Wednesday night over Sam Berger, of San Francisco, in a four-round contest. It was Rodenbach's contest throughout.

Francis H. McColl, a millionaire yachtsman and a member of prominent clubs in New York, San Francisco and Chicago, has been divorced from his wife on the grounds of desertion. The decree was granted by Judge Chetlaine, of Chicago, before whom suit was recently filed by McColl. The plaintiff is president of the American Key Can company and vice president of the sardine "trust."

Contract Work.

Bids will be received at this office for the laying of 1650 feet of 6-inch water main, with 4 hydrants, 4 6-inch valves, 2 6-inch Ts and 1 6-inch cross, above to be laid an average depth of 7 feet and 4 inches, and in acordance with profile and specifications on file in this office, up to Monday evening, June 13, 1904. A certified check of at least 5 per cent of said bid must accompany same.

HEATWOLE SAYS

Story He Will Oppose Senator Clapp Is "All Rot."

The Hearst Committee In Minneapolis Find Democrats Indifferent.

St. Paul, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—"The story is rot, just what you can expect from a yellow newspaper like the Journal."

These are the words of Joel P. Heatwole, repeated over the telephone from Northfield last night in answer to a story which appeared in the Minneapolis Journal yesterday afternoon, quoting Mr. Heatwole to the effect that he would announce his candidacy for United States senator against Senator Clapp immediately after the state convention on June 30.

Mr. Heatwole was quoted as saying in the Journal that, since Senator Clapp had gone into Rice county, his home county, in the interest of Judge Collins, he had an ample excuse for going after Clapp's seat in the senate. The exact words which are put into Mr. Heatwole's mouth follow:

"I discovered that Moses E. Clapp has been cutting into my own county. His friends have formed an organization, and if I carry the county I will have the hardest fight of my life. I have about made up my mind to let it go by default, permit them to name a Collins delegation, and then, after the convention is held, announce myself as a candidate for the senate. I will have an ample excuse in the fact that Clapp has gone into my own county to make trouble for me."

The story went on to say that Heatwole has intended to be a candidate for some time, that he wanted to come out openly against Clapp weeks ago, but was held back on account of the candidacy of R. C. Dunn for governor, fearing that his announcement would drive the Clapp men away from Dunn. The article said that after looking over the situation in Rice county he became so thoroughly provoked at the attempts of the Clapp men to carry the county for Collins that he decided to enter the field against the junior United States senator. The article closed by stating that Mr. Heatwole's senatorial plans were unmasked by the C. A. Smith disclosure.

W. H. Wood, chairman of Hearst committee in Minneapolis, says that on account of the indifference of Democrats as to the presidential campaign the committee will not begin to hold regular "rallies" for some time.

"James R. Bennett of St. Cloud has charge of the Hearst campaign in Minnesota," says Mr. Wood. "It seems to be generally believed that Hearst's campaign in Minnesota is being taken care of by our committee in Minneapolis. The only thing that we of Minneapolis have to do with the state campaign is to receive the campaign literature and forward it to Mr. Bennett.

"Our work in Minneapolis for some time to come will consist only in quiet labor in the various precincts. The open Hearst meetings we have held so far demonstrate that such meetings are premature and that the people are not ready for them. Our rallies will accordingly be postponed until a much later date."

* * *

Talk of a "darkhorse" candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination has practically died out in the Twin Cities. Both Judge Collins and R. C. Dunn say the fight is going to be between them and they are satisfied to have it that way. The Dunn men look upon Eddy in the end as a Collins' man, maintaining that the friends of both Collins and Eddy are merely out to defeat Dunn.

"It is the field against Dunn," said a Dunn man yesterday. "We figure that all who are not for Dunn are against him. We don't fear the effects of a combination between Eddy and Collins, because we are making our campaign on the theory that we will get enough delegates to defeat any sort of combination."

RHEUMATISM!

Helena, Mont., Jan. 24, 1904.

MEDERINE REMEDY CO., Duluth, Minn.

Dear Sirs:—As I have suffered for the last seven years with Blood Poison and Eczema I had tried everything that money could pay for and it was of no avail. No one knows how I suffered with running sores on my leg. I at last gave up all hopes and started to use opiates for relief.

My druggist, one day, told me to try Mederine. I thought that it was no good, but resolved to spend a dollar on one more. One bottle of Mederine cured all the running ulcers and clears the Eczema. I have taken two courses and am a well woman today. I cannot say enough for Mederine for Blood, Eczema and Catarrh. I thank you for my life long relief and shall recommend Mederine to others. Yours truly, Mrs. A. O. S. Milot, No. 208 State street.

Mederine is sold at $1 per bottle or 6 for $5 by all dealers. Write for booklet.

YOUNG MEN DROWNED

While Riding a Log Down the Mississippi.

Bemidji, Minn., May 26.—Harry Singleton, of London, England, was drowned in the Mississippi river near Becker Monday afternoon in an attempt to rescue his hat, which had fallen into the river.

Singleton and another young man named John Russell had been in North Dakota looking for work, and being unable to secure it, resolved to go to Minneapolis, and decided upon the novel plan of riding a log down the river. They started upon their trip and had gone as far as Becker, where Monday morning Singleton's hat blew off into the river, and in an attempt to rescue it was drowned, all efforts of his companion to rescue him being fruitless.

He was a member of the Winnipeg lodge of Foresters, who have offered a reward for the recovery of the body.

Hints To Advertisers

Saturday will be an unusually busy shopping day on account of Monday being a holiday. All merchants who have anything of importance to offer will be represented in the advertising pages of the Friday Herald.

The merchant who depends on "chance sales," due to lucky location, has the same chance with merchants who advertise as a sailboat has with a steam yacht.

A merchant cannot afford to have any one wonder why he is not more enterprising and up-to-date—and half-hearted advertising always causes such comments.

A patron who comes into your store does not see all that you have to sell. If you would rather make three sales than one, itemize more in your advertising.

One step backward is not aways serious, but to walk backward regularly is a dangerous habit. The merchant who curtails his advertising has commenced to walk backward—and a bump into a bankrutcy court is always imminent.

TWENTY INJURED

In Wreck on Cleveland & Pittsburg Railroad.

East Liverpool, Ohio, May 26.—Twenty persons were injured, some seriously, in a wreck on the Cleveland & Pittsburg road, near here yesterday. The wreck was caused by the train running into some freight cars that had broken loose and got on to the track. The injured: Engineer Hearly, East Liverpool, bruised and shoulder hurt; Fireman Williams, Cleveland; badly crushed in jumping from cab; Conductor H. McKee, Bellafre, bruised; Express Messenger Johnston, Cleveland, bruised by safe falling on him; Mrs. J. A. Cotton, colored, teacher from North Carolina, head and shoulders bruised; Miss Minnie Wright, Harrisburg, Pa., teeth knocked out; James Costello, Cleveland, cut over eye; Mrs. John Dulach and child, severely bruised; Mrs. Isabella Townsend, Tarentum, Pa., head cut, teeth knocked out and hand crushed; John Newman, cut on forehead; Frank Miller, Pittsburg, neck sprained, face cut; W. W. Harker, East Liverpool, bruised.

Several other persons received less serious injuries.

The engineer of the train had just resumed work after two years' lay-off from injuries received in another wreck.

POOL ROOMS ARE FLEECED

Lose Large Amount of Money By Skillful Wire Tapping.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 26.—The pool rooms were unmercifully fleeced yesterday by a clever wire tapping, easily executed on account of the recent stopage of the Western Union service. Six races were wrongfully reported and settled for and as a result the local pool rooms stand to lose thousands of dollars.

In the first race at St. Lolus they paid out on Sylvian Belle to win, which ran third. In the third race settlement was made on Jingler to win, which was not in the money. P. J. Somers, in the first race at Chicago, was wired a winner, when Watermelon won and in the third race Aunt Katherine was given as the winner when LaLonde came in first.

It was the most disastrous day in the history of local pool rooms. Chief of Police Shevlin is working on the trail of the instigators.

Two suspects have been arrested. It was framed up to send in Sting in the sixth race at St. Louis, and Elfin King in the sixth at Chicago, but by this time the local pool rooms realized that everything was not right and mutually agreed to take the money and not pay off until the next day and as a result bettors on the last two horses which really won are holding winning tickets which will be cashed.

EXPLANATION BY VATICAN

Concerning Trouble With France Ending In Ambassador's Withdrawal.

Rome, May 26.—The Osservatore Romano, the vatican organ, publishes an official statement reviewing the relations existing between Cardinal Merry Del Val, the papal secretary of state, and M. Nisard, French ambassador to the vatican, immediately before the recall of the latter, as the result of the papal protest against the visit of President Loubet to Rome.

Friday last, according to the paper, M. Nisard visited Cardinal Merry Del Val and told him he had been instructed by Foreign Minister Delcasse to inquire as to the authenticity of the text of the note to the Catholic powers as published in L'Humanite, of Paris, which varied from that directed to the French government, and to ask especially if the phrase regarding the recall of the nuncio, which was omitted from the note addressed to France, really occurred in that sent to the other powers.

The cardinal said he would reply immediately if the ambassador's interrogations were put in writing. M. Nisard pointed out that there was no time to do this, and the cardinal then said that he would give an answer within an hour, or even within half an hour. M. Nisard, however, insisted on an immediate reply, and pleaded that the cardinal should answer "yes" or "no."

The latter said he was sorry that he was unable to comply with the ambassador's demands, and M. Nisard then said he would have to draw the conclusion that Cardinal Merry Del Val did not recognize the authenticity of the note as published.

The cardinal retorted that he had not said anything of the kind, to which M. Nisard replied: "Then I shall telegraph Minister Delcasse that you decline to answer."

To this the cardinal replied that on the contrary, he had promised a written answer within an hour.

M. Nisard then withdrew, saying that he would wait. Two hours later Cardinal Merry Del Val, not receiving word from the ambassador, sent a communication to the embassy, saying that he was at M. Nisard's disposal, and prepared to give an answer, but no reply to the communication was received.

On Saturday morning M. Nisard again visited the secretary of state and informed him that the insistence upon a written form of his questions had been interpreted as a desire to elude the subject, and that therefore he had been instructed to leave Rome on vacation.

The Osservatore Romano concludes:

"First, that Cardinal Merry Del Val not having given an answer, the recall of the ambassador was not justified; second, that the answer which the cardinal would have given within an hour would have been exhaustive and thoroughly satisfactory, and third, that the request of M. Nisard to be informed as to the contents of the notes sent to the other Catholic states was absolutely contrary to diplomatic usage, and that there was no rule which obligated the papal government to send a collective note.

WILL MEET IN DULUTH

TO BURN UP MONEY

"Bill" Smith, Brother of Late Mrs. Fair, Flying High.

Going to World's Fair and Will "Show" Missourians.

Newmarket, N. J., May 25.—Mayor "Bill" Smith, brother of the late Mrs. Charles Fair, and who has just received such a large portion of her estate he can hardly think of enough ways to spend it, will start for St. Louis Wednesday to do the exposition.

He says he will "show" Missourians, especially in the money-spending proposition. He will make the trip in an automobile with his wife and three children.

Just how much Mr. Smith himself receives from the Fair estate has not been definitely ascertained. Mr. Smith says that it is nobody's business, and in the same breath remarks: "I'd tell you in a minute, but we talked it over with the lawyers and decided that it would not be right to give it out. If you see them and they think it's proper to tell, let it go at that."

Short ofstature and large of heart is "Bill" Smith, as he is known in Newmarket, which he set all agog last Saturday.

He had no sooner been whirled past Newmarket on a New York bound train than two men began to dig a ditch for a sewer. Newmarket had never heard of such a thing being done and when a truck rattled up through the main street with a piece of iron pipe and large quantities of earthenware piping, and deposited them on the ground, half of the population of the place turned out to behold the unwonted sight.

The diggers were Nels, who is a friend of Bill Smith, and Sam. It was hard digging, for the ground was mostly broken rock, but enough was done to show that the two houses which Mr. Smith owns were to be connected by a drain with Newmarket lake.

"We won't dig in the center of the road," said Nels, casually, "for when Bill gets here with his automobile today he might notl ike to run in the ditch."

From mouth to mouth the rumor ran through Newmarket, from the postoffice to Dent's hotel and back again, that Bill Smith was likely to come "lickety split right through this yere town in on of them skidoo wagons."

Wild rumors as to the cost of said "skidoo wagon" flew, and the price ranged from $2500 to $30,000. It chanced that at least six machines passed through Newmarket yesterday, and whenever the pinions rattled and the gasoline chuffed every window and doorway in the town was filled by those curious ones who wished to see if "Bill" Smith had come. Delegations of women with sun bonnets on their heads and spectacles on their eyes hastened to the red house of the mayor and asked Mrs. Smith when "Bill" would return and if she was really going to St. Louis with him in an automobile.

"What automobile?" asked she.

"O, how you do carry on," said they of the sunbonnets. "The street can't be dug for it."

Mrs. Smith at noon put on her best spring hat and hitched up the runabout and put the three children into the back of it and drove down to Dunellen and back again, and one of the citizens who followed her on his bicycle announced that she had gone as far as the Schieffelin house, in Dunellen. She came back presently, and hardly had she returned half an hour than the largest greenest van which had ever been seen in Newmarket came up the street creaking and rumbling.

It backed up to the front yard of the Smiths and the things which were taken from it filled the honest villagers with wonder. There was a clock that winked, an oil painting that had a frame of sea shell and another of pearl moon shining on dark green waves, three mahogany what-nots, and a great pier glass 12 feet in height, with walnut and gilt flanking either side, six Chinese vases, a Japanese mask, which scowled and pursed its lips; a bookcase of walnut and a complete set of an encyclopedia were only a few of the treasures which were contained in that vehicle.

The van returned to Dunellen and returned again laden much as before. The Smith house was well furnished with furniture of an unpretentious kind before the collection arrived, but the two periods, affluence and simplicity, are now represented side by side.

When all this was done came "Bill" Smith himself out from New York. Before he would talk he looked at the drain.

"Is this all that you have done?" he said to Nels, speaking in the capacity of William B. Smith. "I thought that you would have the pipes laid. What is that pipe doing there, anyway? I won't pay those fellows a cent. They ought to have put 'em down there over the stone wall. You see I'm improving my property considerable."

"Yes," said Mr. Smith, when asked of his plans. "Newmarket is good enough for me. I'm going to stay right here and make it my home and help develop the place. I've got money invested here. What do you think of the sewer? It will be a great improvment, don't you think? I don't build any house in Fifth Avenue, understand. Right here is where I stay.

"Tomorrow you will see me riding into this place in my new automobile—twenty-four hose power. I'm going to St. Louis. Can I handle an automobile? I rather guess so. We will go to St. Louis in seven days? Where do I stop? Wherever I like. No trip mapped out at all. I thought that I might go in the auto to San Francisco.

"We will be in 'Frisco for about two month—gone five months altogether. After that I'm coming back to improve my property some more. Will I build a new house? I don't know. Haven't got to that yet. The one I have suits me down to the ground.

"Next Tuesday night I'm giving a little supper for about forty-five of my friends, and on Wednesday morning we're all off in the auto."

Mayor Smith, before his fortune came was a grocer and butcher, having a small shop here. He has disposed of that enterprise and is now cultivating the airs of a capitalist. He has imparted to his friends that Andrew Carnegie is the ideal of the moneyed man and that he will try to follow in the ironmaster's footsteps. While in St. Louis he will buy a fire-fighting apparatus and a library, both of which he will donate to Newmarket.

So far the horizon of his benefactions does not extend beyond this community.

A SERIOUS BOLT

Would Follow Cleveland's Nomination and It Is Unlikely.

The Followers of Bryan Would Vote For Roosevelt.

Washington, May 26.—In Washington the possibility of Grover Cleveland being the Democratic nominee at St. Louis is no longer taken seriously. The opinion here of the political future of the sage Princeton is very practical and doubtless correct.

The only dissent from this view is to be found with Democrats who hope to see Parker defeated and with the Democrats who are not yet in the Parker band wagon and hope to make terms with the managers of the New York candidate beore it is too late.

Expressions from these Democrats are alse covers of real convictions and need not be taken seriously.

So far as Cleveland is concerned, it is the conviction here that he will not be nominated, because his success at St. Louis would be immediately followed by a bolt and split in the party which would be almost if not quite as serious as the defection of the sound money Democrats in 1896.

This phase of the Democratic political situation has been carefully investigated by the friends of the president and by others who are practically interested.

There is but little difference of opinion among the really well informed, although their conclusions have been reached through many different channels.

It was the knowledge that a bolt would follow his nomination which induced many of the staunch friends of Celveland in New York to consent to vote for and support Judge Parker.

Of all the obstacles in Cleveland's path to success it was and remains the one insurmountable one.

It is this split which would follow the Cleveland nomination that has convinced the Republicans who constantly advise with Roosevelt that Parker is the man who must be met at the polls.

Every Democrat is willing to admit that Cleveland would bring back to the party the "Gold Democrats" who deserted in 1896, but to each and every one, it is just as apparent that Cleveland at the head of the ticket would drive many who were with Bryan to vote for Roosevelt.

The loss would treble the gain. In Indiana and Illinois the big fight must be made. The Democrats always face the necessity of carrying one or both of these Middle Western States even after they have saved New York.

The attitude of many leading Democrats who are explaining how it is impossible for Parker to win is interesting. There is William Joel Stone, of Missouri, vice chairman of the national committee, who declares Hearst will have one-third of the delegates on the first ballot, and will be able to prevent the nomination of Parker.

He is trying to organize Missouri and other Southwestern states for Cockrell, in order that he may have a bunch of delegates to use against Parker.

All that Mr. Stone wants is to make some sort of terms with the Parker managers.

The friends of the New Yorker are not disposed to treat with the Missourian simply because he has lost power for good or evil in his own state, and they prefer to deal with Polk, who will be for Parker without any dickering.

The Kentucky Democrats are also out in the cold. At first they confessed that they were so weak and helpless that they must be for Bryan's friend, Hearst.

While they were getting out of this fix Gorman used his tricky influence to secure an uninstructed delegation, which could be used by himself if there was any chance of defeating the New York candidate.

Gorman is now the most aggressive of the Democratis candidates, excepting Parker. The Parker people are disposed to wait until Kentucky falls as a ripe peach.

It is surmised that the flowing and debonair Colonel J. M. Guffey, of Pittsburg, the proprietor of the Pennsylvania delegation, is having some difficulty in making the right kind of terms with the Parker managers.

He did have a very good understanding with Mr. Belmont and others, but as the Parkerites increased in strength they became more independent, and Col. Guffey was being compelled to wait longer in the ante-room than he liked.

He decided that he would secure better treatment if he "acted up" a little with his Pennsylvania colts. There is no suspicion here that the Parker people will let these relations become strained to the breaking point.

The Parker people have been notified that the uinstructed delegation from New Jersey will in reality be for Cleveland. The Parker folks are disposed to let them stay for Cleveland if that affords any satisfaction, with the expectation that a little later they will come a round with anxious and inquiring looks on their faces.

It is the impression here that no effort will be made to come to an understanding with Gorman and his supporters.

If he should willingly lay down his arms and come to the Parker camp he would be made welcome, but there are no negotiations contemplated with the Maryland Democrats. There are several reasons for this. In the first place, Gorman is a "has been" in his own state, which in itself is not a good recommendation, although not an important fault.

Gorman has been working against harmony instead of striving to unite the Democratic forces. He has tried to arouse animosities in one faction against another.

He made three attempts to establish issues in the last congress for the Democrats and failed every time.

He has cruelly disappointed the Democrats in Washington by his changeable policies and uncertain course.

His recent reputation is that of a political manipulator rather than as a leader, and the Parker managers feel that as such he probably would add no strength to their camp.

He is probably the only Democrat with a national reputation with whom the Parkerites are not willing and desirous of treating with when the proper time comes.

Even William Joel Stone will be made useful if he comes on easy terms. Gorman may be feared for his treachery, but not for his influence.

In or before the St. Louis convention there will come one struggle which will have important results. Reference is made to the effort which will be made to minimize the Hill influence, or rather the Hill personality.

There is too much Hill, too much Belmont, too much Wall street, and too much organized and exclusive selfishness in the Parker closed corporation to suit the outsiders who will have to do most of the work.

In this struggle Hearst will cut a very important figure. His full strength will be thrown in with those who will try to bring Hill to terms, force him to lay aside his dictatorship and extend the "community of control" which is taking charge of the Democratic party.

It is proposed to keep Hill from getting too much power in case Parker is successful in convention and at the polls.

Hill will not consent to abdicate, but stronger persons than himself now in the Parker movement will force him to capitulate.

T. Taggart, the Hoosier leader, who has always been a Hill man, will probably work with those who want to force from Hill some of his arbitrary authority.

The intention will be to swing the political control to the West.

It will not be for the good of the party to have all lines leading to New York.

This action is now slowly going on in the reforming Democracy, and it is not so much anti-Parker activity as appears upon the surface.

MRS. INGALLS

Tells How the Senator Wrote "Opportunity."

Atchison, Kas., May 26.—Sheffield Ingalls, son of the late John J. Ingalls, says the charge that the poem "Opportunity" is a plagiarism sounds ridiculous to the members of his family, in view of the facts as they know them. The Ingalls family never heard of Dr. Nicola Giglotti before, never knew of his sending any letters to Senator Ingalls, and never had any knowledge of his writings.

Mrs. Ingalls, widow of the senator, says her husband could not have translated anything from the Italian because he knew nothing of the language, nor did he know anything of French or German. Mrs. Ingalls, who was a comrade as well as the wife of Senator Ingalls, says the facts about the writing of "Opporunity" are these:

"For some three or four years prior to Senator Ingalls' retirement from the United States senate he began to work out the idea embodied in "Opportunity." He wrote and rewrote it many times, and was always framing phrases for it, or rebuilding it, or polishing it.

"Blakely Hall, editor of Truth at the time, was a great admirer of Senator Ingalls, and the senator sent it to him. Mr. Hall recognized its worth and published it in connection with Mr .Ingalls' picture. This was the first time the poem ever appeared in print."

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, City:

Gentlemen—Three original sealed bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription were purchased by me at different stores in this city. These samples have been carefully examined with the following results:

Each sample was tested separately for alcohol (ethyl alcohol) and each was found to be free from that substance. A sample, consisting of a portion of each bottle, was examined for the alkaloids of opium and for digitalis, and well-known and very sensitive tests show the absence of these substances.

The work mentioned has been thorough and I am certain that common alcohol, opium and digitalis are not present in the samples examined. Respectfully, HERBERT M. HILL, Professor of Chemistry University of Buffalo.

SICK BOY CALLS

For Missing Mother, Whose Husband Believes Her Dead.

Mrs. H. Le Roy Jones Made a Will Before She Disappeared.

New York, May 26.—Through the finding of a will in her writing desk, the mystery of the strange disappearance of Mrs. Herman Le Roy Jones becomes more deeply tragical. Mrs. Jones is the New York society leader who, on the afternoon of May 15, left her husband's side at the Morris Park track and has not since been heard from. The day before she fled from her husband she wrote a document in the most simple language, bequeathing her estate, consisting of money, stocks, bonds and an interest in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, in five equal parts, to members of her family.

The making of this will shows a planned desertion of her family and not the unpremeditated flight of a woman suffering from dementia. It has been ascertained that she took with her to the Morris Park races all the toilet articles she would need, concealed in a wrist bag and the pockets of her coat.

Whether or not Mrs. Jones came into the possession of any large amount of ready money canont be known until a complete investigation of her business affairs has been made. A note dated one week before her disapearance, found among the papers in her desk, from Hawley & Co., brokers, disclosed her efforts to turn a quantity of mining stock into cash. This discovery led Mr. Jones to recall other unusual preparations which the missing woman made before going to the races. She put on a handsome wide lace collar and cuffs which she had never before worn and a diamond brooch and jewels which she was not acustomed to wear in the afternoon. These preparations indicate an intention on her part not to return from the races with her husband and are circumstances hardly consistent with a plan to suicide.

A frantic desire of Mrs. Jones to get away from New York and a longing for the freedom she had enjoyed early in her career are facts which she made known to her intimates weeks ago. She had no quarrel with her husband, but suffered many petty annoyances consequent upon his loss of fortune such as the commencement of suits against her and the publicity of their business affairs. At the time she disappeared she was cited to appear in a contempt proceeding for failure to answer questions in suit on a $700 tailor bill.

A strange feature of the case is the aristocratic unconcern which is manifested by the missing woman's mother, Mrs. Philip Hone. She greeted an inquirer calmly and with elevated eyebrows said:

"Pray, how does it concern the press that my daughter should choose to absent herself from her family for a few days? She has not left the city."

Her parent indifference broke down, however, when told that a will had been found and for the first time she showed deep grief and terror.

A pathetic side to the case is found at the Jones house, where the grief-stricken husband watches at the bedside of their little son, who is dangerously ill from sorrowing for his mother.

Robert L. Cutting, attorney for Mr. Jones, and husband of Minnie Seligman-Cutting, with whom Mrs. Jones went to the races, is taking a deep interest in the affair. He said:

"I hope the news of the little lad's illness will be sent far and wide. If Mrs. Jones hears that her son is ill she may return. Little Herman does not realize that his mother has disappeared, but calls for her constantly. Mr. Jones continues to think his wife has taken her own life. He recalls the self-murder of her father, Philip Hone. I am inclined to think Mrs. Jones at this moment is sheltered by friends, but I cannot see how they could cause this family so much distress."

In the hope of inducing his wife to return, Mr. Jones has authorized the publication of the following touching apeal to his wife:

To Mrs. Margaret Hone Jones:

It is the wish of your husband and friends that you return to your friends at once. Such a return will be deemed a rational act on your part and ample evidence of your ability to care for yourself.

Your nurse has been discharged. From the moment of your return no restraint will be placed upon your acts. You will be free to come and go at your will.

For the sake of your sorrowing friends and your boy come home and relieve the awful suspense under which they now labor.

ROBERT L. CUTTING,
Attorney for H. Le Roy Jones.

THE WOLF SEASON

Time When They Are Killed Practically at an End.

Ninety-Four Bounties Are Paid In St. Louis County.

The wolf killing season in St. Louis county for the year is practically over. There will probably be a few more wolves killed during the coming month, but, judging from the records of bounties paid at the county auditor's office for several years past, the season usually ends with the first week in June.

The wolf season begins during the fall months and closes with the summer months, so that it really runs into two separate years. The season just about to close is the season of 1903 and 1904, rather than just the season of 1904, although the greatest number of wolves have been killed since Jan. 1.

This season has been the banner season in the wolf slaying business in St. Louis county, a total of ninety-four having been killed since last October. A very few were killed in September last, so that if the season were regarded as extending back that far the total number killed would approximate 100.

Of the total number of wolves killed from October to the present date, the last wolf pelt having been brought in May 23, the number of females was fifty-four, as against forty males.

The largest number killed in any one month was 26 in January. The month of February comes next with a record of 23 killed; December least with a record of 17, while in April 18 wolves passed in their pelts. In May just 1 wolf was killed, and last October bounties were paid on 3 pelts.

One of the interesting incidents connected with the records is that nearly all the female wolves were killed in the late fall and during the winter, while in the spring months more males than females were killed.

Cub wolves were brought in on just one occasion, eight of them being killed by two young men in one of the unorganized towns, after being chased and watched all night by a hungry and enraged pack of old wolves.

The previous wolf killing season extended only from Jan. 1, 1903, to about the middle of June, and during that period sixty-six wolves were killed.

In the 1903 season the wolf bounty up to the first of May, was very much higher than has been paid since, being a total of $25 for a full grown wolf, where only $15 is now paid, half by the state and half by the county.

When the bounty was $25, the state paid $10, the county paid $5, regular county and an additional bounty of $15 per head.

In May, 1903, the new wolf law went into effect and ever since the state has paid but $7.50 per head for full grown wolves, and the county has paid $7.50 more. Wolf cubs now bring but $2 per head.

Figuring on the basis of 94 wolves killed this past season, $1366 has been paid out in bounties, including the smaller bounties on cubs.

Of this amount the state has paid $658 and St. Louis county has paid an equal sum.

The fact that more wolves have been killed since the bounty was reduced by the state legislature, is said to be explained by conditions, there having been more wolves in the vicinity of the settlements or the outlying farms, this past winter, than in previous seasons.

In some localities the wolves have been very numerous and have been a great annoyance to the farmers because of their boldness in approaching farm yards and attacking domestic animals close to the houses. Several instances have been known where the wolves have chased and even treed persons, the attacks always being made after nightfall.

The largest number of full grown wolf pelts brought in by a single person, was six, these having been secured by Charles Swanson, in the unorganized town of 51-19.

The localities where the wolves were killed were pretty well scattered, there seeming to be no place where the wolves were killed in greater number than others. A fair proportion of the wolves were killed not far from Duluth, and some of them were even killed within the city limits.

Menominee Girl Drugged and Placed on Railroad Tracks.

Menominee—Norma Larson, a 14-year-old girl, was found about midnight on the Northwestern tracks near the outskirts of this city in an unconscious condition. It is thought she had been drugged and placed on the tracks, her assailant thinking a train would kill her and thus cover up his crime. She is in a precarious condition. It is rumored that a well-known young man of Menominee is implicated in the affair.

Phillip Drolette, an insane patient from Marinette, died on a train while being taken to the asylum. He had refused to eat for five days and practically starved himself to death. Jealousy over his wife is said to have caused his insanity.

Houghton—The forestry exhibit of the upper peninsula has been shipped to the St. Louis exposition. Thornton A. Green, of Ontonagon, and John O'Callaghan prepared the exhibit, which consists of twenty samples of lumber and twenty sections of logs.

Calumet—Absolutely no trace can be found of Sam Helopaa, a fisherman who left Calumet three weeks ago for Hancock to purchase an outfit for his season's work. It is possible he met with foul play.

Sault Ste. Marie—Alex McKay was instantly killed on the Canadian Pacific at Echo Bay while alighting from a train. He was horribly mangled.

Ontonagon—John Bailey, the oldest volunteer fireman in the upper peninsula in point of continuous service, is dead at his home here. He was 77.

Lake Linden—Thomas Smith, a second-year student in the high school, died of injuries received in a football game several months ago.

ACTION IN VENEZUELA

In Military Lines Causes Uneasiness at Washington.

Washington, May 26.—Military measures on a large scale begun recently by Venezuela are giving rise to a great deal of uneasiness and apprehension here. It is stated that a French company sold Castro's government one and a half million livres worth of artillery, which is being placed in fortifications at Puerto Cabello, and other important coast ports. The company also contracted to supply a force of skilled artillerymen to man the guns for a certain period.

Just what this expensive armament means when Venezuela is so poor, is a matter of speculation here, and there is some fear that it is the forerunner of a repudiation by Venezuela of liability for further payments of installments of indemnity under the awards of the recent arbitrations.

WOMAN APPLIED

For Enlistment, But Could Not Pass Examination.

Oskaloosa, Iowa, May 26.—A good looking young man who gave the name of Jack Merritt and stated he was from Eddyville, Iowa, entered the local recruiting office and declared his intention of enlisting in the army. Recruiting Sergt. James Lewis did not see anything wrong with this request, and, after asking a few preliminary questions, decided that the applicant could pass the physical examination, so he ushered the candidate into the examination room and said: "Take off your clothes." The applicant hesitated and did not seem to care to do so; but Sergt. Lewis was firm. He must remove his clothing or he could not be a soldier. After a great deal of close questioning the applicant finally broke down and began to cry and admitted that he was a woman and had come here with the intention of enlisting in order to join her lover, who is in the Eighth infantry at Fort St. Michael, Alaska. The sergeant was astonished and hurriedly left the room and after looking carefully over his "Army Regulations" informed the now blushing applicant that she was "rejected" as "women were not mentioned in the army regulations."

FEASLE MURDER CASE.

Nebraskan Believes That He Has It Solved.

Homboldt, Neb., May 26.—Thomas J. Feasle returned from Nuckolls county, where he has been engaged in superintending the work of ferreting out the murderer of his brother, Eli Feasle, the farmer who disappcared mysteriously last November. For a time it looked like the matter defied solution, but since the recent finding of parts of a human body on the farm and a grave underneath the kitchen of the farmhouse, evidence has been steadily accumulating, and Mr. Feasle says everything points to the guilt of the parties under arrest charged with the murder of the old gentleman. The search has been a long one, but the movements of the suspected ones have been carefully traced until it seems the web is woven too tightly to be broken. The parties under arrest are Mrs. Hutchinson, the housekeeper; her son, Charles, and Harley Feasle, a nephew of the missing man. The preliminary hearing is set for June 13 at Nelson, and by that time the prosecution hopes to have more definite trace of the body which it is now believed was dug up from the kitchen and placed in the field, afterwards being taken from the field and deposited in the river.

SANTOS DUMONT

Proves Airship Capacity While Sparks Threaten Explosion.

Paris, May 26.—With a new motor in position, with two propellers attached, and a 90-foot steel shaft in working order on his No. 7 balloon, Santos-Dumont had a trial of his big airship in the grounds at Neuilly. Santos wished to try the motor in the shed before starting, and once it was running everything went well.

The only ominous feature of the balloon was the fact that the 1500 cubic meters of inflammable gas was only six feet from the the sparks of the motor.

After the motor had been working three minutes the whole shed was filled with smoke, but Santos stood fearlessly in the basket, like a sea captain on the bridge.

The airship slowly moved into the open, rose thirty feet and made a few revolutions. The motor which started the balloon would have driven it over the shed but for the ropes by which it was held. The maneuver having passed off successfully, the airship was returned to the shed. It is intended to take the No. 7 to St. Louis to compete for the $50,000 prize.

NUMBER IS GROWING

Duluth's Flock of Automobiles Is Steadily Increasing.

Victor Huot Gets One of Largest and Handsomest.

"All that Duluth needs to become a city metropolitan in every respect is a flock of automobiles," said a visitor last fall. If that particular feature is really required before, in these modern times, a city may boast that it is in all ways metropolitan, on an equal footing with the Eastern centers of culture, then Duluth was certainly a little behind the times until recently.

This is not the case now, however. The flock of puffing, tooting little cars is fast putting in an appearance, and their angry snorts are frequently to be heard as the wheezing machines attack the hills with a grunt of determination. It is said that the only reason the automobile craze has not struck Duluth before is the hills. They presented a formidable problem to the enthusiast at the start, and dampened their ardor somewhat. But now the car that is not guaranteed to stand a forty-five per cent grade is considered a relic of bygone days, and the crank turns from it with a sniff of contempt. In spite of her many hills, or her one hill as some choose to call it, Duluth really possesses a number of roads and avenues well suited to the use of the automobile, and the people looking for something new to amuse themselves with this summer are just beginning to find this out.

The latest acquisition in the automobile line is one received a few days ago by Victor Huot, of 119 Seventh avenue east. This is the tenth machine now in use in the Zenith City, and others have been ordered. Mr. Huot's is one of the most powerful and costliest autos yet brought into Duluth. It is a 16-horse power, gasoline, with a speed of forty-five miles an hour. Mr. Huot has not yet let his speed out to the full limit, for reasons best known to the local police department, but he says the road to Lester Park and the boulevard have offered an opportunity for some pretty fast going, and he is sure that his pet will do all that is claimed of it. Those of his friends whom he took riding yesterday, while the chilly breeze was speeding in from off the lake, swear that a speed of sixty miles per was attained. Their spirits fell to 45 degrees below zero, and their spring overcoats seemed to grow thinner with every additional notch let out by Mr. Huot.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Bank Roll of $300 Removed By Sioux Falls Thief.

SOUTH DAKOAT.

Sioux Falls—A shrewd thief succeeded in securing a bank roll containing about $300 during the temporary absence of a watchman from the club rooms near the heart of the business district. The robbery was one of the boldest committed in Sioux Falls for some time, the money having been carried away during the middle of the day when hundreds were on the street. There is not the slightest clew.

Canton—General Thomas Reed, commander of the state G. A. R., has just issued his official order directing the annual encampment to be held in this city June 28, 29 and 30. The local committee is making extensive preparations. Governors from four states, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and South Dakota, will be among the speakers. General J. C. Black, commander-in-chief; General C. A. Partridge, adjutant general, and Mrs. John A. Logan are expected and the senators and congressmen from this state will be here.

The interstate annual conference of the Adventist church, to open in this city June 9, and remain in session until the 18th, will be one of the largest religious gatherings ever held in the state. Rev. A. G. Daniels, D. D., and Rev. E. W. Farnsworth, D. D., from Australia, will be present. A daily paper will be published to record the proceedings.

At a special meeting of the city council all of the five applications for saloon licenses were granted without opposition from the temperance faction. The saloons are expecte to start as ssoon as the bonds can be filed with the county commissioners.

Evarts—The government is receiving four cars of posts here which will be used to build a fence between the two reservations and will form the north boundary of the cattle trail.

The Turkey Track company of Texas and New Mexico has leased the two south pastures of the east half of the Cheyenne reservation, known as Nos. 7 and 8, and will put in about 10,000 head of cattle this spring.

Whitlock & Johnson are erecting a two-story store building.

The Cheyenne Indians are working on the roads this summer. Barney Traversey supervises the work. The Indians are fast becoming good workers.

Major McLaughlin, Indian inspector, passed through here for Oak Creek station to visit his son Harry, after which he will go to Alaska for three months work among the Indians.

Miller—A 7-year old girl of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Ross died of a disease pronounced by the attending physician diphtheria. A school teacher and another of the Ross children have recovered from the disease, which if it is diphtheria is of a mild form.

Lidgerwood—The funeral of Leonard B. Movius, whose remains were brought from Tucson, Arizona, was held here by Bishop Mann of the Episcopal church. The floral contributions were magnificent.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Devils Lake—State Land Commissioner Laxdal and Mayor O. F. Getchell, formerly Indian agent at Fort Totten reservation, are selecting the state school lands according to the terms of the act opening the reservation. About 3000 acres will go to the state and the work will require about three weeks.

The police arrested a stranger who refuses to divulge his name for passing counterfeit $5 bills. He passed one in a store, but was detected when he made the next attempt at another business hous. He will be held.

Fargo—The state fair at Madison is to be the largest and best this year in the history of its organization, according to President C. F. Messingham, who is in the city. Some of the wild-West features will be cut out and more attention paid to stock and agricultural interests. While here Mr. Messingham was in conference with State Veterinarian Van Es regarding the tratment of cattle for scab. Eight dipping tanks have been purchased, seventy tons of flour sulphur to be used in treating affectd animals. The work will be under the supervision of government inspectors.

Friends of Hank Rockner are endeavoring to secure a pardon for him. Last winter he pleaded guilty to stealing an overcoat from J. H. Johnson. It is asserted the theft was committed while he was intoxicated.

The Elks are planning for Saturday night, when a large class is to be put through. Many Minnesota Elks are planning to be present.

Professor Childs, who has held the chair of English in the high school for four years and declined re-election, has accepted a similar posotion in the Mayville normal. He will succeed Professor Grosvenor, who resigned some months ago.

DISCOURAGED, WORN OUT FOLKS

They are Exhorted not to Give Up the Ship.

You are worn out and discouraged. You feel as if you have been conquered in the battle of life and are ready to throw down your arms.

Take heart. Thousands have been as badly off as you are. Let us see if we cannot describe your symptoms without having seen you.

In the first place, your heart flutters and you are mentally depressed. You are faint and listless all the time. Your skin is hot and there is a ringing in the ears. You have no appetite, but you do have sick headaches. At night you have terrible dreams.

My friend, the symptoms are legion, but the cause is simple. You are constipated. The intestines are choked with impurities, and your whole system is being slowly poisoned.

Buy a box of Beecham's Pills, the harmless vegetable laxative, at your druggist's. Take one pill at bed time. If this does not move the bowels freely, take two the second night, and so on. When the bowels move freely, gradually diminish the dose, until a night can be skipped without missing the stool in the morning. Keep your bowels regular by taking enough and not too many.

SWEDEN IS PROSPEROUS.

Rev. J. J. Peterson Returns to America to Remain.

New Richmond, May 26.—After laboring in the ministry of theMission church in the land of his birth, Sweden, for eight years, Rev. J. J. Peterson has returned to America to remain. He came to this country when a young man, and was educated here and entered the ministry. Then he received a call from a church in Sunne, Sweden, near his birthplace, and for eight years he has had charge of the work there.

A year ago he returned to America and collected money for the relief of the Scandinavian famine sufferers. This fund he distributed personally. He reports the people of Sweden happy and contented and again on the road to prosperity. The crop prospects are excellent.

Rev. Mr. Peterson will not undertake any church work until he has regained his health, which is badly broken down from overwork, and for the present will retire to his fathers' farm.

CHINA NOT IN NEED

Of Any Foreign Officers For the Army.

Washington, May 26.—Several applications have been received by the Chinese minister here from former members of the Thirteenth Minnesota volunteers who are anxious to secure commissions in the Chinese army.

Sir Liang Cheng stated today that the Chinese government was not in need of foreign officers for the army, and the report that former volunteer officers who had seen service in the Philippines were being sought after was erroneous.

MARRIED IN LONDON.

Former Financier Tewksberry Takes a Bride.

New York, May 26.—Lewis G. Tewksberry, whose meteoric career and failure for a lareg amount in Wall street a few years ago attracted much attention, is reported to have been married in London to Miss V. A. Butler of New York.

Tewksberry fled to Mexico in 1900, with only a few thousand dollars of his once large fortune. His counsel here stated that many claims against the ex-broker already have been settled. Mrs. Tewksberry, who remained here when her husband fled, recently secured a divorce.

IS CALLED OFF

No Racing Matinee to Be Held on July Fourth.

Ringling's Circus Butts In and Horse Fanciers Withdraw.

The race matinee which was to have been given July 4, at the Driving park by the St. Louis County Agricultural and Fair association, has been called off. It has been learned that Ringlings' circus will exhibit in Duluth on that day, and those having the matinee in charge feel that it would be foolish to try and run in opposition to "the biggest show on earth."

The race matinee was to have been an interesting event, with $600 hung up in prizes, and the fact that it will not occur will disappoint all Duluth lovers of good horse flesh. The event is not merely postponed; it is called off entirely. It is planned, however, to hold a matinee on a smaller scale some time during the month of July, probably about the second Saturday in the month, when a number of contests, with suitable prizes, will be arranged.

There are now twenty-five horses in training at the Driving park. Four trainers have them in charge. Most of them are pacers, though there are some trotters and runners in the bunch. They are from Duluth, Superior, Carlton and the range. It is expected that several more horses will be put in training at the park in the near future. Some are coming from Cloquet and other points. There are a number of good, speedy animals in the lot, and it is expected that the race program at the county fair, to be held late in August, will surpass by far any like event in St. Louis county.

Honest Abe, the big pacer formerly owned by Harry Annis, and which made a good record on the lace ice last winter, will not appear on the Duluth track this season. He has been sold to Twin City parties for a consideration of $750, it is understood. Patrick Monahan negotiated the sale for the Twin City people, but it is not known whether he is the sole owner of the animal. Abe will be taken the round of the Western circuit this season, starting in June, and his backers expect to make a neat sum of money off him. He went a mile in 2:20 on the Hamlin track a few days ago, and those who have seen him work in Duluth claim he will, when he really exerts himself in a warm race, be able to clip off a mile in 2:15. He is still eligible to the 2:24 class.

On selling Abe, Mr. Annis almost immediately purchased another pacer. The new acquisition is also to be something of a wonder, but his record does not yet appear to be public property.

Our Immigration.

Immigration at the rate of 100,000 persons per month was the record for several months during last year. This is a very large number, especially in view of our strict immigration laws, excluding those most undesirable. There is also a larger number of people every year taking Hostetter's Stomach Bitters because they are learning more of its wonderful curative powers, and are convinced that it is the best remedy to restore the appetite, steady the nerves, induce sound sleep, or to cure bloating, nausea, heartburn, distress after eating, dyspepsia, indigestion and malaria, fever and ague. Delicate women, too, have come to realize that the Bitters is the best medicine in the world to restore them to health and strength, the weakest system being able to retain it. We urge a trial.

HERBIN ELECTED

Editor of Epworth Herald By Large Majority.

Los Angeles, May 26.—The result of the ballot taken yesterday by the Methodist conference for editor of the Epworth Herald shows the election of Dr. S. J. Herbin by an overwhelming majority. Ballots were taken for publishing agents of the New York and Cincinnati book concerns at the first session today. For the New York agency, Homer Eaton and G. P. Mains were the only candidates voted for. They are the present publishing agents at New York. G. F. Bovard and R. D. Doherty were nominated, but withdrew their names before a ballot was taken.

H. C. Jennings and E. R. Graham were elected publishing agents of the Cincinnati branch of the Methodist book concern.

THE PICKET WINS RACE

Takes Brooklyn Handicap; Irish Lad Second, Proper Third.

New York, May 16.—The Picket won the Brooklyn handicap; Irish Lad, second; Proper, third.

New York, May 26.—A notable array of horses was announced for the Brooklyn handicap today and track and weather conditions could scarcely have been better. Among the probable starters were Irish Lad, winner of the race last year and of the recently run Metropolitan handicap; Africander, winner of the Suburban handicap and of the Lawrence realization races; McChesney, the idolized Westerner; The Picket, who won the American derby last season at Chicago; Claude, winner of several derbies as a 3-year-old, Rostand, winner of the Excelsior handicap; Hermis, Highball and others scarcely less famous. An enormous crowd on the ground of the Brooklyn Jockey club for this race was expected and the morning conditions indicate a multitude exceeding anticipations.

The crowd began to gather early and before noon the attendance had already reached well up into the thousands. More thousands continue to pass through the gates and a record-breaking attendance seemed assured long before the hour for the first race.

The distance for this famous race is one mile and a quarter and its value to this year's winner is about $16,000.

DECORATE GRAVES

Ninety-Four In This County to Be Strewn With Flowers.

Five on Ranges to Be Cared For—School Exercises.

The local committees of the G. A. R. posts having in charge the decorating of the graves of soldiers on Memorial day, have arranged for ninety-four flags, which represent the number of graves that will be decorated in the county this year, under the auspices of the G. A. R.

Of the total number to be decorated, eighty-nine are found in the Forest Hill, Park Hill, Oneota, Calvary and Tischer Creek cemeteries near the city, while four graves will be decorated at Tower and one at Ely.

The decorating at the local cemeteries will be done by committees of the old soldiers, and one old soldier who lives at Ely will look after the decoration of the grave at that place. Wreaths of flowers are also to be sent out with the flags to Tower and Ely.

At Tower, Miss Francis Dailey, daughter of Capt. Asa Dailey, of this city, will attend to the decoration of the four old soldiers' graves at that place. Miss Dailey teaches the school at Tower and the decorating will be one after appropriate exercises by the pupils.

The grave at Ely has never before been decorated. It was during the past year that the members of the G. A. R. learned that an old soldier was buried there. He died in 1894, and his family afterward moving away, the circumstance of his death and the fact he was an old soldier had nearly been forgotten.

An old soldier's grave in one of the local cemeteries was discovered a few years ago, after its occupant had been buried for sixteen years without it being known where his remains were interred.

The G. A. R. organizations now have a complete list of all the old soldiers who have died in the county, and where they are buried, so that in years to come none of the graves will be forgotten. Monuments are now used to mark the last resting place of the old soldiers, so that their graves are readily found.

The records of the local posts show not only the eighty-nine old soldiers who have died in Duluth, but the names of fifty-five old soldiers who formerly lived in Duluth, but who are buried elsewhere.

Exercises in all of the schools of the city will be held tomorrow and at practically all members of the G. A. R. posts will be in attendance and take part. The veterans are very anxious that the children take an active part in the Memorial day observance. It is especially desired that they assist in the decoration of the graves.

All children who desire to contribute flowers for the decoration of the graves should take them to the post hall in the Masonic Temple at any time after 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

The exercises at the cemetery will take place at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning and the presence of as many children as possible is desired at that time.

RETIRED TO HEIGHTS

Russians Moved Out of Kin Chou In Good Order.

London, May 26.—A Tokio special says: After the occupation of Kin Chou by the Japanese today the Russians retired in good order to the heights further south, which were attacked by the full Japanese force and carried after a stubborn resistance.

THINK FIGHT IN PROGRESS.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—While no news has been received from Gen. Stoessel, commander of the Russian troops at Port Arthur, the war office is inclined to believe that severe fighting is in progress in the southern part of the Liao Tung peninsula, above the narrowest point of the peninsula, but no credence is attached to the reports of the Japanese having entered the Kwang Tung peninsula, south of, and connected with the Liao Tung peninsula. This is considered impossible before the capture of Kin Chou, which it is believed here would involve long and difficult siege operations. The general staff denies the rumors of the final evacuation of Newchwang and says the heavy guns were not taken back when the town was reoccupied in force.

No changes of importance in the positions of Gen. Kuroki or Gen. Kuropatkin are reported.

DENIED BY RUSSIANS.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—A high authority at the admiralty said to a correspondent of the Associated Press:

"It is false to assert that the Russians use floating mines. They are not known in the Russian naval service. The Japanese used them constantly off Port Arthus, setting numbers afloat near the entrance. All the Russian mines are anchored, but the action of the Japanese in dragging for them is responsible if they get afloat. Such mines are readily discernible in daylight and are dangerous only at night. The three-mile limit is an absurdity, as a Whitehead torpedo can travel four miles."

This authority, while not committing himself absolutely, strongly intimated that the Japanese battleship Hatsuse was destroyed by a torpedo fired from a submarine boat. It is now established that a submarine boat of the Drzewiecke type was at Port Arthur before the outbreak of the war.

MATTER OF UNION

Between the Presbyterian Churches Discussed at Buffalo.

A Plan Presented to Convention By Committee.

Buffalo, May 26.—The great question overshadowing in importance all others, the proposed reunion of the Presbyterian church of the United States and the Cumberland Presbyterian church which organized as a separate body in 1810, was the first order of business in the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States today. Not since the day when the vote was taken in 1901 in the revision of the confession of faith of the Presbyterian church has there been such interest manifested in any question as that of the prposed reunion. The discussion promised to be a struggle between President Francis L. Patton, on one side, and President James D. Moffatt on the other, a renewal of the old struggle between the liberal and conservative elements in the church. Dr. Moffat will be supported by Dr. R. F. Coyle, Dr. C. A. Dickey, Dr. J. P. Calhoun and others and Dr. Patton by Dr. Henry C. Minton, Dr. John Fox and others.

Dr. Patton contends that the confession of faith, as to its Calvinistic doctrines, is the same as when the Cumberland church went out. In other words, the revision of three years ago did not revise in the sense of changing anything. He will endeavor to show that the confessions of the two bodies differ materially, and that doctrinally the two churches are so far apart that it will be dangerous to attempt a union at this time.

Dr. Moffatt and his supporters will argue that the revision did revise, in that misunderstandings were removed. The ambiguity of the old confession has been taken away and the language of the present creed is such that it is understood by the members of the Cumberland church and that they accept it as it is and are ready to unite on the basis of the revised confession. Other considerations will be urged by those favoring union.

The report of the committee declares that as the basis of union each of the assemblies must express approval or disapproval to the following categorical question:

"Do you approve of the reunion and union of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America and the Cumberland Presbyterian church on the following basis:

"The union shall be effected on the doctrinal basis of the confession of faith of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, as revised in 1903 and of its other doctrinal and ecclesiastical standards, and the scriptures of the Old and New Testament shall be acknowledged as the inspired word of God, the only infallible rule of faith and practice?"

The recommendations of the committee are:

First, that such changes be made in the form of government of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America as will allow additional or separate presbyteries or synods to be organized in exceptional cases, wholly or in part within the territorial bounds of existing presbyteries or synods, respectively for a particular race or nationality if desired by such race or nationality.

Second, that the foregoing basis of union and concurrent declarations shall be submitted to the general assembly and the entire plan of union shall be operative when the basis of union, the concurrent declarations, and the first recommendation shall have been adopted in their entirety.

Third, that it is earnestly recommended to the congregations throughout both branches of the church that they reserve Sabbath, Sept. 18, 1904, as a day of prayer that "He would grant to us all the spirit of counsel and might," and in the new relation now contemplated, enable us to "keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

John R. Davis and Iisha Perkins dissent from the repart as a whole, for the following reasons:

1—Because we fear serious controversy and loss to the church are likely arise under the proposed adjustment of property rights and methods of administration, and

2—Because in our judgment the two churches differ so definitely in traditions, the training of their ministers, their methods of work, their modes of dealing with prominent social questions, and, above all, in doctrinal belief, as their doctrinal beliefs are set forth in the respective confessions of faith, that union between them would not be justified, and we particularly dissent from the first of these concurrent resolutions as confused, misleading, and at least in one of the interpretations, likely to be placed on its declarations, contrary to facts.

Stated Clerk Roberts read a telegram from the Cumberland body now meeting in Dallas, announcing that they had adopted the plan of union with the general body by the constitutional two-thirds majority. The news was received with the greatest enthusiasm.

The Rev. P. J. Musser, of Philadelphia, editor of the Reformed Church Messenger, was first to take the platform in favor of the union.

REALTY IS SAFE

Investment For the Funds of Republic of Panama.

Building Operations In New York Are Very Active.

Chicago, May 26.—A New York special by Holland to the Record-Herald, says: Should the Republic of Panama select New York improved real state for the investment of the larger part of the $10,000,000 paid to that republic by the United States government for Panama's interest in the canal the choice would be made for three reasons. First, because just now an unusual demand for money secured by first mortgage upon New York City real property prevails, and therefore it is easy to find security that cannot be questioned, while the principal and the interest of the loan can be insured for a small charge or guaranteeed by any one of the several responsible corporations. In the next place, Panama would receive an income of about 4½ per cent, which would be collected without heavy charges and easily placed to the account of that republic with its bankers in New York.

In the next place, government bonds yield a permanent income of less than 3 per cent. Railroad securities are in no demand by the public, while New York city real property is constantly appreciating, and, if in good locations, rarely suffers from any recessions. Therefore it has seemed to those who are advising Panama that no better employment for the money received from the United States which Panama is disposed to invest can be found than investment in bond and mortgage secured by improved city property.

* * *

Building operations are proceeding now in New York with an activity induced in part by the rebound from the enforced depression of last year. That depression was due in good measure to the long continued strikes maintained at one time or another by almost all of the labor organizations employed in the building trades. It was a costly struggle both for employers and employes. One illustration will show how great is the difference between the opportunities of this spring and those of last year. In the early autumn of 1903, Columbia university, being prepared to consider contracts for the erection of two university dormitories, procured specifications, plans and bids. Owing to the condition of the money market in part, but in great measure to the unrest in the building trades, it was thought better to postpone the execution of contracts for a season. Within a few days the university has practically perfected contracts for the erection of these dormitories and at a cost of $91,000 less than the figures mentioned in the bids of last fall, the specifications and plans being practically the same. The aggregate is approximately $700,000, so that those who supplied building materials and the wage-earners have lost this $91,000, much the greater part of this loss representing the difference between the wages now and last year.

Material, of course, is on the whole much cheaper, and that may in some measure explain the intense building activity.

When the body of the labor leader, Parks, was brought to New York the other day, those who carried it had, as they came from the station, a visible and magnificent demonstration of the ending of the power of that once all-powerful leader. Opposite the station, for two years, there was proof of Parks' power in the cessation of the construction of what is to be one of the greatest of New York's hotels. A few disjointed iron pillars told mutely the story of Parks' interference for two years there. After he was convicted and his power ended the work went on, and today is almost finished.

That, however, is not an isolated case. Suddenly, apparently almost in a night, there appear new skeleton structures, altering the vista of Manhattan from a long distance and telling of the intensity of building activity here since the labor troubles were ended.

Of all the banks in New York probably the Chemical is the one where a certain noblesse due to tradition, to the atmosphere and to the methods of that institution would be regarded as especially prevailing. And yet there came disclosures the other day of a defalcation of $22,000 by a clerk of that institution who was arrested yesterday. Some bank presidents are of the opinion that so perfect a system of checks and counter-checks can be established that it is impossible for any misappropriation to take place short of downright larceny, and that it would surely be discovered before the close of the business day. But this Chemical bank disclosure is only one of several that have been made recently, showing that, after all, there must chiefly be reliance upon the personal integrity of the clerks. In the old Continental bank, now liquidated, what was thought to be a perfect system of checks and counter-checks was organized, and the president once said th atno defalcation was possible in that bank for a longer time than between the hours of the opening and the closing of the bank upon any one business day. Yet at that very time defalcations were under way there which had been in progress for more than a year and were discovered only by accident.

The rigid discipline of another national bank did not prevent embezzlement by one of the subordinate officers approximating half a million, which was discovered also by mere chance. The clerk of the Chemical bank, by a method perfectly simple when understood, had been able to mainpulate checks by the aid of a personal account which he kept in another bank.

In the school established nearly thirty years ago at Hartford the education of Chinese youth of wealth and high social standing, an institution created by Yung Wing, there attended a youth who afterward entered Yale college and remained there until the close of his junior year. He was one of the brightest of an unusually bright set of silk-gowned and pig-tailed lads. The reactionary party having come into power in China, he was recalled with the others, but went back, having learned much of America.

Today he is General Wong, and next week to be entertained at a banquet in this city by the American Asiatic association. If he speaks at the banquet, as he did at the one which he attended as a guest at Chicago recently, his words will be widely reported and will be worth serious heed. His statesmanship, vigor and earnestness made a strong impression.

A considerable number of busy men of Wall street, who do not stop to fix a second glance even upon a celebrity nevertheless did look wonderingly when there appeared among them a man of distinguished manner, with a noble crown of iron-gray hair and the ruddy countenance of perfect health. They looked at him the second time because he appeared at noonday in that place of money making and lending in full evening dress. They did not know that was his custom or that they were looking at a man who once was speaker of the house of representatives, General Keifer. It so happened that there passed at almost the same moment John G. Carlisle, who was Keifer's successor as speaker, and David B. Henderson, who was the successor of Speaker Reed. So that in this city today all the former speakers of the house of representatives now living excepting Galusha A. Grow met by merest chance.

MARKET IS SLOW

Wheat Trading Is Narrow and Duluth Market Weak.

Lake Situation Is Greatly Restricting Trade—Flax Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 26.—The wheat market was very slow. The Duluth market was the weakest. The July option here lost ¼c, while in Chicago it was that much higher, in Minneapolis a shade lower and in New York ¼c higher. The September option in Duluth, however, was ⅜c higher and in Minneapolis ¼c higher. Receipts in the Northwest show some sign of picking up. Weather conditions were reported generally as favorable.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ¼d lower, Paris ½@1½c lower and Antwerp unchanged. Broomhall estimates Argentine shipments this week at 7,400,000 bushels and reports the weather as continuing very favorable there.

In the Duluth market trade is greatly restricted by the lake situation. There is no demand for wheat for all rail shipment because the boats are likely to begin moving at any minute. At the same time while a few boats are being offered it is at a rate that will not admit of doing any business.

Car receipts at Duluth were 21 against 9 a year ago and at Minneapolis 99 against 119 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 120 against 128 last year. Chicago received 12 against 8 last year. Winnipeg receipts were 96 against 208 a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 216,500 bus., last year, 267,800 bus. Shipments, 291,600 bus., last year, 242,900 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated, 106,634 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged. In the Chicago market, July corn closed ¼c higher. July oats closed, ¾-⅞c higher. Primary receipts of corn were, 277,244 bus., last year, 522,200 bus. Shipments, 264,264 bus., last year, 331,100 bus. Clearances were, 11,225 bus.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was quiet. July opened ¼c lower at 93¼-94c, dropped to 93c at 9:40 and advanced to 93½c at 10:35. It fell back to 93c at 10:40 and then advanced to 93¼c at 11:45 and again reacted closing at 93¼c. This was a loss of ¼c for the day. The September option closed ¼c higher at 81½c.

Cash offerings were small and receipts are slow.

Flax was dull and July closed unchanged at $1.08¾, after selling ¼c higher than that. Sept. was unchanged and October ¼c higher.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat in store—No. 1 hard, 96¾c; No. 1 northern, 95c; No. 2 northern, 92½c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 96¾c; No. 1 northern, 95¼c; No. 2 northern, 92¾c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Crosby, Chicago: Those who feel bullish on wheat are making statistical comparisons of the present with May, 1898, the year of the Leiter deal. They call attention to the fact that the visible supply in the United States today is smaller than it was that year. The total visible in the United States and Canada is about a million bushels greater than it was then. They do not, however, state that the wheat crop of 1897 in the world was only 2,226,000,000, while the wheat crop of 1903 was 3,323,000,000, nor that in the consequence thereof the world's visible supply is now 154,000,000 against 118,000,000 that time. Furthermore the world's crop of 1898 only proved to be 2,894,000,000 while the prospects for the present world's crop is much in excess of that.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It is the same nervous market with wide fluctuations and a small volume of trade. The shorts were more nervous and the buyers complacent. We think there are a good many scattered around of the latter. It was a very quiet market, but without much selling pressure. The small stock holders are rather confident and short sellers are timid. The cash situation is very dull and almost an entire absence of demand everywhere. The talk today is only dullness. We look for a good scalping market and think it should be kept in mind that the price is high.

Corn—There was not very much doing. Reports are, on the whole, favorable. There is nothing new in regard to the lake strike and the whole cash situation is slow. Most of the buying is in the way of covering shorts.

Oats—There is no doubt but that the market has been considerably oversold on the theory of a big acreage and a fine start for the crop. No change in the cash situation and it is on the whole, dull.

Provisions—There is the same buying by brokers for local account. This encouranges buying by local traders. The action of the market is better. We are unable to convince ourselves, however, that the buying is more than a scramble for shorts. Packers have almost uniformly been bearish on provisions and the outside speculator has carried the load. The distributive demand is fairly good.

Theron Logan, Chicago: It begins to dawn on me that with the outlook we have for our crop of wheat, taking into account the lateness of the spring wheat sowing to determine a reasonable expectation, that the later deliveries of wheat, notably September and December, are about low enough. It seems to me, taking conditions as they are, allowing that the government is correct in regard to the acreage abandoned, that a total crop of 575,000,000 for the United States is about all that can be reasonably looked for. Should by theory regrding this be correct, I do not think 80c wheat will hurt anyone. Of course, it is early to make predictions, and I do not claim to do so, except to set a reasonable expectation from the facts we have in hand. My judgment may be wrong, but I cannot see with ordinary weather from now on, how we can realize more than the amount I stated for a total winter and spring wheat crop. On the other hand, should anything happen to the Kansas crop, or more important still, should the three spring wheat states suffer from hot winds or early frosts, very high prices might rule, with the visible supply, so far as the United States is concerned, smaller per capita than has been known since records have been kept.

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—The market has ruled extremely dull all morning, fluctuating within a narrow range. The remark is firm at this writing and acts as if it would advance very easily. Bears have been rather aggressive lately and there is a fair short interest in the market. Believe wheat is a purchase around these prices.

Corn—Corn is steady today, inclined to follow wheat. Think it safe to buy corn around these prices.

Oats—Oats strong today on good commission house buying and shorts covering. Crop reports not as good as bears wouuld wish. Patten reported good buyer of oats this morning. Think you can buy oats for a turn.

Provisions—The provision list is strong this morning, packers buying most of the hogs, which are slow to strong. Provisions may see-saw back and forth for a while, but believe they are eventually ging higher.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—Wheat prices were not materially changed for the day. The feeling rather leaned to the bull side, although this sentiment is negatively expressed. The bears do not seem inclined to press the short side further, and the bulls are alert for some news on which to resume operations. A little more snap to the cash business would be a great help to them. Minneapolis stocks decreased 725,000 bushels so far this week, and the cash demand there was fair at ½c decline from yesterday. California advices were rather pessimistic. The weather is very hot and the estimates are for a 15,000,000 bushel crop. The weather was favorable today. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 10 cars.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Favorable Weather Had Bearish Influence on Wheat.

Chicago, May 26.—Increased receipts in the Northwest and generally favorable weather conditions had a bearish influence on the wheat market today. At the start prices were a trifle higher due to camparatively firm cables. The announcement of the death of a prominent operator, who was one of the principal shorts in the May option, caused a firm tone in that option, offsetting temporarily the effect of larger receipts and excellent weather. The opening on July was ¼c to ⅜c higher at 86¾c to 86⅞c. On quite general selling the price declined to 85¾c to 86⅛c. On quite general selling the price declined to 85⅝c, but steadied at 86c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 132 cars, against 96 cars last week and 166 cars a year ago.

The market was quite nervous the latter part of the day, and was influenced to a large extent by the action of May. Shorts bid up the price of that delivery and other options shared in the strength. July advancing to 86⅝c, the market closing firm with July up ¼c at 86¼c.

Firmness of wheat and higher cables imparted a strong tone to the corn market. Excessive rains in the corn belt brought out considerable covering by shorts. July opened ½c to 1½@2c higher at 48c to 48⅛@¼c. In sympathy with wheat the price eased off to 47¾@48c, but rallied to 48@48¼c. Local receipts were 305 cars, with 31 of contract grade.

A steady tone prevailed the remainder of the day, July closing with a gain of ¼c at 48⅛c.

A fair cash demand in addition to the firmness of other grains was a supporting feature in trading in oats. Commission houses were quite liberal sellers, but offerings were readily absorbed by scalpers. July opened unchanged to a shade higher, at 38⅜c to 38⅛@⅜c. After selling at 38c, the price rallied to 38¼c.

Smaller receipts of hogs with higher prices at the yards caused considerable covering in July ribs. The demand caused moderate advances throughout the entire provision list. July pork opened 5@7½c higher at $11.20@11.22½, and held at the high point. July lard was up 5c at $6.42½, and ribs were 2½c higher at $6.50.

DULLNESS RULED

In the Stock Market, Trading Being Very Small.

Many Traders Leaving In Anticipation of the Holiday.

New York, May 26.—Opening prices in the stock market swung narrowly from last night's level in both directions, with none of the leaders showing changes in excess of ½. Realty preferred rose ⅝ and St. Louis Southwestern preferred fell ¾.

The opening hesitancy was of brief duration, the entire market rising in sympathy with the demand for copper, United States Steel preferred, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and St. Paul. The first named gained 1¼, but other improvements did not exceed moderate fractions. Business contracted on the rise, but the market held firm up to 11 o'clock.

Business fell to such small volume that any wide movement of prices was impracticable. The early gains were not fully held. There was a gain of 1 in Northwestern preferred and of ⅞ in Realty preferred, and Detroit Southern preferred fell 1. Bonds were steady.

Special stocks made a decided response to small buying and selling orders, but the market generally was at a standstill. Hocking Valley preferred rose 1⅝ and Anaconda and Smelting common and preferred ⅝@1⅛. St. Louis Southwestern preferred ran off 1⅝ and the second mortgage bonds 3 points. Realty preferred got back below yesterday's close on realizing.

There was only about a yard of tape turned out between 1 and 2 o'clock and there were no fluctuations of consequence.

Prices were inclined to sag, but the movement was insignificant. Amalgamated Copper reacted 1. Northwestern preferred rose 3 and Brooklyn Gas fell 2½ and Toledo, St. Louis & Western 1¾. Some of the day's small gains were wiped out. The closing was about inactive.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: If possible, the market is duller than ever. The bulls are a little indifferous in Amalgamated and Brooklyn, and in the rest of the list there is hardly anything doing and prices are practically unchanged. Perhaps Smelter should be excepted in the above as there is little activity, and there are strong tips out to buy. Money is still cheap and this is the saving grace of the whole situation. We feel, however, that the cause of cheap money which is the dullness in general business throughout the country must be taken into consideration. Anything in the way of a bull market at this time does not seem probable.

• • •

Coe Commission company: The stock market was irregular and extremely dull, and has ruled that way all morning. Sales to noon, 79,600 shares. London did not offer any encouragement this morning, but the trade is looking forward to a favorable bank statement. While the market continues very narrow and of a professional character, there is no liquidation to speak of, and we believe stocks are about as low as they will get.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: The newspapers have been full of the most bearish kind of news and talk for the last week, but in spite of it, the market obstinately refuses to go down, and the price of stocks is slightly higher now than last Thursday. It looks to be sold to a standstill at present, and I think it is a dangerous market to be short of, as an aggressive movement against the shorts may cause a very sharp advance. Unless something unfavorable occurs to cause liquidation, I believe that this move will continue.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: Today's market calls for little comment. Its only feature was extreme dullness, which at times lapsed into stagnation. Besides some strength in Smelters stocks there was nothing more than the usual professional efforts to make ⅛ and ¼'s. In view of the double holiday on Saturday and Monday many are making plans to leave at once and the prospects are that there will not be much doing tomorrow.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, May 26.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $168,854,485; gold, $68,913,481; silver, $23,611,663; U. S. notes, $8,155,989; treasury notes of 1890, $78,595; national bank notes, $13,439,834; total receipts this day, $1,329,875; total receipts this month, $36,533,594; total receipts this year, $488,145,375; total expenditures this day, $1,740,660; total expenditures this month, $90,210,000; total expenditures this year, $539,363,599; deposits in national banks, $125,412,140.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 26.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 6@10 points on the old and of 16@6 points on the new crop months, which was rather better than due on the weak cables and generally favorable weather advices. The early map did not show rain in the Atlantic coast sections where needed, but the forecast was for showers over the belt quite generally today and tomorrow and the prospect in this direction was considered excellent. The decline of yesterday, however, seemed to have built up something of a scattering short interest and there was enough covering on the opening decline to absorb offerings and hold the market fairly steady. Trading was not as active as recently.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 15 points lower; middling uplands, 13.05; middling gulf, 13.30; sales, 349 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 12.63; June, 12.63; July, 12.80; August, 12.35; September, 11.15; October, 10.77; November, 10.68; December, 10.67; January, 10.69.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: On a larger volume of transactions coppers made a small net advance in London today. As a whole coppers here were very quiet. The general market showed better buying than selling. Some banking interests are talking bullish on the ground that the prices have remained for months at this level indicates that strong interests have been accumulating stocks. Traders as a rule are bearish.

• • •

Hayden, Stone & Co. to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Our market today outside of Amalgamated was a few odd lots with practically no change in prices. The strength of Amalgamated tended to give our list a stronger tone, but did not help trading. With such a dull market there is nothing to be said.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

BROWN PLEADS GUILTY.

He Pays Small Fine—Mrs. Brown's Side of It.

Joseph Brown, the barber who was arraigned in the municipal court yesterday afternoon on the charge of assaulting his nephew, afterwards changed his plea from guilty to not guilty. Judge Windom fined him $1 and costs.

There being no trial of the case the story of Mrs. Brown was not heard in court, but she desires to make a statement. She says:

"Mr. Brown says that my son broke one of the windows in his house. If there is a broken window, neither myself nor several of the neighbors have been able to find it. The trouble grew out of a quarrel between my son and Mr. Brown's boys of 8 and 9 years. They were throwing water at each other with a hose when Mr. Brown interfered in his son's behalf. Now, if any ordinary spanking had been administered I would not have been impelled to take the action I did, but when I found the boy bruised and hurt and with a large welt on his head, I made inquiries and was informed by the other boys that Mr. Brown had kicked him and beaten him with his fists. I felt that an assault such as that should be dealt with by the law and caused the arrest."

Suit on a Lease.

Judge Cant is trying today the suit of Eda Eckstein against Charles J. Johnson. The action is one in which it is sought to recover the rent alleged to be due on a lease for a building which Johnson is claimed to have vacated after agreeing to keep it for a year at a $50 per month rental.

In Judge Dibell's room the court is listening to the arguments in the case of F. W. Wilcox and others against John D. Brady and others. The action is one in which it is sought to recover $2500 on an alleged contract.

In Judge Ensign's room a jury is trying the personal injury case of Karl Tuv against the Lesure Lumber company. Tuv had some fingers injured while working in the Lesure mill, and he sues for $1000 damages.

Five Cent Grain Rate Not Attractive to Shippers.

Capt. Howell's Statement Made to the Civic Federation.

Vessels continued to be offered for cargoes at Duluth at five cents a bushel but no shipper will pay that rate. Most of them question the report that one charter has been at five cents but The Herald received the information from a reliable source. It is evident, however, that the instance must have been a special one where the party to whom the grain was consigned was very anxious to get it.

One shipper said this morning that he did not believe a three cent rate would be accepted and that so far as he knew the shippers are making no offers to vessel men.

ARE STANDING PAT.

Local Masters and Pilots Are Not Receding.

Members of Duluth Harbor, No. 44, of the Masters' and Pilots' association, will give out very little information as to what transpired at their meeting last night. After the meeting they wired Capt. Howell at Cleveland that the members here are standing firm.

The local branch was notified by telegram from Cleveland to disregard the sailing of the Saxona, as her master and first mate are father and son. This is taken to mean that the sailing of the vessel has no direct bearing on the general situation as far as the masters and pilots are concerned. Members say that they have also been advised that many false reports are being sent out from Cleveland that are calculated to weaken the position of the masters and pilots.

THE MASTERS SIDE.

Capt. Howell's Statement to Civic Federation.

District Captain Paul Howell, of the Masters' and Pilots' association, at the request of the president of the Cleveland National Civic federation, this week wrote a letter containing a full statement concerning the causes leading up to the present deadlock between the Masters' and Pilots' association and the Lake Carriers' association. The communication, containing several points never before published, is one of a great deal of interest. It reads as follows:

"Dear Sir: As agreed upon in our conversation on the twenty-first instant to furnish you in writing the causes leading up to the present deadlock between the Lake Carriers' association and the American Association of Masters and Pilots of Steam Vessels, I will endeavor to give you as fair a statement as possible from our side of the controversy.

"The Masters' and Pilots' association in this district contains about 300 members, all of whom hold government licenses to operate steamers of all sizes and all classes on the Great Lakes. Its greatest growth during the last few years and this growth can be explained by the abuses that have been heaped upon the masters by the undergraduates of these large lake corporations; and also by the wide differences existing in the wages paid in the same class of boats, in identically the same trade, and other objectionable conditions which wanted rectifying.

"One of the most flagrant abuses of last year was the case of the steamer Northern King, whose captain was dismissed unjustly. The matter was taken up by the association with the result that after keeping the boat at the dock for two weeks in the vain attempts to get a crew for her, the captain was reinstated without loss of time, and now in our meeting with the Lake Carriers' association it is admitted that the captain should not have been discharged; as an individual this captain would have been helpless to accomplish anything, but with our association to help him he got his just demands.

"In the month of January of this year our advisory board met, composed entirely of captains, most of them men in active service. A wage scale was drawn up, and some conditions asked for, which was to be presented to the Lake Carriers' association when we met them. These conditions, after a great deal of discussion, were finally almost covered, but when we came to the wage scale they would not accept ours. When asked for one from them for consideration they agreed we should have one, but instead of giving us one the next morning they presented us with a proposition recommending their members to pay the same wages paid last year, or in other words, simply recommended that Mr. So-and-So give his captain $1200, and Mr. So-and-So pay his captain for just the same kind of boat and same conditions $1900. This was referred back to the different harbors and was, of course, almost unanimously rejected. As they gave us no wage scale to consider, this deadlock, of course, followed.

"They have legislated the captain out of his authority on board ship, by every power they could command. They say to the master, you must not put this man to work for

SWINDLER CAUGHT

Passes Bogus Checks and Gets Money From Western Bankers.

Was School Teacher In Iowa and Is Well Educated.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 26.—The bankers of Iowa are jubilant over the capture of Homer M. Vorhees, whom they pronounce one of the smoothest and most dangerous swindlers who have operated in the state for years. His victims among bankers during that period have averaged almost two a day. The amounts of the checks have been small, in order to avoid suspicion, but the number successfuly negotiated is large enough to have assured Vorhees a very comfortable income.

Vorhees has lived for many years in Ringgold county, where he taught school for a time. He is about 30 or 35 years of age, has a good education, and is prepossessing in appearance. He had a good reputation up to the time of his forgery. This was a check drawn on the bank at Diagonal, and cashed at the Citizens' Exchange bank at Benton, in which a number of Des Moines capitalists are interested. For this first offense Vorhees is now under indictment at Mt. Ayr, but will not be given up to the authorities there until after his trial here.

During the first part of April he worked through Southeastern Iowa and Northern Missouri, going to Chicago over Sunday, striking down through Illinois to the territory around St. Louis. About April 20 he shifted to Minnesota, in the neighborhood of Albert Lea; from there he came to Iowa, and was in Des Moines April 25, and also cashed a check here.

In Northern Iowa Vorhees left a trail of checks in Mason City, Marshalltown, Hampton, Tama, and other places, from which reports are just arriving, and moved down into Southeastern Iowa working through Clarinda Council Bluffs and Missouri Valley to Correctionville, where he was apprehended by Cashier E. C. Bailey.

The checks presented were some of them drawn upon a bank in Bloomington, Ill., and some upon a trust company in St. Louis. They were in both cases signed by A. W. Taylor, treasurer.

The Minnesota authorities are anxious to get him, as they say they have a clear case against him.

Bankers who are victims of the fraudulent checks have volunteered to come to Des Moines as witnesses, and there seems to be a very strong case prepared against Vorhees.

City Engineer Answers Capt. Potter's Criticisms of Bridge Approaches.

Perfectly Safe and Best That Can Be Had For Money.

"Government engineers seldom have to take into consideration the monetary side of an engineering task," said City Engineer McGilvray this morning, in referring to Capt. Charles L. Potter's criticism of the aerial bridge approaches at the meeting of the public affairs committee of the Commercial club, last evening.

"In private or municipal engineering it it is always necessary to figure down any work to about 25 or 50 per cent less than what it should cost. The great cry is economy. The government engineers always have an ample appropriation and can do the work in the way it should be done.

"With the bridge approaches we simply had to do the best we could with the money we had. Those who have followed the matter at all, know the fight that was necessary to get the appropriation of $9000. If the appropriation had been any more, I don't see how it could have been secured, and if we had made it $12,000 as Capt. Potter suggests, it would have been simply turned down by the council, for that amount would not have been available.

"The statement that there are to be no gates is absurd. Does Capt. Potter imagine for an instant that we would build a jumping-off place eight feet above the canal piers and a score of feet above the water and not have gates?

"Capt. Potter thinks an eight per cent grade too steep. There is a ten per cent grade on Third avenue west, and an eleven per cent grade on First avenue east. It was a choice between a ten per cent grade with a short landing or an eight per cent grade without the landing, and we decided on the latter. There will be a curb and all that will be necessary for a teamster to do will be to give his front wheels a slight turn and his cart will stand on the grade without any difficulty. Then the teamsters can see the car approaching and it would be a very easy matter to wait at the bottom of the approach until the cars is under way, and time his arrival at the top so as to be there when the car arrives.

"In regard to the landing for the foot passengers, I fail to see any merit in Capt. Potter's position. In the first place there will be a landing for them, which will accommodate about 100 passengers, which is all the car will carry. If this landing becomes overcrowded is it any hardship for them to stand on an eight per cent grade? People don't kick about standing on the side hills of Duluth, many of which are much steeper than the proposed grade of the approaches.

"Of course I realize that Capt. Potter's plan would make a more desirable approach, but if his ideas in regard to expenditures were followed in all lines of municipal work, the city would be bankrupt in a very short time.

"The approaches can be improved when necessary, and when the money is available. If after a time a landing is found to be necessary, it will be a very simple matter to build it, if the money is available. The grade can also be decreased. All that will be necessary for these changes will be a little concrete filling.

"The truth of the matter is that the only reason why those approaches were not built of wood, was because the canal piers were of concrete. Wooden approaches would have been about 50 per cent cheaper, so Capt. Potter should be content with the $9000 plans."

A MIX-UP IN RELATIONSHIP

Court Is Disentangling the Affairs of the Oneida Indians.

Appleton, Wis., May 26.—The determining of titles by descent of the lands allotted by the government to the Oneida Indians is one of the most difficult tasks that has ever come up in Outagamie county courts. The proceedings will form the foundation of all future transactions. Thirty-eight cases have already been disposed of.

The allotment was made about a quarter of a century ago. Each Indian and his squaw was given between eighty-five and ninety-five acres and each child between 28 and 38 acres. Many of these beneficiaries are dead and the proceedings are held to determine the heirs entitled to the property. Much of the land is valuable and if placed on the market would bring $75 an acre.

The Indians know very little about their relatives and still less about their ancestors. Some of them are uncertain about the names of their parents and others cannot tell how many brothers and sisters they have, or what has become of them. In many instances no attention has been paid to the data of a death or to the age of the heirs.

The "mix-up" in relationship and absence of family records makes it necessary for a large number of witnesses to be examined in each case. The court room is frequently crowded to the door with representatives of the reservation. The witnesses are of all ages and few can talk English. They have an interpreter, however, that is an expert. A peculiar thing has been noticed about their language during the taking of testimony and that is its brevity. It frequently requiring a long sentence in English to convey the meaning of a few syllables.

DEATH FROM THE HEAT.

Chicago, May 26.—The first death here from heat prostration this season was reported today. Frank Williams, colored, was overcome on the street and died at the county hospital.

WEST DULUTH

For a time yesterday afternoon West Duluth people residing in the vicinity of the blast furnaces were of the opinion that St. Louis bay had claimed its first victim of the season. There appeared to be a sure enough drowning, until the unfortuate man in the case, giving his name as Charles Casket, of Superior, suddenly rose from the water and scrambled up the river bank, dripping wet, but otherwise none the worse for his adventure.

Casket recently purchased a small canoe, and was trying it for the first time yesterday. Paddling did not get up the desired amount of speed, so the young man, who seems to be something of an expert in handling sails, raised a piece of canvas on a mast, which had been previously provided for the purpose. The craft is a tippy one, without a sail, but this addition, with the brisk northeast wind and high waves, made riding in it a very ticklish proposition, as Casket soon found.

All went fairly well while he was driving straight before the wind, but when he attempted to tack back, as he did presently, the boat suddenly went over and he was precipitated into the cold water. He was seen to struggle with the unruly craft a few minutes, evidently trying to right it again, then he suddenly disappeared. The few people who witnessed the accident believed that he had been seized with a cramp, and that he had sunk. While some ran for a boat, others kept their eyes on the drifting cance, failing to see the head of Casket, who had abandoned his trying position to try and swim to shore, 100 yards distant. This he succeeded in doing, minus his shoes and coat. The course he took was obscured by a point of land, so that it was with joyful surprise that the watchers saw him coming up over the bank. The canoe was brought in by men who went out in a row boat, and Casket started for home. The last seen of him he was vigorously plying the paddle. No sail was in sight.

SAVES DROWNING BOY.

Freeman H. Randall, a 15-year-old West Duluth boy, yesterday saved a companion, Charlie Gundry, from drowning in the St. Louis bay. The boys were on the Duluth transfer bridge at the time of the accident. They were standing near the edge of the structure, which is built about six feet above the water, when Gundry lost his balance and fell into the bay. He found it difficult to swim while burdened with his clothes, and would probably have sunk but for the assistance rendered him by Randall, who jumped from the bridge after him and helped him to shore. Randall is an expert swimmer.

TO MET NEXT WEEK.

The committee appointed at the last council meeting to confer with the owners of property at the site of the proposed city dock, in West Duluth, at the foot of Ramsey street, will not meet the owners in question before some day next week, owing to the inability of some of the committeemen to be present at such a meeting this week. It was at first planned to hold the conference next Saturday. It is proposed to ask the owners in question to donate sufficient property for a dock site. If this is done a city dock may be started this year, while if it is necessary to purchase ground for a site, the present condition of the fund from which the money would have to come will not permit of a start being made this season.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

James McDonald, formerly of the firm of McDonald Bros., has sold his interest to his brother John, and has gone to his old home in Saginaw, Mich., where he will engage in business as soon as he finds a suitable opening.

On account of numerous other attractions next Monday evening, the West Duluth council of Modern Samaritans has decided to postpone until a later date the patriotic entertainment which the members had planned for the evening of Memorial day.

The funeral of Catherine Jordan, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jordan, 828 Fifty-seventh avenue west, was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the St. James Catholic church. Interement was at Calvary cemetery.

Fred Howe left for his claim in the Big Fork country this afternoon.

M. P. Doyle, of Bay View Heights, has returned from Carrington, N. D. Mr. Doyle says that business is a trifle dull through the Dakotas just now.

Edward Jensen and John Wimness are planning on visiting the World's fair at St. Louis during the month of August. To insure cool quarters and a good time they say they are going to take a tent and cook along with them, and camp outdoors while in the Missouri city.

Eight-room house for sale, 50-foot lot, nice lawn, fine shade trees, $135 hen house, big strawberry patch, for $1400. Cost $2600. Terms easy. D. Adams, 1922 West Michigan street.

The residence of G. Meline, 6211 West Green street, was slightly damaged by fire yesterday afternoon. The fire department extinguished the blaze before serious damage was done.

Joseph Eaton, foreman at the Merrill & Ring mill, is visiting in Minneapolis.

Michael Whalen has returned from Bay City, Mich., where he was called by the serious illness of his father.

A party, consisting of Archie McCloud, Gust Olson, Joseph La Flam, Peter Bushy and Edward Gibbon, have gone on a three-days' fishing trip to the Cloquet river.

BLUFF CALLED.

Kansas Editor Taken Up By Governor Bailey.

Emporia, Kas., May 26.—William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Daily Gazette, has been offered the position of state accountant without pay under Governor Bailey. Mr. White has not yet accepted.

The offer made by Governor Bailey is the result of an editorial written by Mr. White last week in which he declared that he would gladly accept the place of state accountant without a salary. He expressed the belief that a state accountant could find plenty of work to do in checking up the expenditures of the state officers.

The place of state accountant was created by the legislature of 1903 and pays a salary of $2000 a year, but has never been filled.

BANK PRESIDENT INDICTED.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 26.—W. E. Brown, president of the failed First National bank of Storm Lake, has been indicted upon two counts by the federal grand jury, which charge embezzlement of $74,000 of the bank's funds and the making of false and fraudulent reports to the comptroller of the currency concerning the condition of the bank.

OVERSUBSCRIBED AT LONDON.

London, May 26.—The small proposition of the Cuban loan of $35,000,000 available for British subscription was quickly oversubscribed. The lists closed at midday. A premium of 1⅜ was quoted. It was estimated that the British share was oversubscribed two or three times.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.—

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, which was duly executed and delivered by Peter P. Bjerre and Ellen M. Bjerre, his wife, mortgagors, to John F. Duncan, mortgagee, bearing date November sixteenth (16th), 1893, and which was duly recorded in the register of deeds' office for St. Louis county, Minnesota, on December eighth (8th), 1893, at eight o'clock a. m., in Book ninety-eight (98) of mortgages, on page one hundred seventy-four (174); and, whereas, Clara L. Duncan has been duly appointed executrix of the will of said John F. Duncan, deceased, by the Orphans Court of Union County, Pennsylvania, wherein said John F. Duncan resided at the time of his death, and a duly authenticated copy of her appointment as such executrix has been filed for record in the office of the register of deeds for said St. Louis County, Minnesota; such default consisting in the failure to pay the principal sum of eight hundred ($800) dollars thereby secured, and interest thereon from the 1st day of November, 1894, and also in the non-payment of taxes for the years 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1901 and 1902, and special assessment for street improvements, all of which have become due, and which said John F. Duncan was compelled to pay, and did pay, amounting to the sum of $152.75;

And, whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, upon said mortgage debt, at the date of this notice, the sum of fourteen hundred four ($1404) dollars, principal and interest, together with the additional sum of $152.76 for taxes and assessments so paid.

And, whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form, which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned, and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: Lot numbered twelve (12), in block numbered two hundred three (203), West Duluth, Third Division, according to the recorded plat thereof in the office of the register of deeds for St. Louis County, Minnesota; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of said St. Louis County, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the thirteenth (13th) day of June, A. D. 1904, at ten (10) o'clock a. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and said assessments and taxes paid thereon, and fifty dollars attorneys' fee stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated April 28th, 1904.

CLARA L. DUNCAN,
Executrix of the will of John F. Duncan, deceased.
FRANCIS W. SULLIVAN,
Attorney for Executrix.
Duluth Evening Herald, April-28-May-5-12-19-26-June-2, 1904.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one thousand and twenty-one ($1,021.00) dollars, principal and interest, which is claimed to be due and is actually due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage with a power of sale therein contained, duly executed and delivered by Tracy R. Fairchild and Rossanna Fairchild, his wife, mortgagors, to The Farmers Trust Company, Limited, of Manchester, England, a corporation, mortgagee, bearing date the first day of March, 1894, and duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of St. Louis county, Minnesota, on the 26th day of March, 1894, at 10:50 a. m., in Book 99 of Mortgages, on page 104;

Which said mortgage together with the debt thereby secured was duly assigned by said The Farmers Trust Company, Limited, mortgagee, to Charles A. Turning, by an instrument in writing, bearing date the 21st day of April, 1904, and recorded in the office of the said register of deeds of St. Louis county, Minnesota, on the 16th day of May, 1904, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Book 184 of Mortgages, on page 511.

And no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz.: All that tract or parcel of land in the county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota described as follows, to-wit: lot numbered one hundred and sixty-seven (167) in block numbered forty-two (42), Third (3rd) Division of Duluth Proper, according to the accepted plat thereof of record in the office of the register of deeds in and for said county of St. Louis, with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said St. Louis county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth in said county and state, on the first day of July, 1904, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, May 19th, 1904.

JAPANESE HOT IN PURSUIT OF THE RUSSIANS, WHO ARE RETREATING RAPIDLY TOWARDS PORT ARTHUR

THE PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY IN FAVOR OF UNION

The Northern Body Votes to Unite With the Cumberlands.

Vote Was So Unanimous on Question It Was Not Counted.

Buffalo, May 27.—The Presbyterian general assembly of the United States has declared in favor of union with the Cumberland Presbyterian church by a vote so nearly unanimous that it was not counted.

Rev. Charles R. Erdman presented a report from the committee on ministerial relief before the question of union was taken up. The committee requested that the name of the committee be not changed to "board of pensions" as proposed.

It also recommended that an apportionment be made among the churches of the assembly of the money needed for ministerial relief.

The report was adopted.

Rev. Teunis Hamlin, of Washington, read the report of the college endowment commission. It was adopted.

Rev. Joseph Cochran, Philadelphia, presented a report of the special committee on alliances. It was adopted and the committee continued.

FRENCH CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES CONSIDERS VATICAN RUPTURE

Hot-Headed Deputies Demand That All Relations With the Pontiff Be Severed and That the Concordat Be Denounced.

Paris, May 27.—The chamber of deputies was packed today in anticipation of a tumultuous debate on the subject of the rupture of diplomatic relations between France and the Vatican. The galleries were crowded to overflowing and many ladies and several of the leading clergy were present. United States Ambassador Porter and a number of other diplomats occupied seats in the reserved galleries. Prior to the opening of the session the council of ministers arranged a final plan of government action, contemplating two days' debate before the resolutions of the various parliamentary groups are adopted, the resolutions indicating that the government's course in recalling Ambassador Nisard will be approved without immediate insistence upon the abrogation of the concordat.

M. Meunier (Radical Republican) opened the debate with a fiery speech calling on the government to take irrevocable, reconcilliable measures, including the suppression of the French embassy at the Vatican.

M. Lazies (Anti-Semite) created a tumult by demanding of Foreign Minister Delcasse information as to who was responsible for the divulgence of the pope's criticisms upon France, and declaring it was not a friend of France. He referred to Emperor William's recent visit to Italy and his subsequent speech antagonistic to France, intimating that this was the possible source of divulgence.

M. Aleard (Socialist) declared that the recall of M. Nisard was not sufficient. He protested against the feebleness of the government and demanded a definite rupture of relations with the Vatican and the denunciation of the Concordat. The debate proceeded amid excitement. Foreign Minister Delcasse and Premier Combes will reserve their statements until the close of the debate.

ILLINOIS BUILDING AT THE WORLD'S FAIR IS DEDICATED

St. Louis, May 27.—Marked by the most elaborate ceremones that have yet attended the dedication of a state World's Fair building, the Illinois pavilion was today formaly opened to the public by Governor Richard Yates.

After the call to order the Rev. J. A. Lucas, of Carlinville, Ill., pronounced the invocation. The reports of the charmen of the several committees were made to the president of the Illinois commission, H. M. Dunlap. Mr. Dunlap delivered an address, at the conclusion of which he delivered the state pavilion to the people of Illinois, represented by Governor Yates. Addresses by Governor Yates and President Francis, of the World's fair, followed. After an informal lunch there was a reception in the pavilion.

The Bontoc women's tribunal, a court of justice peculiar to the Bontoc tribe of the Phillippine islands, established solely for the purpose of settling disputes between the feminine members of the tribe, was dedicated today at the Igorrote village in the Philippine reservation.

An elaborate model of the national capitol at Washington, D. C., arrived today. Space has been assigned for it near the exhibit of the department of state in the United States government building.

Owing to the large number of applications for cards of admission to the French national pavilion, it was announced today that the general public will be admitted without cards every day, except Sundays and Wednesdays.

HUNDREDS OF CLERKS DISMISSED

New York, May 27.—Wall street is having such a period of business depression as it has not experienced in years, and one result of it is that hundreds of clerks have been dismissed.

One of the largest operators on the stock exchange says he believes that no less than 2500 clerks and other employes have been dismissed by the brokerage and banking houses in the last two weeks. The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. was among the first to reduce its working force. Others followed suit in rapid succession. One firm has sent notices to all of its force of clerks and stenographers, informing them that they must either accept a 20 per cent cut in salaries, or take vacations without pay.

BEDE TO HAVE HEADQUARTERS

In Duluth This Summer —Will Not Return Soon.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Stillman H. Bingham, private secretary to Representative J. Adam Bede, and wife, leave Washington on Sunday for home. Mrs. Bingham will, however, stop off en route at Notre Dame, Ind., as the guest of her cousin, Miss Alice M. Joyce, of Ashland, Wis., who graduates from the university this year. Mr. Bingham will make a two days' stop at St. Paul prior to going to Duluth. Upon his arrival in Duluth Mr. Bingham will busy himself with opening headquarters for Congressman Bede in the Providence building. Mr. Bede does not expect to arrive in Duluth until after the national Republican convention has completed its labors at Chicago. Mr. Bingham goes ahead to prepare the headquarters and generally get the affairs of his chief into shape for the summer's work.

Porter Does Not Want to Be Governor.

New York, May 27—Prominent Republicans here who have written to Gen. Horace Porter, ambassador to France, favoring the movement to make him a candidate for governor of New York, have received replies saying that he is in no sense an aspirant for that position, and urging that his name be not presented to the Republican nominating convention.

PRISONER CURSES THE COURT WHEN SEMTENCED.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 27.—Paul Roberts cursed the court when sentenced here today to five years for robbery. He was wanted at Sioux City for complicity in the Luton bank robbery. Frank Gunn, who was arrested on the same charge in St. Paul, was sentenced to four years.

THE RUSSIAN WAR OFFICE IN THE DARK

Knows But Little of What Is Going On Around Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 27.—Owing to the fact that the communication with the army at Port Arthur is cut off, the war office here admits that it is not in a position to question the Tokio and other reports that the Japanese have carried the outer works at Kin Chou. But from what is known of the disposition of Gen. Stoessel's forces, the authorities apparently convinced that only the old town of Kin Chou was taken. The heights to which the Russians are said to have retired are realy the key to the entrance of the Kwan Tung peninsula. They are situated eastward of the town. They are 2100 feet high and are called Liao-Hu-Shan. The position was strongly fortified and was of exceptional natural strength, due to the fact that it could not be reached by the guns of warships. If this position has been taken the war office believes there must have been very heavy losses on the side of the attackers. It is not believed that the Japanese will venture to cross the neck, as an advance with this position (Liao-Hu-Shan) in their rear would subject them to attack both from Liao-Hu-Shan and from Gen. Stoessel's main force, which Tokio dispatches say is across the lower end of the Neck.

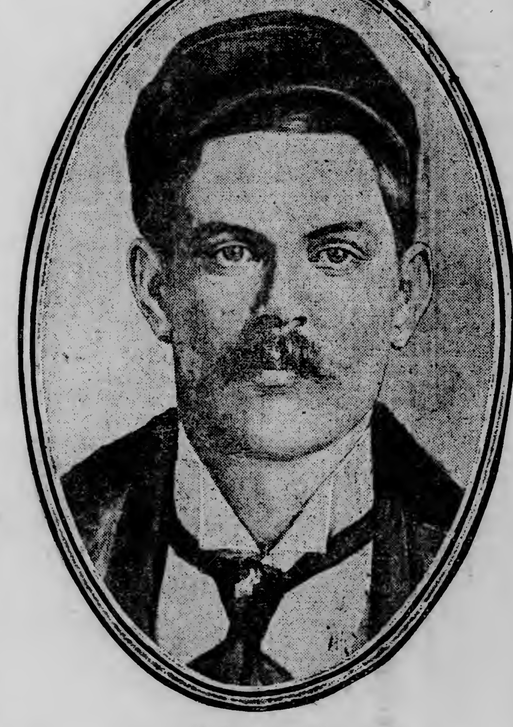
The statement made by refugees from Port Dalny that the Japanese have occupied Shan Shi Li Pu, almost due west of Dalny, is discredited, although Rear Admiral Wittsoeft has reported that the Japanese bombarded the coast near that point.

St. Petersburg is filled with all sorts of rumors regarding fighting, which the general staff has for three days been convinced is in progress in the lower part of the Liao Tung peninsula, but nothing official has been received. For instance a story is going the rounds that Gen. Fock, who is in command of the Russian advanced position at Kin Chou got between two of the enemy's columns inflicting heavy loss on them, but that the news is being held from announcement until today, the anniversary of Emperor Nicholas' coronation. A special dispatch from Liao Yang also repeats with slight variations the report cabled to the Associated Press May 23, regarding the loss of 15,000 Japanese before Kin Chou, saying that the enemy columns got into a cross-fire from Gen. Fock's artillery. This seems to have no real foundation in fact.

The idea that a Japanese movement upon Gen. Kuropatkin's position is awaiting upon the result of the present operations against Port Arthur is strengthened. A Russian correspondent of the Associated Press at Liao Yang last night mentioned the existence at the Russian headquarters there of the belief that there has been a change in the enemy's plans.

Gen. Kuroki is bringing up heavy supplies and guns to his position at Feng Wang Cheng.

M'DONALD ACQUITTED OF SCHAFER MURDER



JAMES McDONALD.

Bedford, Ind., May 27.—James McDonald, who has been on trial for the murder of Sarah Katherine Schafer, the pretty school teacher of this city, was acquitted by the jury this afternoon.

MAN HAS ATTACK OF INSANITY IN COURT

Chicago, May 27.—Choking and gasping and with eyes rolling with terror, John Mahnken, accused of fraudulently identifying the body of Mrs. Frank B. Greenwald, an Iroquois fire victim, in order to steal her money, suddenly jumped to his feet in Judge Clifford's court today and pointed frantically at an imaginary spectre, which he thought stood confronting him. While the spectators looked on in terror, the man frothed at the mouth and waved his arms wildly in the air. He was overpowered and thrown to the floor, where it took half a dozen police officers to hold him. Paroxysms followed each other and he had to be manacled and taken into an anteroom.

When quiet was finally restored Mahnken's lawyer decided to let the case go to the jury without argument. Almost immediately the twelve men filed back and the foreman announced the verdict "guilty."

If the insanity was feigned it failed to move the jury. The technical charge against Mahnken was perjury, and it was proved that he had taken the body of Mrs. Greenwald from a morgue and had it buried as his aunt. His motive was to gain possession of the $400 found on the body.

Desperate Night Attack Made on Nan Shan Hill.

Position Was Captured After a Fierce Battle.

Russians Had Elaborate Scheme For Defense.

London, May 27.—The Japanese legation has received the following official dispatch from Tokio:

"Kin Chou and all the heights in its vicinity have been taken and our troops are pushing the Rusians toward Port Arthur."

Tokio, May 27.—The Japanese army swept the Russians from Kin Chou last evening and in a desperate night attack, stormed the almost impregnable position of the Russians on Nan Shan hill, west of Talien Wan. The battle raged in the hills all through the night and fragmentary telegrams from the Japanese headquarters report that the engagement is still in progress and that the Japanese are still pursuing the Russians south from Nan Shan and the head of Talien Wan bay. The Russians had made elaborate preparations to check the Japanese movement south on the Liao Tung peninsula toward Port Arthur. They had fortified the high ground on the south shore of Talien Wan bay their works extending to the east and west. The extreme Russian right was at Hushang Tao and the extreme left at Nan Shan hill. This hill was the strongest part of the line, a series of batteries, strongly emplaced, crowded its crest, while rifle pits extended around its sides. Mines had been placed lower down on this hill and around the base, on the northern and eastern sides were stretched well made wire entaglements. Another line of defences also protected with wire entaglements extended from Yeng Chia Tung near the head of Talien Wan bay, due north of Liu Chia Tien, which lies south of Kin Chow.

A strong Russian force was posted at Kin Chow. It consisted of infantry and artillery.

The Japanese first occupied the line of hills to the east of Kin Chow. Their position had formed an almost perfect right angle, showing its southern front to Talien Wan and its western front to Kin Chow. Chiu Li Chan village was the apex of this angle, the extreme right of the Japanese lines rested at Chen Cha Tien, which is almost due north of Chiu Li Chan, while the extreme left was at Chaitsu Ho, a village due east of Chiu Li Chan. Back of this angle the attacking force assembled in complete security.

The Russians apparently attempted to draw the Japanese attack last Saturday, for their batteries opened fire slowly on the enemy on that day. The Japanese, however, refused to be drawn until the positions of the Russians, their guns and their strength had been fully developed. To this end the Japanese began a series of careful reconnaissances, their officers working their way close enough to the Russian position to draw the enemy's fire. They thus secured fragments of shells for the purpose of ascertaining the calibre of the Russian guns. They discovered the batteries on Nan Shan hill included four howitzers, of about 15-centrimetres calibre, ten old style cannon of between 9 and 15-centimetres calibre, and two quick-fire guns of 12-centimetres.

The Japanese discovered also a number of large emplacements but they did not learn the number of guns contained therein. These emplacements faced to the north and to the east. The guns fired by the Russians developed a range of 8500 metres. Eight heavy guns posted on the Russian right in the vicinity of Hushang Tao also were discovered and another strong Russian position developed by these reconnaissances was on another hill southwest of Nan Shan hill, where the Russians had a series of shelter trenches.

On the shore of Talien Wan bay, close to the head of the bay, the Russians had established a series of positions. Here were set up the searchlights which nightly played over the Japanese angle in the hills to the northeast. Further reconnaissances developed the fact that west of Liu Chan the Russians had no defences. Extending to the northward from Yen Chia Tien to the west coast of the Liao Tung peninsula there were no defences, whatever, except the force posted at Kin Chow. This gap in the defense was a fatal defect in the Russian position and when it was perceived the Japanese extended their right to the north and east, enveloping Kin Chow and the Russian extreme right. The Japanese left also was extended to Chia Tung on the shore of Talien Wan bay and the center moved forward.

Wednesday morning at 5:30 the Japanese attacked Kin Chou, and for three hours they had an artillery duel with the batteries on Nan Shan hill. The Russian gunners searched the Japanese lines with their fire, but failed to inflict much damage.

The battle was resumed at dawn on Thursday. Three Japanese gunboats then entered Kin Chou bay and, in cooperation with the artillery on shore, shelled the Russian positions on Nan Shan hill.

A Russian gunboat in Talien Wan bay steamed close to the shore and shelled the Japanese left.

From dawn the forces on both sides hammered away at each other. At an early hour the Japanese infantry moved forward, and at 5:20 Thursday morning they entered Kin Chou, the Russians retiring to the south. The fighting continued into Thursday night, the Japanese pressing to the south and storming Nan Shan hill. They followed the retreating Russians through the southern hills.

The reports received here fail to cover the events on the Russian right. It is probable, however, that the Russians have abandoned these positions.

No information is given concerning losses, they probably were heavy on both sides.

Tokio, May 27.—The Japanese troops have swept all the Russians from their defenses west of Talien Wan bay. It is now improbable that the latter will be capable of offering any further serious resistance in the territory north of Port Arthur.

Vice Admiral Togo has now established a complete blockade around the southern end of the Liao Tung peninsula. This completely envelops Port Arthur from the seaward, and probably marks the opening of the final investment of the town and its fortifications.

Washington, May 27.—Minister Griscom cables the state department from Tokio that the Japanese have captured Kin Chou and are marching southward.

KIN CHOU VALUABLE

To the Japanese as a Base of Supplies.

London, May 27.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister, discussing the recent fighting north of Port Arthur said today:

"Kin Chou will be occupied as a first base. The neighboring hills will be strongly fortified in order that they can be held indefinitely. For food supplies and ammunition Port Dalny will be second base.

"The possession of Kin Chou will be of invaluable aid in the campaign aginst Port Arthur. The hills command positions of the country for several miles in the direction of Port Arthur. I presume from the action at Kin Chou that the Russians intend to make another stand at Port Dalny. Their justification for defending Kin Chou must have been the belief that their numbers were able to cope with ours, so I expect that practically all the available Russian troops have been moved out from Port Arthur in the attempt to head off the investment."

THREE SUBMARINES

Said By Russians to Be at Port Arthur.

Newchwang, May 27.—The Russian authorities here declare that a Japanese battleship has been sunk by a submarine boat and that three craft of this class are now at Port Arthur and another enroute to Vladivostok by rail.

A French priest just arrived from Mukden says twenty thousand Russian troops are stationed there and that an army of one hundred thousand men are at Liao Yang with heavy reinforcements arriving daily.

Feng Ling Keto, who was deported by the Russians in July last and escaped, has recently returned and has gathered five thousand brigands near Kwan Ling and is harassing his old enemies.

The Japanese estimate the strength of the Russians about Port Arthur at 20,000 men. The former have 50,000 men at Kin Chou.

Chinese continue to escape from Port Arthur, but little reliance is placed on their statements. They say food is growing scarcer at Port Arthur and there is good authority for saying the Japanese believe they can starve the Russians in three months.

The Russians, who recently purchased 1500 junks' anchors here, shipped them today to Tung-Ching-Tsu, where they will block the river to prevent the produce of that section leaving. Fodder is especially scarce.

Much contraband of war is arriving at this port. The French steamer Bourbon landed 66,000 sacks of flour today.

A British cruiser at Ching-Wan-Tao is awaiting instructions from the consul here, who will not make any statement for publication.

STILL FIGHTING.

Japanese Are In Pursuit of the Russians.

Tokio, May 27.—After five hours of desperate fighting the Japanese captured Kin Chou yesterday evening.

Nan Quan Ling, a stronghold of the enemy, was taken later after a hot fight. An artillery duel still continues. A Russian gunboat bombarded the Japanese left flank from Talien Wan bay, while the Japanese warships worked with the army from Kin Chou bay.

London, May 2.—A dispatch from Tokio to the Central News, dated today, says:

"The fighting which culminated in the Japanese occupation of Kin Chou was practically confined to an artillery duel, which, beginning at dawn of May 26, continued without intermission for five hours.

"Three Japanese warships in Kin Chou bay co-operated firing with heavy guns on the Russian positions. A Russian gunboat in Talien Wan bay also joined in the fight, bombarding the left flank of the Japanese army.

"Kin Chou castle was occupied by the Japanese at 4:20 oclock this morning.

"Later the Russians were driven from their positions on the southern heights. The Japanese are now in pursuit of the retreating Russians."

Japanese Discovered Weak Point and Profited.

Now In Control of Peninsula Above Port Arthur.

No Further Resistance Before Reaching Forts.

RUSSIANS LOSE 5,000,

According to Report Received From Newchwang.

London, May 27.—The Shan Hai Kwan correspondent of the Daily Chronicle sends a report received from Newchwang that on May 23, thinking that the Japanese had retired from Feng Wang Cheng, 15,000 Russians from Hai Cheng and Liao Yang marched towards Feng Wang Cheng. They were surprised by 30,000 Japanese in the Tatung pass.

The Russian casualties were 4000, and more than 1000 Russians surrendered. The report does not give the Japanese losses.

A DECISIVE BATTLE.

Paris, May 17.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Petit Parisian telegraphs that, according to a private dispatch from Liao Yang, Gen. Kuroki's army has begun an attack on the Russian position on the Liao Yang road, and that it is believed what will prove to be a decisive battle is progressing.

HEAVY GUN FIRE

A Feature of the Battle at Kin Chou.

Washington, May 27.—The following cablegram has been received at the Japanese legation:

"Tokio, May 27.—The commander of the army attacking Kin Chou reports as follows:

"'On May 21 reconnaisance was made and the enemy's cannonading showed that they had at Nan Shan hill, south of Kin Chou four 15 centimetre shrapnel guns, ten 9 to 15 centimetre cannon (10.5 centimetre shells proved the range of 8500 metres) twenty 12 centimetre quick-firing, besides at least ten fort guns. At the foot of the hill there were wire netting and mines. On May 22 the attacking force commenced the operations as had been prearranged. On May 23 reconnaisance was made, which discovered the enemy's right wing on Shan Tow with about eight heavy guns facing the sea. Fragments of the enemy's shells showed that they had twenty centimetre guns, fifteen centimetre short cannon, eight 10 centimetre cannon and seven centimetre quick fivers. Small bodies of infantry and artillery of the enemy were observed stationed at Kin Chou. On the morning of May 25 our forces attacked Kin Chou, engaging with the enemy's artillery on Nan Shan hill. At dawn of May 26, we commenced cannonading, which lasted five hours, while three Japanese warships assisted the land forces from Kin Chou bay. The enemy's gunboats attacked our left wing from Tallenwan. We took Kin Chou at 5:20 a. m. of the same day and after severe fighting occupied Nan Shan hill and pursued the enemy."

MERELY A DIVERSION

Was Bombardment of Port Arthur By Togo.

St. Petersburg, May 27.—The foreign office has received dispatches from both Che Foo and Pekin reporting from Chinese sources a new bombardment of Port Arthur, May 25. If this be true, it indicates that Vice Admiral Togo used the guns of his ships to make a diversion at Port Arthur and pave the way for a final assault on the Russian position around Kin Chow yesterday.

As this is a big holiday, the anniversary of Emperor Nicholas' coronation, no expression could be obtained at the war office upon today's dispatches from Tokio, but if the Japanese have succeeded in crossing the Neck, the general impression in military circles is, that although Kin Chou is twenty-five miles above Port Arthur, the Rpssians will be able to offer little resistance until the enemy reaches the perimeter of the fortress.

BROOKLYN TO TANGIER.

Swift Cruiser Sent to the Sultan's Domain.

Washington, May 27.—Rear Admiral Chadwick has reported to the navy department the arrival of his fleet at Teneriffe, the Canaries, where orders were awaiting him to dispatch a vessel to Tangier in connection with the kidnaping of the American Perdicaris.

The Brooklyn was immediately dispatched to that place.

THE ORINOCO REOPENED.

Caracas, Vez., May 27.—The official Gazette today contains a decree reopening the Orinoco river to navigation and foreign trade from June 1. The river has been closed since 1902. This step is considered to be further proof of the complete re-establishment of peace in Venezuela.

CLOSE OF SERIES

Evangelistic Services at First Christian Church Come to End.

Final Sermon of Rev. C. G. Kindred Who Conducted Them.

For three weeks Rev. C. G. Kindred, of Englewood Christian church of Chicago, has been conducting special evangelistic services at the First Christian church in this city. Last evening he closed the services and spoke on "The Name," setting forth the reasons why the church is called as it is. He said in part:

"In Prov. xxii, 1, is one-half of my text, 'A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.' In Phil. ii, 9, is the other half, 'Wherefore God highly exalted him and gave unto him the name which is above every name, that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things on earth, and things under the earth. And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God, the Father.'

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches; and if man had the opportunity to chose his name, and go at it with this thing in view, what name would he choose? Why, the name that is above every name, wouldn't he? That is the one I would seek.

"I take delight when I am around where colored folks are, in finding out the names of the little pickaninnies—Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington. What is the key? They are choosing the name, politically, that is above every name to them.

"If a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, then the best name is rather to be chosen than the good name. 'And He hath given Him a name which is above every name.' So a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches and the name of Jesus Christ is above every name, and in the choosing of the name of Christ we have chosen the name that is above every name, the one we ought to wear.

"To the testimony: Psalm 2:7-8. 'Jehovah said unto me, Thou art my Son. This day have I begotten thee. Ask of me.' Who? 'My Son. Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.' 'Ask of me and I will give thee'—what? 'The nations.' What for? 'Thy possesssion.'

"What is the first thing that a man does when he possesses anything? I went along down this narrow strip of land, the Point, and I looked at the houses that they have built over there. Every one of them has a name. Some houses were small, but they were named, just the same. The first thing that a man does with his possession is to name it. Name it and take it. 'Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance—the nations.' What is the first thing that he wanted to do with them? To name them. God had a peculiar, a chosen people, and they were already named. They were 'Israel.' God's people. He says to the Son: 'I have a peculiar people down here, just a few, now you ask of me and I will give thee all the nations that stand around about me for thy possession.' What will happen? Why, if God had a few people, the Jews, and named them 'Israel,' when Christ comes into possession of his people they will also be named.

"Again, Isaiah 61:2, 'And thou.' Who? 'Zion—for Zion's sake.' 'And thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of Jehovah shall name.' 'I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, which the mouth of Jehovah shall name.'

"Isaiah 65:15, 'And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen, for the Lord Jehovah shall slay thee and he will call his servants by another name.' Which the mouth of the Lord Jehovah will name, of course.

Amos ix 11-12. "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breeches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith Jehovah that doeth this."

"Here, then, is a possession given to a son and a divine prophecy that this possession shall be called by a new name that the mouth of the Lord shall name, and that this possession will consist largely of Gentiles. Here, then, is a divine expectation and a divine warning, both, for a new name.

"Now, what is that name? All the names in the New Testament that are called upon the people of God, believers in Christ, are found in the Old Testament. Brethren, disciples, saint, Nazarene—all of these are found in the Old Testament save one—and the new name that is promised—the new name that is promised is not, and cannot be, given until the old will peculiar to God's children, I believe, shall have been abrogated and the new will shall have taken its place. So to stand here looking in the Old Testament for this new name that is to be called upon the children of God, is a waste of time. Th Son does not receive his inheritance till the new will goes into effect and he is put in command. When you hear Jesus Christ stand up and say, after having said 'thy will be done,' 'all authority is given unto me, heavenly, earthly; go;' When you hear Jesus Christ stand up and say that, then begin to look for something new.

"But the question arises: 'Where does the New Testament begin?' The New Testament begins at th first verse of the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. What, then, are Matthew, Mark, Luke and John? Matthew, Mark, Luke and John are the revelation, the apocalypse of the Old Testament; just as the Book of John is called the Revelation of the New Testament is; the revelation or the apocalypse of the New Testament. God started out in the beginning to make a man, and our God has no variableness, neither shadow cast by turning; and whatever God starts out to do, he will accomplish. Mark that. God started out in the New Testament to make a man. Adam, one, he called him, but that man fell from his high estate. God does not turn back, but goes forward looking for the perfect man; the apocalypse of this one who has fallen into sin. Now, mark! He called him 'man,' 'man,' 'man.' And from the time he named him 'man,' though man did sin and go out of the high presence of God, yet he never took that name of 'man' from humanity all through the rest of his dealings with them. He moves forward.

"The ideal of the Old Testament is a perfect man. The ideal of the New Testament is a perfect church; and just as God started out to have a perfect man and did not stop until he found him, so his church in Jerusalem, like Adam, was perfect in the beginning, and fell, so there moves the purpose divine through these centuries to the time when the church of Jesus Christ shall stand forth wrapped with the glory of the Son, perfect—perfect. That is God's thought. He will not turn back or stop.

Take the stereoptican. You take a few of those plates and hold them up between you and the sun and you see a few scratches and outlines. That is the picture upon the plate. But you put it into a machine and let the light from the machine stream through these lines on the plate and there on the curtain is a glorious thing, revealing the potentiality wrapped up in these rude lines scratched on the plate that we could admire. The Old Testament and the New are but a stereoptican on which God scratches out in these letters we have, his divine purpose.

"Hence we should wear a name that will apply to every soul in the kingdom. Human names are divisive. Give all honor to Christ by wearing His name. The church is the bride—Christ the bridegroom. Hence the bride should wear the name of the bridegroom—Christian."

AT ROSEBUD RESERVATION

Rush Equal to That at Oklahoma Looked For.

"The great Oklahoma land rush will probably be duplicated at the opening of the Sioux Indian lands of the Rosebud reservation, in South Dakota, this summer," said Martin E. Stead, of Yankton, S. D., yesterday. Mr. Stead is in the city, transacting business in the local federal building.

"The unalloted and unreserved land to be disposed of approximates altogether 382,000 acres, lying within the boundaries of Gregory county. Most of it is choice agricultural land, and inquiries regarding it are flooding in from all parts of the country. I understand that even the Duluth land office is getting a considerable share of inquiries, although the local officials are supposed to know little more about the thing than the ordinary citizen.

"To provide for just such an emergency, however, circulars setting forth in detail the terms of the opening have been sent to the Duluth office, so that the curious may be supplied with them, and study out for themselves just what they will have to do to get in on the deal.

"Commencing on the morning of Tuesday, July 5, and ending Saturday, July 23, a registration will be had at Chamberlain, Yankton, Bonesteel and Fairfax, S. D., for the purpose of ascertaining what persons desire to enter and settle upon the lands under the homestead law, and of ascertaining their qualifications to do so. To obtain registration each applicant will be required to show himself duly qualified, by written application, to be made only on a blank form provided by the commissioner of the general land office, to make homestead entry of these lands under existing laws, and to give the registering officer such appropriate matters of description and identity as will protect the applicant and the government against any attempted impersonation. All sorts of precaution will be taken.

"Each applicant who shows himself duly qualified will be registered and given a non-transferable certificate to that effect, which will entitle him to go upon and examine the lands to be opened. No one, however, will be permitted to settle on the lands in advance of the opening, and during the first sixty days following the opening, no one but registered applicants will be permitted to make homestead settlement on the lands. The order in which the registered applicants will be permitted to make homestead entry on the lands opened will be determined by drawing for the district, publicly held at Chamberlain, commencing July 28."

TROUBLES OF BUTTE DOCTOR

Millionaire Physician Has Woman Arrested For Alleged Blackmail.

Butte, Mont., May 27.—Dr. O. B. Whitford, a millionaire, and one of the most prominent physicians in Butte, caused the arrest at Los Angeles, Cal., of Miss Bessie Driscoll for an alleged attempt to wring blackmail money from him.

Miss Driscoll is a pretty but illiterate woman of about 26, who charges Dr. Whitford with being the father of her child. She already has been paid $3000 as hush money, but is clamoring for $15,000 more under threat of sending the babe home to the physician's wife, hence her arrest.

Detectives who have been shadowing her assert that she is only the tool of a mysterious man blackmailer and that he has appropriated her $3000, only giving her a miserable pittance to live on, dribbling it out to her in small amounts. Although she writes to Dr. Whitford stories of her baby "playing about the room as I write," etc., the detectives say she has no baby, building up for her elderly victim's discomfort a version of the famous story of "Margery Daw."

On the other hand, the girl says she is the victim of this rich old man, who was her doctor, and in whose sixty-four years she trusted too much. Dr. Whitford, she declares, sent her to New Jersey to bear her suffering alone and in shame, while he continued to maintain an honored position in Butte society. She says he promised to send her $50,000, but is now trying to scare her out of the amount by having her arrested.

Miss Driscoll alleges that Dr. Whitford took advantage of the confidential relations of physician and patient to ruin her in June, 1902. Dr. Whitford denies the charges in toto. He acknowledges having paid Miss Driscoll $3000, preferring to being blackmailed to that extent rather than have his name dragged in the mire of her allegations and being made the target of scandalous gossip. For this sum Whitford compelled her to sign a receipt in full for all claims, past and future, she agreeing never again to demand anything from him.

Attorneys for Miss Driscoll attempted to have a warrant sworn out for the arrest of Dr. Whitford, but Peter Breen, county attorney, would not entertain the proposition and Whitford, as a counter move, caused the arrest of Miss Driscoll. Her hearing is set for next Tuesday. While in Butte Miss Driscoll was known as a nurse, and as such was associated with Dr. Whitford. The alleged crime is supposed to have been committed when Whitford's wife, who is an invalid, was on a trip East for her health.

MONEY ON CITY DUMP.

Part of Money Stolen From Farmer Recovered.

Faribault, Minn., May 27.—A roll of bills, which when counted amounted to $100, was this week found in an ash heap at the city dump, and the finding of it has stirred up not a little excitement in police circles. The roll, it is believed, was the one stolen from a drunken farmer last fall, while he was taking a bath in a barber shop in this city, and for which theft a negro porter was arrested.

Last fall a farmer wandered into Faribault with over $300 in bills wrapped around his waist in a flour sack. He spent $100 in several of the saloons, and got on a cheerful drunk. While in this condition he went into Carney's barber shop and ordered a bath. This sobered him somewhat, and when he got dressed he missed his money. The local police arrested Toya, the colored porter, for the theft, and he was bound over to the term of district court, which recently convened, tried him and found him not guilty. The man who hauled the ashes out of the barber shop furnace rooms to the dump now claims that he dumped them at the very place where the roll of bills was found. The question that is now puzzling the police is, who stole the money?

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask I. Freimuth.

SHOULD KEEP CLEAN.

Chicago's Health Commissioner Says Dirt Causes Lockjaw.

Chicago, May 27.—"Cleanliness, the remedy for lockjaw," is the keynote of an address issued to the public by the medical aid committee of the Chicago amusement association, which is in charge of the coming "new" Fourth of July celebraation in Chicago. The committee, which is headed by Dr. Arthur R. Reynolds, commissioner of health, says:

"The tetanus bacillus is to be found in almost every place where there is dust and dirt. Our young patriots have hands covered with dirt and the blank cartridge wad drives this dirt under the skin. Every such wound ought to receive immediate treatment. The tetanus germs must be removed. It cannot be killed by anticeptics. The surgeon's wound must be wide and free. Perfect cleanliness should be accomplished."

Chinese merchants endorsed the "new" Fourth offering to give the association a quantity of fireworks.

A Herald want ad will not always bring about a miracle; but it will usually secure for you a good servant—which is something near it.

PLANS BIG DAY

Golf Club to Have Much Sport on Monday Next.

Spring Championship Trials Begin and Special Match Arranged.

On Monday the spring championship trials will begin at the North Land golf links and will add to the interest already created in the spring handicap. As in the case of the latter the matches will be for both the men and women and as Monday is a holiday, there will be an added feature in the shape of a special medal score tournament.

In the last named all members of either sex who care to enter may do so by paying a fee in the shape of a golf ball, and these balls will be put up as prizes for the winners. These golf balls will be drawn as follows: Three fourths of them to the winner and the remainedr to the second highest. It is probable that between now and the time of the event that some other special prizes will be placed before the players as a temptation to do exceptional work over the course.

In the case of the special Decornion day matches the opposing players' names will not be drawn until 2 p. m. of the day of play and all matches will be played off in the one day. Some of the winners in the spring handicap first round will probably add their presence on the ground in competition, which with the spring championship, will likely make the day one of the most interesting ever known on the North Land grounds.

In the case of the spring championship there are cups offered for each sex and the cup for the women has never been tried for. The cup for the men is now held by T. W. Hoopes. Each cup must be won three times by the holder before he becomes the owner. If Mr. Hoopes should win the cup in the two trials this spring he will become the owner. There will be two trials for the women, and if any one should win twice in succession she would have to win again next season to become undisputed possessor of the trophy.

In the spring championship trials all games for the men are to be eighteen holes, match play, and for the women, nine holes, match play.

The events and pairs of contestants, as they will start on Monday, are as follows:

PRELIMINARY ROUND—WOMEN.

Miss Josephine Peyton vs. Mrs. W. Dalrymple.

Must Wait Six Years.

Otto Hannula, a Virginia, Minn., saloon keeper, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in 1901. He failed to make his application for discharge from bankruptcy within the proper time, so the case was today ordered dismissed by Judge Morris, leaving Hannula in exactly the same position as he was before the last petition was filed. He can take no further action in the matter of obtaining a discharge until six years have elapsed, according to law. In the original petition his liabilities were placed at $2,486.58 and assets at $285.

Kugler, Your Druggist,

108 West Superior street, always leads and never follows. For the balance of this week he is serving Peter's Milk Chocolate free at Soda Fountain. Everybody is invited.

HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES

Members of G. A. R. Posts Present at Morning Program.

This morning, in chapel, three of the old soldiers, members of the G. A. R. posts of Duluth, spoke very entertainingly to the students of the high school and told them about a few of their experiences during the war and of the way in which Memorial day ought to be celebrated. The choir assisted in the program, singing several appropriate songs. F. H. Barnard, D. G. Cash and M. W. Bates were the veterans present.

The principal thing which they sought to impress upon the minds of the students was that in them rested the future of the country, that as they were so would the country be. "This country is not under the rule of a king or an emperor or a czar," said F. H. Barnard, who belonged to the Forty-fourth Massachusetts regiment, "but under that of the people. The youth of the nation cannot shirk their responsibility by saying that if the king will but command they will obey, for they themselves will be the government and upon them will fall the responsibility. The United States will always be as it it is in the hearts and the souls of the people to make it. Not only must the young men take this into consideration, but also the young women, for what they think is a potent factor in deciding what the young men will think.'

The speakers also spoke of the gratification which came to them when they saw the Duluth boys march out from the city to go down into the Southern camps, not to fight those whom the civil war soldiers had fought, but to join hands with their sons in defending the country against danger common to both.

They also requested as many of the high school students as could to come to the cemetery on Monday and join them in scattering flowers over the graves of their departed comrades, of whom ninety or more, among them being two Confederates, lie buried in Duluth."

The students enjoyed their talks very much, as was evidenced by the rounds of applause which they received.

REPORT FROM TOGO.

Tokio, May 27.—The following report has been received from Vice Admiral Togo:

"The gunboats Thukishi, Heiyen, Amagi and Chokai and the first torpedo boat flotilla reached Kin Chou bay on the evening of Wednesday. From dawn of Thursday the vessels co-operated with the army in bombarding Suchaton. The Amagi and the Chokai went in close and bombarded all day. At 11 o'clock in the morning the enemy retreated from Suchaton but they continued to fire from a position behind Suchaton. Our casualties were ten, including Captain Hayashi, of the Chotai, who was killed."

RUSSIA BUYS VESSELS.

USING KEROSENE

To Light Fire Is Not an Unnecessary Risk.

St. Paul, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Is lighting the cook stove with kerosene unnecessary exposure to obvious risk of injury or obvious danger?

The supreme court in an opinion written by Judge Douglas and handed down today, holds in such a case the facts must be submitted to the jury and sustains a verdict of $5000 against an insurance company, because of conflicting evidence on that point.

The case in point is Nathaniel Price, as administrator of the estate of Margaret Price, deceased, respondent, against the Standard Life Insurance company from Hennepin county.

"UNION MADE."

BIG PRICE PAID

By Creek Indians For Adherence to Cause of Secession.

Page of Indian and Civil War History Is Uncovered.

Muskogee, I. T., May 27.—The price that the Creek Indians must pay for joining the Confederacy in the civil war is $12,000,000 worth of land.

This page of Indian history is brought to mind by the rapid sale of land by the Creek freemen to the whites. It is an incident, too, in Indian history that will have its bearing on the future voting for the Indian.

In the early days of the civil war both the Creek and Cherokee governments made alliances with the Confederacy. As slaveholders the Indians were southern sympathizers.

When the war closed the government declared the old treaties abrogated by reason of the Confederate alliance, and new treaties were made. This was in 1866. One provision of these treaties was that the former slaves of the Indians should share equally with their former masters in the tribal lands and annuities. This was bitterly opposed by the majority of the Indians, but they were forced to accept it by a few leaders who signed the treaty with the treaty commission.

In this treaty the negro interpreters played an important part and but for them it is probable that the treaty would never have been made. They represented to the commissioners that the Indians were willing to agree to matters pertaining to the negroes, always to the benefit of the latter, and on the other hand represented to the Indians that certain provisions were not so rigid as they afterwards proved to be. Thus the treaty was signed.

This treaty gave 160 acres to each freedman, and there were 5000 of these, making a total of 800,000 acres of land, worth $2,000,000. This land was taken from the Indians. They opposed it then and oppose it now. In politics they will oppose the negro, and the party that receives the negro vote will lose that of the Indian.

The fact that the freeman secured the best land is still an irritating subject to the Indian. In the ante-bellum days great plantations were scattered all over the Creek country. They were owned by educated halfbreeds, who were wealthy and owned many slaves. They went with the Confederacy and in the four years of war their plantations were ruined and their houses burned.

This would not have deterred the autocratic landlords; but when they found their former slaves settled on the old plantations, claiming ownership and demanding equal rights and recognition, it was too much. They refused to acknowledge equality and in nearly every instance left their old plantations and went into new country and began over again.

The negroes remained, and as their homes were on these rich and cultivated lands they received allotments there. The Stidhams, McIntoshes, Marshalls, Barnwells, Grysons, Porters and hundreds of other Indian families lost fine land holdings in that way.

The former slaves of the Cherokees received rights in the same way and this, too, in spite of the fact that at the beginning of the war they were freed by their masters.

BATHHOUSE JOHN ON STAGE

Chicago's Statesman In Vaudeville With "Paddy the Pig."

Chicago, May 27.—"Bathhouse John" Coughlin, bard of the tenderloin, aldermanic originator of the green dress suit, and other freaks of the sartorial art, has chosen a new road to fame.

He is going into vaudeville. With Clarence O'Brien, known in New York as "Paddy the Pig," our own "Bathhouse" is preparing to leap before the footlights, and in the rosy glare of the calcium set fresh laurels upon his massive pompadour as he kicks sand into the eyes of the orchestra and those in the "baldhead row."

The First ward disciple of the thespian art is now busy on his ranch, near Colorado Springs, rehearsing "team work" with one of the farm hands and awaiting the arrival of Clarence.

Clarence is to begin in New York "all by his lonesome." In a monologue written for him by James Thornton, "Paddy the Pig" will make his first assault upon an audience in a New York theater a week from tonight. The "first-nighters" will be composed of the elite of Mr. O'Brien's "set." "Bathhouse" will hear the applause by long distance 'phone, and thus get a taste of the ovation for which his soul yearns.

After two weeks the monologian will come West. It is in Chicago that he will reach the summit of his ambitions. It is here that he will "double up" with "Bathhouse."

Dispatches from New York say O'Brien is haunted by music publishers, who wish to foist upon him excerpts of Wagnerian productions. But he agrees with his partner-to-be that music is a thing of temperament.

"Aw, give me something simple," he cries. "Wud 'je tink dat I'd pass up 'Dear Midnight of Love' fer the melodies of dem Dutchmen? Not for Clarence. W'y, wat would the 'Bathhouse' say?"

PREFERRED JAIL

To Naming Lady to Whom He Gave Diamonds.

Memphis, Tenn., May 27—Rather than disclose the name of the society girl to whom he made presents of valuable diamonds, T. Frost Barrett, scion of a wealthy Tennessee family, who recently acknowledged bankruptcy, placed himself in the position of defying the order of Referee R. D. Jordan.

The question came up during the cross-examination of Barrett by attorneys acting for the secured creditors of Barrett Bros.

After Barrett explained his relations with Zadel Garner, and admitted making her presents of valuable diamonds, the attorney asked if there were any other diamonds given to females. He answered "Yes."

"To whom were they given?" asked the attorney.

"To a certain party, whose fair name I refuse to drag in court," was Barrett's reply."

Referee Jordan commanded the witness to answer, but he declined, stating that he would walk to jail rather than do so. Referee Jordan reserves his decision.

CURIOUS WOMEN

Crowd Around the President's Daughter at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 27.—A crowd of 5000 persons, more than three-fourths of whom were women, jostled each other for a glimpse of Miss Alice Roosevelt, eldest daughter of the president of the United States, at the Union station yesterday afternoon when she arrived for a week's visit.

Four hundred women broke through the gates to the midway when the train arrived bringing Miss Roosevelt, Miss Alice Warder, of Washington, and several maids. The women crowded about Miss Roosevelt at the train steps, delaying her advance in spite of the protection of policemen who led the party. Miss Irene Catlin, whose guest Miss Roosevelt is, and her brother, had great difficulty in keeping near the party.

When the midway was passed Miss Roosevelt and her escorts broke into a rapid walk, while the crowd followed with shouts of "Hurrah for Miss Roosevelt," "There she is," until the carriage was reached at the entrance of the station. So great was the crush at the carriage that the president's daughter was almost forced against the wheels before she could enter. As soon as she was seated the carriage was driven away rapidly.

The enthusiasm attending the reception was entirely unexpected by the police or Union station officials. Only a few officers were on hand to control the throng.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdtown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free. Reg. sizes 50c, $1.00.

ANNUAL MEETING OF NORWEGIAN CHURCHES.

Chicago, May 27.—Two hundred delegates representing eighty churches assembled at St. Paul's Evangelical Norwegian church yesterday to attend the annual meeting of the Eastern district of the Norwegian Lutheran synod. Nearly every state east of the Mississippi river sent delegates to the conference, which will hold daily sessions until June 1.

The sessions opened with devotional exercises, which were followed by the annual sermon, preached by Rev. O. S. Rygg, of Eau Claire, Wis.

The business session of the synod opened in the afternoon, Rev. A. L. Sagen, of La Crosse, Wis., presiding. The session was taken up with the appointment of standing committees and the formal organizations of the synod.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

On the first ballot Robert H. Patton, of Springfield, was nominated for governor by the Illinois state prohibition convention Thursday. J. Ross Hanna, of Monmouth, was the only other candidate in the field.

Charles Tye, a lightweight prize fighter, who was recently beaten during a fight at the Sequoa Athletic club at Oakland, Cal., is in the insane ward of the receiving hospital. Tye was knocked out by Jack Burke after three rounds of fighting. He is in a pitiable condition.

The freight handlers of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad belonging to the New Haven local have voted not to strike in sympathy with the New York freight handlers. The reason given is that the New York men are not believed to be justified in the stand they have taken.

Hugh Allred, a civil engineer, and A. Jessen, an assistant, were accidentally killed by electricity at Bingham, Utah, Thursday. A surveyor's chain which they were carrying came in contact with a live wire of the Telleruide Power company.

The Swedish Methodist conference for the Iowa district convened at Burlington, Iowa, Thursday, for a three-days' session. A reception was tendered by the Epworth league.

MAN ROBS BANK WITHOUT TROUBLE.

Auburn, Cal., May 27.—A man entered the Placer County bank yesterday and presented a written demand for all the cash on hand. He sprang over the counter and fired a pistol shot at Assistant Cashier McFadden, but the missile went wide. The robber seized all the gold in the money tray, emptied it into a canvass sack and started to depart. At the door he encountered Cashier Mills and waived him aside with a revolver. He sprang into a nearby cart and escaped. The bank officers decline to say how much gold was taken.

A Startling Test.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c, at all druggists.

AN AMERICAN SHOT AT PARIS

Mysterious Circumstances Connected With Young Evans' Death.

Paris, May 27.—Ivon Evans, known as Viscount D'Oyley, a son of an American dentist, Dr. John Evans, died yesterday at a private sanitarium, as the result of a bullet wound received under mysterious circumstances. The family is prominent here, Dr. John Evans being a nephew of the famous Dr. Thomas Evans, who assisted Empress Eugenie in her flight from Paris after the Franco-Prussian war.

Dr. John Evans, who came from Baltimore, received the title of the Marquis D'Oyley from the pope, his older son assuming the title of Count D'Oyley and the younger that of Viscount D'Oyley.

The younger son, who was 24 years of age, recently became enamored of Mme. Pflucker, a Peruvian, who was sojourning at Vichy. Despite the protests of his family the viscount and the Peruvian woman visited the Riveria together, remaining at Cannes for some time. Dr. Evans energetically protested against his son's course and finally cut off his income. This brought the pair back to Paris, where they arrived a week ago, going to the Hotel De Rivoli.

Monday evening a shot was heard from the chamber of the viscount and when the proprietor of the hotel reached the chamber he found the viscount on a bed with a wound in the left breast. Mme. Pflucker, who was in the room, said that the viscount had shot himself and, although weak from loss of blood, the wounded man seemed to confirm this statement, saying that the shooting took place while he was handling a weapon.

He was taken to a private sanitarium, where an operation was performed. Mme. Pflucker remained constantly at his bedside.

Viscount D'Oyley became unconscious and lingered until this morning, when he died, after which the police began an investigation which brought out the foregoing facts.

Mme. Pflucker was interrogated by the police and later was given provisional liberty, but was told to hold herself at the disposal of the police. She bears out the theory of suicide by showing two letters which Viscount D'Oyley had addressed to the authorities, saying that it was his intention to commit suicide, owing to family difficulties.

The body was conveyed to the morgue for an autopsy.

CHANGE IN BOARD

J. H. Crowley Succeeds Dr. Eklund on Water and Light Board.

Most of Pipe Laying to Be Done Under Contract.

Dr. J. J. Eklund has resigned as a member of the board of water and light commissioners and John H. Crowley has been appointed by Mayor M. B. Cullum to fill the vacancy.

Dr. Eklund's resignation was made known at the meeting of the board of water and light commissioners, last evening, when Mayor Cullum transmitted it, together with the appointment.

Dr. Eklund's sole reason for resigning and the only reason that his resignation has been accepted is that his professional duties interfere so greatly with his attendance at the board meetings.

With respect to the appointment Mayor Cullum states that Mr. Crowley has always taken an active interest in the water and light affairs of the city. Mr. Crowley's appointment met with the hearty approval of the board.

Manager Case was instructed by the board to start an investigation throughout the city with a view of finding out how large is the consumption of water for lawn sprinkling purposes.

With the approaching summer season the lawns are now getting more or less attention and it has come to the notice of the water and light board that certain persons are using the water extravagantly.

The commissioners have made regulations providing for lawn sprinkling and they insist that the regulations be lived up to the letter. The regulations are as follows:

"The use of hose in lawn sprinkling is expressly forbidden under the following conditions:

"First. During or immediately after a storm.

"Second. After 9 o'clock p. m. and before 6 o'clock a. m.

"Third. Without a nozzle.

"Fourth. With an ordinary nozzle, unless in the hand.

"Fifth. If stationary, without a revolving sprinkler or sprayer in place of a nozzle."

The commissioners claim that an observance of the regulations will save persons from having the water cut off or having to pay extra for the water held to be wasted.

The rules apply particularly to those places where a flat rate is in effect, for people having water meters are not likely to use more water than they positively need.

The board also instructed Manager Case to advertise for bids for the laying of gas and water mains on some of the extensions ordered this season.

It has been determined that the water and light department will do very little of the laying of the mains this year, but will let the work by contract.

The department will lay the feed main in Michigan street, between Garfield avenue and Twenty-fifth avenue west, where special care will be necessary on account of existing circumstances, and it will do the work on a few other short extensions, but the greater part of the work will be done by contractors.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

The Closing of the Mines a Severe Blow to Wakefield.

Wakefield—The shutdown of the Sunday Lake and Brotherton mines here is a terrible blow to this village. Every producing mine except the Castile, the old Comet, employing less than a hundred men, is closed. Not the least warning was given. Some 200 men, composing the night shift of the two properties, were putting on their digging suits to go down when the machinery was stopped.

Ironwood—Some 200 Italians and Finns discharged employes of mines here, left on a special train for the old country.

Menominee—Mrs. Susan Westfall, aged 72, of Menominee, is dead, the result of burns received while building a fire in the kitchen range. She had placed the kindling in the stove had poured some kerosene over the combustible material, leaving the lid off the stove and opening the drafts, so that when she applied the match the flames burst forth, igniting her hair and setting fire to her dress. She ran terrified into the sitting room, and fell in a faint on the floor. It was some moments before help reached her and by that time the clothing was completely burned off her back, she had inhaled some of the flames, her face, chest, hands and arms were terribly burned and there was scarcely a spot on her body that was not touched by the fire.

As a result of the action taken at a special meeting of the Menominee council, Dr. Floyd Davis, a Des Moines, Iowa, expert, has been directed to continue his investigation of the causes of the impurity of the water supply, also to determine if good water can be secured from Green Bay or if there are other sources available. This investigation will require sixty days more. The general sentiment of the aldermen is in favor of expending several thousand dollars if necessary in ascertaining these facts.

Gladstone—Charging that her husband has "lost all respect for himself and has done everything possible to make her life miserable" the wife of Clayton Voorhis, a business man of Gladstone, has begun suit for divorce. In her complaint Mrs. Voorhis alleges that although her husband has property valued at $4000 and has an income of $2000 a year he has contributed nothing to her support except when forced to do so by the courts for nearly two years.

Munising—The Superior Veneer and Cooperag company's plant at Munising controlled by Tindle & Jackson, of Buffalo, will go into commission this week. The stave factory formerly owned by the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company, whose interests were purchased by the New York concern, will be the scene of operations. The building has been remodelled and the machinery repaired and rearranged. The heading department, which will be located on the second floor, will be equipped and operated later on.

KIDNEY TROUBLE AND BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Rev. Dr. Jones, of Houston, Texas, Says: "I Was Ill Unto Death With Bright's Disease, But Was Completely

Cured By Warner's Safe Cure

REV. W. J. JONES, Houston, Texas.

The facts in my case may be briefly stated. I was ill unto death with Bright's disease. No medicine reached me until Warner's Safe Cure was prescribed. Your medicine cured me. I see no advantage in going into details. I am thankful for the cure." April 8, '04. (Rev.) W. J. Jones, D. D., 1411 Jackson Street, Houston, Texas.

Warner's Safe Cure has been prescribed by leading doctors the world over for more than thirty years as the only certain cure known to medical science for Bright's disease and all forms of diseases of the kidneys, no matter of how long standing.

If you have kidney trouble, or suspect it, or if any member of your family in this or past generations has had kidney disease, your life is in danger. It's hereditary. Get a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure without delay. All drug stores or direct, 50c. and $1 a bottle. It will cure you and it's the only medicine that will. Cloudy urine or sediment in it when it stands twenty-four hours, backache, etc., are certain signs of kidney trouble. Booklet telling all about this great medicine and some of the wonderful cures it has made and doctor's advice free. Warner's Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Beware of so-called kidney cures that contain sediment and are of bad odor. They are dangerous. Take none but Warner's Safe Cure.

"Safe" Pills move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

WOMAN AS FARMER

Tells of Great Success on Prairie Longue In Arkansas.

Solved the Problem of Raising Large Crops of Rice.

Little Rock, Ark., May 27.—John Morris solved the problem of raising rice successfully in Arkansas.

During 1902 he raised 302 bushels of rice on his plantation at Carlisle, though but five acres had turned out well, and he intended planting fifty acres in 1903.

Mr. Morris was survived by his wife and several sons, and they decided to take up the work and carry out the plans he had made. So well did they succeed that they increased the field to fifteen acres, from which the yield was 904 bushels. This year they are planting fifty acres and expect to raise at least 1500 bushels.

In a letter to the Western Trail for May, Mrs. Mary Morris, widow of John Morris, tells of what she has accomplished as follows:

"I will tell you as nearly as I can how we have succeeded since we came to Arkansas and how we came to be interested in the rice business.

"I have liven on Prairie Longue—a portion of Grand Prairie—for ten years, having moved to this state with my husband from Nebraska in the year 1894. Till with the last few years our land has been planted in corn, oats and stock peas, a large portion of the place yet being in the native blue stem prairie grass. For several years we have kept a large number of milk cows; having engaged in the dairy business ourselves, and later selling the milk to the dairies at Carlisle. We find this to be a paying industry here. Owing to the abundance of hay that our land naturally produced, the amount of stock peas that we could raise, and our excellent pasture lands, we were enabled to realize a good income from our cows.

"A few years ago my brother-in-law began experimenting with the culture of rice. His effort was a failure, having planted his crop expecting to get the water necessary for its growth without much effort. In this he was mistaken. His crop being planted in April, he did not get sufficient water at all that season, and the crab-grass took the crop.

"In the meantime my husband, John Morris, had become interested in raising rice. In 1901, together with some Lonoke friends, they planted fifty acres. Endeavoring, however, to profit from the failure of my brother-in-law, they sunk their well and had the necessary machinery, as they thought, to pump the water over the land. In this they were greatly disappointed, not having the machinery properly set, and from want of experience in manipulating the same, they were not able to get the water over their crop, and the result was another failure.

"In 1902 my husband planted a small crop of rice of only five acres, using a small boiler and engine, and pumping the water from a small well that he had sunk by hand. This year the crop of five acres yielded 220 bushels, being an average of 61 bushels to the acre. Encouraged by this result, last year my husband prepared the land and well to raise rice on a larger scale. Before planting the crop he went to Louisiana to visit the rice fields of that section, and to gather such information as he could in regard to its culture. While in the rice fields he was suddenly stricken with heart failure, from which he died. Stricken with grief, heart-broken and discouraged, with no one to advise or direct me, except my boys, I proceeded to plant the crop already planned by my husband.

"The spring was very rainy and backward, but we got our little crop of fifteen acres planted by the middle of May. The rice came up nicely and grew rapidly. We succeeded in getting the water over about eight acres. A portion of the crop was almost or quite choked out by the crab-grass. We harvested ten acres, seven and a half of Japan and two and a half acres of Honduras. Our crop yielded 904 bushels. The Honduras being more properly watered yielded 258 bushels.

"We have an excellent 10-inch well all ready for the coming spring and I have my land prepared to plant fifty acres. With the assurance of abundance of water I feel confident that we will raise a large crop."

SPOONBILL CATFISH

Caught In the Scioto Dam In Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio, May 27.—W. A. Caskey, with Frank Haas, of 19 North Front street, and a colored man, were fishing in the Scioto river at the state dam near Circleville, and among other trophies of their skill as fishermen was that of a spoonbill catfish.

It measured, from tip to tip, 4½ feet, was 9 inches wide and weighed 20½ pounds. The bill measured 13 inches from the eyes to the tip. When opened, the jaws were 5½ inches apart. The two tips of the tail were 9 inches apart. The wing gills measured 11 inches.

The spoonbill catfish, Mr. Haas says, is uncommon in this part of the country, being more at home in the waters of the South. They think this one was a stroller. Under natural conditions such fish attain a length of 7 to 8 feet and a weight of 150 pounds. There are no bones in the fish, only a piece of gristle which runs through the body, the bill being of gristle also.

It was taken to a local fish dealer to be dressed, after which the fishermen expected to indulge in a fish feast. The head is to be mounted.

It required the combined efforts of the three men to land the prize, the colored man at one stage of the catch being pulled into the river, where he nearly drowned.

TREASURE SEARCH

Corpus Christi, Tex., Business Man Wants Pirate Gold.

Supplies Expedition to Test Truth of an Old Legend.

Corpus Christi, Tex., May 27.—From the old pioneers of the beautiful Caraucauhua country a tradition now grown dim and musty with age has been passed down to the younger generations, to the effect that one morning, far back in the receding past, just as the sun was casting his first golden beams of light over the lovely prairie, then robed in the sublimity of wild solitude, Lafitte and ten or fifteen of his buccaneers called at the humble home of an old lady and her husband, who then lived on Kellar or Cox creek, in what is now embraced in Jackson county. Here these pirates got their breakfast and handed the old people the sum of $1000, and in which sum were found coins from the then leading commercial governments of the world. An uneasiness characterized the conduct of these pirates during their stay at this house, during which time frequent references were made to the hot pursuit of English or American war vessels. As they had dispatched the morning meal, they shouldered what purported to be sacks of gold and departed, going towards the head of Cox creek, presumably to bury or secrete their ill-gotten treasure. After a few hours they passed back by this house, going in the direction of Cox bay. They were never seen or heard of again by the old people who supplied them with breakfast. This is the tradition as nearly as it can now be gatheerd and given. To what extent credence should be given to the same the reader must be his own judge, but it is certainly true that there are those who believe sufficiently strong in this and other traditional stories of hidden wealth that has been buried along the bays, bayous and streams of our coast country that they are willing to spend some time and money, and endure hardships and mosquito bites, in making searches therefor. Only a few years ago, as it has been told, a prominent business man of Victoria made a search and dug up considerable earth along the Matagorda coast in the vain hope that he would find and unearth a few of Lafitte's hidden shekels.

Now it has just come to the surface that one of the business lights of Corpus Christi, who gathers and studies the feasibility of these "treasure hidden" traditions, has recently investigated and explored the Cox creek tradtion. In this adventure, however, he was not alone. He took into his confidence respectable parties living in Jackson county, and the party secured the services of a lad who professes to be endowed with an affinity for gold that will enable him to locate it with ease, whether it be on the surface or in the bowels of the earth, or under the waters of the creeks, rivers, lakes or bays. The Cox creek expedition, however, was a failure, but the Corpus Christi gentleman is confident that somewhere between Cox bay and the mouth of the Lavaca river large sums of the pirate's ducats will some day be found, and with a broad and confident smile he intimated that it would likely be fished out of the waters of Swan lake. He says he has an abiding faith in the ability of his "gold affinity" oth. This same gentleman asserts with every confidence that his "gold finder" has located a valuable "treasure find" in an old wreck in the quicksand a hundred or two feet from the east shore of Matagorda island, and that he is now making preparations to secure it, and that before the summer ends he will be a rich man indeed. In fact, he seems to believe that if people could only realize the value of the lost treasure from wrecks that have lodged against the gulf shores of Texas island the searching for and finding of lost gold and other treasure would become an industry more profitable than the finding of oil fields.

ALABAMA TOWN

Has Bitter War Over the Sunday Mail.

Valley Head, Ala., May 27.—For the past week Valley Head has been in the throes of an internecine quarrel as to whether the village should allow the Sunday mail to enter her quiet precincts.

The parties of the first part, or those who were in favor of quarantining against the malignant pest, declared that the Sunday mail was polluting the morals of the youth by furnishing them a Sunday lounging place and vicious literature.

The parties of the second part, or those who were in favor of admitting the Sunday mails, duty free, and thus enjoying the goods that Uncle Sam provided, came back in rebuttal of the main argument, by offering that the Sunday papers which came by mail were subscribed for by the parents of the aforesaid youths, and that therefore they were good, and that in the absence of the Sunday malls the youth aforesaid would lie in wait Sunday mornings for the "Buch" on the local passenger trains, buy disreputable papers, magazines and dime novels, and spend most of the Sabbath day in reading these forbidden luxuries away from home.

WILL DRILL AT MANASSAS

Maneuvers of Federal and Alabama Troops This Fall.

Montgomery, Ala., May 27.—Nearly 1000 Alabama troops have been invited to participate in the joint maneuvers with the regular army at Manassas, Va., from September 5 to 20, the battlefield made famous by the two battles of Bull Run.

Twenty-two thousand troops will participate in these maneuvers. Of this number about 13,000 will be of the regular army and the balance state troops in the division of the Atlantic.

Manassas is on the line of the Southern railway and the officials of the road are preparing to handle the troops and the thousands of visitors with comfort, and dispatch.

In connection with the coming maneuvers the New York Herald has collected some highly interesting facts.

Maj. Gen. Henry C. Corbin will fight the third battle of Bull Run, says the Herald, and the general staff of the army is now engaged upon improving the strategy of Gen. Stonewall Jackson in what is regarded by military strategists as the most masterly campaign of the civil war.

From Poraldn, Me., which never came nearer to war than seeing in the offing Spanish fleets which never vitited, the army maneuvers will be transferred this year to Manassas, Va., which still bears the marks of the heavy blows dealt by blue and gray forty-two years ago.

For the first time an opportunity will be afforded for effective comparisons between the old army which fought and the new army which is being trained to fight. Can the modern armament and the methods of transportation which have developed forty years from the day when Pope and Lee raced from their respective bases to the battle ground change the result of their maneuvers? Twenty-two thousand modern soldiers will be used to test the prowess of the ancient armies of the rebellion and prove what would have happened had the commanders whose names made history possessed Krag-Jorgensen rifles, Dougherty wagons and the new army field gun.

It is probable that no field of any of the great Southern conflicts could have been selected which has suffered so little change as the low lying land in the valley of Northern Virginia between Thoroughfare Gap and the Potomac.

RAILROAD OWNS TOWN.

Claim In Suit Against Principal Business Men.

Jefferson City, Tenn., May 27.—A queer suit originated and is in the chancery court at Dandridge. John Jarnagin, a druggist here, made preparations to enlarge his storehouse on Railroad street by extending it to the rear end of his lot which runs nearly to the track of the Southern Railway company. The company served an injunction on Mr. Jarnagin stopping him from enlarging his building, and also requested him to move his entire building off its right-of-way. It is understood the railroad has asked possession of all of the ground south of its tracks now occupied by several business firms of the city. The principal business portion of the town is involved, being the large brick two-story building belonging to J. C. Johnston, and occupied by Z. Godwin, general merchandise; the two-story brick of John Jarnagin, occupied by the City laundry and the Cumberland company, and the two-story frame, occupied by S. N. Newman, groceries. These parties built upon the ground many years ago and have had possession for some thirty years, and have claimed it as their property. However, the railway claims that this ground is covered by its right-of-way, and says it wants to build a new pasesnger depot upon the sites and will convert the present depot into a freight depot. The matters involved are far-reaching and will be watched by the public with no little interest.

PRICE OF ELEPHANTS.

Birmingham, Ala., Boys Employ a Purchasing Agent.

Birmingham, Ala., May 27.—The fund for the purchase of an elephant to start the Birmingham Zoo is growing rapidly under the direction of Birmingham boys. They have employed W. H. Pickens, a New York purchasing agent, to buy an elephant. He never had such a commission before, but he has been looking into the subject and writes:

"I went down to Coney Island, to Luna park, where Thompson & Dundy have the largest herd of elephants in America. They did not wish to sell, but said they would buy a few more elephants if they could get them at the proper price. Mr. Hagenback is in the city and sails Saturday for the other side. He offers to get an elephant five to six feet high and delivered f. o. b. Hoboken, for $1500. This one will be shipped direct from Africa. Will be guaranteed sound in every way, will work, push wagons, etc., and can be taught tricks. Neither cold or heat will affect him. Will also guarantee him not to be dangerous or vicious.

"I can get you an elephant from Calcutta, the same size, for $1100 to $1200, but as far as I can find out these elephants have never thrived in this country. They cannot stand the cold weather and have to be carefully housed during the winter months. Hagenback's guarantee on an elephant is just like Tiffany's on a diamond."

MEDERINE
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
CURES
RHEUMATISM!

Shawano, Wis., March 20th, 1904.
MEDERINE REMEDY CO., Duluth, Minn.
Dear Sirs: A year ago last February I was taken with a most severe attack of inflammatory Rheumatism, so that it was impossible for me to help myself. I called a doctor and he prescribed some medicine for me and I doctored with him for two months without any help. Then I went to taking patent medicine, but they did not help, and I was nearly discouraged, till finally I saw your advertisement and started to take MEDERINE. After I had taken three bottles I was able to work but I finished the whole course and am perfectly cured. If not it would have come back before this time. I most gladly recommend Mederine for Rheumatism. One of my children is taking Mederine for Eczema with great success.
Yours truly, A. O. ANTES, Shawano, Wis.

"By a priest of large experience, temporary charge of a seaside or mountain parish for August and September; furnished rectory and compensation for services will be expected. Address ——."

"Clergyman, young good worker, wants parish. Address ——."

"A priest, experienced, Catholic, desires locum tenens, preferably north, from July to October. Address ——."

"Priest, experienced, of good reputation, positive church man, musical; contemplates a change. Address ——."

Advertising for positions upon the part of clergymen or churches is a new departure, and is confined, so far, to the denominational publications. No advertisements of this kind have reached the daily papers. Although they are seldom advertised, there are in some of the denominations bureaus created especially to find new charges for ministers and to find new ministers for charges.

Among the Methodists the bishops appoint the clergy to their churches and application upon the part of either churches or ministers are made directly to the bishop. The greater part of the appointments of the Methodist clergy are arranged at the annual conferences. It is so, in general, among all the other Protestant denominations, the appointments being arranged by bishops or highest ecclesiastical authorities.

In the Roman Catholic church the clergy are of two classes, removable and irremovable. The removable priests can be shifted by the bishops or archbishops, but reports of all such changes are made to Rome.

The current number of the Living Church also contains the following advertisement:

"Clerical agency—Conducted by, under the management of a clergyman of reputation and experience and established for the purpose of providing a medium of communication between clergymen and parishes and churches. For testimonials and photographs of candidates and for terms and general information write the company."

The clerical bureau has an hand a large number of photographs and descriptions of eligible clergymen.

THE WORLD IS HER FIELD

Toledo Girl Is Appointed International Secretary of Y. W. C. A.

Toledo, O., May 27.—Miss Clarissa Spencer of this city, who has just received the honor of being appointed world secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, with headquarters at London, has for many years been one of the leading spirits in the work of the association in this country, and is now secretary of the association for Ohio.

Miss Spencer will leave for England early in June and will assume the duties of her new position about Sept. 1. In the interim she will visit on the continent and spend some time in England familiarizing herself with the work there. Her position will be a most important one, as secretary of what is called the world's committee of the Y. W. C. A.

"I can't say anything about the work," was a response she made to a question. "You see I am not yet the world's secretary, and really know nothing about the work of the position except in a general way."

Speaking of the work of the world's committee Miss Spencer said that this is the body that maps out the work of the association all over the world, and is in constant touch with the movement everywhere. It has general charge of the literature and propaganda work of the association and maps out new territory to be organized.

"You know, perhaps, she said, "that the Y. W. C. A. is organized in every country in Europe except Russia. The work was started in England about 1873, and has spread to all parts of the world. All these different organizations are affiliated, and hold state, national and international conventions. The world convention is held every four years. The last was at Paris two years ago.

"The next will be at Geneva, Switzerland, in 1906. The first college branch of the association in this country was organized at Normal, Ill., 16 years ago. There are now in the United States 500 college associations and 90 city city associations. The world's committee of which Miss Spencer is secretary, was organized 10 years ago."

While Miss Spencer has been in Japan and has traveled quite extensively in other parts of the world, she has never been in England.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Owners of Dogs Might Be Able to Answer That.

Some Queer Ones Found on City Clerk's License Register.

If any reader of the Herald desires a name for a dog, all that is necessary to get something novel in that line is to look over the list of dogs that have been licensed by the city clerk during the past week. The office carries a large and varied assortment of names of all kinds. There are names for big dogs, for little dogs, for pups and for mongrels. Many of them are common and many are far from being so.

But one titled dog has been registered as yet. He is an Irish terrier belonging to Henry Nesbitt, formerly private secretary to Mayor Hugo. He is a diminutive purp, with all kinds of grit and courage. He will tackle anything in the dog line that comes his way, and he goes by the title of James, Duke of Dublin. The name was chosen by Mayor Hugo who thought that a dog with such distinguished qualities should have a distinguished name.

But one dog in the city has a surname. He is known as Teddy Case and is the property of Manager Case of the water and light department.

What name in the dog world corresponds to Smith in the human tribe? Nine out of ten persons if asked this would answer Fido or Carlo or some perhaps Jack, but Sport has them all left at the post. About one dog in every six or seven in Duluth is named Sport, while the other common names such as Fido, Bruno, Carlo and Jack are left far behind.

One Duluth dog rejoices in the pseudonym of Booze, while another answers Pickwick. The pair of them ought to be enough to make a man see snakes.

Prominent men are frequently made the namesakes of pups. Among the list appear Teddy, Roosevelt, Kaiser, Dewey, Dooley, Tracy (named after the outlaw), and at last but not least Chauncey. Whether the latter was named after the famous New York senator, or the Duluth chief of police is known only to the owner, and he will not tell.

It is easy to pick out the women's pets among the dogs. No self-respecting man would name a dog Trixie or Cute or Clyde. One pup is compelled to worry through life with the name of You Know.

Pat McCann is the good old Irish name given another, while half a score of Paddies appear.

Among the other peculiar names are Nig, Pinto, Nibs, Tip, Chub, Bouncer, Pete, Tige, Doodles and Buster. The last one should doubtless be included in the list of those named after prominent men, as he appears to have been named for the immortal "Buster Brown."

THE STATE OF TRADE

Shown By Reports to the International Mercantile Agency.

New York, May 27.—Advices from special corespondents of the International Mercantile agency indicate that there has been further improvement this week in distribution of merchandise at prominent Western centers and generally better jobbing trade at Omaha and similar points of distribution, where sales are being pushed successfully. Uncertainty has given place to comparative assurance in quarters where new ventures could scarcely obtain a hearing a few weeks ago.

But merchants everywhere are conservative, buying closer than a year ago. In both lines indications point to heavy trade in fall goods. Boots and shoes are passing quickly into the hands of consumers, returns in this line being for the most part abnormally heavy. Enlarged distribution of foodstuffs is noted at Chicago.

The tie-up in lake traffic is becoming more serious with no prospect of lessening the congestion and little relief from the railroads. Rail tonnage, in fact, shows a small decrease in territory where the roads might be expected to benefit as a result of the water blockade.

The labor situation is less troublesome than a year ago.

Iron and steel continue to show a halting tendency with some better movement of pig iron at Pittsburg and coke production almost at maximum.

The weather has been favorable for crops throughout the West, Southwest and Northwest. Although reports of crop damage come from Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Oklahoma, other sections, notably the Missouri valley, Rocky mountains and the Pacific coast have experienced satisfactory temperature.

CHEERFUL MAGUIRE

A Sunny Philosopher, Though His Tongue Is Gone.

Can Laugh, Read and Still Grasp Friends' Hands.

New York, May 27.—"I can laugh, I can read, I can still grasp my friends by the hand, and no one has attempted to restrin me from walking on Broadway. So why should I not be happy?"

It was the expression of Tom Maguire, who is once more visiting his old haunts and mingling among his former friends. Three months ago he was taken to the hospital suffering with cancer of the tongue. The surgeons advised him that an amputation of his tongue might save his life.

"Cut away then, old Sawbones," was Maguire's reply.

The operation was so rare that it attracted widespread attention, and when the patient was discharged by the surgeons a short time ago they paid him this compliment:

"You are the gamest man who ever came into this hospital."

With the sun shooting down its most scorching rays on sweltering Broadway, Maguire in winter overcoat, muffler and rubber overshoes made a most picturesque appearance yesterday afternoon when he stopped in front of the Broadway theater just as the matinee crowd was arriving. A slight scar on his cheek and another on his throat were witnesses to the critical operation he had recently undergone, and white streaks in his hair showed that his troubles had left their marks upon him.

For a full half hour Maguire watched the crowd pour in to the theater, now and then nodding to an acquaintance, taking others by the hand and occasionally calling out by name those he knew intimately.

Marvelous as it may seem, Maguire is not altogether bereft of the power of speech. His tongue has been removed in its entirety, yet by perseverance the old theatrical manager has learned to form words and make sounds that are quite intelligible.

"Heaven blass you, man," he said, only fools would lament the loss of a tongue. It's the heart, my boy, that counts. And the mouth of a wise man is in his heart.

"Man alive, I can still think things, can't I? I can still open my eyes and see the good and beautiful all about me. What more could I ask? I remember when I was a boy it was a custom among parents to wash out their kids' mouths with soap when they told a lie or said a naughty word. Gee! I must have told a whopper at some time or other to have to lose my tongue.

"Here's the leda: Misfortune is misfortune only when you insist upon it. I've never known a trouble so great that the victim couldn't make it bigger.

"'Laugh and the world laughs with you,' may not always be true, 'but weep and you weep alone" is. The world is not halted by mankind's sorrows. So mankind ought to take the tip and follow the same rule.

"The loss of my tongue is a boon in some ways. Just think. I won't be able to sing any more. You'll see what happens when I try."

After emitting a number of weird sounds Maguire explained that he had been singing the choruses of "Fare Thee Well, Molly Darling" and "Fair Land of Poland."

"Pretty rotten, wasn't it?" he asked. "I was aways bad with the pipes when it came to music, and mighty few men will have the distinction of being a worse singer than I used to be when I sang in public.

"Everybody seems to think that I should be going around morose and melancholy. Why, some of the best things in this world haven't got the power of speech. For instance, there are flowers and stars. And there's the horse. I know plenty of horses that are worth more and do more good than some men I have met.

"I dn't know just what I will do. Probably will move to my farm up the state. Later on I may ask some manager to give me a job, but not as a vocalist. The doctors tell me it is wonderful that I can make myself understood at all. I keep practicing when I am alone, and then I have some friends who are very good and keep me company. If you want to know how it feels place your tongue against the roof of your mouth and try to deliver Hamlet's soliloquy. I never was altogether in accord with the sentiments conveyed in those lines, but they're all right to practice on."

WEST DULUTH

West Duluth authorities on fishing say that conditions are now ideal for catching good strings of members of the finny tribe in the St. Louis river and Spirit Lake. The water has warmed up considerably, compared to what it was two weeks ago, and it is claimed that the fish feel more in the mood for chasing after artificial bait when the water is warm.

It would appear that this assertion contains an element of truth, for there certainly are a good many more pike and pickerel being caught in the bay and river now than was the case two weeks ago. There were just as many fishermen then, but in spite of their efforts they met with poor success, except at the rapids above Fond du Lac, where a number of large strings were caught during the spawning season.

Last Sunday the fishing in the vicinity of West Duluth was fair, but it is claimed that it will be much better the coming Sunday. Several angiers try their luck in the bay every morning now, and most of the report good success. Several fishing parties are being made up to leave town Saturday night, going up the river, and not returning until the night of Monday, Memorial day.

A GREAT RECEPTION.

Ball Team to Have Big Time at Hibbing.

Great preparations are being made in Hibbing for the reception of the West Duluth baseball team, which is scheduled to play two games in the range town Sunday and Monday. New grounds, said to be the finest amateur ball park in that part of the state, will be opened for the first time to the public at the Sunday game. Brass bands will be in attendance, and to further mark the importance of the occasion, the first ball will be pitched by W. J. Power, mayor of Hibbing. The grounds are said to be in the finest possible shape, and good games are looked for, for both teams are in good condition.

The local aggregation will leave for Hibbing Sunday morning, and will play the first game Sunday afternoon and the last Monday afternoon. It is expected that a number of rooters from Duluth will accompany the nine.

Next Sunday, June 5, the West Duluths will play Cloquet, on the local grounds. A game will be arranged with the Big Duluths in the near future. The Big Duluths were to have played the locals last Monday, but the game was postponed because of wet grounds.

The line-up at Hibbing Sunday will be as follows:

W. Duluth,	Hibbing.
T. Robinson ... catcher	Kleffman
Larson ..... pitcher	Freeman
E. Buska .... short stop	Karkeet
Coughlin ..... first base	Meisner
Brotherton .. second base	Goldie
Moe ..... third base	Ulrich
Casey ..... right field	Shuer
A. Buska .... cetner field	Geiselman
E. Robinson ... left field	Dwyer

Sporting Boots will help you to catch the speckled beauties.

BOULEVARD EXTENSION.

Members of the city council and the park board, accompanied by the city engineer, yesterday afternoon went over the proposed route of the extension of the boulevard, from its present terminus at Fortieth avenue west to the Oneota cemetery road, which merges into Fifty-ninth avenue west. The sentiment of the entire party, which consisted of Aldermen Chesney and David Sang, Dr. Burnside, the West Duluth member of the park board, H. C. Helm, its secretary, and Thomas McGilvray, city engineer, was in favor of the extension. Work on it will probably be commenced this summer.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The third quarterly conference of the Oneota Methodist church will be held in the pastor's study at the church, this evening, at 8 o'clock. Rev. E. C. Clemens, presiding elder of the district, will have charge.

This evening, at 8 o'clock, the second Christian Endeavor rally of the West Duluth district, will be held at the Plymouth Congregational church. Rev. C. F. Davis, of Lester Park, will speak on "The Social Side of Religion." Other talks and some special music will follow. There will also be a social hour. A general invitation to the young people of West Duluth to attend has been extended.

Santa Marie court, W. C. O. F., last night initiated a class of twenty-five new members into the order. The installation ceremonies, which were attended by visiting members from the range, Ashland, Superior and Duluth, were held in Gilley's hall. After the business of the meeting was over with, refreshments were served. A musical program was also rendered.

West Duluth merchants, who have been protesting against the fact that Central avenue has not been sprinkled once this year, discovered the other day that the contract for sprinkling has not not yet been let, and that the water wagon is out of repair. The dust is steadily getting worse. It is said the business men are to take some action to relieve the situation.

For the best ice cream and dairy products, wholesale or retail, call Murray Bros.

Members of the Longshoremen's union, after a long season of idleness, are again busy. A large number of lumber boats are now being loaded, giving employment, it is said, to all members of the organization, and many who are not members.

The West Duluth Athletics will play ball Sunday afternoon on the Fifty-second avenue west diamond with an amateur aggregation of ball tossers from Superior. The local battery will consist of Nelson and Botan.

The West Duluth Social club held a business meeting last night to arrange for the entertainment to be given on the evening of Decoration day. It was decided that Flaaten's orchestra should be engaged.

The work of paving Central avenue, under the McDonnell contract, is progressing favorably, and if the weather continues fair it is expected that the contract will be completed within the next two weeks.

The Second street baseball team will play the Protor team on Decoration day.

Memorial day exercises are today being held in all the West Duluth schools, the rooms in each building uniting for a single program. In the Irving the pupils will meet in the assembly room, while at the Longfellow and Fairmont schools the halls will be used for holding the exercises. As arranged, the programs are quite elaborate.

Mrs. C. G. Grisdale has removed from West Duluth to Virginia, Minn., to join her husband, who is engineer for the Virginia Lumber company.

W. M. Smeaton and O. J. Simonds are in the city from Scanlon.

John T. Johnson has removed from his farm near Pike Lake to 423 North Fifty-eighth avenue west.

H. Hicks, of the Fond du Lac cedar yard, has returned from a trip to the range.

Joseph Hancock, of Fifty-eighth avenue west, has returned from an extended Western trip.

Charles Davis, of Cloquet, is transacting business in the city.

Saturday night there will be a grand opening at Alfred Bourdo's place of business, 414 Central avenue. Music and refreshments.

Santa Marie court, W. C. O. F., last night initiated a class of twenty-five new members into the order. The installation ceremonies, which were attended by visiting members from the range, Ashland, Superior and Duluth, were held in Gilley's hall. IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

It is supposable and probable that there have been people who started on the long struggle of being happy ever after with the weaker half of the two wearing on the third finger of her left hand a contrivance, which, through courtesy, is called a diamond solitaire. As has been said, it may be possible, but it is hardly believable in this day and age. The diamond rings which are worn now by young women who are to be the sharers of the joy and sorrow of some man's lot are wonder producing. The more humble his job the bigger the ring. Of course, not the circumference of the ring, but the stone which is its attractive feature. The wearer herself may be receiving $5 a week for a week of six days of eight or ten hours each and planning how her last year's chiffon hat may be converted into one with a torpedo crown, but that is the farthest from her mind as she crooks the last two fingers of her left hand as she raises her glass of water in an eating place where other girls may catch her. It is unkind to suggest "Barrios," although the bauble that should sparkle suggests to the unbelieving "a brilliance unsurpassed, a stone upon which experts have been deceived cannot be distinguished from the genuine," etc.

Of course, every girl who accepts a "diamond" with its attendant responsibilities, knows just exactly what is the seven days bit of gossip she furnishes for her friends. If she is real kind she stays out of their way that they may discuss the diamond, his salary, the probabilities of its being genuine, etc. She knows, for has not every previous diamond upon its appearance been the topic of conversation. It goes something like this: "Oh, hello! Beautiful weather, isn't it? Well, yes, it is raining, I know, but have you seen Gertrude lately? No? Well you ought to. She has a ring. A diamond, my dear as big as !! Yes, sir, and I heard he was only making $35 a month. Barrios? Oh, do you think so? Well, I don't know. Dreadful, isn't it, thirty-five is such a little. You think he must make more? Well, maybe, but with conviction, "I know one thing he doesn't make enough to afford a diamond of that size. Well how do they ever expect to live, I'd like to know. Maybe he's got some copper stocks or something, most everybody has, but as nearly as I can make out you pay a lot of money out before you get any back, and, anyway, they are dishonest, I know. I suppose she's happy, but dear me. I do want somebody that can afford two diamonds if he can afford one and then, of course, with a man on salary, there's always the possibility of it being those horrid imitations."

This is bad enough, but if perchance a girl quietly announces her engagement with a ring on her left hand the gossip is confined to one word, "Humph."

At the devotional meeting this noon at the Young Women's Christian association, Rev. J. C. Hartley, of Asbury M. E. church, spoke interestingly.

LINK CHAINS THIS YEAR.

Beads of Last Year Have Given Way.

Last summer is was beads. The summer girl had a bead chain for every frock, and did not mind in the least if she was compared to an Indian squaw.

This year it is a link chain, set in tiny gems. The girl who can dig up an heirloom in old silver, the links blackened by age, and the gems quaintly carved, is to be accounted in great luck. Wealthy women are scouring curio shops and paying absurd prices for them.

The girl who has neither heirlooms nor great wealth contents herself with one of the clever imitations which can be picked up for a song at any store.

The links are small and wire-like, flat rather than round, and set at intervals of three, four or five, with flat, oblong jeweled slides.

A dainty birthday gift for a young girl is the long, slender, summer chain of gold, set in her birth stone. If the girl does not care for her birthstone, the alternative is the Indian emerald, a shade lighter than the real emerald, which is now enjoying a vogue. The Indian Emerald and the real gem are sometimes combined to give a peculiar shaded effect.

As a pendant for these chains, the old-fashioned Latin cross is regarded as exactly the right thing.

An importer recently showed a model, four inches long, set in jewels, which graduated in size from the ends of the arms toward the center, the circle around the heart of the cross being as fine as pin points and sparkling in myriad hues. The price was $3000. In a few weeks a clever imitation of this cross was on the market at 75 cents.

Sometimes the crosses are set in colored gems surrounded by pearls or diamonds. Women who do not have to count pennies have chains set in gems to match their various gowns.

Birthstones seem to be enjoying more than ordinary vogue, and the newest thing in a brooch shows a small gold quill, highly chased and set with a single birthstone in its center. Rings are flat and stolid looking, with heavy settings, including an arrangement of gems whose first letters spell out such words as "Regards" or "Dearest."

Rhinestones will be much employed in summer jewelry and a new imitation is being imported heavily. This is used for large pieces, such as hat pins. For wear with the inevitable white lace hat, there is nothing more striking than an imitation cut as large as a quarter with thirty-two faces, which catch the light admirably.

Jeweled side combs in new designs are shown. Last year the comb turned toward the ear. This season, with the hair parted in the middle, the two combs turn their decorated edges toward each other, running straight up and down the back, and leaving the neat, white part fully exposed.

Combs of amber for tortoise have scalloped edges, each scallop thickly encrusted with marvelously clever imitation gems.

A MESS OF POTTAGE

By Frank H. Sweet.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The lilacs were in bloom, and above them, upon a limb of the big elm, an oriole had hung her pensile nest, and every day in the sunshine her troubadour mate sang to her of love and companionship and airy journeyings. From across the fields came the odor of freshly-plowed ground and the breezy calls of men to their horses. In the barnyard were the cacklings of hens and the peeping of many chickens, while from the pasture below came the lowing of cows to their calves. It was mid-May, and the wheat heads were still green with their thriftiest growing, and the fence corners and roadsides were cheery with their golden offerings of dandelions.

Elsie came to the kitchen door and looked out. The oriole was singing, and she ran lightly down the steps and round the house to the front yard, her sleeves rolled above her plump elbows and her cheeks flushed with the exercise of dishwashing. Her eyes were bright with sympathy of the perfect day and the surroundings, and as she looked up to the oriole her lips parted in a rippling little song which she was to sing with her graduating class at the high school a few weeks later.

But at the front gate the song dropped to a lower key, and then stopped altogether, as a gaily-dressed young man threw himself from his horse and came jauntily toward her, with hat in hand.

"Good morning, Elsie," he began. "I take the ten o'clock, but of course had to come round and say good-bye to you. I haven't much time, you know. But you'll write, won't you And I'll write and tell you how I get along. Everything'll be fine up there."

"Yes, I suppose so," Elsie answered, slowly; "I'll write." Hey eyes had grown softer at his approach, now they looked troubled. They always looked troubled lately after a few minutes' talk with Fred. He was changing so. His people had taken summer boarders, and Fred was aping their manners. He wore cheap kid gloves, and tried to imitate their way of walking, and used as many of their phrases as he could in his conversation. Already he was becoming ashamed of country ways and even of his own people. And now he had been offered a position in the store of one of the boarders, and was going there to work. Why—But she forced back the unworthy thoughts with sudden self-condemnation. Fred was her long-time friend, the brightest boy in the whole neighborhood, her generous competitor in the graduating class, for had he not dropped everything for this position in the city he could easily have won class honors away from her. And of course he had thought of this when he decided to leave the school abruptly. All the rest was merely boyish enthusiasm. Fred was everything, she believed, and hoped, below the surface. Even this going away to the city was an assurance of his unbounded ambition, of his being different from the contented boys of the neighborhood.

So she smiled across the gate at him, and forced the temporary doubt into confidence and pride in him and into gladness for them both.

"Yes, I'll write," she repeated, "and tell you about everything going on here. But they'll be dull letters, for I'm just a farm girl and like farm ways. I wish I could be ambitious like you; but the country is so beautiful. I feel about it like the oriole singing up in the tree. I'm afraid you'll think we are dull, Fred, and grow away from us."

"I couldn't do that," he commenced, eagerly; "not from you, Elsie. I—I wish we—" He hesitated and paused doubtfully. He was looking at her arms, bared above the elbows and already becoming rosy in the direct sunlight, at her plain check apron, which she had not removed when she left the kitchen, at the healthy, sunburned face and bare throat, and his speech faltered. The girls who boarded at his house did not look like that. They carried parasols to protect their hands, and they did not laugh in the loud, hearty manner of the country girls. They were refined.

"Well, I guess I'll have to say good-by, Elsie," he said, with unconscious restraint. "You must write, and I will."

She watched him down the road, to the corner of the next field, where he stopped for a moment to speak with Hank Burten. Hank was one of the plowers whose voices had been ringing cheerily across the fields, and he was in the same class at high school, which would graduated in a few weeks.

When she went in her father was standing on the kitchen steps, lighting his pipe.

"Who was that fellow, El," he asked. "Fred Taggart?"

"Yes, father."

"I thought so. Come to say good-by, didn't he? Well, I'm sorry for old man Taggart; he sets the world by that boy. An' 'tis a pity, too. Fred was the smartest feller round her at one time, for a young chap, an' seemed to have the makin' of something uncommon. But the smartness has all frazzled out now in kid gloves an' squeakin' boots; an' he's goin' up to the city to work for six dollars a week, when his father's got the finest farm round here, an' Fred could have the runnin' of it in a few years if he'd stay. Well, well! Fools ain't all dead yet. But here comes Hank. Guess he wants to see you, El."

Elsie had been slipping into the house with heightened color, but turned back. Hank was the son of their nearest neighbor, and was a good, whole-souled fellow, with clear head and energetic habits, but woefully diffident and slow of speech. Elsie liked him, but had never cared to analyze what Hank's feelings might be toward her.

As he approached them the young man nodded to her father, who was moving away toward the barn, and then turned to her expectantly, with the color rising slowly to the roots of his hair. But not until her father was out of hearing did he speak.

"Elsie," he began then, bashfully, "Fred just said good-by to me. He'll be gone for a long time."

"Yes," tentatively, "he said good-by to me."

"There's that rehearsal tonight—Saturday night, you know, Elsie," he went on. "It's quite a long walk, and—and you'll be needing somebody to go with you. I thought I'd better run over before any of the other boys got round."

"I can go alone just as well as not, Hank. It's bright moonlight."

"Yes, yes, I know 'tis," desperately. "But there's rehearsals next week, and church tomorrow night, and—and there's all summer long, and all next winter. It won't be moonlight all the time. You'll need somebody to walk with you. Of course I ain't asking you to keep company with me," hurriedly; "only—only you'll need somebody till Fred gets back, and I'm handiest."

"I'm not engaged to Fred," proudly.

"No, of course not. I know that—or thought so. But he sort of kept company with you, and—and—I'm handiest, Elsie, and you'll sure need somebody, and—and you and I will understand."

She looked at him thoughtfully.

"Yes, you and I would understand, Hank," she said, 'and maybe I will need somebody sometimes. I—yes, you may come for me, Hank."

The rest came about naturally. Hank became Elsie's steady company, as the neighboring young people said; but Hank and Elsie themselves understood. And Fred, when he returned home for a few days at Christmas, understood, too, and he wrung Hank's hand and called him a good fellow for protecting his girl from the other boys.

Before the end of the next year there was a rumor that Fred's father was not quite satisfied. The firm had not advanced Fred as it ought. He was still receiving six dollars a week, and money had to be sent from home to pay for his clothes; then his letters were filled with theaters and the proper things in high life, with nothing about his work.

By this time Hank had developed into a tall, broad-shouldered young man, perfectly capable of managing the farm which was now almost wholly under his care.

Then one day Fred suddenly appeared among them, jaunty as ever, and home for good, as he said. The city was too crowded and unsatisfying; and besides, his father needed him to manage the farm. And all he brought for his two years' work and the money sent him was a large diamond which flashed upon one of his fingers, and experience.

The very night of his arrival he dressed himself with all the elaborateness of his city knowledge and went across to Elsie's home. She received him in the parlor, in the pretty white dress which he remembered she was having made for her graduation. As she entered the room, something in her bright, winsome beauty, so different from the chalky complexions of the shop girls he had become acquainted with, made him step forward impulsively.

"Why, you're beautiful, Elsie," he exclaimed. "I had no idea. It's fine to be home again. Ain't you glad to see me?"

"Yes, indeed I am, Fred," she answered frankly, as she gave him both her hands. "It will be nice to have you with us again."

Fred laughed complacently and settled himself comfortably in the easiest chair in the room. "Oh, by the way, Elsie," he said presently, "mother told me there was to be a party over to Hull's Wednesday night. Shall we go? I haven't got my invitation yet, but it'll come soon's they hear I'm home."

"Yes, you'll get it all right," Elsie agreed. "But I can't go with you, Fred. I've promised Hank. He's got a cousin staying at his house, though, a nice girl. Suppose you ask her?"

"No, thank you," smilingly. "I'd rather have you. It'll be all right about Hank. I'll see him myself and tell him he's off duty."

The color deepened a little in Elsie's cheeks.

"I don't believe Hank will agree to that, Fred," she said demurely. "We're to be married at Christmas, and he don't seem to want me out of his sight a single evening. But he'll be here in a few minutes now. You can ask him and see."

GROCERS OBJECT

Claim Wholesalers Are Selling Too Much to Private Consumers.

Special Complaint Is Made as to Butter Sales.

A session of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association, held in the Commercial club rooms yesterday afternoon, preliminary action was taken toward protesting to wholesalers and jobbers against the sale of goods direct to the consumer.

The grocers assert that commission men are allowing purchases in small lot by consumers, especially of butter, at the same prices made to the retail dealers. Members of the association complain that they are not receiving fair treatment at the hands of many wholesalers and intend to make their protest a vigorous one.

Matters of credit were also taken up and further action will probably result in establishing a rule under which patrons will be required to settle bills oftener and more promptly.

It is said that the commission men require payment of bills every Thursday to secure discount or their patrons are put on the cash list, and when discount is not asked credit is allowed until the 10th of the month following the purchase. If bills are not met under these requirements, then the retailers are required to pay on cash basis entirely. Among the jobbers practically the same rules are set down for the grocers to observe. In order to meet the demands of the wholesale dealers, the grocers claim, it will be necessary to establish a more strict system of settlement with customers trading on a credit basis.

The association has voted to give $350 to the fund being raised by the Commercial club for carrying out the work of the public affairs committee.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Well Known Jamestown Attorney Found Dead In His Office.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—E. W. Thorp, one of the city's ablest attorneys, was stricken with apoplexy Wednesday night and died alone in his office. He was at one time a law partner of Chauncey Baxter, son of Judge Baxter, with offices in Wadena, Minn., and was several terms state's attorney in Sargent county, this state.

Lisbon—Thomas Gilbertson will erect a $6000 residence. A half dozen other dwelling houses are in process of erection and numerous other improvements are being made.

The alumni association of the high school will hold a banquet Saturday evening.

Fargo—Fred Lynd has been arrested on the charge of robbing a benefactor. The complaining witness is Charles Sandberg. As Lynd was penniless, Sandberg paid for his lodging, meals and drinks, and alleges that Lynd stole $20 from him and skipped to Moorhead, where he was arrested.

There was a raid on the drug store at Forest River, Walsh county. A sugar barrel of stuff labeled "Formaldehyde" looked suspicious. The prohibition workers watched the barrel and sent to Grafton for the sheriff. On his arrival it was found that the barrel had been transferred to the drug store owned by E. C. Krueger, but temporarily in charge of Fred Schlimpf, a clerk. The sheriff searched the barrel and took it and the clerk to Grafton. It is said to have been filled with pint bottles of whisky.

Charles Fieste, known as "Catfish Charlie," has been arrested on the charge of burglary.

Charles Loup was brought in from Wheatland on the charge of bootlegging.

There is a remarkable building boom in the city on small residences. It has been the cry for years that it was impossible to secure a residence in town, and several persons are endeavoring to fill the bill. Most of the buildings are small, though there are some elegant structures in process of erection.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—The commissioners of Brown county have offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of William Ziegler, who murdered De Witt C. Beilby, of Groton. The statutory reward of $100 makes the total to date $600. All traces of Ziegler have been lost.

The May term of the circuit court for Brown county has opened. Judge J. H. McCoy presiding.

Deadwood—Daniel Roby, accused of the murder of Frank Raymes, was acquitted. It was shown that he shot Raymes in self-defense. An Indian named Bad Boy was convicted of stealing horses and sentenced to one year and six months.

Huron—The United Commercial Travelers will take a trip to Winnipeg, the excursion to leave Huron on June 8, going by the way of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

A committee is securing entertainment for visitors and delegates to the State Sunday school convention which meets here on May 31, continuing three days.

Deadwood—The state building at the St. Louis exposition has been completed. S. W. Russell, president of the South Dakota World's fair commission, has just returned and says the South Dakota mineral and agricultural exhibits are the most attractive on the grounds.

CANNON FAVORS

A New Candidate For Governor of Illinois.

Chicago, May 27.—It is anonymously reported that Speaker Cannon is preparing to bring out ex-Congressman Jonathan H. Rowell, of Bloomington, McLean county, as a "dark horse" gubernatorial candidate.

Representative C. A. Allen of Hoopestown, who is supposed to be one of "Uncle Joe's" close lieutenants in Vermillion county, declared Monday that he had wired his friends on the Vermillion county delegation to support Justice Wilkin, of the state supreme court, for governor. The better opinion is that Congressman Cannon has not made known his "dark horse" choice. Mr. Cannon is insistent, however, that two of the three leading candidates must withdraw, in order to break the deadlock at Springfield. McLean county is instructed for Yates.

STARVED HIMSELF.

Inventor Spent All His Money In Experiments.

La Crosse, Wis., May 27.—At the La Crosse hospital, James Craik, a local inventor, is lying seriously ill as a result of starving himself that he might use all his money in experimenting with his inventions. The physicians in charge have declared that the chief cause of Craik's illness is lack of food.

HOW SULLY FELL.

Children Saw Him Shot Down From Ambush.

Norfolk, Neb., May 27.—Out on the Rosebud reservation, a day's drive from Bonesteel, is a freshly-turned mound of earth to mark the grave of Jack Sully, the veteran cattle rustler, who was shot down a few days ago. From his 5-year-old boy the story of his tragic death was related.

United States Marshal Petrie, with deputies, drove up. Petrie waited at a gate; Ben Diamond rode to the house and others hid in a ravine. "Petrie's coming," said Diamond. "Run!"

Sully flew to his horse and galloped down the ravine. With no word of halt, rifles cracked and he fell, before the eyes of his children who stood in the doorway, watching for a farewell wave.

The horse received two wounds, but survives. The coroner's jury was out secretly for two days before deciding that he came to his death "resisting arrest."

THOUGHT TO BE KIDNAPED

A Belle of Butte's Younger Set Cannot Be Found.

Butte, Mont., May 27.—Edna Wiggins, years old, known as one of the belles of the younger society of Butte, is mysteriously missing and the police are of the opinion that she has been kidnapped. She disappeared from her home over a week ago and though the officers have scoured the city for her, no trace has been found.

Two well known young men and a hackdriver are suspected by police of having lured her away. The hackdriver stoutly maintains that he knows nothing about the girl whatever, declaring he drove her to the room of two young men at the time she was last seen at her own request. There, he avers, he lost track of her.

The men have been kept under surveillance for several days, but when arrests were threatened last night they disappeared and probably made their escape out of the city on a freight. They declared they knew Miss Wiggins as "Dolly Varden."

The names of the young men are given as Frank Bell and Joseph Lynch and the police are now looking for them. Edna Wiggins is described as an extremely beautiful girl. She has been employed as a clerk in one of the downtown stores. Her mother, with tears streaming down her face, daily besieges the police station in quest of her daughter.

COLLINS MEN

Call on Senator Clapp to Declare For the Judge.

Heatwole Says the Opposition to Dunn Is Broken Up.

St. Paul, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Will United States Senator Moses E. Clapp openly announce himself in favor of the nomination of Judge Loren W. Collins of St. Cloud? This is the question discussed by politicians of the Twin Cities as a result of the charge of the Collins men that Dunn and Heatwole are in a combination to land the governorship and the seat in the senate.

The Collins men do not hesitate to state that it is time for Clapp to get in the Collins' camp and thus openly defy the scheme o the "other crowd." A Republican who is close to the management of Judge Collins' campaign in Minnesota said yesterday:

"If Clapp knows on which side his bread is buttered, he will get in line openly for Collins. Unless he is blind he can see that Dunn and Heatwole are in a game to land the governorship and the seat in the senate. If he refuses to help Collins who are fighting his battles to a certain extent, will the Collins men be under any obligation to him when the election is on in the next legislature? Will the Collins men feel much like working or him if he refuses now to get in line for Judge Collins? Now that Senator Clapp knows the purposes of Dunn and Heatwole, if he is wise he will take definite sides in the gubernatorial fight.

"Mr. Heatwole's friends accuse Senator Clapp of going into Rice county and making a fight on Heatwole. This is not rue. I don't suppose that Senator Clapp even knows what is going on down in Rice county. If there is any movement against Heatwole there, it is being pushed by Heatwole's enemies who do not like the senatorial game that he is playing."

Mr. Heatwole emphatically denies that he ever made the statements attributed to him in the Minneapolis paper Tuesday evening, and several Republicans who were talking with Mr. Heatwole at the Merchants' hotel at the time he was supposed to have made the statements say that he did not mention the senatorship during the conversation. The friends of both Mr. Dunn and Heatwole say it is solely a move on the part of the Collins men to drive Senator Clapp's friends into the Collins' camp.

"The desperation to which the Collins men are driven in trying to force a senatorial contest indicates clearly the final breaking up of all opposition to Mr. Dunn," said Mr. Heatwole to The Herald correspondent last evening.

* * *

What is considered by Republicans a sure indication that William Henry Eustis, of Minneapolis, will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor is the fact that Judge John H. Steele, chairman of Mr. Eustis' campaign committee in 1898, and one of Eustis' closest friends, has consented to make an address at a meeting of Mr. Dunn's supporters at the Minneapolis Fourth ward wigwam this evening.

Judge Steele is considered the mainstay of Eustis' strength in Hennepin county, and up till the present he has taken no part in the gubernatorial contest. It has been generally supposed that should Mr. Eustis not be a candidate Judge Steele would support Dunn, and the fact that he has come out for Dunn now convinces the Republicans of the Twin Cities that Eustis has decided not to get in the race.

* * *

James A. Martin, Judge Collins' campaign manager, had a conference yesterday with Governor Van Sant and Robert Jamison, the governor's private secretary, and all sorts of rumors were afloat at the capitol as to the meaning of the conference.

Although the genetlemen refused to discuss the purpose of the meeting, it was generally supposed that Mr. Martin talked with the governor and his private secretary regarding Judge Collins' campaign. One report was that the Hennepin county situation, where there are two local candidates—Lieutenant Governor Jones and either Judge Simpson or Judge Elliott—was the topic of discussion. It is said that the Collins men have decided to work for an uninstructed delegation from Hennepin in view of the candidacy of Jones and one of the district judges.

* * *

Representative W. A. Hinton of Truman, Martin county, a staunch supporter of R. C. Dunn, says that the Princeton candidate will get several counties in the Second congressional district. Mr. Hinton expects that Dunn will get solid delegations from Martin, Faribault and Jackson, and at least half delegations from Cottonwood, Watonwan and Brown.

* * *

Representative E. W. Stark of Harris, a supporter of Judge Collins, says that Chisago county will probably be divided between Collins and Dunn.

COURTHOUSE AND POLICE

Engaged In Terrible Combat on the Baseball Diamond.

Signs of pent-up anxiety were in evidence about the county courthouse this morning, and with bated breath the employes were discussing the probabilities of the outcome of the ball game this afternoon between Steve Pierce's "sluggers" and the "copper'" ball team, at Athletic park.

The "sluggers" will comprise nine men who are all in the employ of the county, and Manager Pierce has made affidavit that he will not attempt to put in any "ringers."

It was rumored at the courthouse this morning that Dr. Patton, county physician, would be disqualified on the ground he had played ball some time in the past, but investigation showed that somebody got the doctor mixed up in a joke that was perpetrated at the Elks' minstrels the other evening.

U. G. Holloway, who was to have played at short for the courthouse team, is said to have stepped on his elbow while practicing base running and will have to sit on the bench along with Alexander Schultz of the county auditor's office.

County Auditor Halden and Clerk of Court J. P. Johnson have been elected as mascots of the courthouse team, with the understanding that the mascots stand treat if their team wins. Manager Pierce has arranged the following line-up:

Pitcher.....Dr. Frederick Patton
Catcher .. ..Ray Butchert
Short stop .. ..H. A. Liedel
First base .. ..S. L. Pierce
Second base .. ..Dr. J. A. McCuen
Third base .. ..Joseph Cook

SENT BACK TO CANADA.

Young Woman of Lost Mind Is Returned.

Miss Elizabeth Gilyatt, a young woman who has been confined at the detention hospital for the past five weeks at the expense of the state, because of insanity, was placed aboard the steamer bound for Port Arthur. She will be taken to her home in Canada, which is at Murilla, about sixteen miles from Port Arthur.

Miss Gilyatt, the authorities claim, has been showing signs of insanity for a long time, and in view of the fact that she is not a resident of this state or county, the state bore the expense of her detention in the hospital.

As she has shown no signs of improvement and would likely remain a state charge for the rest of her life, the state board of control has decided that it is cheaper to furnish the transportation back to her Canadian home. The parents of the young woman are living at Murilla.

MORE COAL CONTRACTS

New York, May 27.—More coal-purchase contracts said to be identical in form with two score other contracts previously introduced were produced today by G. T. Brownell, of general counsel for the Erie road, when the interstate commerce commission began its final session of the present series of hearings on the alleged coal combine pact.

Thomas F. Richards, of Philadelphia, general coal sales agent of the Philadelphia & Reading, said the Reading's coal prices were determined from the condition of the market, and the capacity of the mines. Mr. Richards said he knew even before the April, 1904, price schedule was issued what the Lehigh Valley and the Lackawanna companies intended charging for coal, but how he got the information he did not recall. Nowadays, the witness said, "everybody who sells coal is more independent. Each interest determines upon its own price."

In answer to Commissioner Clements Mr. Richards said ther existed a better feeling among the railroads today with reference to their coal interests than formerly. The petty jealousies had decreased and this in a measure had explained why price wars were not probable.

When asked what happened if the Reading in a certain field cut its circular price, the witness created a laughter by saying: "We deny it, if we do."

G. A. Richardson, second vice president of the Erie road, was questioned at length by Mr. Shearn, the examining attorney about distances and freight rates applying to the Upper Lackawanna valley fields in an attempt to show that all the lateral lines are involved in freight discrimination in violation of the Sherman law.

None of the birds sent on the steamer Easton by H. F. Flynn, which were to be released enroute to Grand Marais, had reached home by noon today, and it is believed they were not released from the boat at the time expected. ONE JURY REMAINS.

It Will Finish Cases at Present Term.

One jury remains in district court to dispose of any remaining jury cases. The jury is busy at the present time with the jersonal injury case of Carl Tuv against the Lesure Lumber company, which is likely to be completed by this evening. The morning session was devoted largely to the argument of the counsel for the mill company on a motion for a dismissal of the action.

The suit of Eckstein against Johnson, to recover on an alleged lease of a store building, is still on trial before Judge Cant, while the suit brought by Hanning Stambach, through his guardian, aganst the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company, of Philadelphia, is being heard by Judge Dibell.

There is possibly one more jury case for trial if the parties interested do not effect a settlement by the time the Tuv vs Lesure Lumber company case is finished.

DELIVERY OF POLICY

Is Extending Credit and Loss Must Be Paid.

St. Paul, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court handed down an opinion today that may have considerable bearing on fire insurance policies issued in Minnesota hereafter.

The case is that of Herman Kollitz, respondent, against the Equitable Mutual Fire Insurance company, and is written by Judge Brown. The appeal came from Hennepin county. The supreme court takes the broad ground that delivering a policy, without a prepayment of the premium, is extending credit, and that, if a loss is suffered in the meantime, it must be paid, stipulations to the contrary notwithstanding.

"DANGER AHEAD."

The Engineer's Care.

THERE is danger ahead for some of us who do not look after the proper handling of the human body. Exactly as the power of the steam engine depends upon the amount of energy it can produce from its fuel, so the power of the man depends upon the amount of energy he can produce from his food. Success and power in war or in peace, in business or statesmanship depends upon good digestion and pure blood.

An ignorant man cannot run an engine; neither can a man over-work his brain without meeting some disaster unless he observes certain laws of health. If the engine is properly oiled and cared for it will last a great many years, and in the same way if the human mechanism is properly looked after it will last the allotted three score and ten years. As civilization progresses, the draft on the brain and nerves increases, but no class of work burns up blood as fast as brain work. Hard work confined to shop or office, without the invigorating air and sunshine becomes "the pace that kills," the muscles and flesh become flabby and the blood watery. The human system must be a laboratory for the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. Success and courage depend upon the blood and the blood depends upon the stomach, for the stomach, when healthy, takes up from the food we eat the elements required for the blood. If the stomach cannot assimilate the food taken up, then the blood and the nerves starve for the proper nourishment they require. This human machine soon breaks down, like the engine without coal for its boilers, because the heart, liver and lungs do not receive the pure blood necessary to keep them strong and active.

"Remember this, that our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without good, pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil." After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general break-down, a tonic made of the alterative extracts of certain herbs and roots was the best corrective. This he called: Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For over a third of a century this tonic and alterative has been more largely sold than any other blood medicine or nerve tonic. Being made without alcohol, this "Medical Discovery" does not shrink up the red blood corpuscles, but on the other hand it increases their number, and they become round and healthy. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heartburn, and many uncomfortable symptoms, such as heart-palpitation due to gas formed in the stomach. It is especially adapted in diseases attended with excessive tissue waste, especially in convalescence from the various spring fevers, whether of a malarial or typhoid character. As a tonic and reconstructive during and after the influences of grip it will prove of particular value. It has been extensively used as a re-builder after the severity of a rheumatic attack.

A chemical test of the water from the human body will tell whether the kidneys are in good health or not. These tests of health are conducted by expert physicians and chemists every day. Such examinations are made without cost. This is only a very small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the founder and director of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of that city. To build up the body that has been weakened by an attack of grip, pneumonia or typhoid, write Dr. R. V. Pierce for advice, giving all your symptoms, and he will give you the best medical advice possible to suit your case, and without cost. For those who are weakened by the after effects of a bad cold, cough or grip caught during the winter, nothing will increase the number of red blood corpuscles and eradicate poison from the blood so quickly as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"I feel it my duty to write you as I have received so much benefit from the use of your medicines," says Mrs. R. Sando, of Elon, Iowa. "I was troubled with torpid liver, indigestion, and nervous prostration, for about eighteen months and lost strength so that I was unable to do my work. Consulted several doctors but without receiving help. They advised me to have an operation for gall stone, which I thought would be the very last step I would take. I then sat down and wrote to you for advice, some five or six months ago, and have since been taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Can now say I am well and able to do all my work, besides doing lots of weaving. In the last two months I have woven about four hundred yards of carpet and feel now that I will keep on with it as I like the weaving business so well. I took only eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

"I will be glad if I can say anything to those who are suffering as I did."

"CURE THYSELF,"

by reading some good book on medical science. A thorough one is the "Common Sense Medical Adviser, edited and published by R. V. Pierce, M. D., of Buffalo, N. Y. It is a work of 1000 pages that you can obtain by sending 31 one-cent stamps for a copy in cloth binding, or 21 stamps for the paper edition, to Dr. Pierce. It treats of anatomy, physiology, the marriage relation, and all things which are best for preserving health and preventing disease.

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is a pure compound of medicinal plants scientifically combined. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

ONIONS BY ACRES.

Two Thousand Negroes Employed to Load Crop.

New Orleans, May 27.—J. P. Adams, superintendent of field operations for Wisner & Dresser, the real estate firm of this city, who are now engaged in reclaiming a large area of land on Bayou Lafourche, is spending a few days in the city at the St. Charles hotel. Mr. Adams believes that the development of that section has barely begun, and that the future will witness an even greater influx of truck growers in the Lafourche country, who will transform it into one vast onion field.

"Between the Southern Pacific crossing and Golden Meadow, along the west bank of Bayou Lafourche, the evidences of the growth of the truck-growing industry would surprise the visitor," said Mr. Adams. "Between these points the onion and the Irish potato crops have been enormous. The handling of the onions this season has given employment to a small army of laborers, and it has required a considerable fleet of steamboats and barges to move the product, and those engaged in the trade were scarcely able to move the crops fast enough.

"About 2000 negroes are employed at the two places named in bringing the crop to the landing and loading the boats and barges. It is not uncommon to see from six to eight boats tied up at either place taking on cargoes of onions.

"These are the first crops moved, and as soon as they are cleared away the truck farmers in that section have their crops of corn and sweet potatoes coming on. They find the growing of crops in rotation one of the great advantages offered by that soil, and they follow that method assiduously with most profitable results.

"In the cultivation of onions on a large scale they are especially favored, as the Creoleonion grown there commands the top price of the market all over the United States on account of its fine flavor.

"An idea of the great quantity of onions shipped from that section this year may be estimated when I tell you that the records show that no less than 600,000 onion sacks were bought by the farmers in that territory this season. There were, of course, a large number of sacks already on hand.

"These onions brought prices during the season ranging between 85 cents and $1.55 a sack. Just figure that up and you will have a pretty good sum, which represents the profitable amount paid for that onion crop.

"The moving of these crops presented many busy scenes well worth a trip there to see as evidence of the development of the truck-growing industry in Louisiana. This, however, I believe is but the beginning of this industry in that section."

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Fillbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

NO SECOND CHOICE

Has "Tom" Taggart, Who Speaks For the Indiana Democrats.

Says Judge Parker Would Carry Indiana Against Roosevelt.

New York, May 27.—Ex-Mayor Thomas Taggart, Democratic national committeeman for Indiana, was in New York this week on a flying visit. Mr. Tagart talked upon the Parker boom, and urged Democratic harmony in the Empire State. He had, as usual, all the recent developments at his finger tips, from the Parker gains in the West to the amount of Pluto water that Corporation Counsel John J. Delaney drank at French Lick, from where it had been reported in dispatches to New York papers that Mr. Delaney went to see if the McClellan presidential boom would have a show in Indiana.

Mr. Taggert gave it out at the outset that he was in New York on business, not on a political mission. He said that he was not going to Esopus, the home of Judge Parker, in fact, he said that he did not know the location of the place. Mr. Taggart also predicted in the most positive terms the nomination of Judge Parker, and said further that the judge would carry Indiana against Roosevelt.

"All is peace and harmony," Mr. Taggart said, when asked about the situation in his own state. "We are all united, and Indiana is solid for Parker."

"Is McClellan the second choice of Indiana?"

"Indiana has no second choice," Mr. Taggart said, emphatically. "There is no need of a second choice. Mr. Parker will be nominated as surely as we are standing here. You will see that it will come out as I say. When we get to St. Louis all difficulties will be straightened out and we will unite on him. Indiana is instructed for him, and will, of course, take a leading part in bringing about his nomination. The other Western states will quickly fall in line. Minnesota will be for Parker, and Wisconsin will be for him, too, after giving a complimentary vote to its favorite son. It is plain now that the South will be for New York's candidate; so there is not, in my opinion, any possibility of preventing his nomination. Tammany's present attitude toward Judge Parker will not affect the action of the convention."

"Did you see Mr. Delaney when he was out in Indiana?"

"Yes; he went out to French Lick Springs to drink Pluto water, and not to play politics. I see in the newspapers that he today reported the situation in Indiana to Mayor McClellan. Well, if that is so, he has reported what I have just been telling you—that Indiana is for Parker, and has no second choice."

"Suppose Leader Murphy should go to St. Louis and advise the delegates there against voting for Parker?"

"Mr. Murphy is too smart a man to do anything like that," said Mr. Taggart. "The Democrats out West regard Tammany Hall as a great organization that is thoroughly Democratic and always supports the ticket. We do not think of Tammany Hall as an organization that would do otherwise than support the candidate."

"Will Parker carry Indiana against Roosevelt?"

"Certainly, or we would not be for him. We have gone over his record with the greatest care. We have looked up his position in '96, and have found that he was perfectly regular in that campaign; that he not only voted for and supported the regular ticket, but contributed to the campaign fund in that year. We have looked up his decisions on trust and labor questions, and have found them satisfactory. We have said, 'This is a man with a clean record; a man whom we can all support; a man who can be nominated and elected.'"

"Will Bryan remain regular?"

"Yes, he will. Bryan will make his fight, and he will then fall in line, with all the others, for Judge Parker. Bryan cannot afford to be irregular, after all that he has said about irregularity, and the fact that others have been irregular in the past will afford him no excuse for being irregular now."

"Will Bryan succeed in having the Kansas City platform reaffirmed?"

"He will not. The platform will contain only the live issues of the present time."

Mr. Taggart expressed the hope that the Democrats in this state would come to some agreement.

"In politics, as in business," he said, "a man must rise to the occasion, even though he has to overlook former antagonisms. Murphy is young, strong and clean, and I believe he will rise to the occasion. This state ought to be big enough for all. Senator McCarren ought not to be humiliated. Why couldn't Mr. Murphy look after the city and McCarren look after the state?"

Mr. Taggart said that President Roosevelt's strength in the West was not what it was represented to be.

"He is popular in the far West, I admit—in the cowboy states—but not in the middle West."

ELOPERS IN OKLAHOMA

Have a Strenuous Time In Getting Away.

Guthrie, O. T., May 27.—Jonathan Delay and his 17-year-old bride are stopping at a hotel in Snyder, O. T., awaiting a parental blessing that thus far has failed to appear. They were married after a strategic movement that consumed more than a week in its operation.

The bride, who was Miss Effie Bills, is the daughter of J. W. Bills, a farmer, who, together with his wife, refused consent to the marriage, and for a week kept the girl a prisoner in a room from which escape was deemed impossible. The prospective bridegroom, during all the time of her imprisonment, kept in the vicinity of the home, awaiting an opportunity to kidnap her.

The girl's brother, on returning home from a trip and learning the facts, took the girl's side and began a campaign to rescue her for Delay. A chum, Tony Summers was enlisted in the enterprise.

Summers went to the farm and engaged Bills in a conversation relative to digging a well in a pasture lot. While thus engaged Delay and young Bills drove up in a buggy. The father called to his wife to bring out his shotgun and the wife was obeying when she was seized by Delay, who held her while Summers made the father a prisoner. Young Bills appeared from behind the house, kicked in a window, aided his sister to the ground, and together they left in the wagon and waited some distance up the road until Delay and Summers caught up with them.

The father started after them, but was distanced. Delay and the girl were married, while the father was traveling another road, supposedly on their trail.

STARTS FOR AMERICA

Cardinal Satolli Begins His Journey to the United States.

Rome, May 27.—Cardinal Satolli left here this morning for Naples on his journey to the United States. At Naples he will take the steamer Princess Irene for New York.

Cardinal Satolli is accompanied by his cousin, Father Ercole, his private secretary, Father Marucchi, and a second secretary, Father Ligi. There were gathered at the railroad station to bid goodbye, many high prelates and dignitaries. Count Santucci, Cardinal Satolli's apostolic agent, and Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American college in Rome, were also present. Cardinal Satolli repeated that he was not charged with any mission, adding:

"I am going, attracted to the United States by pleasant remembrances of my sojourn there. I have many good friends in America, so I anticipate great pleasure in revisiting the noble country, where I pursued such an important part of my career and where the people give the whole world such an example of fraternity, all harmonizing without distinction of religion."

TUBERCULOSIS CONGRESS

Formally Opened in Parliament House, Copenhagen.

Copenhagen, May 27.—The international tuberculosis congress was formally opened in Parliament house today under the presidency of Prof. Brouardel of Paris. Crown Prince Frederik, the ministers and members of the diplomatic corps including United States Minister Swenson, were among those in attendance. Delegates from twenty countries, among them Dr. Pottenger, of Los Angeles, Cal., and E. L. Trudeau, of New York, were present. Premier Deuntzer welcomed the delegates.

After the opening ceremony the crown prince mingled with the delegates and conversed with Mr. Trudeau and Dr. Pottenger.

REVOLUTIONISTS WIN

In Battle With Dominican Government Troops.

Cape Haytien, Hayti, May 27.—After being informed of the defeat of the Dominican government troops yesterday at Esperanza, the revolutionary generals, Noneycepin and Mauricio Jiminez, left Monto Cristi, the headquarters of the revolutionists, and marched on Dajabon with the intention of dislodging from there Gen. Epifanio Rodriguez, the government commander at that place.

Later details of the fighting at Esperanza show that all the ammunition and other supplies of the government force fell into the hands of the revolutionists.

It is learned from an official source that Gen. Guayubin has been appointed Dominican minister of war, in succession to Gen. Rarul Cabrera, who commanded the government troops at Esperanza yesterday and who died soon after the battle from a wound received during the engagement. Gen. Guayabin will leave Santiago de les Caballeros shortly at the head of 300 fresh troops.

THE SMOOT CASE.

Committee Will Meet In Utah This Summer.

Salt Lake, May 27.—According to Senator Dubois of Idaho, who reached Salt Lake from Washington en route to his home in Blackfoot, the senate subcommittee on privileges and elections will meet in Utah some time before congress reassembles for the purpose of hearing further testimony in the Smoot case, and will have its report before the senate soon after that body meets.

Senator Dubois, owing to his position as member of the senate committees, refused to discuss the merits of the case or give an opinion as to the possibility of Senator Smoot being unseated as a result of the investigation.

MATHILDE'S JEWELS

Are Sold at Paris For Very Large Sums.

New York, May 27.—The total sum realized from the first day's sale of the jewels belonging to the late Princess Mathilde, says the Herald's Paris correspondent was $99,489, almost all of which was paid for a single number, a splendid pearl collar of seven strands, comprising 384 pearls, given by Napoleon I to the queen of Westphalia.

M. Mannheim, an expert, valued the necklace at $100,000. The bidding began at $20,000 but leaped immediately to $50,000. After spirited bidding the necklace was sold to a dealer for $88,000.

The next highest price of the day was $3120, paid for a diamond and ruby bracelet.

THE M'NALLY WILL FILED FOR PROBATE.

Chicago, May 27.—The widow, children, and other immediate relatives of Andrew McNally are made the beneficiaries in his will, which has been filed for probate. The personal property is valued at $900,000 and the real estate at $100,000.

Della M. McNally, the widow, is bequeathed the Chicago homestead and the winter home at Altadena, Cal.

Frederick George McNally, a son, is to hold in trust the stock held by the testator in Rand-McNally & Co. The dividends are to be divided in five equal parts for the widow and children.

REVISED VERSION

Of Bible Not Acceptable to Episcopalians.

St. Louis, May 27.—After two days' discussion of the matter, the Episcopal diocesan convention of Missouri by a good majority, voted against the use of the revised version of the Bible in the prescribed service of the church. Laymen were stronger than the clergy in making the vote decisive. The clergy vote was 12 for the revised version and 19 against, and of the laity 9 for and 26 against.

DON JAIME THROWN.

Liao Yang, Thursday, May 27.—Don Jaime De Bourbon, son of Don Carlos, the pretender to the Spanish throne, who went to the far East in February, was thrown from his horse today and badly shaken up. His injuries, however, are not serious.

FIRES IN TIMBER

Unusual Condition This Time of Year Now Exists.

Farmers In Some Sections Are In Serious Danger.

The fact that so many timber and cut-over districts in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin are threatened with serious fires now is a condition that is somewhat unusual for this season of the year.

Forest fires are always more or less frequent in the fall, after everything is dried up, following a long spell of dry weather, but to have enough dry weather during the past two months to cause danger from fires is something that has not happened in the spring and early summer months in this part of the state for many years.

The state firewarden has already sent out to the various boards of county commissioners, particularly in the timber district of the state, copies of the state laws relating to the precautions that should be taken to prevent forest fires, and the steps that should be taken to check them wherever discovered.

One of the noticeable features of the fire warden's instructions this year is the elimination of the word "wilfully" in connection with the starting of dangerous fires in timber country, or the leaving of brush and tree tops in such condition as to augment a fire should one be started.

Under the instructions of the firewarden there will be no such thing this year as a logger or settler escaping punishment in case of a fire, if he has not complied fully with the letter of the law relative to the cleaning up of brush piles and tree tops. The authorities intend to hold the individual or firm responsible whether or not the neglect was wilfull or unintentional.

By this means the firewarden figures that greater care will be exercised by these concerns who have been logging this past winter, and who have let the matter of clearing up the rubbish go by default.

Complaints are already coming in from sections of the county where logging operations were conducted that the loggers did not burn up the tree tops as directed.

Homesteaders in township 56-17 are said to fear a conflagration that may be as bad as the Hinckley fire, because the logging operators in that township failed to observe the law last winter and burn up the tree tops and brush. It is claimed that the woods are full of the dry brush and decaying timber, and that a fire through that district would sweep everything before it, including much valuable standing timber.

In the township there are some fifty homesteaders, while there are as many more in adjoining districts.

The law which the firewarden has sent to the county commissioners is to be printed in the papers, under direction of the board and at the expense of the county.

The communication from Firewarden Andrews, including the copy of the laws, has been passed on by the county attorney's office, and it is to be printed later, the commissioners figuring at their last meeting that it was too early yet to agitate the matter.

In view of the danger that is threatening some of the timber districts in the county, it is likely that a resolution may be passed at the meeting, the first week in June, to have the state fire laws published at once.

BELL CAN BE REPAIRED

Serious Suggestion of Winona Man Regarding Liberty Bell.

Winona, Minn., May 27.—Dr. J. Steinbach, a practicing specialist of this city, who moved here several years ago from South Dakota, proposes a somewhat startling idea which has been suggested to him by the forthcoming trip of the old Liberty bell through this city on its way to the St. Louis exposition. The idea is to mend the crack in this historic proclaimer of liberty, so that it will give forth sound as it did in the olden time. Probably those to whose keeping the bell is intrusted would prefer this famous relic to remain as it is, but the suggestion of Dr. Steinbach is made in all seriousness, and he is preparing to bring it to the attention of congress.

Dr. Steinbach insists that the bell can be mended to sound as perfectly as before it was cracked and with the same tone. He says he makes this assertion on the authority of Herman Julius Meyer, of Leipzig, an expert mineralogist, who has seen the process successfully undertaken with bells in Germany. The doctor says that the exact process of healing bell cracks is known to only one family, Swedes by the name of Olson. They operated in their native country, but, exhausting that field, have been in Germany for some time. Dr. Steinbach has written to Professor Meyer at Leipzig asking for the address of the Olsons.

Members of the Olson family generally conduct their operations in the center of a large field, being effectually shut off from public view by a large spread of canvas and with a guarantee from the authorities that they will not be interfered with. It is understood the bell is inclosed both inside and out with a plaster of paris cast, the only opening being the crack. By a special process they are able to duplicate the composition of the bell and to pour a melted solution of this into the crack opening, further making a perfect join, so that the appearance of one bell is given.

CONSCRIPTION

Recommended For British Home Defense Army.

London, May 27.—The report of the royal commission on the volunteer and militia forces practically recommends conscription as the only means of providing a home defense army adequate for the protection of the country in the absence or partial absence of the regular troops. The commissioners are of the opinion that the principles adopted by all the other great European states must be largely adopted by Great Britain and that it is the duty of every able-bodied citizen to be trained for national defense. They point out that the necessary training would involve a period of continuous service with the colors, under an instruction body of specially educated and highly trained officers, and they consider that one year of such continuous training would suffice, with a few weeks' attendance at the manouvres for a year or two afterwards. The commissioners estimate that such a scheme would provide about 350,000 trained men annually at a cost probably less than that of the present militia system.

FRATS MAKE TROUBLE.

Societies In Chicago High Schools Declared Nuisance.

Chicago, May 27.—Investigation of public school secret fraternities, on the ground that they are detrimental to good scholarship and a wholesome school spirit, has been ordered by the board of education.

With reference to the action of the board, Superintendent Cooley said: "The societies in the Chicago high schools are a nuisance. Cliques are formed and racial lines are drawn by youngsters, who ought to be at their books. Jews, and in many cases, Roman Catholics are barred from the societies, and the color line is drawn. All this is wrong. I shall investigate conditions in the high schools thoroughly and make my report as soon as possible."

CORNER STONE

Of the Carnegie Library at Beloit Is Laid.

Beloit, Wis., May 27.—The cornerstone of the Carnegie library for Beloit college was laid today. The building will cost $50,000 and was presented to the college through the efforts of Dr. Horace White, of New York.

The cornerstone was laid by Hon. S. T. Merrill, who participated in the ceremonies attending the laying of the cornerstone of the first building for the college in 1847.

VERY MUCH OVERSUBSCRIBED.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, May 27.—The subscriptions offered here yesterday on the German allotment ($1,000,000) of the Cuban loan of $35,000,000, amounted to $155,000,000.

CARRIER APPOINTED.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Stephen A. Bolles has been appointed a regular, and Lee M. Frink a substitute rural carrier at Grey Eagle, Minn.

IN LARGE LOTS

Several Carloads of Strawberries Coming to Duluth Daily.

Potatoes Fall Off In Price and Does Also Butter.

Strawberries are now believed to have reached the low water mark until the local crop is ready for the market.

The shipments at present are coming from Northern Arkansas and Southern Missouri. They are being received in carload lots, from five to six cars arriving at the head of the lakes daily. The freight is thus very much reduced, and it is doubtful if the price will drop any lower until the Wisconsin berries, which constitute the only "local crop" known in Duluth, commence to arrive on the market.

It will be several weeks yet before the Wisconsin berries are ripe, and the present price will, therefore, probably prevail during that time.

* * *

A slight cut in the price of potatoes has ben reported during the past week. The new potatoes are commencing to arrive on the market in larger quantities and the dealers are beginning to get anxious not to have any of the old crop on their hands after the price of the new potatoes bring them within the reach of the average purse. The new crop from the South is now selling at $1.75 per bushel, or a little more than half the price prevailing last week.

The local supply is coming from Louisiana and Mississippi. A further cut in the price is expected when the Arkansas and Missouri crops commence to arrive on the local market, which will be within a couple of weeks. The old potatoes have dropped from $1.20 to $1.10 and $1.15 during the week.

* * *

Still another drop took place in the price of butter during the past week. The warm weather has started the grass into vigorous growth, and the cattle now require but little attention from the farmers. Cremary prints have dropped from 21 to 20 cents per pound, and fancy dairies from 15 and 17 cents to 14 and 16. The packing stock remains unchanged at 11 cents.

* * *

The local dealers have about finished storing eggs for next winter. Large quantities were placed in cold storage last week and the week preceding, but the work is about over now. As a consequence there has been a slight drop in the price, which has fallen from 16 cents per dozen to 15 and 15½.

* * *

The poultry market shows signs of a little more activity than last week, when scarcely any shipments were received on the local market. Practically all of the poultry now being received is live stock. There have been no changes in the prices.

THE ISTHMIAN COMMISSION

Believes Canal Work Cannot Be Limited to American Labor.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The attention of Rear Admiral Waker, president of the isthmian canal commission, being directed to the report that Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, Conn., as one of the attorneys and the executive agent of the American Anti-Boycott association, had raised the question of whether the eight-hour law of 1892 applied to the construction of the Panama canal, Admiral Walker said that as the question had not been officially presented to the commission he could not attempt to foreshadow the attitude the commission would take. The problem of labor supply would require careful consideration, aside from the number of hours per diem, such labor as could be procured should be employed. There had been some talk of an attempt to limit the work on the canal to American labor. "Such action as that," said the admiral, "would, I believe, prevent the construction of the canal. We anticipate securing a number of laborers from the negroes of the Southern states, but we could not get enough to build the canal. The negroes of the South would not leave their present employment for this work in sufficient numbers." The admiral thought that at the beginning the work would be prosecuted by negro labor from Jamaica, but that later Chinese coolies would be secured. At the present time about 700 persons are employed on the canal and before long a number will be added to work with surveying parties which will shortly take the field.

Mr. Davenport's association is very much interested in the subject as many of its members are large contractors, dredgers, manufacturers of machinery, etc., doing government work and they hope to secure contracts in connection with the construction of the canal. On this point the admiral stated that it would not be decided whether the work would be done by the commission itself or let out by contract until after all the plans were made and the commission knew just what should be done. In the one case, the labor would have to be secured by the commission, and in the other by the contractor. As to the point of jurisdiction on which Mr. Davenport seemed to be in doubt, Admiral Walker said he thought the matter would rest entirely with the canal commission unless congress should otherwise determine. For the present the Panama laws are operative in the canal zone and will remain in force except where changed by act of the commission. Thus, until the commission otherwise directs, the only immigration and labor laws in force there will be whatever Panama has on the same subject. He took it for granted congress would be asked to extend the operations of the eight-hour act to cover the canal zone, but as the matter stands he thought it would require special legislation by congress or by the commission, as he did not think the act would apply ex proprio vigore. He anticipated that all the questions affecting the labor on the canl would be thrashed out before the work was inaugurated on a large scale.

CHANGES AT PRINCETON.

Showerman of Wisconsin to Fill Latin Chair.

Princeton, N. J., May 27.—Announcement was made at Princeton university today that the chair of Latin, which will be vacated next year by Dr. J. B. Carter, is to be filled by Professor Grant Showerman, of the University of Wisconsin Latin department.

At the recent annual meeting of the American School of Classical Studies in Rome, Professor Carter received the appointment of Latin professor of the Italian school for 1904-05. At the end of that time he will return to Princeton.

MEMORIAL DAY

Details of Program Are Perfected By Joint Committees.

Order and Line of Parade and Exercises at Armory.

The details of the Memorial day program were perfected last night at a meeting of the several committees having the celebration in charge, and the order of the parade and its course were decided upon. The civic and military companies, following outt he voluntary action of their officers, will act as honorary escort to the Culver and Gorman posts of the G. A. R. in the big parade.

The finance committee reported that it had been cordially received by the citizens, and that the desired fund had been raised with comparatively little trouble. It was shown that more money had been paid into the fund than the veterans had hoped for, giving an opportunity for observing the day in even a more elaborate manner than was at first proposed.

M. W. Bates, commander of the Culver post, brought up the matter of the two Confederate graves in Forest Hill cemetery, and said that he was very anxious that the resting place of these old soldiers should be marked in order that they may be decorated.

Hon. J. R. Randall was announced as marshal of the day, and Capt. George Gibson as aide. The parade will form at Fifth avenue west and First street, at 2 p. m. Monday. It will March down Fifth avenue to Superior street, where the proper marching order will be arranged, and proceed east on Superior street to Second avenue east, and then to the Armory. At the Armory the escort will swing into line, allowing the veterans to pass in ahead. Mayor Cullum will preside at the meeting, making a short introductory talk before the address of Rev. R. J. Mooney.

The request was made at the meeting that citizens and business men running up flags on Memorial day place them only at half-mast. There will be ninety graves decorated. Each will be supplied with a small bouquet of flowers on Monday morning.

The ceremony of scattering flowers in the canal, as a memorial to the sailors who died in the service, will be performed by the women of the auxiliary branch of the Grand Army, after the meeting at the Armory. Flaaten's band will accompany them.

The order of march for the Memorial day parade, as officially arranged last night, will be as follows:

Police, mounted and on foot, Captain F. E. Rosche, commander.
Marshal Randall and Aide Gibson.
Flaaten's band of forty pieces.
One battalion Minnesota National guard in command of Major Eva.
Two divisions of naval reserve, Lieutenant Commander Guy A. Eaton.
City Fire Department, Chief John H. Black, commander.
Sons of Veterans, William S. McCormick, commander.
Culver Post, G. A. R., M. W. Bates, post commander.
Gorman Post, G. A. R., D. W. Scott, post commander.
Disabled veterans in carriages.
Mayor Cullum and Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, speaker of the day, in carriage.
C. C. Salter camp, No. 5, Sons of Veterans, will play a prominent part in the exercises of the day. A meeting of the camp was held last evening in Masonic temple, and plans for the day were arranged. Most of the exercises of the Sons of Veterans will be held in conjunction with those of the G. A. R.

The camp members, together with others interested in the work, will meet with the G. A. R. to participate in the services at the Methodist church Sunday morning. The camp will meet at the hall in Masonic temple at 9:45 a. m. and will escort the members of the G. A. R. from there to the cemetery, where services will be held at 9:30. Services at the Methodist church will begin promptly at 10:30 o'clock in the morning.

After participating in the G. A. R. procession Monday the Sons of Veterans will hold their Memorial day services at the Armory, beginning at 2:30 in the afternoon.

BODY FOUND IN THE SLIP

Axel H. Leonard's Remains—Death Believed to Be Accidental.

The dead body of Axel H. Leonard was found last evening about 8 o'clock, floating about in the slip near the Marshall-Wells Hardware company's building on Lower Lake avenue.

It was discovered by Alexander McLain on the east shore of the slip near the yards of a machine shop, where Mr. McLain succeeded in reaching it with a pike pole. He secured the body to the shore, and notified Coroner Boyer.

Coroner Boyer was of the opinion that the remains must have been in the water for at least two weeks before being discovered. The manner of death can only be guessed at, but the indications point to accidental drowning.

The pockets of the dead man contained a watch, which had stopped at 12:35 o'clock, about $150 in money, and papers representing about $60 more. There were no marks of violence on the body, nor any papers containing messages to friends.

The papers indicated that Leonard had been at Luston, Minn., since April 28, where he had been loaning money, as in a large flat pocket book were found several notes covered by a mortgage.

Leonard was formerly employed as a bartender in the saloon at 28 East Superior street, which until recently was conducted by his brother, Fred Leonard. He was a man about 35 years of age and unmarried. The body was taken to Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms where it is awaiting the disposition of relatives.

Coroner Boyer has decided that no inquest will be necessary, and decided that the death was due to accidental drowning.

CUT THE THROAT

Of His Sweetheart With His Penknife.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 27.—Charged with the attempted murder of his pretty sweetheart, Pearl Jones, by cutting her throat with a penknife, Dague Thompson, a nervous-looking young man, has had an anxious day in the district court listening to the evidence of the girl whom he loved.

Both are from Ames, where their parents are prominent. The two had been keeping company and the young man says his attentions were encouraged by her parents at first, but afterward they sent her away. She came to visit a friend here and later secured employment as cashier in a restaurant.

On the night of Feb. 22 he came here from Ames and went to her rooming place. He was told that she was out with another fellow, but was granted permission to wait in the parlor until she returned. He stood in the darkness and watched the affectionate farewell which his sweetheart gave his rival and then when she came in he upbraided her. Her indifference set him in rage and he whipped out a small penknife and made several slashes in her throat. It is likely the defense will be temporary insanity.

ROBBED HIS OWN SAFE.

Lodi Citizen Confesses to Perjury and Fraud.

Madison, Wis., May 27.—Peter J. Walch, formerly a merchant of Lodi, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging perjury in connection with proceedings in his own bankruptcy case, and was sentenced to six months in the house of correction.

Walch, who discharged a young woman from his employ at the instance of his wife, reported to the Madison police that during his absence his store had been robbed and the doors sawed off his office safe; that he had lost $7000 in cash, and that he could give no clue to the robbers.

It subsequently developed that Walch sawed off the doors of his own safe, came to Madison and gave the money to the discharged woman, concealed in a shanty in the outskirts of the city merchandise in the value of $4000, shipped to an Ohio merchant $2000 worth of goods and that his liabilities amounted to $15,000, while his assets were less than $7000.

He acknowledged his intent to defraud his creditors and that he had made a false oath.

"The Gamekeeper" is a rather pretty little Irish comedy drama, and in the main pleased a small audience at the Lyceum last evening. It is an Irish love story with the usual villain, an attempted murder, an unjustly accused hero, the final untangling of the plot and the happy union of the lovers.

Thomas J. Smith, who is featured in the play, made a favorable impression. He has a fair ballad voice and sang two or three catchy little Irish songs, which caught the audience.

A gentleman named Van Murrel managed to inflict upon the audience the classical love song entitled "Bedella" and yet escaped with his life. In fact the audience seemed to enjoy it. In the role of Johnny Drake he left something to be desired.

Sadie Marion, in the role of Kathleen O'Neill, is a very pretty and charming girl and has ability as an actress. She has a very attractive stage presence and her work last evening, together with that of Mr. Smith, stood out as a pleasing feature of the performance. Baby Patti, who is a young miss of some 8 or 10 years, has enough assurance for the most hardened veteran. She is undoubtedly a clever child, but almost too clever for the part, for some of her lines were rendered in the style of a full-fledged actress instead of a child of tender years. She has a very sweet voice and her two solos were well received.

Th pretty Irish setter belonging to Mr. Smith had a "thinking" part, but he carried it off well and came in for no small share of admiration.

"The Gamekeeper" will return for a special engagement on Memorial day, with a bargain matinee for children.

THE KENNEDY COMPANY.

The Kennedy Stock company played an excellent version of "The Streets of New York" last night at the Metropolitan. Panic times in Wall street form the theme, and the unscrupulous attitude of the banker, Bloodgood, furnishes a foundation for the plot. Bloodgood is played by Royal Stout, who gives an excellent interpretation of the man whose one redeeming virtue was a passionate love for a child, who returned scorn and abuse for love. Miss Earle was cast for the daughter, and did well. John Kennedy was excellent as Tom Badger, and J. F. Bannister, Miss Kennedy and Harry Oaks played the other important parts.

The specialties were very good. Mr. Dyer sang a new song, which should become very popular, "When Kate and I Were Coming Thro' the Rye."

"The Streets of New York" will be repeated tonight.

"A GIRL FROM DIXIE."

Tomorrow afternoon and evening "A Girl From Dixie," a musical comedy for which much is claimed, will be at the Lyceum. It is coming from the West, and in its tour of Pacific coast cities many fine things have been said of it by the press.

ISABEL IRVING.

The sale of seats for the production of "The Crisis," by Isabel Irving, at the Metropolitan next Monday and Tuesday evenings, will open tomorrow morning. Miss Irving is one of the most popular and charming of the stars of the stage, and her play is conceded to be a most excellent dramatization of one of the most popular novels of recent years, and the combination is one that should attract theater-goers. Miss Irving is very pleasantly remembered by Duluth playgoers for her fine work in the character of Princess Wlavia in "The Prisoner of Zenda." Her present tour is under the management of James K. Hackett, who is playing "independent" attractions—those that are barred from "trust" houses—but her tour has been an eminently sucessful one.

Children's Coats--Women's Skirts.

We aim to make children's day in the suit section especially attractive by making more favorable prices for Saturday than on other days of the week. And we are safely within the bounds of truthfulness when we say that they are the best prices in Duluth. Come tomorrow and see if the values do not bear out this assertion.

$3.98 for Children's Pongee Coats worth from $5.50 to $8.50.

Part of a manufacturer's surplus stock of Pongee Coats that would sell at from $5.50 to $8.50 each if they had cost us the regular listed price. Piles Can Be Cured

By Internal Treatment

Without the Aid of Narcotics or the Knife

You who suffer with piles know what a glorious boon it would be to you to be absolutely and painlessly cured. You know from actual experience that salves, ointments and other local applications do not cure. You may get relief, but you keep on suffering.

There is a cause for every human ill. Remove the cause and you cure the complaint. Piles have two distinct causes: First, congestion of the liver; second, constipation resulting from poor digestion.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific

The Internal Remedy

absolutely removes these causes by increasing the flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and relieving the congestion of the liver. It is a tonic for the entire bowel system and helps each particular member of this system to work easily and naturally.

You simply take a teaspoonful of this positive, internal remedy three times a day before each meal. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely free from opium, cocaine or other narcotics. It is not a palliative or temporary remedy; it produces a positive, radical and lasting cure.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under an

to cure any case of blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles, no matter how chronic or aggravated it may be. Out of over 10,000 cases there are only three on record where a positive cure has not been made.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific can be procured of any reliable druggist under an iron-clad agreement to refund your money should you take two $1.00 bottles of the remedy without receiving positive benefit.

POLICE PUZZLED.

Unconscious Girl Found Prostrate on a Porch.

Findlay, Ohio, May 27.—Lying on a cot in the hospital, with death staring her in the face, Louisa Lapp, the pretty seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Lapp, of Melrose avenue, spurns with contempt all efforts of the city authorities and friends to get a statement which it is the opinion of all would unravel a startling tale.

Miss Lapp insists that she attempted to commit suicide, but while her statement is partially borne out by the fact that traces of morphine were discovered in her stomach, other circumstances indicate that she is not telling the truth.

The girl was found unconscious on the front porch of the residence of Albert Woodley, at 4 o'clock in the morning. A series of loud raps, which in her weakened condition it is believed she could not have caused, brought Mrs. Woodley to the scene. The woman thought the girl intoxicated and treated her accordingly.

When she failed to respond to restoratives Dr. William A. Eyral, who lives across the street, was summonde. He soon discovered traces of poison, and with assistance hurriedly summoned, set about to save the girl's life.

Miss Lapp was seen on the streets late the previous night in company of a prominent young man of this city. The imprints of buggy tires leading to the curb in front of the Woodley dwelling tend to make the case as mysterious as the conduct of the girl. Miss Lapp's home is in North Findlay, three miles from the Woodley dwelling.

TURKEYS COST

Widows Their All In the Bank With Social Side.

System Behind the Christmas Gifts of the McCoy Bank.

Indianapolis, May 27.—An investigation into the affairs of A. McCoy & Co., the Rensselaer banking firm that went under with liabilities close upon a half million and assets, even on their own showing, not to exceed $300,000, shows some very peculiar conditions. Among these not the least peculiar is the social side of the banking business as carried on by them.

The churches and benevolent organizations, the widows, the school teachers and school officers, and the guardians, trustees, farmers and county officers are all trying to figure out just what the several entertainments that the McCoys gave from time to time have cost them, and, though they have not figured it out to a cent, they are certain they came very high. They all say, too, that it was this social side of the banking business that so completely blinded them to the true condition of the institution, for they heard rumors after rumors, but refused to be warned till it was too late to rescue their cash from the wreck.

The bank made a specialty of cultivating the widows. It was not a question as to what the widow possessed, but the fact that she was a widow that appealed with such force to the bankers, for every Thanksgiving and Christmas a wagonload of turkeys was sent out from one of the stores, made a visit to every house occupied by a widow and left at each a large, fat, nicely dressed fowl.

Everybody praised the bankers for this thoughtfulness of the widow, the more because no one who had been bereft by the death of a natural protector was omitted from the charity.

When the crash came seventeen of these same widows had deposits in the bank ranging from $10 to $6000. Mrs. Dr. Alter was the heaviest depositor and lost perhaps the larger part of the latter sum; Mrs. Michaels had $700 in the bank, Mrs. Bingham had $1800 and Mrs. Maggie Welsh had $500. The total amount which the widows of Rensselaer had in the bank when it closed its doors was $15,900.

One of the most elaborate entertainments ever given in Rensselaer was to the school officers and school teachers, and the McCoys were the hosts of the occasion. Such a thing had never been witnessed in the city before, and it was agreed by all who attended that the entertainment was a rare mark of the interest that the bankers had in the public schools and those who wore out their lives trying to impart knowledge. The entertainment was followed by a gradual withdrawal of deposits by teachers from the other banks and a concentration of these deposits in the McCoy institution.

The school officers recognized the public spirit of the bankers by putting a part of their cash in the bank, and when it closed the teachers and officers found themselves out $10,750. St. Joseph's college lost about one-half of the amount, but the remainder is made up of the savings of teachers and represents all they have.

When S. R. Nichols was elected county treasurer the McCoys arranged his bond, it having been generally understood during his campaign that he was the bank's candidate, and all the widows and school teachers worked for him. Mr. Nichols had $29,600 in deposit in the bank at the time of the failure, and deposits of other officers, including the county assessor and county clerk, run the amount up to $85,000.

Now the bondsmen of Nichols have petitioned the court to release them from further liability on his bond, and, although they are all bankers and had an agreement among themselves as to how much the liability of each should be, those who are good will have to make up the shortage, for little can come from Nichols, as his property is heavily mortgaged.

Bankers in adjoining counties knew that the McCoys were in desperate straits before the failure, and several lent them money, but always took good paper to secure their loans. A total of $25,500 is owing to these banks, and they are said to hold about $35,000 in the best paper that the McCoy bank carried.

Three hundred and fifty head of fat cattle were turned over by the McCoys when they made an assignment, but the next day a representative of a commission firm in Chicago came to Rensselaer, exhibited a bill of sale for the cattle and drove them away. Other assets have depreciated greatly from the value placed upon them in the deed of assignment, and conservative estimates do not place the total at more than $140,000.

The seventeen widows have been comparing notes regarding the cost of their turkeys and find that they run all the way from $5 to $150. Mrs. Lennie Grant, who had $200 in the bank, and Mrs. Alter, who had $6000, have each received four turkeys, and Mrs. Payton, who had but $10 in the bank, received two. Three teachers, who did not deposit with the McCoys prior to the entertainment, reckon the cost of that function to them at $600, $500 and $946, respectively.

THE LITTLE JAP'S RATIONS.

The Japanese soldier, it is said, can carry enough rations in his knapsack for ten days' subsistence. This is due to the fact that his chief ration is rice, a very little of which, when boiled, suffices for a meal. In this connection it may interest you to know that one two-pound package of pillsbury's vitos, when cooked, increases in weight to twelve pounds, while the "ready-to-eat" cereals increase not an ounce. Thus you get eleven pounds more of food in every package.

Grand Opening of Our Double Store

Which We Have Just Completed!

We have now a store room of 50 feet front and 100 feet long. This gives us a nice, comfortable room to display our stock in good shape. Every article in our stock is marked in plain figures and displayed in such manner that it is very easy for anybody to look our stock through in a very short time. For Saturday's Grand Opening day we have bought out two large stocks of merchandise, consisting of dry goods, rugs, ladies' and men's furnishings, men's and boys' clothing, and a full line of ladies', men's, misses', boys' and children's shoes. We have bought these goods for cash and bought them right, we assure you—and for tomorrow we have placed the entire stock on sale; nothing reserved—everything will go at cut prices, and you can be sure when we say cut price it's much less than 50c on the dollar. Bear in mind that this is a golden opportunity for you not to miss—be sure and attend this great sale—don't wait until your neighbors tell you about the great bargains they got at Duluth Consignment Co.'s store, but come yourself and be convinced what great bargains we have to offer you tomorrow. SOLOMON IS MUCH NEEDED

Two Strangers Claim a Runaway Boy as Their Son.

Cleveland, O., May 27.—Adding to the complexity of the situation surrounding Elmer Hagerman, a runaway boy of 12 years, who has been claimed by Mrs. Emma Hill, of this city, as her son lost for twelve years, was the arrival of a man from Chicago, who claimed to be the boy's father. His declaration that he knew nothing of Mrs. Hill, who says she is his sister, and that he had left his only sister in Chicago, does not help to clear up the case to any degree.

Paul Hagerman came to Cleveland in response to a telegram received at his home, 53 South Ann street, Chicago, from Chief Kohler, notifying him of the presence of young Hagerman in the city. He is a carpenter, 40 years old, and says that he has three other children. Since the death of his wife, seven years ago, his spinster sister, he says, has been keeping house for him.

Hagerman denies absolutely any knowledge of Mrs. Hill, and stated to the police that his boy had not been out of his custody since his birth. The lad, he said, left his home last Sunday without giving them any notice, and he was next heard from Monday, when the telegram was received.

"I have not the slightest idea who Mrs. Hill is," he said, "and the only explanation I can make of her claims is that she is seriously mistaken.

"Elmer has lived with me all of his life, having been born in Bloomington, Ill., thirteen years ago. He resided there with his mother and myself until her death, seven years ago, when I removed to Chicago. Since that time my sister has been our housekeeper, and we have lived in Chicago. Elmer, while always of an unsettled disposition, has never left his home, although he has been a truant from school. His brother who was a year older ran away a short time ago, and was brought home, killed by a train, and I had held up his fate as an example to Elmer. Because of his brother's death I did not fear that he would leave.

"Last Sunday he was dressed for Sunday school and left for the church, but did not return. We next heard of him in Cleveland. There was an excursion Saturday and I thought that I would teach him a lesson by allowing him to remain in jail, and for this reason I did not arrive here until tonight."

Hagerman brought with him nothing to prove his claims to the boy, and the police warned him that he might find it a difficult matter to prove his paternal relationship to Elmer. He seemed to regard that phase of the matter lightly, and said that Elmer would readily acknowledge him as his father. He believed that would be sufficient proof, although the police did not agree with him.

Hagerman was not sure that he would make a fight for the possession of the boy if that measure became necessary. At the same time he did not seem to relish the idea of allowing Mrs. Hill to take the lad.

"Although he might have a pleasant home with her, I would not like to let him go. I can afford to support him, and if I can secure his possession I will take him back to Chicago and put him in a private school, where he will not have the opportunity to run away again."

HOMING PIGEONS

Make Fast Time In Racing Pigeon Derby..

San Antonio, Texas, May 27.—The American racing pigeon derby was flown from Edgerly, La., to San Antonio Sunday, a distance of 300 miles. The first derby-banded bird to arrive belonged to John B. Winck, Jr., making the distance in 6 hours and 40 minutes, 1324.18 yards a minute.

Under the rules for the American racing pigeon derby, the first 300-mile race of the season is eligible for old birds, which owners may desire to enter to compete for the cup offered by the American Racing Pigeon, a publication of Cincinnati, Ohio. Sunday's race was the first of the derbies. Other districts will race later, and it may be several months before the result is known. The time made by Mr. Winck's bird is considered excellent, it being a close second to the best ever made in this district.

One hundred and twenty-seven birds competed Sunday. They were liberated at Edgerly, La., at 6:25 a. m. by S. D. Desansure, agent of the Wells-Fargo Express company, who reported an east windw ith clear weather. The speed made by all the birds was exceptionally good, the first bird arriving at 1:05.

TRAFFIC IS SUSPENDED

By Lady's High Heel Catching In the Cable Slot.

Chicago, May 27.—Mrs. Dexter Hawes, who refused to give the police her address, a demure, well-dressed, handsome woman, stopped all traffic at La Salle and Washington streets for almost half an hour.

She didn't mean to do it. Indeed, she fainted from sheer mortification before the routine business of the streets was resumed. She was not run over by a North Clark street cable train and the westbound Madison street car did not harm her.

She wore an "elephant's breath" gown, a drab coat and a picture hat, in which gray tones and neutral floral tints predominated. She was stately and self-possessed.

In the middle of La Salle street she threw up her gloved hands and shrieked. A southbound cable car was bearing full upon her. Policeman Gorley, the splendid champion of woman pedestrians, rushed to the rescue. The cable train was stopped. So was the woman.

"Why don't you get out of the way?" asked the policeman.

"I can't," said the woman. "My shoe is stuck."

And so it proved. The woman's French heel, nearly three inches of superimposed leather, was stuck firmly in the cable slot.

She tried to go, but it was no go. Train after train from the tunnel stopped. Gongs clanged and blue-uniformed crews assembled.

The first train had stopped within speaking distance of the victim of the high heels. Washington street was blockaded. Westbound trains were obliged to stop. A crowd collected and the strong policeman, eager to restore traffic, said:

"Madam, would you mind if I thried to pull ye out?"

"No. Pull away!" she cried.

"I have a pull," said the blushing officer, and then he caught her around the waist and tugged mightily to release her.

Teamsters stopped and cheered. The assembling crowd howled with delight. Waiters, interested in the convention returns, gathered from nearby bulletin boards. The whole business of the crowded corner stopped, listened, laughed and cheered at the efforts of the policeman to extricate the woman.

Then the innocent cause of all the excitement fainted. Restoratives were secured from a nearby drug store and the crowd began to suggest things.

"Take off her shoe!" yelled a spectator.

"Bring on the cable car!" cried another.

It was finally decided to unlace the woman's shoe, and thus she was released. But when the scared woman had limped to the office of the Postal Telegraph company her French-heeled shoe remained fast in the cable slot, and traffic was no better off. The policeman hated to attack the dainty bit of footgear, and the irate, swearing crews of the dozen trains didn't know whether to cut away the shoe and so incur a damage suit or wait for the "trouble wagon" to extricate them from their difficulty.

At last the clang of the cable patrol was heard. The four operators arrived at a gallop and immediately proceeded to demolish the hindrance to traffic. The heel of the shoe was chisled off and dropped into the cable slot. The shoe was presented to the owned with more or less sincere expressions of regret. She put it on and limped south on La Salle street, her right foot on the old-fasuined "common-sense" basis and her left foot much elevated by the fashionable but no longer comfortable French heel.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

ARMY RIFLES DRIFT

To the Left on a Test In Texas.

Brackett, Texas, May 26.—The practice with the army rifle at the Las Moras moutain just now is to test for the natural drift of the rifle, which is to the left, even in perfectly calm atmosphere. As the weather has been so windy this season only a few hours of still atmosphere has been had here since Feb. 20.

Capt. W. C. Brown, manager of the experiments, has devised a plan to get the drift, even in windy weather, and the recent practice has been in accordance with his ideas. The plan is to have two targets and shoot from midway ground between them; first at one and then at the other. If ten shots are fired on the target at the north with an easterly wind the natural drift of the rifle to the left, and the force of the wind act to gether and carry the bullet considerably to the left; but if the expert turns and fires ten shots to the target on the south, wind and natural drift act against each other, and the deflection is less to the right of the bull's eye than in the shots to the north. The difference enables them to calculate the natural drift.

For the purpose of testing by this plan a new range on the opposite side of the mountain has been selected, giving 4000 yards' range. The object is not to attempt to shoot 4000 yards, but to have two target boards and shoot from between the longest range then being 2000 yards each way. Permission has been asked of the government to adopt this new range.

Quick Arrest.

J. A. Gulledge, of Verbena, Ala., was twice in the hospital from a severe case of piles causing tumors. After doctors and all remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly arrested further inflammation and cured him. It conquers aches and kills pain. 25c, at all druggists.

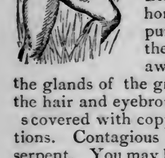
KILL THE SERPENT



The worst disease the world has ever known, and the greatest scourge to the human race, is Contagious Blood Poison. One drop of the virus of this most horrible of all diseases will pollute and vitiate the purest, healthiest blood, and within a short time after the first little sore appears the system is filled with the awful poison and the skin breaks out in a red rash; the glands of the groins swell, the throat and mouth become ulcerated, the hair and eyebrows drop out, and often the entire surface of the body scovered with copper-colored splotches and sickening sores and eruptions. Contagious Blood Poison is as treacherous and elusive as the serpent. You may be carrying it in your veins with no visible evidences of its existence; for while mercury and potash seem to cure and all external signs disappear, the disease is doing its destructive work within, or the patient is constantly harassed by returning symptoms and unmistakable traces of the blood poison. Thousands of physical wrecks and chronic invalids from the effects of Blood Poison know the uncertainty of the mercury and potash treatment—that it stifles but does not kill the serpent. As long as there is life in the serpent there is danger in its fangs; and while your blood is tainted there is danger of infection. Safety lies only in crushing out the life of the loathsome disease and killing the serpent. For many years S. S. S. has been known as an antidote for Blood Poison. It is a remedy composed entirely of vegetable ingredients, and we offer $1,000 for proof that it contains the least particle of mercury, potash or other mineral. It thoroughly purifies the blood, improves the appetite and digestion, and tones up all parts of the system. In chronic and long-standing cases of Blood Poison, S. S. S. acts promptly and without leaving any bad after-effects.

After suffering twelve years from Contagious Blood Poison, and trying the best physicians obtainable, and all the patent medicines procurable, and steadily continuing to grow worse, I gave up all hope of recovery, and physicians pronounced my case incurable. Hoping against hope, I tried S. S. S. I improved from the first bottle, and after taking twelve was cured sound and well, and for two years have had no return or symptom of the vile disease.

Advice to Women

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

This is a very important consideration in a woman's correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. It is a great satisfaction to feel that one woman can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only,—a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and with a knowledge of woman's ills greater than that possessed by any other person.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefitted by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

The reason Mrs. Pinkham is so amply qualified to give advice in cases of female ills is for the reason that about one hundred thousand cases come to her each year,—some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and day after day. Twenty years of constant success—think of the knowledge thus gained. Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

As an illustration of the good coming from such advice we herewith publish two letters of Mrs. E. F. Hayes, the reading of which should give every sick woman confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's ability to help them. These are only two of thousands of the same kind of letters which Mrs. Pinkham has on file.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describes my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St. (Roxbury), Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman.

"Your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St. (Roxbury), Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness thus gained by Mrs. Hayes.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absoluto genuineness.
Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends. Do not be persuaded that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who suggests something else has no interest in your case. He is seeking a larger profit. Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that the thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND. For sale the world over.

HORSE FLY STUDIED

By Missouri Inventor For the Building of an Airship.

Device Which Had Origin In Observations on Farm.

St. Louis, May 27.—It is a far cry from a horse-fly to an airship, but Marcellus McGary of Memphis, Scotland county, Mo., has bridged the chasm intervening.

Thirteen years ago he began the study of horse-flies. The ultimate development of this horse-fly study, he says, is represented in a dirigible balloon, which is now ready to unpack at the exposition.

He has made a formal entry as a competitor of Santo-Dumont for the $100,000 prize, and has received from Carl Meyer, superintendent of aeronautics, words of approval of the theory on which his "ship" was construced.

"My ship will fly rings around Santos-Dumont," declares Marcellus McGary, or words that mean the same thing. "He uses a screw propeller. That idea is a century old. It is not the real thing for airships. The horse-fly wing propeller is better. I expect to prove that by taking the big prize and letting Santos-Dumont have one of the smaller prizes."

Mr. McGary is a farmer. His homestead is six miles west of Memphis, Mo. In his youth he was a carpenter and cabinet-maker, and for years he has been of an inventive turn of mind.

"In observations on my farm I noticed that the dragon-fly and the horse-fly moved much more swiftly through the air than birds did.

"I caught several horse-flies and began work with them in my farmhouse. I tied a thread around a fly's body, passing it under his wings and then tied the other end of the string, which was about three feeet long to a toy balloon, a regular red toy balloon that children play with. When I would push the balloon and the fly out into the space the thread would jerk the fly and he would dangle and die.

"So I changed from thread to rubber bands. When I pushed the fly out into space tied to the rubber band, the elastic prevented it from jerking and the fly would move in any direction I wanted to and carry the balloon with him.

"I made him move in a certain direction this way: I darkened the room, and I pushed the fly into space, I let in light at one corner. The fly moved towards the opening admitting the light.

"I was so well satisfied with this experiment that I decided to equip a small boat with wings patterned after those of the horsefly. Before doing so, I made tests with wings shaped like those of a bird, too.

"Birds' wings consist of a series of feathers. I made wings for a boat shaped in that way—that is like a shutter. In comparing these with the horsefly wings I made my important discovery. That is, that while a horsefly's wings propel him forward both with the upstroke and the down stroke, the bird's wing push him forward only with the upward stroke. This explained to me why a horsefly travels faster than a bird.

"This is due to this reason. On the upward stroke of a bird's wings, the air strikes an inclined plane of feathers. Coming down, the feathers separate and the air goes through like through a sieve. A horsefly's wings are solid. The air strikes it the same way going up and down. In both cases the stroke aids in the propelling.

"So I was satisfied that I had the right idea in building the wings for my airship car after the fashion of a horse-fly's wings.

"I experimented further by attaching a small car with wings to the end by a strong rubber band. This I wound about a windlass. When I let the rubber out the loosening of the fastening revolved the wheels and sent the car forward.

"I had the car attached to an arm of a central post and it moved the car and the arm to which it was attached, swinging about the post quite rapidly.

"From this idea I built my airship.

"The operators of the airship will stand in the car and work the handles of the wings up and down. It will be guided with fish-tail rudder."

Mr. McGary explains that the car he has brought to St. Louis is 21 feet long, 5 feet wide and 4 feet deep. It is possible that he may install an electric motor instead of hand power, he says. The car will hang beneath a large balloon filled with hydrogen. Mr. McGary says he is ready to make a test ascension as soon as the apparatus can be unpacked and the balloon inflated with hydrogen.

Several of Mr. McGary's fellow-citizens in Scotland county are aiding him in having his invention given a thorough test in St. Louis.

COAL TRUST INQUIRY.

Interstate Commission Asks For Many Figures.

New York, May 26.—When the interstate commerce commission today resumed its inquiry into the alleged coal trust compact, Commissioner Prouty requested from J. D. Campbell, representing the Reading company, a tonnage statement distinguishing its collieries from those of operating companies whose coal it carries, and distinguishing among the latter coal handled by the Reading company on coal purchase contracts and coal handled on other forms of contracts. He also requested a statement of the coal land and collieries investment of the Reading company showing the ultimate value of lands and collieries after they were abandoned, so far as mining operations are concerned. The same request was made of counsel representing the other companies.

President Thomas of the Lehigh Valley road, the first witness today, replied to several questions which the supreme court had directed him to answer. He said he fixes the price of coal of the Lehigh Valley company that is sold at tidewater.

NIECE MUST BE BURIED

At His Side, Says George Machling's Will.

Marysville, Ohio, May 27.—A peculiar request in the will of the late George W. Machling, a farmer of Taylor township, is that his niece, Mrs. Ellen Burkepile, at her death be buried by his side in Oakdale cemetery, in this city. Machling's wife died sixteen years ago, and during the past year his niece has kept houes for him.

Machling bequeathed 500 acres of land to Mrs. Burkepile, containing the house and other buildings, all of the live stock, household goods, etc. Machling had three children, but none of them fared half so well in the will as his niece.

Machling was sued a few months ago for $10,000 by Mrs. Burkepile's husband John Burkelpie, for the alleged alienation of his wife's affectinos. Mr. and Mrs. Burkepile are now divorced. The case against Machling will go on, the court substituting the name of the executor, E. W. Porter, for the deceased. Some very senastional testimony will be brought out at this trial.

STABBED IN EAR

By an Umbrella, an Indiana Young Man Is Killed.

Survived the Thrust Twenty Hours, But Surgeons Powerless.

Boonville, Ind., May 27.—Charged with manslaughter for having slain Charles Keeler, using an umbrella for his weapon, Louis Roth, a prominent young farmer of this county, is defendant in the most unusual murder trial in the criminal annals of the state.

The story of the killing of Keeler is without a parallel in this country. But one case, it is believed, is on record where a man has been slain by an umbrella in the hands or his assailant, and this murder was committed on the streets of Paris, France, several years ago.

On the night of Jan. 11, Louis Roth came to Boonville to witness a performance in the local opera house. At Boonville they met young Roth's brother, William Roth, who is employed as a clerk in a store at this city. Contrary to his brother's desires Louis Roth insisted on taking seats in the gallery when they entered the theater because he did not believe he would appear to advantage in a more prominent seat. Between the acts a crowd of boys in the gallery noticed the two young men who, apparently, were strangers, and Roth and Haas at once became targets for their jeers. The tormenting tactics of young Keeler and his companions were continued as the crowd was passing from the building at the close of the perrormance.

Roy Keeler, it is said, shoved Roth and attempted to snatch the umbrella which Roth carried in his hand. At this time Charles Keeler, an uncle of the Keeler lad, and a much larger man than Roth, struck him in the face. Roth staggered into the middle of the street, attempting to protect his face with one arm and striking out wildly with the umbrella in the other hand, while he called for assistance. Keeler was sent down by one of the thrusts and Roth then sprang toward the prostrate man and seized him by the head, because, he afterward claimed, he feared Keeler would regain his feet and give him a beating.

But Keeler was unable to rise. He was carried to a surgeon's office, where an examination revealed a slight wound through the upper portion of the left ear. An attack of nausea caused the wounded man's brain to oozse out, and the surgeon saw the case was practically hopeless. Keeler was taken to his home, where he died the next night at 6 o'clock without regaining consciousness.

Three prominent surgeons attended Keeler before his death, and they all believed he was killed by a bullet from a 32-caliber revolver. The actual cause of his death was not determined, even by a coroner's jury, until after the arrest of Roth, when, at his preliminary examination, no one was found who could testify they heard the report of a pistol shot.

The day following the fight Roth was arrested on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill, and was released under bond. When Keeler died the charge was changed to that of murder in the first degree. Roth was again taken into custody that night and placed in jail at Boonville. The next day, Jan. 13, a preliminary hearing was given Roth, and in his testimony he again said that he stabbed with his umbrella as Keeler was forcing him to retreat into the street. The few witnesses who testified for both Roth and Keeler said that Roth was in the gutter when Keeler struck him, and that when Keeler was picked up after the stabbing he was near the middle of the street, showing that Keeler was the aggressor and that Roth was compelled to defend himself.

GOLD FINDS IN OKLAHOMA

Ore In Wichita Mountains Assays $8 Gold to Ton.

Lawton, O. T., May 27.—Things are beginning to come in a way satisfactory to the miners of the Wichita mountains. People of the East, as well as the inhabitants of Missouri, have been decidedly skeptical concerning the value of ores in the mountains of the new country. If presented with a gold brick, they would gather the impression that it was some common substance electro-plated.

Yet this is not surprising when we remember how in the past two years some of our more cheerful and unsophisticated liars have told of getting gold nuggets weighing 185 pounds, and that the Wichita Mountains were simply one solid mass of material.

Recently there was a mineral decision in the Lawton land office which puts the cold facts in a forcible light. The hearing was ordered by the general land office on account of a showing made by the Widman Milling & Mining Co. concerning the mineral value of a tract of land adjoining the town of Wildman. The defendant had made proof and sold to Ellen M. Briggs who defended the suit.

The defendant wanted expert testimony at the hearing, and wanted the best in sight. The defense gathered the samples and had them assayed by Professors De Barr and Tucker of the university of Oklahoma at Norman. It is not presumed that the defense sought samples that would produce gold. The professors had no interest in the matter and under oath certainly stated cold facts as they found them. The defense was somewhat surprised when these experts found that those samples assayed $8 per ton in gold. The mining company had put down a number of shafts on this claim. The office had to hold that the land was more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes. This is the most important victory that has come to the miners. If the party that did not want to find any gold, could not find any samples that would assay less than $8 per ton there must be some good stuff in that neck of the woods.

HORRIBLE FATE

Of Artist Who Libeled the Pension Commissioner.

Wichita, Kas., May 27.—A recent issue of an Eastern magazine was embellished with a full-page picture of Pension Commissioner Ware. It made the stalwart Kansan look a good bit like a floater who had just been rescued from the Potomac, and who was awaiting the arrival of the ambulance to take him to the morgue. On seeing the atrocity, M. W. Levy, of Wichita, wrote to Ware, asking if the artist was still at large. And Ware replied as follows:

"My Dear Levy: The funeral of that man who got up that picture of mine was one of the most attractive events of the season. The hearse was brilliantly decorated with pampas grass, and bore the inscription, 'Served Him Right.'

"Behind him marched in columns of four a compact body composed of thirty-two newspaper reporters, all in chains, and this was followed by a long line of coaches containing officials who had been similarly treated by newspapers and magazines. A very enjoyable time was had.

"The funeral dirge was punctuated by the popping of champagne corks and the drivers smoked 25-cent cigars as the cortege passed the postoffice, where the pamphlet was distributed. Prices of admission to the cemetery went up to fabulous prices. The proceedings at the grave were interesting and unique. The malefactor was laid out on the asphalt pavement and the steam roller was rolled over him until he was brought down fine and thin and covered three acres. Then the men in carriages, as upon a carpet, danced the Highland fling for thirty minutes. Then the remains were wrapped around a piece of gaspipe and laid away.

"It is believed to be the first occurrence of the kind in the United States, and it will be repated as often as the offense occurs.

"It gives me great pleasure to convey you this information in advance of newspaper accounts.

"If there are any joints now running in Wichita, please remember me kindly. Yours truly, E. F. WARE."

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

DOING SPLENDID WORK.

The account of the meeting of the public affairs committee of the Commercial club, published in yesterday's edition of The Herald, shows that the membership is fully alive to the needs of Duluth and that the committee is doing splendid work. There is excellent reason to believe that the city will be materially benefited in many directions as a result of its labors. The members have taken hold with a vim and exhibit a splendid spirit of progress and push.

The suggestion of the city attorney, Bert Fesler, that the committee might spend some money to good advantage in furnishing some sort of entertainment for the delegates to the Democratic state convention, which is to be held here on June 22, is an excellent one, and will no doubt meet with approval of the committee. Not that these men are Democrats, but that they are representative citizens coming from every county in the state, it is advisable to show them that Duluth takes an interest in its neighbors and the strangers within its gates. In no better way can the city's advantages and the progressive spirit of its people be impressed upon these visitors. The Herald believes that a small amount of money expended in their entertainment will be a splendid investment as it will have a strong tendency to induce other conventions to come here in future.

Rev. R. J. Mooney made the suggestion that before Duluth can hope to become a great city it must first find steady employment for thousands of workingmen and provide them with decent habitations at reasonable cost. The Herald has firm belief that this plan must be followed in building up the city. First find institutions that will provide steady work and then insure their success by providing workingmen with the means of cheap and comfortable living.

The work of this public affairs committee is bound to result ultimately to the great and lasting benefit of the city. The business men who have been asked to contribute should meet their assessments promptly and cheerfully. They could spend their money to no better advantage. It was the purpose of the committee to assess each business man according to his ability to pay and the importance of his business, so that each would bear his proper proportionate share of the cost of meeting the legitimate expenses of public promotion.

AMERICA'S GUARDIAN ANGEL.

In a letter to Mr. Root, which was read at a dinner held in New York to celebrate the second birthday of Cuba as an independent nation, the president's bullying and braggadocio spirit was shown in the following I-am-holier-than-thou sentences:

"It is not true that the United States has any land hunger or entertains any projects as regards other nations save such as are for their welfare. All that we desire is to see all neighboring countries stable, orderly and prosperous. Any country whose people conduct themselves well can count upon our hearty friendliness. If a nation shows that it knows how to act with decency in industrial and political matters, if it keeps order and pays its obligations, then it need fear no interference from the United States. Brutal wrongdoing, or an impotence which results in a general loosening of the ties of civilized society, may finally require intervention by some civilized nation, and in the Western hemisphere, the United States cannot ignore its duty; but it remains true that our interests and those of our southern neighbors are in reality identical. All that we ask is that they shall govern themselves well and be prosperous and orderly. Where this is the case they will find only helpfulness from us."

How well must these nations govern themselves in order to meet the approval of sanctified us? Can they burn a few of their inhabitants at the stake occasionally and still meet our approval? Can they periodically make an excursion into a neighbor's country with a view of gobbling the land and still get along without correction by some civilized nation? What is brutal wrong-doing? Does it solely consist in refusal or unability to pay national debts? consist in refusal or inability to pay national debts? It would seem so.

Then it is to be inferred that should our Canadian neighbor get into a political squabble and through unwise legislation so bankrupt its treasury as to be unable to meet its obligations, then it would be the duty of our "war lord" to head or send an expedition to the north to capture the Canadian customs houses and see that its debts were paid!

What idle bombast! What an idiotic and unnecessary insult to the other nations of this continent as well as to the republic of Cuba! According to this inane utterance of the nation's president, all that the other nations need do to escape America's interference is to govern themselves well and be prosperous and orderly—especially prosperous! Who will determine whether these conditions are met, you ask? None other than his royal highness, the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, guardian of the morals of the American continent and arbiter of the destinies of nations.

The American people could hardly be blamed if they did decide to put somebody a little more "safe" and a little more "sane" in the presidential chair at the next election.

THE FLAG THEORY FAILS.

Again is demonstrated the fact that trade follows the lines of least resistance and the lowest prices—not the flag. While American trade is growing with Cuba, an independent nation, our trade is decreasing with the Philippines, an American colony, and to talk about pulling down the flag in those islands is treasonable in the view of the war lord who at present sits in the executive chair at Washington.

But American exporters have not even held their own in the Philippines since the American conquest was accomplished and the Filipine government destroyed. Their imports of iron and steel and allied manufactures for the calendar year 1903 show an increase of approximately 10 per cent over those of 1902. The figures are $2,102,915 for 1903 and $1,909,679 for 1902. Of the total for the two years the United States secured only about 23.7 per cent. More than three-quarters of the trade was captured by English and European competitors. American percentage of the trade of 1902 was a small fraction less than 25; for 1903 it was 22.5.

The largest item in this trade last year was iron sheets and plates. England supplied practically all of it. The next item in importance was steel rails. Germany supplied 50 per cent; Belgium, 40 per cent; the United States placed 2.4 per cent. Out of the steel rail trade of $159,528 we supplied $3766. The business in structural iron and steel in 1903 doubled that of 1902. Great Britain sold 90 per cent of it. We were even beaten out in electrical supplies and sewing machines.

It is proposed in some quarters that the next congress do something to change these conditions. Congress might do something by establishing free trade with these people, which it should do if it insists on holding the islands as a dependency. But the best thing it could do would be to arrange for hauling down the flag and the establishment of a republic under American protection from outside interference. Then whatever trade we secured would not be at the expense of sacrificed lives and wasteful national expenditure.

SHOULD BEGIN EARLY.

"Our schools are overstocked with women teachers," is the statement of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the First Congregational church, of Detroit, Mich.

The Tribune of that city agrees with the preacher and in making comment says: "He has a fair game, and his powder is dry. On Sunday he told a business men's church class what he thought about the scarcity of male teachers in the city schools and he was as nearly right as any one man may be. He deplores the fact that when young scholars are all but grown to manhood and are beginning to chafe at the guidance of their mothers and to have an unstable opinion as to the status of the other sex in the world, they cannot have the sterner and more robust influence of a schoolmaster."

There is a marked development of sentiment in all parts of the country in opposition to the employment of a large preponderance of women teachers in the public schools.

A correspondent of The Herald, whose letter recently appeared in these columns, struck the keynote when she said that women were not physically as well fitted as men for exercising the necessary authority in the school room.

But The Herald believes it is a mistake to wait until the pupil is nearly through school before putting him under the direction and control of a male teacher. Rather it should be done the very first year after he leaves the kindergarten. That is the time the child's mind is easiest controlled, when his capacity for work is developed and when habits of slothfulness and disobedience, or habits of diligence and obedience are formed.

After the first year an equal division of male and female teachers in the grades would do no harm and would be of undoubted benefit, provided the teachers of both sexes were able and competent to perform their duties.

And the way to secure competent teachers is to pay decent salaries. Competent male teachers cannot be induced to teach for the same price that is paid to incompetent females. Absorption of book knowledge is not the only thing desirable in an instructor. Ability to impart that knowledge to others should be the chief requisite.

COUNT CASSINI'S BLUNDER.

When Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador at Washington, recently made the statement through the medium of a leading magazine that the Russian government never contemplated the possibility of a war with Japan until it was started, he must have thought the average American citizen very green and unsophisticated. For proof that he was either misrepresenting the facts or that the Russian government was particularly obtuse and stupid, it is only necessary to refer to the fact that as long ago as February, 1901, John Barrett, former American minister to Siam, in a lecture delivered to the students of the university of Chicago, made the prediction that the next great war would be between Russia and Japan. That he could easily foresee reasons for this conflict is now evident to everybody who has studied recent history in the far East.

Minister Barrett's prophecy was so accurate and its predictions so nearly fulfilled that it makes very interesting reading at this time. The following dispatch under a Chicago date was published in the New York Sun of Feb. 9, 1901:

"The next great war will be between Japan and Russia," said John Barrett, former minister to Siam, in a lecture to the students of the university of Chicago yesterday afternoon on "American Interests In the Far East." He declared that Japan would whip Russia in spite of her inferiority in numbers, because she had a better navy and unconquerable valor.

"Japan has the best-equipped and the most able of all armies in the world," said Mr. Barrett. "I have great hopes for the future of Japan. Do not be surprised if reports of Japanese victory come back if these two countries go to war. They both want Korea badly, and this is likely to lead to conflict. I have compared the armies and fleets of the two, and I am convinced that Japan will be successful in the event of war. Her navy is better than Great Britain's, when you consider the time employed in its organization. She is mistress of the Pacific with her navies and commerce."

So it will be readily seen from a perusal of this that if the Russian government was not aware of the possibility of war with Japan it did not keep in touch with sentiment of the times. The implication of Count Cassini that the action of Japan was a surprise is altogether too strong for the average man's credulity.

THE FIELD SURVEY

"The rule or ruin policy which has been adopted by Governor La Follette of Wisconsin usually results in ruin," says the Kansas City Star. Especially is this noticeable in certain quarters where the rule of such a man is exerted in behalf of justice for the people as opposed to the rule of corporate interests. Notwithstanding the great solicitude for their welfare, the people of Wisconsin will probably decide to indulge in some more of the "ruin" that Governor La Follette is bringing upon them.

Dean Pattee of the law school of the Minnesota university denies that he ever advised his students to keep out of the law. He never said: "Many of you are too honest to be good lawyers." He did caution some of his students not to leave lucrative positions to rush into the legal profession, which is already overcrowded. This advice is undoubtedly sound and places the dean in a much more favorable light than the published report.

All Americans will join with Rear Admiral Evans in the hope that the Chinese may be restrained from taking up arms against Russia, if, as he believes, such action will lead to the participation of other powers. For it is altogether likely that, with Roosevelt in the presidential chair and because of our recent interference in old world politics, the United States would become involved in the awful conflict at terrible cost and no profit.

It is hoped that Col. Watterson was not thinking of the editorial page of the Courier-Journal when he said it ought to be either reformed or abolished. Half the joy of living would be gone if either thing happened to Col. Watterson's paper.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

Here is a warning to the trusts from a little bird that talked to the editor of the Anoka Union recently when he was nodding in a day-dream:

A little bird flew into my window the other evening, as I was meditating on the backwardness of the delinquent subscriber in coughing up, and broke my reverie unceremoniously, and told me the cause of the business depression and this is the tale it told. "Don't you know what is causing the business depression? I do. It is simply because the people have stopped spending money as liberally as has been their custom in years past. Only the necessities of life are getting their wealth today. They are getting their eyes open, and refuse to pay tribute to the trusts and other interests who are demanding two prices for their output. And they have come to the conclusion that if there is no relief, why they'll quit and quit hard, and when things can be bought for what they should, then they'll begin spending again." I ain't so sure but what the little birdie sums up the situation about right, for I know dull business must result if the people don't spend their money. Let it be general, and it must bring serious business depression.

But the chances are that the stockholders in the different trusts are not worrying much about this. If business depression comes they have made money enough to last them over a spell. If the people bring a business depression because they will not spend their money the time will soon come when as a result of business depression they will have no money to spend. But, cheer up, Brother Pease. Things are looking brighter every day, and the diligent subscriber will soon be in a position to settle that little overdue account.

Just now industrial matters are very quiet on the iron ranges, owing principally to the strike on the lakes. The ups and downs of range towns are many. Just now it is Chisholm's turn to boast a little over its superiority, temporary though it may perhaps be. The Herald of that place says:

O, well, we are not fareing so bad at Chisholm after all, and we really have no kick coming, considering the times and the other towns on the range. We were reckoning it up the other day and there are over 1200 men at work in and around Chisholm, within 100 of the number we had a year ago, and this number is increasing right along. About 200 men will be added through the summer and possibly more. In another year it will be nearly doubled. This cannot be said of any other town on the range, nor has any other town as bright prospects for the future. We don't like to boast, but, we have the best town on the two ranges.

The lesson for the residents of all the range towns in the present situation is that stable prosperity will not be insured until surrounding agricultural lands are developed. The farmer is the mainstay of any community.

There is one excellent thing about this campaign, the timber thieves are getting an airing and it may be the result of saving the state a large amount of money. Those caught stealing timber should be punished the same as any other criminal. Why not?

This is a meritorious suggestion by the Albert Lea Tribune. But it may be safely inferred that the state auditor will be too busy to attend to this matter until after election, when he will be too much occupied with other duties to remember it.

The Red Wing Republican calls attention to the fact that although a new-born babe was recently found in a pond at Cannon Falls with its head crushed and the footsteps of a woman leading to and from the pond, no effort has been made by local officials to bring the guilty party to justice, while the general public appears to be unconcerned. This is a terrible indictment to bring against a community and yet it is not too severe. However, when society learns not to eternally condemn the single woman who, through a false step, brings a child into the world, then the crime of baby murder will grow less frequent.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Thomas Lowry's visit from Minneapolis yesterday led an old acquaintance of his to comment rather favorably on the Flour City capitalist-politician's make-up.

"You can tell from the look of Thomas Lowry that he is rather a smooth citizen and there are mighty few in this part of the country that can compete with him," he said. "He is an affable, pleasant man to meet, and a shrewd man in a business deal. He looks a good deal like a typical high-class politician when he goes along the street in a high hat and a frock coat, and he can fill the part to a nicety.

"He is a liberal man, too, and I remember well when he was interested in building the line from Minneapolis to Stillwater—the interurban line, that some of the work apparently hinged on securing some capital in New York. Lowry's good on securing capital anywhere he likes and it is no great trick for him to go down to New York and raise a million if he thinks he needs it. How he does it I don't know, but that makes no great difference in this case.

"They were anxious to get things started on the work between Minneapolis and Stillwater. The road was half way built, anyway, and what was needed was the money to work on the other end. Lowry was in New York trying to raise the money and Goodrich was on this end of the line. He was in Stillwater working up the thing while the 'old man' was in the metropolis hustling the necessary ducats. A special arrangement was made in the telegraph office at Stillwater to get a through message to New York at a certain time, as Goodrich wanted to talk, or rather wire, direct to Lowry, and Lowry wanted to wire back. I think they were holding a meeting of the council in Stillwater and it was desired to get the word from the East pretty nearly on the minute.

"At any rate, I happened to know the operator there and found out about it. Goodrich got a message through to Lowry and Lowry came right back at him to 'go ahead with the work at any cost.' And they did.

"Goodrich was not stingy with the money. The message and special arrangement of the wires cost $15, and he gave the operator $10. Going back on a special train he gave each of the train men $20. How he fixed it with the council I don't know, but the line was a 'go.'"

Mr. Mackey said that the ground was all cleared for building, but did not care to give details about the plant, further than to say that the first thing to be done would be the erection of houses for sheltering the workmen who will be used.

It is said, however, that the deposits of corundum at the point selected are especially good. The company has picked out a point for a landing, hence the name Point Corundum. Corundum is fine material for making sandpaper and emory wheels, and is said to cause less heat by friction than any other substance known almost. Knives ground on ordinary emory wheels get heated, while the contact with corundum is said to have no perceptible effect on the temperature.

"It's a big wonder to me the people of the West don't take more interest in the Eastern races than they do," said a Spalding guest. "Here in Duluth with the gambling spirit that is shown at least in mining stocks it seems odd that the more sporty forms of chance, such as horse races, don't appeal to the people. Maybe they do, but the pool rooms don't seem to indicate it, and it don't seem to be possible to get much information about the outcome in them.

"I wanted a chance to place a little money, but it's well that I did not get it. So it's just as well this time at least, that I was kept out of it by the apathy here in town. I would have put my price on Irish Lad as sure as you live. He won the handicap last year and the Metropolitan this year but yesterday he fell down. There were an immense number of folks that made a 'killing' on him last year, simply on account of his name. It's a talking title, you see, and the fellows that were really sporty were willing to gamble that a brute with a handle like that could do some business, without reference to his pedigree. And he did. But all good things come to an end, and he got done up yesterday. But it's a great name for a horse, and helped a whole pile of people make some money last season."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Instinct is a great thing to let somebody else bet on.

When a girl kisses a man, it is highly improper for her to do it, except against her will.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN DULUTH

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1884.

The quickest time made this season in loading wheat was at Elevator B the other day. Fifty thousand bushels were loaded on the Wallula in one hour and fifty-five minutes. Thirty thousand bushels an hour can be loaded at Elevator B when the machinery is in good order and run to its full capacity. There are only one or two elevators in the country that have the same capacity.

A letter was received from Walter Dunphy, late of this city, announces the fact that he has purchased the Humboldt house, in Lake View, a suburb of Chicago.

Extensive preparations were made for the celebration of Decoration day. Following was the order of the parade:

LINES TO A LAUGH.

Washington Star: "Aren't you angry because your husband bets on the races?"

"I don't know yet," answered young Mrs. Torkins. "I haven't heard whether he won today or not."

Yonkers Statesman: Mrs. Bacon—I see by this paper that the average family in the United States has four and seven-tenths persons.

Mr. Bacon—I suppose I am the seven-tenths in this family.

Washington Star: "Did you have a man dat was practicin' law to defend you in de case?" asked the visitor.

"Yass, indeed," answered the prisoner. "He was practicin' law, an' I was de one he was practicin' on."

Ally Sloper: Old Flapper—I wonder why people always take me to be so much younger than I really am? I suppose it's my personal appearance.

Old Sharpe—No, my boy; it isn't your looks; it's your conversation.

Tit-Bits: Reginald—I love you, Madeline. For you I would give up family, position, wealth—

Madeline—Hold Reginald! Giving up family is all right—I fain would be spared a mother-in-law; give up your position if you can get a better one, but please hold on to your wealth. We may need it.

Judge: Galileo had invented the clock.

"Phat's the use?" queried a Florentino. "Begorra! Ol know enough to shtop wurk whin the whistle blows."

Fearing he had perfected a useless article, the inventor was plunged into despair.

THE FORESTS OF NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

These heavy, dark-green forests rise
In solemn grandeur toward the skies.
They furnish much material
For building homes—near, far, great, small;
They guard the mines of ancient wealth,
Whose ores supply the coffer's health;
They hold the soil where, centuries past,
Their rich acquire of mould is cast.
They keep aloof the biting wind,
And whisper soothing to the mind—
Angelic in their ministries
And god-like in their mysteries.

And oft I claim the wondering thought—
Oh! what hath human beings brought
To such a pass and such a state
They list the chatterings of hate,
Instead of yielding willing ear
The impulses of love to hear—
And swift, chaotic wrong is wrought.

The great trees heed His touch of hand,
Who guideth peace throughout the land,
And shield his latest, great command,
To cherish whoso comes that way;
Submissive to the kindly vein
That prompts the growth of fruit again,
As heaven sends forth the blessed rain—
And only man fails to obey.

Who Wants James Henry?

Cleveland Leader: James Henry Smith—"Silent" Smith—is regarded as the most eligible bachelor in New York. He is worth about $40,000,000, and, although he is just 50 years old, he looks to be about 40—the right age. Mr. Smith recently bought the Whitney mansion, and his social activities have been noticeably increased. This gives rise to the old report that he is about to marry. Society and the newspapers have had him engaged about 20 times in the last year, but the silent man of millions—the richest bachelor in the world—has always emerged unscathed and unmarried.

WILL NOT NAME DATE

For Chounard's Death Until After Commutation Hearing.

St. Paul, May 27.—An effort to secure the commutation from death to life imprisonment for William Chounard, convicted April 29 of the murder of his wife, Jan. 26, at Cass Lake, is being made.

A. T. Larson, of Brainerd, attorney for the condemned man, has written both Governor Van Sant and the state board of pardons asking that he be permitted to make an argument before the board of pardons in favor of commutation before Governor Van Sant designates the day upon which Chounard shall hang.

Judge Spooner of Bemidji, certified the verdict of the jury and the sentence imposed by him of death on Chounard to the governor April 29, and the executive has ninety days in which to fix the date of the execution.

The movement looking to a commutation of the death penalty is based on a claim of Chounard's insanity.

Governor Van Sant will withhold the naming the date of the execution until the board of pardons has considered the case.

Sold Drinks to Boarders.

Mrs. Mary Wind, a widow of Eveleth, was lodged in the county jail yesterday to serve a ninety day sentence for selling liquor in her boarding house without a license.

It is charged that she has been serving her boarders with drinks for some time and the attention of the authorities was directed toward the place with the result of her arrest. She entered a plea of guilty in municipal court and was sentenced by Judge Hayes.

Fred Jones, of Mountain Iron, who was brought to the county jail yesterday was committed for 30 days for disorderly behavior. He was convicted in municipal court in Eveleth.

Winnipeg, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The "Champs" were pulled from their proud position at the head of the Northern league yesterday afternoon by Van Praagh's high-priced bunch of pennant chasers. It took the visitors about five innings to get started, but they finished with a rush that took the home players off their feet.

The game was played in a gale of wind which cut big holes in the fielding percentages of the two teams, but it was fast and exciting, and the startling finish of the visitors showed their ability to win what seemed to be a hopeless fight.

Shaw was in the box for Duluth. He got a bad start, the locals pounding him for four runs in the first three innings. Errors by Martin and Quillan, due to the high wind, helped the home team in securing the runs.

Green, who was in the box for the Champs, had the visitors sawing at the air for five innings. They could not begin to locate his bends, and it looked like a lead-pipe cinch for the home team at the end of the fifth.

But when "Big Bill" Zink, surnamed "the Moose," who was the first man up in the sixth, lammed one of the said mysterious shoots for two cushions, the fans sat up in their seats and quit eating peanuts. Shaw surprised himself by making a clean single, and Corrigan and Martin both hit safely, scoring Zink and Shaw. Randall drew a base and O'Leary singled in two more. Randall came home a moment later. Five runs were in and that safe margin of four runs was wiped out in one fell swoop.

The home team still had a rally coming, however. A couple of singles and an error let in two runs and they were again in the race. But the visitors broke Green's heart in the seventh by again jumping on him for four or five hits, which netted them three runs and gave them a commanding lead. Just to make sure of the game and prevent any argument in the matter, the Sox lammed out three more runs in the ninth, and the fans wended their way home with the knowledge that the Canadians were in second place for the first time since Aug. 1, 1903.

The following are the net results of the carnage:

LOSES BY FORFEIT.

Superior Could Not Reach Fargo In Time.

Fargo, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superior lost today's game to Fargo through no fault of its own, and the matter will be laid before the league executive.

When the hour for the game arrived the home players walked out to the center of the diamond and the umpire called "play ball." No Superior men were in sight and the umpire declared the game forfeited to Fargo by the score of 9 to 0.

The failure of the Superior men to arrive in time was owing to the fact that there was no train out of Winnipeg which would land them in Fargo for the game. They did not arrive in the North Dakota city until last evening.

The Superior men claim that the fault is with the men who drew up the schedule and not with them. The matter will have to be ruled on by the president of the league, and until his decision is received, the game will be credited to Fargo, and a defeat will be chalked up against Superior.

CROOKSTON UNFORTUNATE.

Plays Errorless Game But Cannot Win.

Grand Forks, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Crookston team made its first appearance on the local diamond yesterday. It was the general belief that the Cripples would put up a poor sample of ball, but to the surprise of all the fans, the visitors played an errorless game, the first of its kind to be played on the local diamond but, nevertheless they were doomed to lose and lose they did, by the rather close score of 3 to 2.

Martin was on the slab for the visitors, and with the exception of the first two innings pitched perfect ball. In those innings the Tigers took three two-baggers, and sent three men across the plate. This tells the tale. Martin for the rest of the game put on an extra twist and only one man got to first in the following six innings, and that one was issued a pass.

"Iron Man" Morton was on the firing line for the Tigers. He, like Martin, was not warmed up until the third inning, after which the visitors got one score, and no hits. Crookston scored in the first inning. Breyette, the first man up struck out. Schils lined out a two-bagger. Carlisle went on a fielder's choice, and Schils was caught between second and third. Novacek fanned Morton for a single and scored Carlisle.

The visitors got their second score in the eighth inning on Sharnweber's error. For five different innings only three men faced Morton. Martin could not wish for better support. The team had a fielding percentage of one thousand for eight innings.

The star playing for the visitors was done by Breyette, the little short stop, who plays ball all the time and says nothing. He surpasses by far any work done so far at that station by any visiting team. Manager McNeil was hit in the face by a batted ball, and had to retire from the game, it was his first time up to bat, and a sharp in-shoot struck him full in the face. Burton finished the game.

Thomas the first baseman for Crookston worried the umpire considerable, and bothered the fans. A long delay was taken after the right fielder had caught a fly, the umpire went to the field to look at the pillow he had on his hand, considerable disscussion followed and then the game went on and so did the fielder's mitt.

Brown went in the last half of the seventh in place of Cole. Carriveau will pitch the second game of the series, for the Tigers, and Thomas for the visitors.

Off the Bat.

Two out of three from Fargo! Two out of three from Crookston! Two out of three from last year's champions?

• • •

Yesterday was Martin's off day. He had three errors chalked up against him, but it was blowing a gale up in Winnipeg.

• • •

Two double plays yesterday was fielding some. Corrigan and Zing made one, and Lagger, Martin and Ball the other.

• • •

Hard luck for Crookston. They must have that healthy, long-lived hoodoo that dogged the steps of the White Sox last season, and which was thought to have been decently buried before 1904 opened.

• • •

Crookston has been playing good ball in spite of the poor showing made on the percentage list.

• • •

Superior's failure to arrive in Fargo probably saved the fans from another bad half hour by hearing how Noldin shut out the opposing team with one or two or three hits. It's nuts for Noldin's friends, who always claimed the big southpaw was one of the best in the business.

• • •

There are two pretty races going on in the American association and the National league. In the former St. Paul, Columbus and Milwaukee are neck and neck for the leadership, and in the National, Chicago, New York and Cincinnati take turns leading the league.

ENGINEER INSANE.

Imagines He Is Pursued By Enemies.

Mason Douglas, aged 40 years, from Hibbing, was adjudged insane at an examination held before Probate Judge Middlecoff, yesterday, and an order was made committing him to the state asylum at Fergus Falls.

Mason has the idea that he is being persecuted by some unseen enemy, and, refusing to apply to the police for protection, he armed himself with four revolvers and a butcher knife and wandered around in the woods for three days without food and drink. He believed that somebody was in pursuit of him all the time.

Mason is an engineer by trade and his parents live in Maine. He has a brother now confined in an insane hospital in the East. He has been a resident of this county since 1896.

When asked about his trade, Mason denies that he is an engineer but asserts that he is a private detective.

HOLDS HALIBUT RECORD.

Steamer Catches 160,000 Pounds In One Day.

Vancouver, B. C., May 27.—The largest catch of halibut for a single day's fishing ever made by any vessel in the world, fell to the lot of the steamer New England, Capt. Freeman, early this week. Off Cape George Dixon entrance, the New England in one day caught 160,000 pounds of fine halibut, thus beating all previous records. The New England reached port today.

SHOCKED AT BARE FEET.

New Haven, May 27.—Five Yale men have created a sensation by walking out of the Yale campus and down Chapel street barefooted.

A short time ago New Haveners were shocked when parties of Yale men appeared on the streets hatless and coatless. The townspeople had just begun to get accustomed to this when the barefooted Yale peds came out on parade. They are now wondering how far the boys will carry the fad. Complaint may be made to the faculty.

ENLARGING STANDS

Capacity of Bleachers at Ball Park Being Increased.

Wilkes Predicts Two Out of Three at Winnipeg.

Work will be commenced this afternoon or tomorrow morning on a set of new bleachers for the baseball park.

The seating capacity of the grand stand and the bleachers at present is about 2000. The grand stand will hold between 700 and 800 people when filled to its capacity, and the bleachers will seat about 1200. Seating capacity for 250 people will be added to each of the bleachers, making a total seating capacity of about 2500.

It is expected that the additions will be completed in time for the opening game next Thursday, when, if the weather is favorable, the new stands should be necessary.

The grounds will be in first-class condition for the opening game. The warm weather has thoroughly dried them, and they have been watered and rolled regularly, until the diamond is the fastest ever played on by the Duluth team.

The addition of five feet to the height of the fence will also be completed when the season opens. It will prevent the small boys and also not a few grown men from having reserved seat privileges free, and it will also involve a change in the ground rules from last year. Last season a fly over the left field fence was good for but two bases. The left field fence was a little short, but this season, since the heighth as been increased, it amounts to the same thing as moving the fence back a few feet, and anything over the fence within the foul lines will be good for four bases.

"They'll take two games out of three from Winnipeg," was the prophecy made by Joe Wilkes yesterday afternoon before the results of the first game were known. "The boys are playing great ball. Martin and Quillan are hitting like fiends, and Zink is also finding it regularly. In fact they are all batting and fielding in championship form and I fully expect them to take two out of the three games from Winnipeg.

"I strained my leg in Eau Claire and it has never been quite right since, so I came home to rest for a few days and see a doctor. It was so stiff in Crookston that I couldn't run around the bases."

It looks as if the prediction of the Duluth outfielder would be made good. The White Sox won yesterday's game in easy fashion and should be able to take one of the two remaining contests. Then for three heart-breaking games with their rivals from Grand Forks, and home for the opening of the season, with three games with the "Champs." It is hard to see how Duluth can come home worse than second place, and the chances look good for them landing at the Union depot next Thursday leading the league.

SLIGHTLY FIRMER

Wheat Closes Somewhat Higher After Weakness Early In Session.

Increasing Receipts In Northwest Aid Bears —Flax Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 27.—The wheat market was narrow today and though lower a considerable part of the morning, closed from ¼c to ¼c higher than yesterday. The increasing receipts in the Northwest together with favorable weather in all parts of the wheat growing territory seem to be having a bearish effect. Clearances continue very small. Bradstreet today reporting only 1,132,157 bus from America during the week. Even India shipped more than that, her total being 1,840,000 bus, against 1,069,000 bus last year.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d higher and Paris unchanged to ⅜c lower. Foreigners are taking a little Manitoba wheat from Duluth exporters every day, but the Canadian wheat is harder to get now.

The Modern Miller report was generally favorable, saying: "Weather conditions have favored the winter wheat crop, except in California, where there has been some deterioration through the dry winds. The crop promise is generally well maintained elsewhere, being best in Missouri and Central Mississippi valley states. In Indiana, Ohio and Michigan, conditions are much better than a month ago, but indications are that hardly more than an average crop can be secured."

Snow's weekly report said: "The winter wheat condition continues to improve, and the present prospect for such fields as are standing for harvest is materially better than a year ago and the condition is very high. Local estimates of oats acreage show a larger increase than was expected in the Ohio valley and a moderate increase in Missouri and Mississippi. The total breadth is probably the largest on record. The crop is a little late in growth, but is coming forward rapidly and the general average is fully up to normal. The increase in corn acreage promises to be very heavy, especially in Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Nebraska. A little planting is yet to be done on the low lands in the Missouri valley, but the crop generally is in and coming forward with a stand fully as good as usual."

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are estimated to decrease 180,000 bus this week.

Car receipts at Duluth were 21, against 9 a year ago, and at Minneapolis 112, against 104 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 133, against 113 last year. Chicago received 12, against 20 last year. Winnipeg receipts were 66, against 120 a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 290,000 bus, last year 254,400 bus. shipments 262,-000 bus, last year 386,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 142,000 bus. Argentine shipments this week were 2,-192,000 bus, against 2,584,000 bus last week and 1,840,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼c higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅜c lower. July oats closed a shade lower. Primary receipts of corn were 522,-120 bus, last year 524,380 bus. Shipments 305,824 bus, last year 960,780 bus. Clearances were 12,800 bus. Argentine shipments this week were 1,465,000 bus, against 1,096,000 bus last week and 1,312,000 bus last year. Bradstreet reported American corn shipments of 233,696 bus, against 118,337 bus last week.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dull. The July option opened with 93¼c asked, against a closing yesterday of the same price bid, and it fell off to 93c at 10:35. It then advanced to 93⅝c shortly after the noon hour and closed at that price, an advance of ⅛c. The September option was also ⅛c higher, closing at 81⅝c.

Cash offerings are picking up somewhat and receipts are increasing, being considerably ahead of last year at this time, though not very large. Prices continue within a wide range.

Flax was dull. The July option was weak early in the day, selling ¾c down to $1.07½, but it rallied somewhat and closed ⅛c lower at $1.08. The September option closed ⅛c higher, while October was ½c lower.

Stocks of flax at Duluth are expected to increase 85,000 bus this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week were 760,000 bus, against 1,069,600 bus last week and 256,000 bus last year.

Oats and rye were unchanged in price.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Favorable Weather Gives Wheat an Easier Feeling.

Chicago, May 27.—Notwithstanding firm cables, sentiment in the wheat market today was easier, the predominating influence being the extremely favorable weather. Many traders were inclined to await some definite news, and as a result, the volume of business was light. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 86c to 86⅛c. A decline to 85¾c was followed by a rally to 86c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 126 cars, against 91 cars last week and 139 cars a year ago.

The market became firmer on covering by shorts but trading continued light the entire day. Final figures on July were up ⅛c at 86⅝c.

In sympathy with the slight decline in wheat the corn market exhibited an easier tone. The principal feature of trading was short selling by scalpers, induced by improved weather conditions and increased receipts. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 47⅝c to 48c and held steady within the opening range. Local receipts were 266 cars, 40 of contract grade.

On heavy estimated receipts for tomorrow, a general selling movement developed which carried July down to 47⅜c.

Some recovery was made on covering, July closing with a loss of ⅜c at 47¾c.

Under the influence of the depression in the wheat and corn markets, oats were barely steady, although there was no great selling pressure. Commission houses had moderate offerings, which were readily taken by pit traders. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 38¾c to 38⅞c and held within the opening range. Local receipts, 77 cars.

As a result of the easier tone in grains, provisions were subjected to moderate realizing sales, in consequence of which slight losses occurred throughout the entire list. The opening was firm on a strong hog market, prices being up 12½c at $11.42½. Later the price declined to $11.30. July lard opened 5c higher at $6.55 and sold off to $6.50. Ribs were up 2½c to 5c, opening at $6.60 to $6.62½. A decline to $6.55 followed.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: There was a very small volume of trade and of course a nervous market. There is probably some remaining short interest. There is also a considerable scattered long interest. Private houses are turning out quite a little contract wheat and there were deliveries on May contract. It was a very dull market and showed some strength at the close on local buying, now says conditions to improve and the present prospects are materially better than a month ago. Spring wheat acreage is somewhat larger than last year and condition very high. Some decrease in the visible expected on Tuesday. Our exchange will be open tomorrow.

Corn—The weakness was caused by increasing receipts, the arrivals today being in excess of expectations and the estimates for tomorrow still larger. There is no change in the shipping situation and the demand is not very good. Local sentiment is bearish and there is more or less short interest, but the selling is better than the buying. Snow says increase in acreage promises to be very heavy. The crop generally in and coming forward with a stand fully as good as usual.

Oats—There is still undoubtdly quite a little short interest and the covering of this side does the whole market. The cash situation is dull. Snow says the estimates show a larger increase of acreage than was expected in the Ohio valley.

Provisions—The market is quiet and prices about unchanged. Some little firmness early, but it met with selling through brokrs and the improvemnt was lost. Receipts running about the same as a year ago. Th buying for packers, noticeable for several days was not in evidence today. We are doubtful if these interests will make an effort to advance prices.

C. C. Bovey of the Washburn Crosby Co. in a Minneapolis morning paper says: "The U. K. will within a few weeks be actively seeking northwestern flour. Business in local milling circles will pick up greatly. The foreign outlook is much better for us than it has been for some time and England will be eating more bread than ever made from Minneapolis flour before the summer is over. Eastern stocks are already being rapidly diminished and demand seems to be generally on the increase. A perceptible improvement being noted all along the line in the domestic trading."

* * *

Broomhall: Our Hungarian agent advises that rain is much needed with present prospects, the wheat crop is estimated at about 121,000,000 bushels or 20 per cent less than last year.

* * *

Indianapolis wires: Indiana canot possibly get bread and seed out of her wheat crop this year. Thousands of acres left standing will not be cut. This comes from large cash dealers and not speculators.

* * *

Broomhall, Liverpool: The visible supply of wheat in Argentine's chief ports today is 4,448,000 bus., week ago, 5,224,000 bus., year ago, 4,008,000 bus. Corn today, 2,400,000 bus., week ago, 1,645,000 bus., year ago, 2,258,000 bus. The tone of Argentine wheat markets is firm, but the export demand not as good as last week, being poor at the present time.

* * *

St. Louis wires: A party just arrived from Tenessee reports that state's wheat crop very poor and backward; he also says wheat is not heading out in southern Illinois.

VERY DULL MARKET

There Was Little Trading on the Stock Exchange.

Scarcely Any Change In the List Generally Noted.

New York, May 27.—The opening dealings showed no alteration in the listless character of the stock market today. Changes were small and mixed and most of the prominent leaders opened at last night's prices.

Most of the scanty orders executed during the first hour's business were for the selling account, but little impression was made on prices. St. Paul, Atchison, Union Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Southern Pacific, United States Steel preferred and Brooklyn Transit fell off ⅛ to ½. Realty preferred declined 1½ and Toledo, St. Louis & Western 1½. Amalgamated showed some firmness.

Prices drifted slowly downward, declines reaching ½ to ¾ for the leaders. United States Steel preferred and Wabash preferred showed the maximum declines. The Detroit Southern stocks and Pullman lost a point and Toledo, St. Louis & Western recovered its loss. The attendance at the board was small and the trading was insignificant. Bonds were steady at noon.

Pressure against the Eries and unexplained liquidation in a few other low-priced stocks presented the only features in interest in an otherwise dormant market. Erie common and the first preferred sold down ¾. Chicago Terminal preferred 1. Detroit Southern 2¼ and the preferred 3½. Smelting exceptionally gained 7⅛.

The official announcement of the forthcoming default of the June interest of Detroit Southern 4s explained the earlier liquidation of the stock and induced further selling. The common stock broke 4¾ in all and the preferred 5 points. Active stocks were not affected, but prices worked lower at other points. Wabash preferred, Erie first preferred, Colorado Southern first preferred, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Kansas & Texas preferred, Hide and Leather preferred and Tennessee Coal were all down about a point.

A small covering movement by the shorts hardened prices a trifle. Detroit Southern rallied 1⅜. Pump preferred rose 2 and Union Pacific preferred ¾. Hocking Coal lost 1⅜ and Texas & Pacific 1¼ and St. Louis Southwestern preferred 2½. The close was steady and very dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: A rumor is in the air that stocks are to advance about three points within the next few days. Perhaps so, but I would rather sell them on such advance than to buy them now. About the best play I see is to sell stocks moderately on a scale up. That is if you want to do anything. I do not believe there will be a pronounced movement in either direction for the next week or two. The way the market is acting it ought to advance two or three points further.

* * *

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market seems to have become deadlocked again and will probably remain so until after the holidays. On the one hand, business conditions and poor earnings discourage all buying and on the other hand the extreme ease in money checks liquidation. There is a very considerable short interest which seems fairly confident of its position. It would not take very much aggressive buying, however, to force these shorts to cover. Business yesterday, with one exception, was the smallest of the year and the present market calls for n comment.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was a little duller today than it was yesterday, with scarcely any change in the list generally. The April statement of five or six of the leading roads are due in the next few days. It is generally assumed that the showing will be a poor one as compared with last year. It is expected that the treasury will make another call on the banks in the near future. The bank statement is in doubt, but it is not expected to be very bad. There will be no market tomorrow or Monday.

* * *

Coe Commission Co.: The stock market this morning is a most uninteresting affair, trading to noon 52,600 shares. Comment on today's trading is hardly necessary. The market is rather weak, no doubt because of the three days' holiday. Indications point to a favorable bank statement tomorrow and the outlook for next week is for a better market.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 27.—Money on call, easy, 1@1½ per cent; closed bid 1 per cent; offered at 1¼ per cent. Time loans, easy; sixty and ninety days, 2¾@3¼ per cent; six months, 3½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange, strong, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87.15@4.87.50 for demand, and $4.85.25@4.85.30 for sixty days' bills; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.85@4½. Bar silver, 55¾c Mexican dollars, 44¼c. Government bonds, weak; railroad bonds, heavy.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 27.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 3 points, and following the call displayed a generally advancing tendency on continued dry weather in the Eastern belt and talk of an improved spot demand after the first of the month. The market was quiet, and after the initial buying, which caused an advance of about 10 to 12 points, fluctuations ruled irregular and within a comparatively narrow range, with business mostly of an evening-up character in the absence of cables and in view of the approaching holidays. The weather, aside from continued absence of rain in the Eastern belt, was generally good, and showers were reported just north of the Atlantic belt.

Spot closed quiet, 15 points lower. Middling uplands, $13.20; ditto gulf, $13.45. Sales 704 bales. Futures closed irregular; May, $12.63; June, $12.64; July, $12.80; August, $12.35; September, $11.22; October, $10.85; November, $10.73; December, $10.71; January, $10.74.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Tomorrow and Monday will be holidays. Today has been a little better than a holiday. The transaction lighter than in any previous day in several years. Prospect is that tomorrow's bank statement will be favorable. A gain of $10,000,000 in reserve now predicted. Outlook brighter and we are told to look for higher prices in Boston Consolidated Mining, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Coppers. Copper had a good advance in London today. There is talk of coming lower prices but copper is being sold for July delivery at 13 cents or better.

TREASURY BALANCES.

FIRST OF SEASON.
Excursion to Fond du Lac Sunday and Monday.
Sunday and Monday the popular steamer Newsboy will make two trips each day to Fond du Lac, the famous summer resort up the beautiful St. Louis river.
This place is becoming more and more popular as a summer resort each year and already there are many campers there. The temperature is 20 to 25 degrees warmer than in the city and many who experienced the last cold winter will be the first to take advantage of this beautiful climate and ride up the St. Louis Sunday and Decration day.
Boating and fishing is first-class and all park privileges will be free to patrons of the steamer Newsboy.
Messrs. Clow & Nickelson, the popular managers of the Newsboy, have spared no expense in making her one of the safest excursion boats at the head of the lake. See advertisement announcing time of departure, etc., on another page.

Must Pay Bills.

Owing to the demands made by the Jobbers' Credit association on the retail grocer, whereby he is forced to pay for fruits, vegetables, provisions, butter, eggs and meat every week, and all other commodities by the tenth of the following month, the retail grocer is compelled, for protection to his credits and his own business, to force the consumer to pay his bills more promptly, and those who are owing will find steps taken to attain that result.

NO INDICATIONS OF STRIKE.

New York, May 27.—At the Sound steamers' piers along the North and the East rivers, where the freight handlers temporarily tied up traffic a week ago by going out on strike, work was proceeding in an ordinarily and systematic way today and there was practically nothing to indicate that a strike was in progress.

MARINE NEWS

CHARTER MADE

Lumber Boat Taken For Grain at Five Cent Rate.

Said to Be For a Shipment That Was Urgent.

Another charter of a cargo of grain was made this morning at a rate of five cents a bushel. It is claimed that this was a special instance in which the demand for the shipment of the grain was urgent, probably to prevent default on a contract made for the shipment of grain upon the opening of navigation which means that the grain must be loaded within ten days after the arrival of the first boat from the lower lakes. It is reported that another charter at least would be made at the same rate if a boat was to be had, but this morning there was none offered other than the one taken. It was a lumber boat and the amount to be taken is only 40,000 bushels.

Shippers claim that this does not establish the five-cent rate, however, and that, except to make some shipments that are urgent as in this instance, that rate or anywhere near it will not be paid.

MARINE INSURANCE TAX

A conference between Insurance Commissioner Dearth, of Minneapolis, and the heads of the marine insurance companies, at New York, regarding the decrease in that form of insurance premiums reported for taxes in Minnesota, resulted in a practical agreement, by which some $2000 or $3000 taxes on last year's business is likely to be realized. Much of the insurance written on Minnesota cargoes is placed in New York, and under the law of that state must pay a premium tax there, so if it was also caught in Minnesota it would pay the double tax. No method has been devised by which tax on this business can be paid in Minnesota, and a friendly suit may be brought to get a construction of the law.

NO MORE BOATS

Will Leave Chicago, Say Masters and Pilots.

Chicago, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the sailing of the steamer Captain Thomas Wilson last night with a grain cargo from South Chicago, the war of the Lake Carriers on the Masters' and Pilots' association began on Lake Michigan. Today the officials of the union claim that it will be some time before another lake carrier ship leaves here, and that their ranks are unbroken. Reports, however, from various points do not take the same view, and it is stated that beyond a doubt at least a dozen Lake Carrier steamers will sail by Monday noon.

Of course no captain would at anytime start out on a Friday, even if there was no black list looming up in front of him, and no boats will go today. There is considerable activity around the docks and while it is possible that something will follow the Wilson tomorrow, vesselmen refuse to name any craft for fear of interference by the union officials.

The Lake Carriers are giving to captains who break away from the union at this juncture, a most binding pledge of protection from any blacklist which may follow their desertion of the union. Ever since the tug trust abandoned the men who stood by it during the great tug strike and left them to the mercy of the union the fear of a blacklist has been potent among union members and this pledge has been made to overcome the fear of a like treatment when the time comes for a settlement of masters' and pilots' in the strike.

NO CHARTERING DONE.

Chicago, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two lumber carriers on the market today were not placed, as shippers want boats for immedi

No Word Received.
No word had been received early this afternoon from the trunk line meeting in Chicago, held to consider making a low rate on flour to the seaboard to relieve the situation caused by the lake strike. General Freight Agent Walker, of the South Shore road, went to Chicago, presumably to attend the meeting. As the strike appears to be breaking slightly, it is hardly likely that the trunk lines will make a low rate now, according to what local railroad men say.

JAPAN'S SWEEPING VICTORY COST HER HEAVILY, 3000 MEN BEING KILLED OR WOUNDED

The Russian Loss Expected to Total 2000 Men.

Four Hundred Were Left Dead In the Trenches.

The Japanese Will Now March Upon Port Arthur.

Tokio, May 28.—Japan paid heavily for her victories at Kin Chou, Nanshan and Talien Wan, losing 3000 men in killed and wounded in the repeated assaults against these positions, but she scored a sweeping and valuable victory over the Russians capturing fifty guns, clearing the way to Port Arthur and inflicting losses on the Russians, which in the end are expected to total 2000 men. It is doubtful if the Russians will stand again north of Port Arthur. They retired from the field beaten and they failed to rally at Nan Quan Ling, where it was anticipated that a second stand would be made.

The desperate onslaughts of the Japanese on the heights of Nan Shan were telling, for the Russians left three hundred dead in the trenches there. A complete search of this field is expected to show a greater number of dead.

Nan Quan Ling was occupied yesterday morning by a force of infantry, artillery and engineers under the command of Gen. Nakamura. The main Japanese forces spent Friday night in the villages around Nan Shan. The soldiers were greatly fatigued as a result of the constant fighting, but they entered with much spirit upon the new operations. A force of Russians held Sanchil Pu station, which is northwest of Dalny, but the Japanese drove them out.

The Russians abandoned and burned the station and retired in the direction of Port Arthur.

The estimates of the Russians engaged in the defense of Kin Chou, Nan Shan hill and the south shore of Talien Wan bay vary, but it is evident that the Russians drew for men from the forces at Port Arthur and offered all the resistance possible. It is understood here that Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, commander of the military forces at Port Arthur, was in personal command of the recent operations. As soon as the Japanese troops have rested they will press on to the south.

Tokio, May 28.—The Russians have abandoned Nan Kwan Ling and have been driven from Sanchilipu, retreating towards Port Arthur. The Japanese have captured fifty cannon. The Russians left 400 dead in the Kin Chou-Nan Shan fight. On the Japanees side the killed and wounded number 3000.

Washington, May 28.—The following cablegram from the foreign office at Tokio was received at the Japanese legation today:

Tokio, May 28.—The commander of the army attacking Kin Chou reports that a detachment of our troops, consisting of infantry, artillery and engineers, occupied Nan Kwan Ling on the morning of May 27. The enemy fled in the direction of Port Arthur, after burning a railroad station at Shan Shi Hill Tuo, northwest of Dalny. On the 26th our troops captured fifty guns, besides many other things. The number of the enemy's dead alone and left in the field amounted to 400. Our casualties, including dead and wounded, is estimated at 3000.

Rome, May 28.—According to a dispatch from Tokio, received here, the Japanese have attacked the town of Talien Wan.

Their occupation of the junction of the Dalny railroad with the main Port Arthur line, it is added, isolates Port Dalny.

NEARLY SEVEN HUNDRED

Lost Lives In Hatsuse and Yoshino Disasters.

Tokio, May 28.—Revised figures show that sixty-one non-commisisoned officers and 378 bluejackets were killed and drowned; seven officers, seven non-commissioned officers and fifty blue jackets slightly wounded and twelve bluejackets seriously wounded in the sinking of the Japanese battleship Hatsuse by a mine, off Port Arthur, on May 15. Two hundred and thirty-five non-commisisoned officers and men lost their lives on the cruiser Yoshino, which was rammed and sunk by the cruiser Kasuga on the same day that the Hatsuse was blown up. The navy department has not yet received a detailed report of the two disasters.

JAPANESE STRATEGY

Is a Painful Surprise to Gen. Kuropatkin.

Newchwang, May 28.—A staff officer just from Mukden says the deliberation and precision of the enemy has surprised Gen. Kuropatkin, who at first believed the Japanese campaign would be one of dashing recklessness, with more theatrical display about the manœuvers than strategy.

A Chinese merchant just arrived, who left Dalny five days ago, says the Russians have vacated the town which, at the time of his departure, had not been occupied by the Japanese forces. The latter were still engaged in landing troops at Kin Chou bay. It is said upon excellent authority that the Japanese plan is to use a force of 100,000 men in their operations against Port Arthur, and take it by storm in a fortnight. They realize that their losses in the execution of this plan will be severe, but it is considered better to risk that than to keep a large army idle for three months. They do not propose, it is further said, to penetrate into the interior of the country any further than Mukden.

The Russian authorities have secured £2,000,000 in coin by French steamer.

The above map gives an excellent idea of the present position of the opposing armies in the far East. The Japanese commenced to land troops several weeks ago at Pitsewo and Port Adams, and which have been moving steadily down the peninsula toward Port Arthur. Within the past few days additional troops were landed in Kin Chow (Kin Chau) bay and the attack on that city was made, which, with its surrounding heights, was captured. There is now practically no opposition to the march of the Japanese to Port Arthur, some twenty-five miles, and which they will storm in the near future.

WOULD TAKE 150,000 MEN

To Capture Port Arthur, Says Capt. Jakovleff.

St. Petersburg, May 28.—Captain Jakovleff, former commander of the Russian battleship Petropaviovsk, who was wounded when his ship was destroyed at Port Arthur, April 13, in an interview regarding the possibility of the Japanese capturing Port Arthur, declared that it would take 150,000 men with magnificent artillery, to accomplish the task.

Asked as to the number of men in the Port Arthur garrison, Captain Jakovleff said it was much larger than was stated in telegraphic reports—much over 25,000—but he declined to state what would be the exact number when the defenders of the Kin Chou positions retired within the fortress.

He discussed with some detail the difficulties of the approach. "After the outer line of the fortifications is reached," said he, "a number of detached positions must be captured by the enemy before they reach the inner ring of defenses. The taking of each position would necessitate a bloody battle and their capture would leave the citadel untouched and to my mind, impregnable.

"A great deal, of course, would depend upon the relative merits of the artillery of the opposing forces. The Russian guns could not be judged by the results on the Yalu, where the Russians had only light advance guards artillery against the heavy siege guns which the Japanese were brining up for use in Manchuria."

Port Arthur, Captain Jakovleff said, had mounted numerous large guns, landwards, while Makaroff's system of range finding is so nearly perfect that the Japanese never ventured within reach of the shore batteries.

As illustrating the fact that the Japanese artillery is not necessarily invincible, the captain said the battleship Petropavolvsk was struck by a 12-inch shell at a distance of two and three-quarters miles and her armor was penetrated to a depth of only two inches. He declared that Port Arthur was provisioned for a year and said that all the damaged ships there had been repaired except the Retvizan and the Czarevitch. The latter, he asserted, ought to be ready today and the former within a week.

JAPS NOT DISTURBED

By Movements of Russians In Eastern Korea.

Tokio, May 28.—The Japanese are not seriously disturbed by the Russian operations in East Korea. The movements of the Cossack cavalry and battery of guns that accompanies them is being closely watched by the Japanese, who are confident in their ability to protect their communications and maintain the military supremacy of Japan in Korea. The Yalu victory, which opened the Yalu estuary to water communication, diminishes the importance of the line of land communications from Chinampho to Wiju. The loss of their naval power compels the Russians to avoid the sea along the eastern coast of Korea and limits their operations to the land where transportation difficulties prevent the concentration and operation of a large land force.

BLOCKADE DECLARED.

Japan Makes Formal Announcement to the World.

Che Foo, May 28.—Japan announces that the entire coast of the Liao Tung peninsula lying south of a line between Pitsewo on the east and Pulantien on the west, is in a state of effective blockade by the Japanese navy. The declaration states that the blockade will be maintained.

The Japanese government evidently had refrained from declaring the peninsula in a state of blockade until now because it is held in international law that a blockade to be effective must be maintained by land as well as by sea. The United States has always maintained that a proclamation of blockade of an extensive coast, not supported by the actual presence of a naval power competent to enforce its simultaneous, constant and effective operation on every point, even for ports which may be in actual blockade. The 'governmental' blockade proclamation by Japan throws the burden of proof or vessels attempting to run the blockade.

NO MORE RESISTANCE

To Japanese Until They Reach Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 28.—There is no attempt here to disguise the fact that the successful forcing of the neck of Kwan Tung peninsula proper puts a practical end to resistance to the enemy until he reaches the actual fortifications around Port Arthur. Although there are many strong positions in the more than twenty-five miles before the perimeter of the fortress is reached, the authorities admit that the Russians can offer little resistance and must now retire within the fortress and undertake to defend themselves against a siege.

Neither the admiralty nor the general staff has any direct information. Like the outside world the admiralty and general staff are dependent entirely upon the enemy for news. Native reports, which may be of some value, are, however, expected shortly.

While there is no disposition to question the main facts sent out officially from Tokio, some unofficial reports from Japanese sources are being received with caution.

The impossibility of holding the advanced positions around Kin Chou, in the face of overwhelming odds, has all along been admitted, but on account of the character of the position as well as its defenses the general staff cannot but believe that the defence must have been heroic, and that the positions were only taken by a display of desperate courage and at a frightful cost. The earlier news was received in a calm spirit by both the public and the newspapers but if the latest report that the Japanese captured fifty guns is confirmed it is sure that the effect will be much deeper and is certain to be considered a severe blow. Until that report arrived the feeling was that the Russians had resisted to the limit of human endurance and had retired in good order, but if this number of guns was taken, it will put a different complexion upon things, though it is conceivable here that if the Japanese operating fleet landed forces at San Shi Li Phu and Talien Wan and got in the rear of the Russian positions the abandonment of the guns might have become necessary. This view, however, will hardly diminish the extent of the disaster.

NEGRO CONFESSES

That He Attacked New Haven Young Woman.

New Haven, Conn., May 28.—A further confession was made today by William McLane, the negro who, when he was arrested last night, admitted that he was the author of an attack upon a young woman in Canal street early in the week. The police now believe that McLane committed all the three assaults which have stirred the residents of the fashionable section of the city in the neighborhood of Whitney avenue and Prospect street of late.

The prisoner said last night in explanation of the Canal street assault, that he was drunk at the time and did not know what he was doing. Today he said that he was subject to epilepsy fits.

POPE PLEASED

That French Delegates Did Not Go To Extremes.

Rome, May 28.—The pope was up until 1 o'clock this morning awaiting telegrams about the result of the debate in the French chamber of deputies on the policy of the Combes committee towards the Vatican. Notwithstanding the strong anti-Papal statement of Premier Combes, the pontiff expressed satisfaction at the fact that the chamber did not adopt the proposition of the extreme parties, rendering the Franco-Vatican rupture definite, as he believes that with time and reciprocal explanations all will be satisfactorily settled. The pontiff has reserved a definite decision as to his future attitude until he has consulted the leading cardinals and received the report of the papal nuncio at Paris and the minutes of the sitting of the chamber.

NO TRACE YET

Of the Missing Mayor of Negaunee, Mich.

Negaunee, Mich., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is no trace yet of Dr. J. H. Hudson, mayor of the city, who has been lost since Wednesday in the Escanaba river district. Hundreds of people are looking for him. He was without food, and is now thought to be dead.

CALUMET HIGHS

Now Champions of the Upper Peninsula.

Negaunee, Mich., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Calumet high school baseball team defeated the Negaunee high school team here this morning by a score of 17 to 5. The Calumet highs are now champions of the upper peninsula.

DIXIE SAILS FOR COLON.

Philadelphia, May 28.—The auxiliary cruiser Dixie sailed from the navy yard today for Colon with stores and provisions. At Colon the vessel will take aboard 400 marines, who have been serving there for more than a year, and will return with them to League island. After landing the marines here, the vessel will go to the Brooklyn navy yard to await orders.

DISORDERS AT BREST.

Brest, France, May 28.—Serious disorders are occurring here in connection with the strike of dock laborers and bakers. A large force of troops is guarding the streets and the city is practically under martial law. During the morning troops charged 400 striking laborers, causing great excitement, but no serious injuries are reported.

Memorial Day Program.

In the High School Assembly hall yesterday afternoon the Washington school gave a Memorial day program composed of songs, recitations and instrumental music. Recitations were given by Jennie Cavanaugh, Charley McKinley, Bertha Johnson, Sam Miller, Marjorie McMillan, Anker Arneson, Ruth Borgen, Petronella Gilman and Karl Peterson. Piano solos were given by Violet Jordan and Emilie Huhn, a violin solo by Edith Herington, and a violin duet by Oliver and Thomas Colbentson. A vocal solo was given by Tena Shaw and several chorus numbers were given by the school. One of the members of the G. A. R. was present and addressed the pupils.

Will Discuss the War.

The Knights of Columbus have arranged for an entertainment to be given Wednesday evening, June 15, for the benefit of St. James' Orphanage at the Armory. Rev. J. M. Cleary, who is one of the most widely known speakers in the Roman Catholic church and has a fame that in fact extends far beyond that denomination, will speak on the subject, "The War in the Far East; With Whom Should Americans Sympathize?" Muhlbaur's orchestra will play and local talent will participate in the program.

SENATOR M. S. QUAY IS DEAD; LAPSED INTO STUPOR FROM WHICH HE NEVER REVIVED

MATTHEW STANLEY QUAY.

End Came to Distinguished Patient at 2:30 P. M.

Had Been Unconscious Since 8 O'Clock Saturday Morning.

Death Removes One of Country's Most Prominent Men.

Beaver, Pa., May 28.—Senator Quay is dead. The end came at 2:50.

Beaver, Pa., May 28.—Senator M. S. Quay is dying. He has been unconscious since early morning and the stupor is growing more profound each hour. Oxygen is being administered constantly in the hope that it will revive him, but his physicians do not think the senator will regain consciousness. They say the end is very near.

Beaver, Pa., May 28.—Senator Quay's condition is alarming. A change for the worse came about 8 o'clock this morning and he may not live through the day. Dr. Litchfield, one of his physicians who is in constant attendance at the bedside stated to the Associated Press that the senator was slowly sinking. His pulse was gradually growing weaker and the worst was feared.

At 10 o'clock Senator Quay was in a stupor from which he could not be aroused. His relatives and friends believe his death is a question of only a few hours.

Oxygen is being administered constantly in hope that it will revive him but Dr. Wilson said he did not think the senator would regain consciousness.

The doctor thought the end would come about sundown, or earlier.

The immediate cause of Senator Quay's condition is exhaustion due to inability to assimilate nourishment. He as taken no food since 3 a. m. Chronic gastritis and inflammation of the stomach is the foundation of the trouble.

The above statement was given out by Dr. Wilson under authority of the Quay family. It is the first communication given the press from a direct source since the senator's illness.

Messages have been sent to the more distant relatives saying the senator was very low and was not likely to recover.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon Senator Quay was slowly sinking. His temperature was 104¼, pulse 120 and respiration 42. Dr. Litchfield said he might live one hour or eight hours. He was resting quietly without pain. This was due to oxygen given him constantly for seven hours. All the immediate family are now in the senator's home awaiting the end.

Senator Boise Penrose, Miss Annie Pennypacker, of Washington, and W. F. Wright, of Philadelphia, until recently private secretary to Senator Quay, reached here today. Senator Penrose arrived about 1:10 o'clock and was hurried to the Quay home. He was at once admitted to the sick room, but, of course, could not talk to the patient, the latter having been unconscious since 3 a. m.

A day or two ago Senator Quay told Dr. Litchfield that he was not worrying about politics.

"Everything is quiet," Senator Quay told me, "and there is nothing for me to do."

The sole topic in Beaver today is the alarming change in the senator's condition. The people are deeply concerned and the suspension of business is almost total.

Matthew Stanley Quay was born in Dillsburg, York county, Pa., Sept. 30, 1833. He was prepared for college at Beaver and Indiana academies and was graduated at Jefferson college in 1850. He began his legal studies at Pittsburg and was admitted to the bar in 1854. He was appointed prothonotary of Beaver county in 1855, was elected in 1856 to the same office and re-elected in 1859. In 1861 he resigned his office to acept a lieutenancy in the Tenth Pennsylvania reserves, and he was subsequently made assistant commissary general of the state with the rank of lieutenant colonel. Afterward he was appointed private secretary to Governor Andrew G. Curtin, and in August, 1862, he was commissioned colonel of the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania regiment. He was mustered out owing to impaired health Dec. 7, 1862, but participated in the assault on Marye's Heights Dec. 13, as a volunteer. He was subsequently appointed state agent at Washington, but shortly afterward was recalled by the legislature to fill the office of military secretary, which was created by that body. He was a member of the legislature, 1865-1867; was secretary of the commonwealth, 1872-1878; was recorder of the city of Philadelphia and chairman of the Republican state committee, 1878-79 and 1902-3; was secretary of the commonwealth, 1879-1882; was delegate-at-large to the Republican national conventions of 1872, 1876 and 1880; was elected state treasurer in 1885 by the largest vote ever given to a candidate for that office; was elected a member of the Republican national committee and chosen chairman thereof and ex-officio chairman of the executive committee when the committee organized in July, 1888, and conducted the successful presidential campaign of that year; was a delegate to the Republican national convention of 1896; was elected a member of the Republican national convention of 1892; was chairman of the Republican state committee, 1895-96; was a delegate to the Republican national convention of 1896; was elected a member of the Republican national committee and chosen a

MASTERS' UNION HOLDS CAPTAINS IN CHECK

District Captain Howell Executes Flank Movement on Seceders.

Chicago, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The two armies in the war between the Lake Carriers and the Masters and Pilots are today simply maneuvering for position. District Captain owell appears to have flanked a considerable body of captains who had served notice on him that they were about to take out their boats regardless of the union. By a telegram yesterday afternoon calling a meeting of the board in Cleveland today and stating that a satisfactory settlement was certain to be secured, the seceders who were to have gone on board their ships last night were held back. Apparently this telegram of the district captain was sent out after members of the Lake Carriers' executive committee had left Cleveland, without any arrangement for a conference with the masters and pilots.

It looks today more than any time since the trouble began that the fight would be to a finish, having at the end the surrender either of the Lake Carriers or the breaking up of the Masters' and Pilots' union.

No boats started out from here today, although at least a dozen are taking on fuel and getting ready. In the case of the Cranage, which is scheduled to go, Captain McNeil found his mates had deserted when he wanted the ship to start out and up to a late hour this afternoon he had not succeeded in getting other mates. The first action here will doubtless be to move the grain laden steamers with or without the consent of the union.

COTTON TO SECOND THE NOMINATION

Matter Definitely Decided After Interview With the President.

Washington, May 28.—Representative J. Adam Bede of Minnesota, had a talk with the president today regarding the selection of the Northwestern man who is to second the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt at the Chicago convention. Several men were anxious to have the honor of making the seconding speech for that section of the country, but it has been determined that the speech shall be delivered by Joseph B. Cotton of Duluth.

Mr. Cotton was the choice not only of Mr. Bede but of many other influential men of the Northwest, including members of the Minnesota delegation to the convention. As planned at present, five seconding speeches will be delivered, but thus far the names of Harry Stilwell Edwards, of Macon, Ga., and Joseph B. Cotton, of Duluth, are the only speakers whose selection has been announced.

DETECTIVE CHASES ROBBERS TO THEIR DEATH IN THE RIVER

Cleveland, May 28.—While being pursued by a detective last night, two men, thought to be freight car robbers, jumped into the river and, it is supposed, were drowned or killed. Special Detective Wilson discovered four men in the Baltimore & Ohio yards acting in a suspicious manner. The men separated and disregarding the orders to halt, fled. Wilson pursued two of them toward the river, the dectective firing his revolver repeatedly as he ran.

Without hesitating the two men jumped into the swollen stream. Wilson ordered the men to return, and upon their failure to do so he fired a dozen shots at them. Finally one of them cried out, "I am shot——." A moment later he disappeared in the water. The other man reached a bridge abutment. As he clung there the officer fired three shots at him, one of which struck him and he sank into the water. A bridge tender who stood near by rushed down to the shore where the supposed robber was last seen, but no sign of him could be found. The bridge tender says the man had undoubtedly gone to the bottom. The river will be dragged by the live saving crew.

PEDDLERS TO INTIMIDATE MAYOR

New York, May 28.—Hereafter all the push cart peddlers doing business in this city will be required to display their photographs on the sides of their carts. Notice to this effect has been served on the president of the Peddlers' association by Mayor McClellan. This is the mayor's own plan for solving the license problem and preventing one cart from being used as a family affair. News of the order today spread among the East Side peddlers, and they loudly denounced it as an oppression. They immediately planned to march upon city hall with their wives and offspring and protest to the mayor. Twenty thousand peddlers are expected to be in line with their families. The peddlers boast of an average of ten to each family, and they expect to present an impressive appearance.

MUST PAY MONEY

Richard Nixon Finds Court Not to Be Trifled With.

Year and Half Delinquent With Alimony—Gets Short Time.

Richard Nixon, a young dentist residing in Duluth, was held to be in contempt of court by Judge Dibell this morning, and was ordered to pay his divorced wife her alimony of $20 per month regularly from now on, and to make good $360 in delinquent payments in alimony, or the alternative of going to jail.

Nixon wanted time until after the noon hour to raise the money, claiming that he would have to borrow it, but the court said he could have just twenty minutes, and that if he went after any funds he would be accompanied by an officer.

The prospect was evidently not pleasing to Nixon, for he called J. H. Whitely, his attorney, to one side for a conference, and Mr. Whitely afterward announced that he would guarantee the payment. Judge Dibell accepted this security and Nixon walked out of court.

The contempt proceedings were brought about by the affidavit of Minnie Nixon, the divorced wife of Richard Nixon, who claims that since December, 1902, her former husband had failed to pay her the alimony ordered by the court for the support of herself and child when she was granted a decree of divorce.

Nixon attempted to explain to the court that he had lost $4500 in his business during the past three years. Judge Dibell held that the financial loss was no excuse, and remarked to Nixon that he might get rid of his debts by going through bankruptcy, but he could not get rid of paying alimony so easily; that the alimony would still follow him.

Nixon appeared in court dressed fashionably, and his plea of poverty was hardly in keeping with his personal appearance.

He seemed to have abundant confidence in himself until the court made it very plain that the jail was yawning for him unless he paid up, and things did not then look so roseate; in fact, he wore a rather worried look when re called his lawyer to one side to raise the money.

ENGINEER IS CRUSHED

Wallace E. Smith Killed at Stevenson Mine—Leaves Large Family.

Wallace E. Smith, of Duluth, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon while operating a donkey engine for the Drake & Stratton company.

The donkey engine was at work on some stripping at the Stevenson mine. A load of cars had been taken to the dump and when coming back collided with another train. Mr. Smith was thrown from the engine, which turned over and crushed him to death.

Mr. Smith was a man of 53 years of age and leaves a wife and eight children, who live at 121 Twentieth avenue west, in this city. Of the eight children, two are daughters, Luella and Marguerite. The names of the six sons are Lloyd W., Warren L., Arthur D., William B., Stephen R., and Paul.

Mr. Smith was prominent in labor union and fraternal circles, being a member of the Locomotive Engineers, the Masons and several other secret societies. The two oldest sons, Warren and Lloyd, are employed by the Northern Pacific railway as brakesman and engineer and reside in this city.

The body will arrive in Duluth this afternoon. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, but will be announced later.

TWO MORE PAVILIONS

Opened at the World's Fair at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 28.—The informal opening of the Mexican and Netherlands pavilions took place today, representatives of foreign governments, Mexican visitors to the fair, officials and invited guests being present. At the Mexican pavilion Commissioner General Nuncio and Mrs. Nuncio received the guests. The formal dedication of the Mexican pavilion has been posponed until Mexican day at tthe fair, Sept. 16.

Commissioner General G. H. Ten Broeck and Mrs. Ten Broeck assisted by Miss Louise Sampinson hostesses of the Netherlands pavilion received those invited to the opening.

The palace of Damascus, an edifice so old that its builder, its occupants and its history are lost in the obscurity of the past, is the latest attraction that has been secured for the fair. The structure is not to be a replica, an imitation in staff, but the actual building brought piece by piece from Syria and rebuilt in St. Louis.

TO OBSERVE THE DAY.

Railroad Offices Will Be Closed Monday.

All the local freight and passenger offices of the railroads in Duluth will close all day Monday, this decision having been arrived at after much argument. The original agreement was to close at noon, but some of the agents, evidently to retaliate on some that had not been anxious to close quite that early in the day, started in with a movement to close all day, and carried their point.

General Agent C. D. Thompson, of the Great Northern, has gone to Tower in quest of landlocked salmon, while others of his force will fish elsewhere. A. Brostedt, the passenger representative, will visit friends at Hibbing. T. E. Blanche, of the Northern Pacific, will probably go fishing. A number of others will go out with line and bait.

COURTHOUSE REMOVAL

May Come Before Commercial Club Monday.

At the Monday evening meeting of the Commercial club, which is called to reconsider by-laws of the organization, the question of the court house removal will probably be broached. A committee is to be appointed by Chairman T. W. Hugo of the public affairs committee, and this committee will take up the matter in connection with the committee of lawyers and that representing the West Duluth Commercial club.

A committee has been appointed by Chairman Hugo on the question of plans for the government canal bridge approaches, consisting of the following: E. L. Millar, H. R. Armstrong, G. L. Douglas, Jr., J. B. Eard and J. A. Watterworth.

MARRIED ANYWAY.

Chicago, May 28.—Arrested as a brother and sister eloping from their home, but later released, Detrick Vlal, 22 years old, and Anna Straka, 20 years old, of Chicago, have been married. Although the ceremony was not interfered with, Mrs. Straka, the girl's mother, still insists that Vl al is her son, while her husband says he is not. Vlal declares that he was drawn into the Straka family because Mrs. Straka, who is 60 years old, believed him her long lost son, who left home when 14 years old. He denies this, but remained with the family and supported its members for some time in Chicago. His friendship for the pretty daughter ripened into love, and they finally eloped. Mrs. Straka and her daughter met Vlal while crossing the ocean from Bohemia. Vlal was working as a deck hand on the ocean liner.

SWAMP LAND SELECTIONS.

Tampa, Fla., May 28.—A little white girl, aged 7 years, was the victim last night of an attempted criminal assault by a negro. The negro made his escape but was captured by a posse early today ten miles from the scene of the crime. He is in custody but the community is greatly excited and violence is feared tonight.

PIG IRON SALE

Zenith Furnace Company Reported To Have Sold 50,000 Tons.

Would Require Entire Output of Furnace For Nine Months.

The eZnith Furnace company is reported to have closed the sale of 50,000 tons of pig iron to the Lake Superior Iron company at Sault Ste. Marie.

It is known that A. B. Wolvin, president of the company, has been working on the deal for some time, and while Mr. Wolvin has not reached home to personally confirmm the report of the sale, the information comes in another way and is, aparently, reliable.

The Lake Superior company will soon start its rolling mills and the Duluth iron will be used in supplying it. The price at whch the deal is made is not known.

An order for 50,000 tons of pig iron will keep the Zenith furnace going at full capacity for a period of about nine months and it will be good news to the workmen, who find employment at this industry, to West Duluth and to the whole city.

The furnace has been shut down since last fall, but its location has not been a scene of idleness during the time for immense improvements involving the expenditure of about $750,000 have been made. These include the building of by-product coke ovens, gas holders and the equipment necessary for the distribution of gas to the city, and the enlargement and improvement of the furnace. When the plant reopens there will, perhaps, be furnaces larger, but none better equipped than the Duluth institution.

MESSAGE OF CONDOLENCE.

Sent By the President To Mrs. Quay.

Washington, May 28.—President Roosevelt immediately on learning of the death of the senator wired the following message to Mrs. Quay:

"Mrs. M. S. Quay, Beaver, Pa.: "Accept my profound sympathy, official and personal. Throughout my term as president Senator Quay has been my staunch and loyal friend. I had hoped to the last that he would, by his sheer courage, pull through his illness. Again accept my sympathies. Theodore Roosevelt."

ANXIOUS TO GET THEM.

Boat Crew Awaiting Uniforms and Sweeps.

New uniforms and sweeps for the Duluth Boat club eight are expected next week, and the oarsmen are anxious to get them to be absolutely ready before starting to Madison a week hence. All the eight are in the best of physical condition, well and fit, and the work of the past week is said to show a decided improvement over the work of last week.

In the case of the local eight the stroke is on the starboard side, in contrast with the general custom of varsity eights to have the stroke on the port side. The coaches think they have the boat well balanced now, and with no unforseen interference, the eight as now scheduled will be the one to do the work at Madison.

Dr. Frank Lynan, the coach of the eight, has not been in active training for a long time, but is said to be fairly able to take care of himself when it comes to meeting the issue. Some of the eight did not reckon on his storage of muscle the other night when he thought he would try one of the oars. He suggested that they pull until he got tired, as he did not like to tire himself, and he was out of practice, anyway.

The men figured that after a mile pull the doctor would be ready to return, but he said nothing about it until they had gone a three-mile straight away.

Then he said, "Let's get a move on now, and spurt back."

The men were too surprised to say anything but they took hold and pulled for all they were worth. It is now said that a six-mile row gets the doctor just in the right shape for work, and forms nothing for him but a nice, easy preliminary.

MEMORIAL DAY

Program to Be Given at Armory In the Afternoon.

Sunday Morning Service Will Be Largely Attended.

Details of the exercises to be held at the Armory on the afternoon of Memorial day were arranged this morning by the committee having the matter in charge. The principal address of the day will be delivered by Rev. Roderick J. Mooney. The program, which commences at 2:30 o'clock, will be as follows:

Patriotic selection.....
Third Regiment Band.
Invocation .....
Rev. Alexander Milne.
Opening remarks.....
Mayor M. B. Cullum, Presiding Officer.
Vocal solo—"Star Spangled Banner"
Miss Florence Clement.
Vocal selection—"Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" .....
Pilgrim Congregational Church Choir.
Address.....
Rev. Roderick J. Mooney.
Vocal solo—"Battle Hymn of the Republic" .....
Mrs. Leo A. Ball.
"America" .....
Third Regiment Band.

Audience requested to join in the singing.

Most of the business interests of Duluth will observe the day by closing their places of business all day Monday. The stores and public offices will be closed, and there will be no school in any of the buildings.

The ceremony of scattering flowers in the canal, as a memorial of the sailors who died in the service, will be performed by the women of the auxiliary branch of the Grand Army, after the meeting at the Armory. Flaaten's band will accompany them.

The corrected order of march will be as follows:

Platoon of Police.
Major F. E. Resche, commanding.
Chief Marshal and Aides.
Band, Third Regiment, M. N. G.
Battalion, M. N. G.
Major H. V. Eva, commanding.
Battalion, Mlnn. Naval Reserve,
Lt.-Com. Guy V. Eaton, commanding.
Platoon, Duluth Fire Department.
Chief John T. Black, commanding.
Company, Sons of Veterans,
Capt. W. S. McCormick, commanding.
G. A. R. Culver Post,
M. W. Bates, commanding.
G. A. R. Colman Post,
D. W. Scott, commanding.
Carriages, Disabled Veterans.
Mayor and Orator of the Day.

The parade will form on First street, the right resting on Fifth avenue west, at 1:30 p. m. and will move at 2 p. m. The line of march will be down Fifth avenue, thence east on Superior street, to Third avenue east and First street The column will then march west on First street, the head halting at the Armory, facing south, allowing the G. A. R. Posts to pass into the building. The escort will follow in order of march. Hon. J. R. Randall will be marshal of the day, with Capt. George Gibson as aide.

It is expected that the special G. A. R. services to be held at the First Methodist church tomorrow morning will be largely attended. The members of both the Gorman and Culver posts will be out in force, and hundreds of their friends will also be present at the services, which will be conducted by Rev. E. C. Clemens, presiding elder of the district, who will deliver a sermon appropriate to the occasion. Rev. Clemens acted as chaplain for one of the Minnesota regiments during the Spanish-American war.

The two posts will be escorted from their halls by the naval reserve, a battalion of the National Guard, the Sons of Veterans and the Third Regiment band of forty pieces. The troops will leave the Armory at 10 o'clock sharp, Sunday morning, and will march to the church, going by way of the G. A. R. post halls, Masonic Temple and Kalamazoo block, and picking up the old veterans there.

SENDS THE JURY BACK

Judge Refuses to Accept Disagreement In Gillespie Case.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 28.—Shortly after 10 o'clock the announcement was made that the jury in the Gillespie case was about to report. The defendants were sent for, and the crowd both inside and outside the court room manifested the liveliest interest. The Barbours and Mrs. Seward arrived in the court room first. Two minutes' later James Gillespie entered apparently calm. At 10:40 the foreman presented to the court this statement:

"We, the jury, have agreed that we cannot agree. IRA POWELL,
"Foreman."

The judge said he could not at this time accept this as a verdict. He ordered that the jury return and resume deliberations.

Judge Downey called the attorneys in the case, who are present, Prosecutor McMullen, Capt. Coles and Mr. Grifith, to consult as to the advisability of discharging the jury from further consideration of the case.

HAVE MASTERS WAITING,

So the Lake Carriers' Association Reports.

Buffalo, May 28.—A member of the Lake Carriers' association is quoted by the Evening News today as saying:

"Before Monday there will be a big fleet of boats afloat on the lakes. Several have left Buffalo and others will get away tonight. It is no longer a question of getting masters, we have them waiting to go aboard just as soon as the boats are ready."

FRIGHTFUL BATTLE

Was That Which Followed Assault On Nan Shan Hill.

One Of the Fiercest and Bloodiest In Modern Times.

Tokio, May 28.—The Japanese assault on Nan Shan hill was one of the fiercest and bloodiest affairs in modern warfare. In the earlier rushes of the engagement every man participating was shot down before he reached the first line of trenches. It was found necessary to stop the infantry charges and renew the artillery fire from the rear before the final and successful assault on the Russian position could be made. The success of this assautl was brought about by one detachment of Japanees troops, more intrepid than their comrades, who succeeded in piercing the Russian line. A splendid stroke of fortune was the discoverey and destruction by the Japanese of the electric wires leading to the mines at the eastern foot of Nan Shan hil. This prevented the Russians from exploding these mines when the Japanese crossed the ground where they had been planted. It is possible that the fortune of the day hinged upon these mines. If the Russians had been able to explode them at the right time the losses among the Japanese troops would have been tremendous, and it is possible also that the Russians would have been able to hold the hill.

Nan Shan was splendidly defended. Nearly fifty guns of various sizes were mounted on the various emplacements, and there were also two batteries of quick-firing field pieces. The artillery was sheltered behind loopholes trenched on the terraces of the hill. The infantry manning the field pieces ran with them around the hill, thus using these guns for the protection of the most important points.

The Japanese began the fight by brining all their field guns into action and concentrating their fire on the emplacements on the hill. By 11 o'clock in the morning, the principal Russian batteries had been silenced. The two Rusian field batteries then withdrew to Nan Quan Ling hill and from there continued to fire on the Japanese until nightfall.

After the Rusian batteries had been silenced the Japanese artillery opened on the enemy's trenches, the Japanese infantry advancing meanwhile to within rifle range. The Japanese gradually worked to within 400 metres of the Rusian lines, where they encountered wires and other entaglements. They succeeded in discovering an opening in these obstacles and getting finally to within 200 metres of the trenches, they rushed for the line. Several successive charges were made but every officer and man in the attacking parties was shot down 20 or 30 metres from the line. The charges were then stopped and the Japanese artillery renewed its preparatory fire on the enemy's position. Towards evening a detachment of Japanese carried a section of the Russian trenches, breaking through the enemy's line. Hundreds of the comrades of these men, inspired by their success, sprang forward and then the entire Japanese line swept up the hill driving the Russians from their positions. It was in the desperate infantry charges that the Japanes sustained the bulk of their loses.

LOSS OF GUNS.

Worst Piece of News To Russian Emperor.

St. Petersburg, May 28.—Emperor Nicholas received the news of the result of the fighting at Kin Chou and in its vicinity at the palace of Tsarskoe Selo. He at once sent for War Minister Sakharoff, with whom his majesty and the members of his military cabinet went over the dispatches. The emperor received the report that the Russians were compelled to retire before the heavy artillery fire of the enemy's batteries in front and of his warships on their flank with composure, as being the fortune of war, but he was considerably agitated by the later reports that Gen. Fock had not succeeded in saving the Russian guns.

The members of the military cabinet pointed out that the later report was not official, and, besides, they expressed complete confidence that Port Arthur itself could not be reduced except at an immense cost of time and men, and with the aid of the heaviest kind of siege guns. Gen. Sakharoff also said he did not believe the report that the enemy had arrived within ten miles of Port Arthur, twenty-four hours after the desperate fighting at Kin Chou.

It is understood that the emperor has received several dispatches from Gen. Kuropatkin regarding the situation, some of which will be given out tonight. The news from the foreign dispatches has produced the usual crop of sensational stories about the Russian government concealing the extent of the disasters but the only justification for this allegation seems to be the sudden stoppage of all newspaper dispatches from the seat of war. Most of the foreign reports are allowed to be printed as soon as received.

A high officer of the general staff declared to the Associated Press that the loss of the guns reported captured was unavoidable, if confined to those mounted in the works on the hills below Kin Chou, as they could not be carried away when the Russians retired, but the breech blocks, he aded, probably had been removed. Besides, before the enemy could use the guns again at Port Arthur they would have to manufacture special cartridges. Therefore the loss was not so serious a matter. The important thing to ascertain was whether the Japanese had captured any field guns.

The same officer said the works at Kin Chou had been hastily built and were no criterion of the works at Port Arthur—which could not be flanked—where the forts were scientifically erected and connected to support each other. "If the Japanese lost 3000 in taking Kin Chou," the officer added, "they will lose 30,000 if they try to take Port Arthur. With even such a sacrifice I consider the capture of Port Arthur impossible."

Captain Roudneff, formerly commander of the Russian cruiser Variag, sunk off Chemulpo, has been appointed to command the battleship Andrei Pervozvannli, which will not be ready for two years, thus disposing of irresponsible reports that either he or the members of the Variag's crew intended to violate their promise not to reenter the service during the war.

POWERFUL POWDER

Used By the Japanese In Their Shells.

Washington, May 29.—Reports received here from the far East dwell at length on the terrific power of the Japanese Shimose powder, the nature of which is an absolute secret. It is not used to propel the shot, but for bursting charge of the army and navy explosive shell. The result of the explosion has astounded the United States army observers. The heaviest armor piercing shell with its small cavity is rent into countless fragments, which are hurled through the air with such force that they tear through the sides of an iron ship as would a projectile from a machine gun. The Russian warships Variag and Korletz were found to be riddled deck and sides by fragments of these shells.

It is not known that any other nation possesses such a terrific explosive.

ATHLETES IN CONTEST

Semi-Finals and Finals In Inter-Collegiate Championships.

Philadelphia, May 28.—The semi-finals in the intercollegiate championships of America took place today on Franklin field, before a crowd that taxed the capacity of the stands. All conditions were perfect.

100-yard dash, semi-final, two to qualify for the final: First heat won by Schick, Harvard; Dear, Pennsylvania, second; time, 10 seconds. Castle, Colgate and Lowe, Yale, also ran.

DR. MITCHELL'S

Magnetic Treatment Reaches Every Vital Organ in the Body,

And Touches the Root of Disease, However Deep-Seated.

Healer Mitchell, in talking to a reporter, said: "I want every person in Duluth suffering with nervous exhaustion, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, Bright's disease, consumption, lack of vigor, rheumatism, throat, lung and ear trouble, to come to my office and learn how they can be cured by the great power nature has given us. Very few people seem to understand that disease of all kinds is nothing but inharmonious magnetic vibrations of the body. Then, if the magnetic vibrations are inharmonious in disease, one must simply restore the vibrations to harmony. Now, how is that done? That is a problem which I have solved. By it I make the cures, and it is this that is making the world stand in wonder; it is this that is causing all classes of people to come to me for investigation and cure. They find that I have solved the problem with my magnetic treatment. I relieve suffering and cure disease. I do this quickly and permanently with my magnetic power. Some people declare that my work is nothing short of miraculous. In taking my magnetic treatment, it adds to the body magnetism and immediately sets all the vibrations of the body into harmony again. The moment the vibrations begin to work in harmony, just that moment the body begins to throw off disease. Hundreds of people here in Duluth, in Superior, and all over the Northwest, testify daily to my wonderful cures. The daily papers have published hundreds of letters in regard to my cures and I have hundreds of letters on file that I have permission to show, from grateful patients to those who are skeptical. I am curing new patients every day. They return home and send their friends and that is why I am busy from early in the morning until late at night. I could work the whole twenty-four hours if my strength would permit it, for some days there are many new patients whom I cannot get to see, and I wish to say to any patients coming from out of the city, to please notify me so that I can make arrangements to take their case. It may save their waiting two or three days for consultation, and if they are too far away and cannot possibly come, I have a home treatment by which I am curing hundreds of people. Consultation free all this week.

Office hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. Sunday, 10 to 12. Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, 7 to 8:30. Office at 17 East Superior street. 'Phone 579.

A DOCTOR'S TROUBLES.

An American woman asked Conan Doyle one day why he had given up the practice of medicine.

"Because the work was too hard," Doyle answered.

"Oh, it can't be hard to be a doctor," said the woman.

'It is both hard and unpleasant. And to prove it," said the novelist, "I'll tell you about my first case.

"My first case came to me in the middle of the night. It was January, and a cold rain was falling. The jingle of the doorbell awoke me from a sound sleep, and, shivering and yawning, I put my head out of the window and said, 'Who's there.'

"'Doctor,' said a voice, 'can you come to Peter Smith's house at once?'

"'What's the trouble?' I asked.

"'Smith's youngest girl has took a doseof laudanum in mistake for paregoric, and we're afraid she'll die.'

"'All right; I'll come,' said I.

"I dressed, and I tramped three miles through the cold and rain to Smith's. Twice, on the way, I fell on the icy pavement, and once my hat blew off, and in the darkness I was nearly half an hour finding it.

"Finally, though, I reached Smith's. But the house was dark; shutters all closed; not a light. I rang the bell. No answer.

"But at last a head stuck itself gingerly out of a third-story window.

"'Be you Dr. Doyle?' it said.

"'Yes,' said I. 'Let me in.'

"'Oh, no need to come in, doctor,' said the head. 'The child's all right now. Sleeping very quiet.'

"'But how much laudanum did you give it?' said I.

"'Only two drops, doctor. Not enough to hurt a cat. I guess I'd better take my head in now. The night air is cold. Good-night. Sorry to have troubled you.'

"I buttoned up my coat and turned homeward, trying as best I could to stifle my mortification and anger. But suddenly the window was raised again, and the same voice cried:

"'Doctor! I say doctor!'

"I hurried back. I thought the child had suddenly taken a turn for the worse. 'Well, what do you want?' I said.

"The voice made answer:

"'Ye won't charge nothin' for this visit, will ye?'"

THE BEST FRIENDS OF PE-RU-NA ARE THE MOTHERS AND CHILDREN.

When Sickness Comes To the Little Ones

It Is the Mother Who Chiefly Suffers.

She suffers even more than the child who happens to be sick. Her sympathy is deeper than that of any other member of the family. The mothers look forward with dread to the torrid heat of summer, thinking of their children and the many liabilities to disease that are before them. Spring and summer are sure to bring ailments, especially among the little folks.

It does not take a mother very long to discover that Peruna is the best friend she has in times of illness among the children.

The doctors may come and go with their different theories and constant change of remedies.

The doctor of years ago gave entirely different remedies than he does today. Each year finds some change in his prescriptions and in the drugs he relies upon.

A Great Multitude of Mothers.

Have discovered that Peruna is the standby, and that in all the ailments of spring and summer to which the children are subjected, Peruna is the remedy that will most quickly relieve.

Whether it is spring fever or stomach derangement, whether it is indigestion or bowel disease, a catarrhal congestion of the mucous surfaces is the cause.

Peruna quickly relieves this condition of the mucous membranes. Its operation is prompt, the children do not dislike to take the medicine, it has no deleterious effects in any part of the body.

It simply removes the cause of the disagreeable symptoms and restores the health.

Peruna is not a physic. Peruna is not a nervine nor a narcotic. Peruna does not produce any drug habit, however long it may be taken. Peruna is not a stimulant.

Peruna is a specific remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

The mothers all over the United States are the best friends that Peruna has.

The Mothers Hold Pe-ru-na in High Esteem,

Not only because it has cured them of their various ailments, but because it always rescues the children from the throes and grasp of catarrhal diseases.

We have in our files bushels of testimonials from mothers whose children have been cured by Peruna. However, the large majority of mothers who use Peruna, we never hear from.

But we do hear from a great number of mothers who are so overjoyed at some special good they have received from Peruna that they cannot restrain their enthusiasm. They are anxious to share these benefits with other mothers.

The Benefit Which the Children of the United States Have Received From Peruna Can Never Be Put Into Words.

The chronic ailments it has prevented, the suffering it has mitigated, will never be fully recorded.

But at least this much can be said that the coming generation owes a great debt to Peruna, for it is in the tender years of youth that slight ailments are liable to develop into lasting diseases, thus blasting the whole career of the individual.

The mothers who are bringing up their children today to believe in Peruna are doing a great work for humanity.

These children brought up to believe in Peruna from the start, will, when they become heads of families themselves, use Peruna with unquestioning faith.

Mrs. Thresa Rooke, 258 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., Treasurer Ladies of the Maccabees, writes:

"In our home Peruna is the only medicine we have. Grandmother, mother, father and child, all have used Peruna. It is our great remedy for catarrh of the stomach and head, colds and female complaints of which it has cured me.

"We find it of great value when my husband becomes worn out or catches cold. A couple of doses cure him.

"If the baby has colic, or any stomach disorders, a dose or two cures her.

"I consider Peruna finer than any doctor's medicine that I have ever tried, and I know that as long as we have it in the house, we will all be able to keep in good health."—Thresa Rooke.

Mrs. John Hollingsworth, Prescott, Ont., Can., writes: "I am pleased to testify to the value of Peruna as a household remedy. My husband has used it for colds and I have found it very beneficial for indigestion. I find it especially valuable for my children. My two daughters, seven and nine years old, have taken it for colds, as it cures in a day or two. They have been cured in an hour from cramps and colic, and whenever they have felt badly, nervous or irritable, or have lost their appetite or sleep, a dose or two of Peruna would invariably cure them."—Mrs. John Hollingsworth.

Mr. G. H. Farmer, New Martinsville, W. Va., writes:

"Our little son, Harry, is well and healthy now and we think if we do as you directed she will keep his health and grow strong.

"We know that our little son's life was saved by your wonderful medicine, Peruna, and we shall always praise Peruna and use it in our family when needed. "Should we have any more catarrhal trouble in our family, we shall always write to you for treatment."—G. H. Farmer.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Little Ones.

Mrs. Amelia Sailer, Menasha, Wis., writes: "I have used Peruna for a number of years. It cured me of chronic catarrh, which I suffered with from infancy.

"When my three children were born they all had catarrh, but I have given them Peruna and find it very effective in ridding them of this horrible trouble. I find that it is also good to give them as a tonic and a preventative of colds and colic.

"In fact, I consider it a household blessing. I would not know how to raise my children without it. I am pleased to give it my recommendation."—Mrs. Amelia Sailer.

Mr. Peter C. Herr, Bluffton, O., writes: "We take the pleasure to write you that our five-year-old son is well. It is safe to say that he is cured. He took four bottles of Peruna. We thank you very much for your kindness and advice."—Mr. Peter C. Herr.

Mr. William D. Ward, Dawson, Ga., writes: "Last December we had a little boy four months old afflicted with eczema. After trying various prescriptions from doctors we commenced using your Peruna. Before we did so every particle of hair came out, and his scalp was irritated. In fact, he was sore from crown of head to soles of feet. After we had given him two bottles his hair came back, and since then we have seen no signs of the eczema. We give you this endorsement without solicitation on your part, and we will gladly answer any inquiries from effected parties in regard to this matter. Your medicine is everything you claim for it."—Wm. D. Ward.

Mr. Edward Otto, 927 De Soto street, St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I cannot say enough for Peruna. It has done great work in my family, especially for my oldest boy. We have doctored with three or four different doctors and they did not seem to do him any good. We gave up hopes of cure, and so did they, but we pulled him through on Peruna. He seems perfectly well; eats well and sleeps well. It is Peruna that did it. We had several doctors and they said they could do no more for him, so we tried Peruna as a last resort, and that did the work. Since then we keep it in the house all the time, and no Doctor is required. When we feel a cold coming on we take a few doses of Peruna, and the next day it is gone. It has done wonderful work in my family. I recommend it wherever I can."—Edward Otto.

A. O. Harding, of Prescott, Ont., has been presented with a 25 year Medal of Honor in Good Fellowship, and is also one of the leading druggists of Prescott. He writes as follows: "Ever since I have been handling Peruna, I have had a fine trade. Once a family buys a bottle, I am sure of selling them more and it never fails to bring additional customers. I have nothing better for catarrh in all of its various forms. It cures colds in a day or two, relieves cramps immediately, cures lung troubles and the various stomach disorders."

Pe-ru-na Should Be Kept In Every Household

Where There Are Little Children.

Peruna should be kept in the house all the time. Don't wait until the child is sick, then send to a drug store. But, have Peruna on hand—accept no substitute.

Children are especially liable to acute catarrh. Indeed, most of the affections of childhood are catarrh.

All forms of sore throat, quinsy, croup, hoarseness, laryngitis, etc., are but different phases of catarrh.

Mr. Howard Andrew Sterner, Muddy Creek, Pa., writes: "I have Peruna in my house all the time and won't be without it. It is the greatest catarrh remedy that was ever manufactured. It is good for children when they take cold or croup. It cured my baby boy of croup. I have introduced Peruna into six families since I received your last letter, and four have seen relief already."—Howard Andrew Sterner.

Mrs. J. H. Russell, 25 Horton Ave., Detroit, Mich., writes: "Peruna certainly did wonders for our little son, Arthur, as he has been the picture of health all summer. He has taken four bottles of Peruna, and I have followed your directions as carefully as I could. I am very happy with the results, I thank you very much for your interest in his case."—Mrs. J. H. Russell.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household Against Catarrhal Diseases.

As soon as the value of Peruna is appreciated by every household, both as a preventive and cure, tens of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of thousands of chronic, lingering cases of catarrh will be prevented. Peruna is a household safeguard.

Mrs. S. Miles, Stoughton, Wis., writes: "When my baby, Evelyn, was quite young I noticed that she had catarrh. This worried me so much that I took her to a doctor and he prescribed for her. She seemed to get better but the relief was only temporary, as I noticed that with the next cold she contracted she was worse.

"I had used Peruna myself some time before with such good results that I decided to give it to her, feeling sure that there was nothing in it that could injure her. I gave her two bottles, which was all that was necessary, for it cured here. I am glad I took hold of this trouble while she was young and before it had secured too strong a hold on her system. I keep it on hand now and give her a few doses whenever she takes a cold, and it always takes effect and keeps her well and strong."—Mrs. S. Miles.

Mrs. Mary E. Connor, 724 23rd St., San Francisco, Cal., writes: "Peruna has been a blessing to my home. It has kept sickness out and we are today a happy and well family, thanks to Peruna. My husband was cured of lung trouble through Peruna and this showed us its merits.

"I am the mother of six boys, and whenever any of the family is sick with a cold, cramps or indigestion, a few doses of Peruna restores them. I am especially thankful to you for what Peruna has done for Leo and Francis, my two oldest boys. They had been troubled with catarrh and Peruna cured them within a few weeks."—Mary E. Connor.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Catarrh

Invites Consumption

It weakens the delicate lung tissues, deranges the digestive organs, and breaks down the general health.

It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, and affects the voice.

Being a constitutional disease it requires a constitutional remedy.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Radically and permanently cures catarrh of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, and more delicate organs.

Read the testimonials.

No substitute for Hood's acts like Hood's. Be sure to get Hood's.

"I was troubled with catarrh 20 years. Seeing statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla resolved to try it. Four bottles entirely cured me." WILLIAM SHERMAN, 1030 6th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

NAMED BY THE PEOPLE.

Half a century ago, when the late Reverend Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., recommended to his parishioners and friends the prescription that had restored him to health and strength, the people named it Father John's Medicine, and so it became known and was advertised, with his knowledge and approval. The prescription of an eminent specialists, it is pure and wholesome, and free from alcohol and poisonous narcotics or nerve-deadening drugs in any form—not a patent medicine. Its power to make strength and build up the body explains why it has been so successful for fifty years in curing colds, and all throat and lung troubles. Father John's Medicine is for sale by L. W. Leithhead Drug Co.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Matters of Interest to the Various Societies.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Bethel held their monthly business meeting on Friday evening. After the business of the evening had been transacted, the society was entertained by a number of instrumental selections, which were very much enjoyed. Games were played later on in the evening, followed by refreshments which served as a climax to the evening's enjoyment.

* * *

The Christian Endeavor society of the Pilgrim Congregational church also held their monthly business meeting on Friday evening, at the home of Henry Schulze. After the business of the evening had been disposed of, the members of the social committee proved their skill in providing for the entertainment of the society, which was very much enjoyed.

* * *

On June 3, the C. E. society of the Pilgrim Congregational church will have charge of the services at the Star of Hope Mission. All members are asked to be present and make the meeting as much of a success as was the one held last month, and which was so much appreciated by the workers at the mission.

On Sunday, June 5, Rev. J. O. Buswell, of Mellin, Wis., will be in the city and will speak to the young people at one of the central churches ot 3:30 p. m. Mr. Buswell has been here before and has won the admiration of the young people by his interest in them, and it is hoped that all young people will endeavor to be present and spend a most enjoyable hour as well as a most helpful one with Mr. Ruswell. He will also speak in one of the churches in the evening.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Boston Globe: Being a bishop in the Methodist church is a desirable occupation and it is not strange that there are many candidates for the eight vacancies that may be filled. The regular annual salary of an active bishop in the Methodist church is $5,000, and each retired bishop receives $2,500 a year during the remainder of his life.

Indianapolis Journal: The Methodist conference committee to which the subject has been referred has decided to maintain the church rule against dancing, the theater and card playing, and the young people of the church will probably continue to attend good, bad and indifferent shows, dances and progressive euchre parties, as heretofore.

Brooklyn Eagle: When Baptist clergymen take to firing at one another with their revolvers it seems to prove that the baptism did not take the first time, and it ought to be done over again. An event of that kind occurred in Texas—only. Religion in Texas, in spots, is not incompatible with homicide. Nor are dominies of other denominations there less quick on the trigger than belligrent Baptists.

Springfield Republican: A certain quality of chastic impudence was needed by the Washington clergyman who, in his sermon Sunday, rebuked the president and his wife because they attend different churches. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt may be peculiar in this respect, but that is their right. They might be much worse, in this clergyman's eyes, and attend no church at all. As a matter of fact, both the president and his wife have displayed loyalty to the church in which each was reared; and if, in mature life, the Dutch Reformed suits the president and the Protestant Episcopal suits his wife, let the people rejoice.

Indianapolis News: In dogma it would be pretty hard to imagine two bodies farther asunder than the Roman Catholic church and the Methodist church, and yet at a conference of the latter a resolution denouncing the former was voted down for reasons that sounded much like eulogium. The sentiment that had the heart of the delegates was that the Roman Catholic church had done a magnificent work in taking hold of a class of people that no other religious agency could so well have moulded for the well-being of the country, and that ever evangelizing agency that helps to lift men up ought to be helped. All this is good Christianity.

Chicago Chronicle: Rev. Samuel Dike complains in the Congregationist that while the work of specialization has gone on in the various departments of the industrial world, the work of a pastor remains the same, or rather has increased because of the great variety of work now undertaken by the church. Mr. Dike has not read colonial history to advantage. A century and a half ago the minister was not only preacher, but teacher and doctor. He not only had to care for the soul, but for the body, too. Spiritual and moral instruction had to be supplemented by menti tuition and frequently the minister had the entire charge of it. Ministers are having a hard time of it in these days, it is admitted, but it is not because their work is not specialized.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Republican County Convention To Be Held In Duluth On Tuesday, June 28.

ROLAND D. HAVEN CASTING EYES ON COUNTY TREASURER'S OFFICE

Talk of Joel P. Heatwole As Candidate For the United States Senate, But He Denies It-- He Strongly Favors Tariff Revision.

If anything actually new transpired in the governorship fight locally the past week, the politicians are inclined to retain the information under their hats. The Collinsites remain without any stated organization or headquarters and the Dunn headquarters in the Lonsdale building have been forsaken by the politicians, excepting mostly those who dropped in occasionally to ask for Chairman. Wm. C. Sargent or William Getty. The former is still away from the city and the latter was away until today.

The Republican county committee met yesterday at the office of Poor Commissioner A. P. Cook, and Senator E. B. Hawkins, chairman, presided. The others present were Dr. J. J. Eklund, E. L. Millar, Simon Clark, A. P. Cook, Otto Gafvert, A. Horngren and W. C. Barrett. All are Collins men, save Hawkins and Barrett. The proxy of John Pengilly was voted by Mr. Cook. The proxies of the rest of the committee, which were not voted, were from the following: Victor Johnson, George Dodd, Peter Schaefer, of Ely; C. E. Nelson, of Virginia; Matt Pretner, of Eveleth, and Edward Helps, of Mesaba Mountain. There was evidently an art in voting only the proxy of Mr. Pengilly. Schaefer is a known Dunn man and the tendency of the other absent ones was not known, so that the obscurity of their proxies made the meeting more of a Collins affair than ever.

It was decided to hold the county convention Tuesday, June 28, at 2 p. m. in the city hall, Duluth, and the primaries are to be held the evening previous from 7 to 8 p. m. This will give no time between the caucuses and the convention for any political steering to speak of and the delegates from up the county will have, in many cases, only time to get from their homes to the convention between the time they are elected and the time they are to meet in Duluth. So that anyone who may want to "work on their feelings" will probably had to do it by telegraph.

The county convention will have 160 delegates who will elect forty delegates to the state convention at St. Paul. Of the 158 precincts there are forty-three in the city. The meeting yesterday lasted two hours, but the members claim there was no division. This is probably true owing to the predomination of the Collins adherents, and it is said that most of the time was taken up in considering new precincts, four of which were created, one being a sub-division of the present Sixth precinct of the First ward.

* * *

Some people are inclined to think that there will be considerable ripping done in the county offices at the next election. It looks every day like a stronger fight for new men, and one evidence of this is a new name sprung the past week for the treasurership.

Roland D. Haven, who has for some time been alderman from the Seventh ward, and president of the city council, is said to be inspecting the fences which are around the office to see if he can remove a section of the structure sufficiently large to enable him to enter. He is said to have been making a quiet canvass very lately among his friends to see how much support he could rely on.

Mr. Haven is considered a strong man, particularly in the West End, and has no small share of friends who would work for him if he declared openly that he would like the place. His candidacy makes one more name to be reckoned with by the contestants in this part of the campaign. If enough candidates should come out for the position, it would probably be to the advantage of Lucius H. Whipple, the incumbent, as in a multitude of opponents the politicians say there is safety for the man who holds the job and is running for re-election.

* * *

Editor John Bingham, of the Iron Trade Journal, Two Harbors, evidently believes in two old sayings, one of which is, "What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," and the other "It's a poor rule that don't work both ways." An evidence of this belief is found by its application in the following editorial, which indicates that Robert C. Dunn, according to his beliefs, is just as much entitled to the next term as governor as Van Sant is:

"Governor Van Sant is credited with having made a statement to the effect that there is no law against a man serving a third term as governor. No, unless it is an unwritten law, of which the people of the state have supreme control, and they are very apt to put it in force this year. But there is one thing certain, that is, that there is absolutely no law against an ex-state auditor serving one term as governor, especially if he has as good a record as R. C. Dunn, of Princeton.

Some of Joel Heatwole's friends are loth to believe that the ex-congressman has openly declared himself for the senatorship against Clapp, and they admit the comparative security of both senators who now represent Minnesota. One of them said yesterday that if Heatwole had made the remarks attributed to him by the Minneapolis Journal that they were no doubt ill advised.

"But I don't believe he said such things, for he's too good a man to get into a thing like this prematurely," he explained. "Heatwole, if his Third congressional district is a fair sample of his work as an organizer, is the finest one the state has ever seen. I have been told by people who have been through his territory that they never saw a place better lined up by any politican. He's got the thing down fine, from the district organization to the county, and from the county right down to the individuals. He represented his district five times in congress and did not quit because he had to. He could have had it again, but withdrew voluntarily, evidently thinking that he had gotten sufficient—either all he wanted, or all he thought he was entitled to.

"They say you can go down in the country there and get into the woods in the third district, where you will think no one would know of the congressman personally, and you'll find some farmer's place that looks pretty well out of the world. But get inside the house and the first picture you see on the wall in the parlor is Joel's. Do you know why? He's been all over the place, and there is not a corner in his district that he's not personally known. He used to start out on a campaign in the country there and stop at every farmer's or woodsmen's place, and ask all about the weight of the timber or hogs, praise the good looks of the premises, and do the same with the wife's cooking and her taste in arranging her house.

"He'd chuck all the babies under the chin and coo at 'em, and make the dogs his particular friends. In congress he would send out garden sage to all the people in his home district that could use it, and every time the country people would get anything of the kind they would not forget it. All of them swear by Heatwole, and you can very candidly find out if he's known by asking some of the obscure ones. But he does not need any political honors. He has the Northfield News and a paper at Faribault. I think he is the backer of several other journalistic enterprises, also.

"But Clapp and Nelson are too strong to be undermined at this time, at any rate. They are good at Washington for about as long as they want to stay, providing they don't make any bad breaks, and I don't think there is much danger. Nelson's term does not expire for three more years, but he is a very strong man, and he will last.

"There are other people who have an eye longingly on the senatorial persimmon, and among them are Thomas Lowry and Thomas Shevlin. But they realize full well that it will be some years, probably, before any new timber will stand a show for the places."

* * *

John B. Sutphin, state weightmaster at this point, gave a supper and reception Wednesday evening to all the weighmen, deputy inspectors and others of the grain department which is said to have been a most agreeable affair generally. The number of men entertained was unusually large for a house event, and the unusual character of the occasion has given rise to the query as to whether there might be some politics behind the spread.

In this connection it is said that Mr. Sutphin is throwing all the support possible to Joseph G. Miller, of Two Harbors, for re-election as railroad and warehouse commisioner, owing to Miller's activity with the board of commissioners in Sutphin's behalf when Sutphin's name was placed before the board for the weighmastership.

* * *

Among the candidates mentioned for the railroad and warehouse commissionership besides Joseph G. Miller, of Two Harbors, who is after re-election, there are Senator Thomas Torson, who does not think the senatorship is a bar to his desire; A. D. Gray, of Preston; W. E. Young, of Mankato; Thomas Crawford, of Lakefield; D. M. Gunn, of Grand Rapids, and Ex-Senator A. T. Stebbins, of Rochester. L. P. Hunt may announce himself for the place soon, also. It seems certain that there is no danger of the position going unfilled.

* * *

Ten days ago a reporter in quest of some information about politics asked Bert Fesler, city attorney, and Democratic state committeeman, to give up some.

"Sorry," replied Mr. Fesler, "but I am not in the confidence of either side and do not know what is going on at all. I am not taking any active part, and you probably know more about the situation than I do."

Mr. Fesler referred the reporter to several other good Democrats and these the newspaper envoy sought.

About five days later the same reporter asked Mr. Fesler, in a jocular way, whether he had yet attained the confidence of either side in the Democratic fight, that he might be able to give information.

"The only one whose confidence I have gained since you asked me is that of the News-Tribune reporter," said he. "He makes me out a candidate for delegate to the national convention on the Hearst side and seems to have a good deal of confidence exhibited in the matter. It made me a little irritable at first and some of my Democratic friends who have been anxious to get some reward for their efforts on one side or the other began to say.

"There's that man Fesler who wouldn't do a thing for us and has now started in for delegate', or words to that effect. It made it look as if I had started in to get honors without having done any work for it, whereas others in the fight have been working and are entitled to first consideration. But we have all begun to look upon it now as a good joke, although we did not at first."

* * *

Mrs. J. F. Stone, who is editress of the Rush City Post, and who was in the city the past week, is more of a politician than the great majority of women, both by reason of her editorial tendency and her natural ability in hustling votes. This is an odd thing for a woman in a state where there is not the liberality in woman suffrage which is extended in some states.

But Mrs. Stone has been favored by the politicians and tries to return their favors with interest. She was made postmistress of the house in one of the recent sessions and discharged the duties efficiently and was universally liked by all who had dealings with her.

Since Mrs. Stone took the Post she is said to have given it a grasp and a swing that no one looked for, and, her friends say, the paper is better than ever, is out of debt and prospering in every respect. Mrs. Stone is a great admirer of Robert C. Dunn and her paper is putting forth all the licks it can in his favor.

Another Dunn admirer who was in Duluth the past week was I. S. Briggs, manager of Dunn's paper, the Princeton Union. He is chairman of the Dunn committe at home, Mille Lac county, and is a member of the congressional committee of the district. Mrs. Stone and he both gave rosy reports of the Princeton man's chances in their respective communities.

* * *

Mark I. Wildes, a veteran Democrat of Mankato, writes to the secretary of the William Randolph Hearst club as follows:

"Yours of 25th inst to hand and contens noted. I am glad to know that Democratic Democracy is still alive. It has met with many disasters—the greatest when Grover Cleveland was elected president. All of his old office holders, whether known as Republicans or Democrats, are in favor of letting the so-called Democrats that helped elect the Republican ticket in the two past elections now have charge of the Democracy in the coming campaign.

"Such cheek is monumental. The wish is to again defeat the will of some six or eight millions of Democratic voters and keep the government in control of organized plutocracy.

"The New York World exposed and denounced Cleveland's bond deals and Olney's delinquencies and of late has been booming both—consistency!! The World, Brooklyn 'Buzzard', St. Paul Globe and other papers, masquerading as Democratic in order to humbug and deceive the ignorant, are now booming Parker, mum as an oyster now, no expressed opinion, unless prepaid; a short, Janus-faced platform; a Sphinx standing on it; has the policies of his owners and abetters their o. k? If the voters knew anything of their candidate, they would not vote for him. Republicanism and Republicanized Democracy are both the 'same breed of dogs' as the saying is.

"If the combines and conspirators have both candidates, they don't care which one is elected. It is 'heads I win, tails you lose.' In such case it is like betting with a man in horse race that owns both the horses. He don't care which wins.

"The battle now is between the interests of the people and organized plunderers of wealth. Young honest Republicans think that Democracy means, Cleveland souphouses. Old ones know better, but let it go at that.

"I was a year old when Jackson became president first time. I am a Jacksonian Democrat yet; so old I can do but little, but will do all I can.

"Mr. Hearst or some other well known exponent of Democratic principles, should be the candidate of the Democratic party.

"Yours for a government of the people, for the people and by the people?"

* * *

A friends of James J. Hill who saw that well known gentleman in St. Paul this week says that there are few men in the United States who are more wrathy just at this time than the famous president of the Great Northern, and it is all about politics.

The state situation as developed by the Dunn-Collins fight is responsible and the object of Mr. Hill's animus is said to be the St. Cloud jurist.

"Mr. Hill, like any other head of a great corporation, cannot well afford to mingle in politics openly, or no doubt he would have been put more plainly on record in the present mix-up than he has been," said the friend of Mr. Hill's above referred to.

"As near as I can make it out Mr. Hill would like very much at this time to say what he thinks of Judge Collins' attitude toward the trusts and the great corporations, for you know the judge and his friends have not hesitated to come out and say that they believe Collins is the only time friend of the people as against the trusts and railroads.

"It's hardly fair to the judge's crowd to come out in this boast after they took so much money from the 'old man' of the Great Northern. It seems to be generally understood and accepted as a fact that the alleged gift of money from Hill for the Collins' campaign is a true bill, as they say of the grand jury indictments. It's very true of Mr. Hill that he is exceptionally fearless in saying what he thinks regardless of the feelings of those who may be hurt by it, so long as it is true, and if the situation came to a point where he could declare himself on this subject I believe there will be something doing."

REVISION OF TARIFF

Said to Be Favored By Joel Heatwole.

St. Paul, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—If Joel P. Heatwole, of Northfield, becomes a candidate for United States senator against Senator Moses E. Clapp, of St. Paul, there are many indications that he will make his campaign largely on the question of revision of the tariff.

Probably no one but Mr. Heatwole knows whether he will be a candidate for the United States senate. He denies the report that he has told people that he intends to get in the race, and so far the people to whom he is supposed to have confided his intentions have not put in an appearance. His supporters in the Third congressional district say that he has not talked about the senatorial question to them, and no one who knows Mr. Heatwole will readily believe that he has been making bonsts publicly in the lobbies of the St. Paul hotels.

But should he make the run, it is a safe guess that unless Senator Clapp changes his attitude on tariff revision and reciprocity Mr. Heatwole will attack the senator's position, which is said to be this: "Tariff revision is a good thing, but there is no use trying to bring it about now. The party leaders are opposed to it."

Mr. Heatwole's friends believe that the overwhelming sentiment in Minnesota is in favor of a thorough revision of tariff schedules covering practically all classes of commodities. They argue that the Minnesota senators and representatives should take a firm stand in this respect and should not be "muzzled" by Eastern senators and representatives who favor the stand pat idea. Some have been disposed to criticise Senator Clapp for not coming out in the open and declaring for revision.

The supporters of Robert C. Dunn claim 338 votes of the 577 delegates which will be in the Hennepin county convention. According to the estimate of the Dunn men they will get solid delegations from the First, Third, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh and Twelfth wards, making 215 votes. The estimates on the other wards follow: Second, 15; Fourth, 46; Fifth, 3; Eighth, 29; Tenth, 12; Thirteenth, 9.

The Collins men are confident of carrying the county, but they prefer not to give a detailed statement of their strength.

The congressional campaign in Hennepin county is warming up as a result of the entry into the field of W. T. Coe and Albert H. Hall, of Minneapolis. Coe, who is only about thirty-five years old, says he is in the race to the finish and that if nominated and elected he will not promise, as Mr. Fletcher has done, that he will quit with one more term." Mr. Hall has not formally filed yet, but his friends say that he will do so in a few days.

Judge John H. Steele, who was scheduled to speak at last night's meeting of the Dunn supporters at the Fourth ward wigwam, did not appear, maintaining that the announcement was made without his authority. Mr. Steele has been considered a Eustice man.

Former Senator A. T. Stebbins of Rochester, candidate for the Republican nomination for railroad and warehouse commissioner, is in St. Paul. He says that he is still in the race and well satisfied with the progress that he is making.

Representative Frank Clague of Lamberton, candidate for speaker of the house in 1905, is spending a few days in St. Paul. Mr. Clague has not made a definite announcement of his candidacy, but it is generally known that he is in the race.

Col. Wright of Austin, who is in the city, says that Mower county will probably send a solid delegation for Judge Loren W. Collins of St. Cloud.

"The Dunn men have been down our way, but they found that sentiment is strong for Collins, so they decided not to put up a fight," said Col. Wright yesterday.

PERCENTAGE FAIRLY LARGE

Verdicts For Twelve Per Cent In Personal Injury Cases.

With the verdict in the Carl Tuv case, returned yesterday, the May term calendar has been cleared of the personal injury actions.

Of the number of cases that came to trial verdicts for about 12 per cent of the damages asked for in the complaints were returned.

The aggregate amount of damages of personal injuries asked for, in nine separate actions, was $55,782.90. Not all the cases came to trial, however, about $37,215 of the aggregate representing the damages that were actually sued for before a jury.

Only five of the nine personal injury cases came on for trial, one being dismissed and three being continued over the term.

In the five suits that were tried, verdicts were rendered for the parties bringing the actions, in three cases, while in the other two the parties defendant were successful.

The aggregate amount of the verdicts was $9485. The largest amount sued for was $10,500 and in this case the jury returned a verdict for the defendant. The largest verdict returned was $2835, the suit being instituted to recover $10,335. The smallest verdict returned was $300 in a case where the plaintiff asked judgment for $10,000.

Besides the personal injury verdicts, there was one returned of $600 damages for a West End woman who claimed to have been slandered by another woman living in the same locality.

EVANS A SUICIDE.

Paris, May 28.—The autopsy on the remains of Allister Evans, known as Viscount D'Oyley, son of the American dentist, Dr. John Evans, who died Thursday, in this city, as the result of a bullet wound received under mysterious circumstances, was held today. The result was not announced, but it is understood that the authorities are satisfied that death resulted from suicide. The judge in charge has issued a permit for the burial of the body, which has been turned over to the family.

Are doing business at their new stand, 107 West Superior street, and are fully equipped in all particulars. Their store is one of the handsomest in the city—all new fixtures throughout. The latest and most improved package and cash system has been installed within the past few weeks. In speaking with Mr. Stack, he points out very clearly the advantages a store of his kind has over others—everything is on one floor, making it much easier for customers to do their shopping. Strictly dry goods is the stock carried, all the house furnishings, crockery, tinware, etc., being discontinued. Laces, ribbons, veiling and fancy goods will be a special feature. Skirts and shirt waists also at popular prices. It is a store where the wants of the people will be carefully watched, and where their patronage will be fully appreciated.

MEMBERSHIP INCREASED

Presbyterian Committee on Church Union Has Fifteen Members.

Buffalo, May 28.—The membership of the committee on church co-operation and union of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States has been increased from eight to fifteen, the new members being Moderator Henry, of Philadelphia; Dr. F. L. Patton, of Princeton; President Moffatt, of Washington and Jefferson college; S. P. Nicholls, of St. Louis; Professor John De Witt, of Princeton seminary; L. H. Severance, of Cleveland, and H. C. Gara, of Philadelphia. Brothers Moffatt, Johnson and Coyle were appointed a committee to present a protest signed by Brother John Fox, of New York, and six other members of the general assembly against the action of the assembly in adopting the report on church union.

The assembly convened today with the intention, if possible, of finishing its business session, even if a night session were necessary.

The report of the committee on judicial commissions, proposing the establishment of a permanent tribunal which would be a supreme court for the general assembly, to which the assembly could refer all cases involving church law, and the report of the temperance committee, were among the orders of the day. The latter calls for advanced grounds on the temperance question, and incidentally strikes at the use of tobacco by ministers of the denomination. It recommends total abstinence on the part of the ministers and elders from the use of intoxicants and the use of their influence on the members of the congregations to the same end. It recommends the raising of $10,000 with which to prosecute the work of the year and the establishing of offices with headquarters in Pittsburg.

The last resolution deals with the tobacco question. It simply recommends that ministers and those serving the ministry be advised against the use of tobacco.

MAY COME ON NEXT WEEK

Ham-Potter Breach of Promise Case May Come Up.

Under the direction of the court, the jury in the personal injury case of Carl Tuv against the Lesure Lumber company, returned a verdict, yesterday afternoon, in favor of the lumber company. The case has been on trial for some two or three days past. Tuv, who was formerly employed in the mill had several fingers injured in cogwheels and sued for damages amounting to $1350. John Jenswold, Jr., represented Mr. Tuv and Adams & Miller represented the defendant lumber company.

There is a possibility that the Ham-Potter breach of promise action which was continued over the term, will be reinstated on the May calendar and given a jury trial next week.

Theodore Hollister, attorney for Sarah Ham, the plaintiff, is likely to appeal from the granting of the continuance on the ground that he was not present when it was granted and did not authorize anybody to have it continued.

The action is one that promises some sensational testimony. Miss Ham, who resides in Iowa, sues George A. Potter, a lumberman, formerly of this city, for $100,000 for breach of promise. She alleges that after ruining her life he has failed to keep his agreement to wed.

A New Baby.

A New Baby! What magic, what mystery, what charm these words have for us. Yet, how infinitely more they mean to the mother. A new life; short, to be sure, but full of possibilities. Some one must be patient, hopeful, watchful, proud and never discouraged. That "some one" is the mother. She has heard her baby's first cry, and whether it be her first or tenth, the feeling is the same. Her feeble arms are out-stretched; those arms that will never desert it as long as the mother shall live. And that hand which supports the head of the new-born babe, the mother's hand, supports the civilization of the world.

Is it any wonder, we ask you, mothers, that with all these responsibilities resting upon your all too weak shoulders, we urge upon you the necessity of selecting the babe's medicine with utmost care; the necessity of protecting your babe from worthless, unknown and narcotic drugs as you would protect it from the fire?

PROTEST MADE

Superior Street Owners Kick on Method of Assessment.

Claim Two Plans Exist That Prove a Hardship.

Different plans of the water and light department and the board of public works in assessing the cost of sewer and water connections is claimed to be working no little hardship to the property owners on the south sides of the different streets in the city.

The East Superior street property owners in particular are protesting against it.

The water mains are laid on the south side of Superior street, and according to the plan of the water and light department the property owners on each side of the street are compelled to pay the cost of the connections to the center of the road. The property owners on the south side therefore have to pay not only for the cost of the connection of their house with the water mains, but also a part of the cost of connecting the houses on the north side with the water mains.

They say they would not object to this, however, if the property owners on the north side reciprocated by paying a part of the cost of their sewer connections.

The board of public works, however, has a different plan in the matter of sewer connections. The sewers are laid along the north side of the streets, and the board compels the property owners to pay the actual cost of their connections whether they live on the north or south side of the street.

As the result of these two different plans the property owners on the north side pay only the cost of the water mains to the center of the street, and of the shorter sewer connection to the north side of the road.

The property owners on the south side of the street, on the other hand, pay the same cost in the matter of laying the water mains, and the cost of the long sewer connection to the main on the other side of the street.

"The two boards should get together," said Dr. D. D. Murray this afternoon, "and agree upon some common plan of assessing the cost of the different connections. Either plan would be all right if it were followed out in both cases, but where there is a different system for the water mains and for the sewers, it works a hardship to the property owners on the south side of the street, who are paying a part of the cost of the water connections to the other fellows' houses, and receiving no return in the matter of sewer connections."

AT THE POINT

Of a Gun She Recovered Money Stolen.

Toledo, Ohio., May 28.—With the aid of a gun Mrs. Charles J. Mominee, living near here, recovered $10.25 which had been stolen from her home by a negro, Cornellus Golnes, of Battle Creek, Mich., placed Golnes under arrest and took him before the justice of the peace, who sent him to the workhouse for 30 days.

Mrs. Mominee was preparing to come to the city, and was hitching up her horse, when the colored man entered her home and took the money.

A neighbor saw the colored man leave the house and told Mrs. Mominee of it. She then armed herself with a gun and overtook the culprit.

Acquired Blood Poison eats your life out. It is the king of all venereal diseases. If you neglect yourself you must pay the penalty of sickness, decay and death.

Up, and Save Yourself? Get Honest Treatment and Be Cured!

Consultation Free

On account of its frightful hideousness contagious blood poison is commonly called the king of venereal diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it, the disease may manifest itself in the form of scrofula, eczema, rheumatism pains, stiff or swollen joints, eruption or copper-colored spots on face or body, little ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, swollen tonsils, falling out of the hair or eyebrows, and finally a leprous-like decay of the flesh and bone. If you have any of these or similar symptoms you are cordially invited to consult us immediately. If we find your fears are unfounded we will tell you so frankly and relieve your mind. But if your constitution is infected with virus we will tell you so frankly and tell you how to get rid of it. Our special treatment for contagious blood poison is practically the result of our life work, and is indorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom of blood poison disappears completely and forever. The blood, the tissues, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life.

In getting sixteen leading clothiers of Duluth and Superior to sign a petition protesting against the actions of the Clothiers' exchange in the strike of the garment workers of Rochester, N. Y., the Duluth Federated Trades' assembly feels that it has met with one of the most distinct triumphs of the year.

"The petition proves in an effectual manner that the local merchants recognize the importance and power of trades unions, and that they respect their rights, and desire the patronage of the 4000 members of organized labor in Duluth," said a delegate at the assembly meeting last night. The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned clothing dealers of Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., believe that it will be to our interest that the clothing manufacturers of Rochester, N. Y., settle their difficulties with the United Garment Workers of America.

"We are being besieged by committees from labor organizations urging us to discontinue the handling of 'unfair' clothing. Our trade here is largely made up of members of organized labor.

"Therefore, we most respectfully petition you to get together with the union cutters. In the event that you do not meet them, we will be obliged to purchase from other markets until the existing difficulties are settled satisfactorily to the unions.

"Signed by Charles W. Ericson, Flonn, Leveroos & Co., Williamson & Mendenhall, Kenny & Anker, Oak Hall Clothing company, M. S. Burrows, M. G. Levy, Ploan & Leveroos (Superior), Nathan & Billestine, Eagle Clothing house, S. W. Hill, Charles Mork & Co., M. A. Fedje, Kastrimer & Neuman, Hendrickson Dry Goods company and Lee & Larson.

Special Agent Lawrence, of the Garment Workers' union of Rochester, visited Duluth about three weeks ago and asked the aid of the local assembly in securing the withdrawal of patronage, by Duluth merchants, from factories which have been termed unfair. The above petition, circulated by President Henry Pereault is the result of the visit.

At the meeting of the assembly last night, on motion of Delegate E. S. Cromroy, it was voted to add $5 each additional to the $25 voted at the last session, to pay the expenses of each delegate from the assembly to the convention of the State Federation of Labor at New Ulm next month.

At the last meeting, when $25 was voted, there was quite an argument in fixing upon the expense money of the delegates, but it was finally decided, by a majority vote, that $25 would be sufficient. There appeared to be only three or four ayes when Mr. Cromroy's motion was voted on last night, but as there were no noes the motion was carried.

George Worthfield, from the Amalgamated Meat Cutters' union, and E. J. Meagher, from the Electrical Workers' union, handed in their credentials as delegates to the assembly from their respective unions and were obligated.

Suggestion of organization of the retail grocery clerks developed considerable discussion and revealed the fact that because of longer hours required of that branch of salesmen, they are not permitted to join the International Retail Clerks' Protective association. BODY IDENTIFIED

Through the Railroad and Accident Ticket.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 28.—The agent of the Big Four Railroad has received a telegram from Newcastle, Colo., asking about the purchaser of a certain numbered ticket to San Francisco and a $5000 accident ticket, both of which were on the body of a man found in the river at Grand Junction, Colo., which had been sold in Terre Haute. The reports from Colorado imply that he had been murdered.

The man was H. C. Burson, of Newport, near here, who left May 3 to look after a large estate in California in which his wife was interested. He was never heard from by his family after he bought his ticket in this city.

The Newcastle agent reports that he left his train there May 6 without saying where he was going. Telegrams have been sent to Colorado asking for more information about his leaving the train at that point.

TIME

Now Controlled By Railway Magnate Harriman.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 28.—As the result of an order just issued by E. H. Harriman, through his representatives in Salt Lake City, thousands of residents in Nevada, representing nearly 600 miles of the inhabited railroad district between Ogden, Utah, and Reno, Nev., must readjust their habits and watches to conform with mountain time.

Heretofore, Pacific time has succeeded mountain standard time in Ogden, but Harriman has shoved the dividing line 590 miles westward.

MILWAUKEE BOODLER GUILTY.

Milwaukee, May 28.—Frank Niezorawski, a member of the board of public works of this city, was last evening found guilty by a jury of accepting a bribe of $800 in connection with the awarding of a contract for a city school building. Niezorawski was admitted to bail pending arguments for a new trial.

Michael Dunn, city building inspector, who was convicted a few days ago on a charge of accepting a bribe of $1500 was released on $5000 bail pending arguments for a new trial.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

J. E. Marcell, cashier of the defunct Highland (Kan.) bank, which failed last winter, pleaded guilty to one count in each of the five charges of forgery pending against him. Sentence was deferred. Marcell's forgeries are alleged to have amounted to close to $500,000. At the first trial the jury disagreed.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Retail Business Greatly Stimulated By More Seasonable Weather.

New York, May 28.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Retail trade is stimulated by seasonable weather and the idustrial outlook is brighter on the whole, although several adverse factors have appeared.

The big dry goods auction sale opened with an unexpectedly large attendance and good prices were secured. It is particularly gratifying to note that retailers other than jobbers have made most of the purchases, thus providing prompt distribution into consuming channels throughout the country. Manufacturing lines report a slight improvement at woolen mills and shoe factories and while there is more idle cotton machinery, it is worthy of note that the last Fall River statement showed very little reduction in dividends.

Railway earnings thus far reported for May, fall 3.7 per cent short of the same time last year, but foreign commerce at this port for the last week shows gains of $1,631,200 in exports and $849,645 in imports.

It is increasingly difficult to find encouraging conditions pertaining to the steel and iron industry. Purchases are small and frequently effected at further concessions, although it is difficult to find definitely lower quotations, except for pig iron, which now averages from $5 to $6 a ton cheaper than at the corresponding date last year.

Much structural work is under negotiation and there is the constant hope that substantial contracts will be placed, but thus far the tonnage is small and conditions unsatisfactory.

Considerable export business is under consideration.

This branch of the industry will need to expand materially, for domestic conditions continue quiet, or the liberal output of pig iron will produce an excess accumulation of stocks.

Textile markets have improved to some extent during the past week, weather conditions being notably favorable for retail trade, while the orders for woolens and worsteds increased more than the most sanguine manufacturers anticipated.

Cotton mills have further curtailed production, and in a few cases quotations at first hands are slightly lower. A better volume of business is reported in carpets.

Although packer hides are active and firm, tanners discriminate in favor of late saltings, which is causing some accumulation of the less desirable qualities. Imported hides are steady at the recent decline, arrivals being promptly absorbed. Leather is quiet. Returns as to the New England footwear situation are irregular.

Failures this week numbered 226 in the United States, against 206 last year, and 47 in Canada, compared with 7 a year ago.

BRIDE'S PREDICTION

After a Brilliant Wedding Has Come True.

New York, May 28.—The prediction of the eighteen-year-old heiress bride, Mrs. Viola Sondime Fickling, just after she left the altar, has come true.

A suit for the annulment of her marriage has been begun. The ceremony was performed on June 17 last. On July 18 Mrs. Fickling left her husband at their apartments, No. 317 West Ninety-fifth street, saying: "It is fate I can live with you no longer."

The marriage was an event in society. Fickling comes from a well-known Washington family, and is a New York club man.

The bride's friends were greatly shocked when she turned, and, after gazing at the flowers and the brilliant scene about her, said to one of her bridesmaids:

"This thing won't last a month. It is fate. You see if I'm not right."

AMUSEMENTS PROHIBITED

Methodists Decide to Make No Change In Church Discipline.

Los Angeles, May 27.—By the decisive yea and nay vote of 441 to 188, the Metodist general conference yesterday decided not to make any change in the church discipline in the matter of prohibited amusements.

The question is one which agitated the minds of the delegates to the present general conference perhaps more than any other single problem that has been before it. The church at large took a wide interest in the proposed striking out of the specified prohibited amusements from the discipline and memorial and petitions from all parts of the country reflected popular opinion in the church on the matter.

In all, sixty-five have been received, fifty-five of which opposed any change in the discipline on this point and ten favored various changes. A single petition from Binghamton, N. Y., bearing 2000 signatures was one of the protests against any change being made.

The question came before the conference yesterday in the report of the committee on the state of the church on this subject. There were two reports. The majority reports as follows:

"Your committee declines to recommend the striking out of the specified amusements from paragraph 248 of the discipline. It recommends that the following paragraph be inserted in the discipline under the chapter on special advices:

"Amusements—Improper amusements and excessive indulgence in innocent amusements are serious barriers to the beginning of the religious life and fruitful causes of spiritual declines.

"Some amusements in common use are also positively demoralizing and furnish the first steps to the total loss of character. We, therefore, look with deep concern on the great increase of amusement and of the general prevalence of harmful amusements, and lift up a solemn note of warning and entreaty, particularly against theatergoing, dancing and such games of chance as are frequently associated with gambling; all of which have been found to be antagonistic to vital piety, promotive of worldliness and especially pernicious to youth."

Anoka Union: Wisconsin Republicans have two tickets in the field, and the finish will probably be a Democratic victory.

Joseph Cotton, of Duluth, will second the nomination of Roosevelt in Chicago, and a splendid effort it will be.

Nearly every man you talk to in Minneapolis expresses the opinion that old Doc Ames has been punished enough.

This gubernatorial campaign is bringing out an uncommon lot of bad blood, and it bodes no good for the Republican party.

Hon. Loren Fletcher is again a candidate for congress from the Fifth district, but as against John Lind he stands as poor a chance of being elected as the littlest toad in the puddle.

THE DEMOCRATIC OUTLOOK.

Conservative Democracy has gained several important victories during the past week, and the political atmosphere has been clarified to such an extent that it is now possible to clearly forecast the outcome of the Democratic national convention at St. Louis. Conservatism will be the guiding hand that will direct the framing of the platform upon which the Democratic party will enter the campaign, and upon that platform will be placed a presidential candidate who will commend himself to the American people by his conservative record and disposition and by his aggressive determination to secure relief to the republic from corruption and autocracy and to firmly, wisely and judicially administer the affairs of the government. The conventions in the states whose voice has been heard this week have turned a deaf ear to extreme radicalism and have declared in favor of a conservative, but aggressive policy that will command the united support of all Democrats and of that large independent vote which is potent in deciding presidential contests.

With a sound, conservative platform dealing boldly and unequivocally with the living issues that confront the nation, and with a candidate who will be a guarantee of its pledges, the Democratic party can enter the campaign with firm confidence in a victory in November. It is generally conceded that with such a platform and candidate, the prospect of Democratic success in New York state will be excellent. Indiana, it is claimed, is also ready to fall into the Democratic column, while the political conditions in Illinois and even Wisconsin are extremely favorable for Democratic victories. This satisfactory outlook is the result, not only of Republican dissension in some of the states named, but of the certainty that the conservative leaders of the Democratic party will be in control at the St. Louis convention and will present a platform and candidate appealing to the sober, progressive and yet conservative element that includes the great majority of the American voters.

Who the candidate will be it is impossible to say with any degree of certainty. The list of delegates favorable to Judge Parker has been greatly augmented during the week and while the probability of his nomination has increased, the choice may fall upon some other equally strong and able Democrat. The extreme radicalism represented by the candidacy of William R. Hearst has received several crushing blows of late, and the name of Hearst or any other representative of radicalism must be dropped from consideration. Nearly all the great states of the East and Middle West have been carried by the conservative element, and in the South, which can be confidently set down practically solid on the conservative side, Alabama and Tennessee have already gone on record as favoring the nomination of Judge Alton B. Parker.

Massachusetts will present for the presidential nomination the name of Richard Olney, whose splendid record as secretary of state fills one of the brightest pages of American history. Missouri has in the person of David R. Francis, president of the Louisiana Purchase exposition, one upon whom the presidential nomination might well be bestowed, while Delaware can proudly present the name of Judge George Gray. Congressman Williams, of Illinois, one of the ablest members of the house, has been mentioned as likely presidential timber, and Marshall Field, the great Chicago merchant—a splendid type of the aggressive, level-headed and conservative business man—has many admirers who believe that with his name at the head of the ticket Democratic success would be assured. In this connection, it is significant that Mr. Bryan, who is not blind to the fact that the conservative element will control the St. Louis convention, referred to Mr. Field in flattering terms, while he was in Chicago a few days ago.

These are but a few of the prominent Democrats who have been suggested in connection with the presidential nomination, and the list might be extended indefinitely. The Democratic party contains many brilliant men under whose leadership it would enter the campaign with enthusiastic confidence. The St. Louis convention may be trusted to reach a wise and satisfactory decision, and the Minnesota convention can do much to secure such a result by sending a delegation unfettered by instructions and entrusted with full power to cast its influence on the side of the candidate whose nomination is favored by the delegates from those states whose electoral votes are essential to Democratic success in November.

RESULT OF THE SCORCHER.

No evil can be perpetrated without bringing its punishment. As a result of criminal automobilists scorching through the streets of New York they have brought down upon their heads the wrath of the poorer classes and the New York World claims that "the stone-throwing hoodlum has become a nuisance now as dangerous as the scorcher ever was." Naturally their indignation and stones are directed against the just as well as the unjust until it has become unsafe for anybody to drive an automobile through the streets of certain districts. This bitterness is so pronounced and so difficult to cintrol that Police Commissioner McAdoo proposes to lay out auto routes on certain streets and furnish sufficient police protection for those streets. He is carped at and criticised for this and asked why he does not furnish protection on all streets. Perhaps because with the force at his command he is unable to do so. The antagonism to autos is too strong and the antagonists too many. Perhaps he is doing the best he can.

That notwithstanding this warning there are automobilists who continue to violate the law and thus create more prejudice against the owners of these machines is shown in the following extract from the editorial columns of the New York World:

"An automobilist boasts of having 'made' the road between New York and Boston in eight hours and fifteen minutes. Express trains cover the distance in six hours, but on fenced tracks. As Mr. Pfizenmagen's alleged feat would be impossible without breaking a just and necesary law and endangering human life in every state, county, township and village he traversed, it is difficult to see why he proudly claims or was permitted to attempt the 'record.'"

There are several automobiles now owned in Duluth and the probability is that there will be many more. It is hoped that their owners will be warned by the present situation in New York and that they will be careful not to create similar conditions here. The general public have rights which even the owners of power wagons are bound to respect.

THE NEED IS GREAT.

There ought to be more than a perfunctory compliance with the proclamation of Mayor Cullum setting aside June 1 and 2 as "cleaning days." Every citizen should enter into the project with the spirit of determination that the city shall be cleaned and cleaned right.

The need is great. The people of Duluth, especially those in districts not covered by sewers, are very careless of their own welfare and that of their neighbors. During the winter they dispose of their ashes, manure and garbage in such manner as to create disease-breeding pestholes as soon as spring arrives. The ditches of the alleys are filled with all sorts of offal and filth and many kitchen drains that are turned into the alley ditches create puddles and mudholes, where gathers and decays disease-breeding filth of all descriptions. Closet vaults, leaking and overflowing, add their quota to the general filth and the result is a condition horrible to view or contemplate.

It would not be so bad if efforts were made to right matters and get the ditches open as soon as the snow and ice departs, but to wait until the first of June before a move is made certainly indicates a lack of good sense. The people themselves are mainly to blame for this, rather than the public authorities, but it would certainly seem that the authorities might be able to compel a decent compliance with the health laws before the first of June even if the season is cold and backward.

The cry that funds are short is but an indictment of incompetence and willful disregard of duty on the part of those responsible for this condition. No money should be expended by a municipality for any purpose until it first provides the necessary funds for protecting the public health. Not a great amount of funds would be required if the health authorities would compel residents and property-owners to do their plain duty and clean up their premises and surroundings promptly.

THE CHEAPNESS OF LIFE.

A comparison made by the Reader Magazine shows that it is almost as safe to go to war as to remain at home, especially if one rides much on railways.

The loss of the Federal army of the Cumberland in the battles of Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, as given by Cist, was 824 killed and 3683 wounded. So much for war in the sacrificial '60s.

In the year 1889, which is the first year of systematic accident tabulation, 5823 men, women and children were crushed, torn, mangled or burned to death on the lines of American railroads, and 26,809 others were injured in the same disasters. So much for peace, public indifference and the railroad accident fifteen years ago.

Having thus made sure our footing in the later '80s, let us come in one broad step to the present; this while we have the war table before us. Our historian, Cist, asserts that all things considered, the two days' fighting at Chickamauga stands unsurpassed as the hardest-fought and bloodiest battle of the civil war. The Federal killed in this battle numbered 1687, and the roster of the wounded fails but a few names short of 10,000.

But in the unbelligerent year ending June 30, 1902, the aggregate number of persons killed in railroad accidents was 9588, and during the same period, 64,652 persons were injured.

Is it not about time to begin placing the responsibility for railroad accidents where they properly belong and to hold those guilty to a strict accountability? The Herald believes they are largely the result of operating railroads without employing a sufficient number of men to do the work. Something should certainly be done to check this awful destruction of human life.

ANOTHER CHINESE LESSON.

In line with the thought expressed in The Herald the other day that the teachers of the deaf, dumb and blind girl, Helen Keller, are entitled to more credit than she is herself for her education and her present hapiness, is a suggestion contained in a statement recently made by Mr. Wong, of China, in an address delivered at one of the Indianapolis public schools, which he visited in company with Prince Pu Lun.

Mr. Wong said that in China the teacher is one of the five objects most revered, the five being in order as follows: The heaven, the earth, the emperor, the parent and the teacher. When a pupil is graduated, the teacher, as well as the pupil, is congratulated. When a man does anything great, his teacher is known and honored with him. A Chinese teacher never suffers while his pupils have a crust to give him. Mr. Wong was disposed to think that it is not always so in this country and that the teacher is not as thoroughly appreciated as he or she should be.

It is true that in this country too much credit is given to the so-called self-made man. There is, in fact, no such thing as a self-made man. The man of natural ability who struggles through life and achieves a certain success without the aid of any education is the nearest approach to a self-made man, but even he owes something to others, especially to the parents who reared him and from whom he inherited the brain power and the instruction necessary to enable him to overcome adverse circumstances. But the great men of all ages of history were educated men and despite their own natural ability the bulk of these owe their success principally to those who first taught them how to think and how to study.

It would be well if the American people would learn from the Chinese to place the teacher at least as high in the category of objects to be revered and honored as these so-called heathens do. The man or woman who conscientiously enters upon the moral and intellectual instruction of others as a life work accepts a world of care and responsibility and the calling should be given the great honor that is its due. How important it is, too, that only those particularly fitted for the duties of such high ofice should be permitted to mould the destinies of the rising generation.

THE CANALS IN MARS.

The great dark lines on the planet Mars which are visible to the human eye through the medium of the great telescopes at different observatories are always a matter of great speculation and wonder to astronomers. Some contend that instead of unbroken lines they are only rows of spots and edges of dark-shaded regions. But Percival Lowell of the Arizona observatory contends that they are the unbroken lines of a continuous system of canals and that they are not only produced by the inhabitants of that planet, but that work on them is continuously in progress.

It is his theory that these canals are made necessary by the fact that the planet is drying up and that in order to induce vegetation to grow it is necessary to bring water in these great irrigation ditches from the melting snows of the polar regions. He thinks, too, that in order to force this water uphill toward the equator it is necessary to pump it from level to level and that great locks must be maintained. It would be interesting to know how he explains the fact that the water in the Mississippi river flows so many hundreds of miles toward the earth's equator without any artificial help.

If his theory is true, it is evidence that the people there are making a brave battle to perpetuate their race by keeping life in a dying world. The struggle perhaps is a severe one and may finally end in failure and the end of life on the planet. This opens up endless avenues for speculation and suggests that perhaps, if there are people there, the question of inter-planet navigation may be solved by them when they find life no longer possible on the sphere they inhabit. Possibly, too, some earthly inventor may yet discover a means of reaching them and bring them to earth or to some other planet to people and develop the waste places. Would that not be a grand and glorious achievement? There is reason for belief that it will yet be an accomplished fact.

The New York Sun is disposed to poke fun at Mr. Bryan's high ideals because they are so high that, if followed, they would preclude the possibility of Democratic success during his lifetime. But the Sun, itself, has such high ideals that it has been unable as yet to discover among candidates in either party, a man who is fit to be president.

Although she failed she has evidently persisted until she "fetched" somebody even if she had to "crowd the mourners" to do it.

The advice of the bachelor judge of Detroit, Mich., is not so terrible as at first it seemed. It is now said that nose surgery, which results in a clearing of the nasal passages, is a preventative of consumption. The idea is put forward by a New York physician, who claims that few noses are normal; that constant catarrh closes the pasages so that breathing through the mouth becomes frequent or habitual. Undoubtedly this condition is an invitation to disease and should be remedied. It is reasonable, too, that a person whose nasal passages are impeded would be more liable to contract phthisis.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"There's no telling what some of the hotel clerks may have heard in their time, remarked one of the youthful ones to a reporter, as he threw away his breakfast toothpick and began to think it over. "I'm only a young one, but I've heard some things since I have been 'the man behind' that would make even a Mormon shy at domesticity. In fact, I don't think it's any wonder the hotel clerks aren't married, even if they could get girls to accept.

"The reason I think in this way this morning is because I've just had a little experience with a young lady who is stopping here. She is from one of our largest cities and is a saleswoman for a well-known house. She got here a short time ago—late last week in fact—and as soon as she registered, asked for a registered letter or package that she was expecting. It was not here, and I told her the sad fact.

"Like all people that come here, it was not strange for her to ask for mail and I did not think anything of that, but she seemed to be pretty well worked up about it. But this morning she came to the desk and told me that she had received the package, as she had gone to the postoffice. It had been there since Saturday.

"'That's the d—est poor service I've run into for a long time,' she told me. She used the word without a bit of discretion Now, who wants to get married after hearing a woman talk like that? I would hate to take the risk of marrying a girl and find out that she would talk that way to poor me. Just how much stronger this girl would declare herself I leave it for you to imagine."

At the Union depot the other day a woman called at the ticket window for a ticket to Ashland, laying down a bill in payment. She received the ticket and the change and after the clerk had begun waiting on others and had sold two or three other tickets the woman said:

"You only gave me change for a five dollar bill? Wasn't that a ten I gave you?"

"I cannot remember now, madam," replied the clerk. "I have handled several tickets since then, but if you'll leave your name and address I will see if my cash is five dollars over at the end of my watch here. If it is I will send you the five dollars."

"Well, I don't wan't to wait for I want the money right away. Will you give it to me?"

"No, ma'am, I cannot do that, but as I say I will adjust the matter if we find we have more money at the end of business than we should."

She hardly got through talking when a man came rushing up and told her that she need not go to Ashland and need not buy a ticket. But she had bought it. She then wanted the price of the ticket back so the clerk took the ticket and gave her the money it called for.

The man and woman disappeared.

The cash was not over at the end of the day's business and the next morning the woman appeared and wanted a ticket for Ashland. She said nothing about the five dollars that she had been claiming the day before so the ticket seller asked her about it.

"Do you still think you lost five dollars here yesterday?" he asked.

"No I found a five dollar bill in my purse with my other money," she said.

But she did not say she was sorry for the imputation she put upon the clerk. He says he was "madder'n a wet hen" about her actions, but what can a clerk do under the circumstances, and with a woman at that?

"Is it any wonder that we give information in a sort of mechanical manner," said he. "We have so much of that kind of monkey business here at the window that we often wonder if the public takes the railroad companies all for bunko steering and grafting combinations."

The Rude Conductor.

New York World: William Carney got into a dispute with a street car conductor. The conductor kicked him off the car and he fell headlong. It is now feared that he has fractured his skull and cannot recover.

This incident will probably raise a fresh outcry against our conductors—against their rudeness and their ill-temper. And the conductors are undoubtedly sometimes simpatient of uestions, brusque in answers, churlish in demeanor.

But they have their own point of view. In their ten hours or more of work they probably come in close contact with more concentrated stupidity than do almost any other workmen.

Mlock after block, trip after trip, they see passengers massed at each end of the car when by moving to the center they could have breathing space.

Block after block, trip after trip, they have some dull passenger reiterating the same question as to whether the next street is his destination, when he has been repeatedly informed that his corner is still far away.

Block after block, trip after trip, they go on wearily urging women to get off the car facing forward, only to see them deliberately step off facing backward with the obvious danger of a fall.

These are only three examples of the continuous performance of stupidity which day after day grinds into a conductor's nerves.

No, there is much to be said on his side.

JUST FOR FUN.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: "Smith, have you saved anything?"

"Yes; thousands of dollars."

"In what way?"

"Oh, there's a big fortune in Scotland coming to the Smith family, and I've never spent a cent trying to get in on it."

"Umbrage! I dunno. 'Tain't anything like one o' these here radium cocktails th' papers is printin' things about, is it?"

Philadelphia Press: "I'm afraid I'll disagree with you," remarked Jonah as the whale swallowed him.

"Perhaps," replied the sagacious whale, "but it won't be a circumstance to the way the theologians will disagree when they come to discuss this incident."

Tit-Bits: "It seems to me that you can be depended on to say the wrong thing more than any other man that I know."

"What have I done?"

"Insulted the Bliggins family."

"Why, I tried to compliment them."

"You said that their baby, who hasn't any hair, looked exactly like its father."

"Yes?"

"Well Bliggins is insulted on his own account, and his wife is insulted on behalf of the baby."

Chicago Post: "Is there danger from fire here?"

"Oh, no," replied the hotel clerk. "We are well provided with fire escapes."

"I don't care a hang about that. How are you fixed for man escapes?"

Washington Star: "The trouble with the American people," said the rotund personage, "is that they eat too much."

"Well," answered the dyspeptic, "wait a while. The beef trust will fix that."

NOT YET A DICTATOR.

New York World: Men have grown rich by minding their own business. Nations may prosper through the same policy. Customs at La Guayra may not be the same as at Oyster Bay. A boss at Bogota may issue a pronunciamento to accomplish the same result that a boss in Philadelphia would accomplish by stuffing a ballot box. But if President Roosevelt will only devote his attention to securing a perfect government in the United States the people will not hold him responsible for imperfections of government in South America. There is a good deal of work for a reformer to do at home. Let Mr. Roosevelt congratulate himself that he has not yet taken the oath of office as president of the Western hemisphere.

The Monroe doctrine means peace, because a European power that challenged it would have to subjugate a South American people, defending its independence, and supported by the United States. The Roosevelt doctrine means war, because it makes us the subjugators and throws South America into the arms of Europe. No European power would be fool enough to court the dangers of an attack on the Monroe doctrine, defended by a solid hemisphere, but there are several European powers that might be tempted by an invitation to help South America to defend its independence against the United States.

His Sacred Thirst.

Hardeman, Tenn., Free Press: Some infernal skate has started the report that John D. Rockefeller has offered us a million dollars for our thirst. Well, it's worth it, but our thirst ain't fer sale, unless Mr. Rockefeller will hire us to go around with him and do his drinking fer him.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Our One Country.

There is a tenderness about Memorial day which attaches to no other national holiday. The sight of little groups of Grand Army men, many of them bent and grizzled, going to churchyards where their dead comrades sleep, touches our hearts. Every year thins the ranks of the living and the passing of forty years does not lessen affection for the men whose graves all over the Northland are now marked by flags and flowers. We think, too, of the thousands who sleep under Southern skies, many of them in unmarked graves or with only this pathetic inscription on a rude headstone, "Unknown."

But Memorial day ought to do something more than stir tender memories. Least of all should it revive old antagonisms or reopen wounds long healed. The thought which we should emphasize is that of a reunited country, of a common mission, of a glorious future that belongs to all, North and South, East and West, native born and foreigner. It was to help keep the country united that young men in the early '60s left their plows, their forges, their benches, their offices. To keep all the states together, despite the desire of some to dismember the Union, was quite as much the rallying purpose as to liberate the slaves. Now we are one country, and the Cuban war evoked as much patriotism in the South as in the North.

And yet there is always the danger of pulling apart, of exalting our own interest and forgetting those of our fellow countrymen, 1000 or 3000 miles away. There has not been for years a more serious situation than exists in the South today. The presence of 8,000,000 negroes, the majority uneducated, lacking self-control, imposes a tremendous burden not only upon the whites, who have to deal with the situation at first hand, but upon the entire country. We of the North ought to help in the solution of the problem, not by unwise and meddlesome interference, or by harsh criticisms, or wholesale denunciations, but by co-operating with the best elements there, by trying to see the situation as they see it, and by going with them just as far as we can without sacrificing principles and convictions. It will take all the patience, wisdom and forbearance which whites in all sections of the country can muster to solve this problem, but there must be some way out if the thought that it is national and not a sectional question governs discussions and decisions.

There have been times and campaigns in the past when the East and the West were arrayed to some extent against each other, and underneath all the pleasantries and banterings one could detect considerable real suspicion, jealousy and animosity. Each section will, of course, have its own special interests and its own tasks, but there ought not to be constant scheming for advantage. A New Englander ought to feel his pride growing as he crosses the prairies and the Rockies, looks out over the Golden Gate to the shining Pacific, or gazes at towering Mt. Hood from the heights of Portland, Oregon, or watches the shimmering waters of our great northern lake from the bluff at Duluth. The Western born man ought to thrill with pleasure and satisfaction when he looks for the first time at the Hudson, or stands on Plymouth Rock. For this is one country and we are first of all Americans.

Should not the same attitude prevail with regard to the incoming races? Puritan and Cavalier no longer constitute the main ingredients in our population. Every nation in Europe and some in Asia are continually contributing elements that are modifying the American type. A more diverse population than has ever tried to live together on the face of the earth under one government is here today. And these foreigners are here for a purpose. To say, as did the exuberant Irishman on the Fourth of July, in the ardor of his devotion to his adopted country: "America for Americans, bejabbers!" is to set up a somewhat fluid standard, for how can Pat say that he has any more right here than has Hans or Lars? No, this country belongs to the people who, in the providence of God, have been assembled here, and we must learn fellowship and to serve one another.

A Boston minister has recently been bold enough to criticise the national hymn, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," on the ground that it would be better to say, "Our Country, 'Tis of Thee." We doubt if he ever succeeds in substituting his suggested paraphrase. The traditional rendering has a virtue all its own. Patriotism begins with a personal devotion, and voices itself in the impassioned words, "My Country." But it soon widens out and allows the other man a chance to use the same language. Then both together, clasping hands, looking kindly into each other's eyes, may well sing, "Our Country, 'Tis of Thee!"

THE PARSON.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It's queer what a lot of enjoyment some people get just by spoiling other people's enjoyment.

Generally a girl is pretty fond of you if it makes her furious with you to have anybody else find it out.

When a woman thinks that her friends are too dressy for their age it is a sign she would suspect she was getting old if it was anybody but herself.

When a woman has acted the very worst she knows how, there is scarcely any way to mollify her indignation except to make an humble apology to her.

It's as natural for a girl's shoestrings to keep coming untied when she has on fancy open-work stockings as for a man to speak with a careless familiarity of his rich friends when they are out of the country.

VETERANS TALK TO THE STUDENTS

Importance of Memorial Day and Results of the Civil War Presented By Veterans at High School —Baseball Team Wins Two Games During Week.

Yesterday morning three veterans of the civil war and members of the G. A. R. posts of Duluth, spoke very entertainingly to the students on the celebration of Memorial day, and told them several of their adventures during the war. Those who spoke were F. H. Barnard, M. W. Bates and D. G. Cash.

Mr. Barnard, who was the first to speak, said that the recollections which Memorial day brought to his mind inclined him rather to revery than to speech-making. "I seem to feel the presence of my departed friends," he said, "to pass once again through the exciting scenes which took place in the '98. Down in Massachusetts there is a monument which has engraved upon it seven names, five of them were personal friends of mine. But whenever I think of them, I always feel thankful that their lives were not spent in vain."

He also told of a young undergraduate of Harvard, a bright and witty young fellow named Weston, who, had been sent out to gather firewood with some comrades. His comrades returned staggering under their loads while he carried but a small stick. When his lieutenant saw him he saluted, and before his superior could utter a word, said: "It isn't the work that I hate, lieutenant, it's the degradation."

He then went on to tell the students of the duty which they owed to their country and of the gratitude which came to the G. A. R. men to see the united Union of the North and the South in the recent Spanish-American war.

The next speaker was W. M. Bates. He asked that as many high school students as possible should join the veterans at the cemetery next Monday and help them to spread flowers over the graves of their departed cormades. He then told them of some of his experiences during the march to the sea, and at Kenesaw mountain. During the former he met the closest call which he had ever had.

"I was just entering a little dug-out," he said, "and just as my head came below the top log a piece of shell as large as my hand scraped the bark from the top of it."

The incident at Kenesaw mountain illustrated the feeling shown between the Confederates and the Federals. A large meadow in which many of the men lay wounded caught fire and instantly both sides threw away their muskets and worked side by side to carry the wounded out of danger.

He also spoke of the Eastern situation, and said that though some might differ with him, he believed that if the United States would say "peace" to Japan and Russia, there would be peace inside of twenty-four hours. He said, further, that it was one of his great desires that the boys would show more military spirit, and take up the responsibility of government, knowing how to shoulder a musket.

The last speaker was D. G. Cash. He said in part: "The results achieved by the great civil war were secondary in importance only to those accomplished by the war of the revolution. Both wars were fought in vindication of the same eternal principles, broad as humanity itself, that the true source of all government is in the people, and that every person within the jurisdiction of a state is entitled to the equal protection of the laws.

"The war of the revolution established our independence on those principles, as they were clearly enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, and subsequently embodied in the constitution of the United States; but it left the task unfinished. The fact remained that a large body of the inhabitants of the country were still held in slavery and were denied equal protection before the courts.

"The bitter controversies which grew out of this anomalous condition were a constant menace to the peace and life of the nation, and finally culminated in the civil war; and it was not until the adoption of the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments to the constitution as the direct result of the war, the one abolishing slavery, the other guaranteeing to every person the equal protection of the laws, that the principles of the Declaration of Independence became an accomplished fact.

"It is appropriate, therefore, that each of those great conflicts should be fittingly commemorated, for they each mark an epoch in the history of man, a long stride in the ever-advancing progress of humanity towards a higher and better plane of civilization and enlightenment. But it is the event, the distinct uplifting of a whole people to higher ideals, that should be commemorated, rather than achievements on the field of battle, no matter how brilliant and startling they may stand out from the duller surroundings to challenge our admiration.

"I would have the observance of Memorial day along the same general lines as the celebration of the Fourth of July, minus noise. I would have it a welcome and joyous holiday, which everyone should be free to use and enjoy as conscience may dictate.

"On you and all the other young men and women of the United States, now soon to enter upon the serious business of life, will devolve the sacred duty not only of holding fast the splendid heritage which has been handed down to you, but of building higher and better on the sure foundations which have been so well laid down by those who have gone before.

"If you have read aright to be learned from the two great epochs of which I have spoken, you will highly resolve to ever cherish and maintain, in accordance with their true spirit, the fundamental principles laid down by the Declaration of Independence and solemnly enacted into law by the constitution of the United States, and the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments; and will also resolve that no war except in the just and righteous support and defense of those principles is worth fighting, that all other questions can with exercise of proper dignity and patience be honorably adjusted by arbitration.

The choir also rendered the following songs selected for their appropriateness for the occasion:

"America" .....
"Requiem" (arranged from old air) ...
"No Shades Yonder," (from Gaul's "Holy City") .....
"Columbia, My Country" .....Custance
Solo by S. Alexander.
"Soldiers' Chorus" (from "Faust")...

WINS TWO GAMES.

Baseball Team Defeats Superior and Grain Men.

During the past week the baseball team played two games and won them both. The first one was played with the Nelson-Dewey high school, of Superior, and resulted in a score of 8 to 4 in favor of Duluth.

The line-up was as follows:

School Notes.

The executive committee of the Athletic association has decided to have the interclass track meet and the baseball game with Ashland on the same day, June 11. It has also decided upon a small button for the members of the association who have paid their dues and will be allowed to vote. It will be red and white with the words "D. C. H. S. Athletic Association" engraved upon it.

Marshall Darrach, the Shakepearian lecturer who gave such a fine series of lectures in Duluth this winter, has been engaged for another series to be given some time in October.

The proceeds from the Senior play, which was given in the high school assembly hall last Saturday evening, are not all in, but it is certain that they will amount to considerably more than $200.

The students will receive their monthly report cards Tuesday, as there is no school next Monday. This is the last time that they will be issued before school closes for the summer vacation.

BUSINESS UNIVERSITY HAPPENINGS

Summer term will begin at the college on Tuesday, May 31st, when a large class will be enrolled. There will be no summer vacation.

Prof. J. M. Tran, of Detroit, Mich., has been engaged as assistant teacher in the commercial department of the college, and will begin duties June 13th. Mr. Tran, late principal of the commercial department of the Central Business College, Toronto, also the Detroit Business College, will be a valuable acquisition to the faculty of this institution, as his testimonials tend to place him in the front rank of the business educators of this country.

The following young people have left the college to accept the following positions:

Percy Dennis, stenographer for the White Line Transportation Co.; Geo. Maleski, stenographer and assistant bookkeeper for the Oliver Mining Co., Ironwood, Mich.; David Olson, bookkeeper for the Standard Salt & Cement Co.; Gertie Jacobson, stenographer for the Marshall, Wells Hardware Co.; Minnie Munson, stenographer for the Marshall, Wells Hardware Co.; Katie Griffith, stenographer for the Northern Electric Co.; G. T. Hanson, bookkeeper for the Northern Supply Co.; Fred Jeffery, stenographer and bookkeeper for the Jeffery Bros.; Morris Mumford, stenographer for C. B. Woodruff; Eva Wright, stenographer for the Commercial Investment Co.; Bertha Mendelson, stenographer, Akron, O.; O. P. Nelson, stenographer for Wade & Webber, Minneapolis, Minn.; Annie Olson, stenographer for the Burgess Electric Co.; Geo. Jollymore, stenographer for the D. M. & N. R. R.; Proctor; Geo. Noll, bookkeeper for Milner & Ebert; T. Doer, stenographer for the D. & I. R. R. R., Two Harbors, Minn.; John McCullough, assistant bookkeeper for the N. P. R. R.; Anna Grant, stenographer and assistant bookkeeper for H. A. Hall & Co.

Among those who have enrolled at the college, are:

Carl Stubstad, Zumbrota, Minn.; Esther Skagerberg, Cloquet, Minn.; Kate McLauchnan, Two Harbors, Minn.; M. J. Pierce, Minneapolis, Minn.; Mary R. Walker, Fergus Falls, Minn.; J. A. Turnquist, Grand Rapids, Minn.; Albert Moline, Mountain Iron, Minn., and Gunner Ackholm, West Superior, Wis.

THE RETURN PASS

A Most Valuable Thing For Live Stock Shippers.

Denver, May 28.—The National Live Stock association has issued a circular letter to its members upon the subject of railroad transportation. In part the letter says:

That good service at the hands of railroad companies is the thing most desired by all shippers, but the return pass is not the "insignificant item," as it has been termed by some. This item means an annual saving of $50,000 to the Texas and $40,000 to the Montana cattlemen, and a sum almost as large to the sheep growers of Wyoming, Idaho and Utah.

"If it is possible to get the interstate commerce act amended as provided for in the Quarles-Cooper bill the troubles of the shippers of live stock will be minimized. The National Live Stock association, for four years has been aiding the interstate commerce law convention to secure this amendment.

"The attention of the traffic managers has been called to the inequality in live stock rates from several localities. They have agreed to a hearing on this subject and it will be taken up by this association as early as the data can be gathered with which a case can be maintained."

HEAVY DETONATIONS

At Proving Ground Disastrous to Coney Island.

New York, May 28.—Detonations from the tests of heavy artillery at the government proving grounds at Sandy Hook besides causing minor damage have wrecked a portion of a public school building in Coney Island, seven miles distant. Two of the boy pupils were injured by the falling of a part of the ceiling in one of the rooms and the other children were thrown into a panic. One boy sustained a depressed fracture of the skull, which may cause his death.

Perkins Turns Down Proposed Change In Mail Service.

Does Not Consider It Advisable at This Time.

A communication in answer to the request of local business interests that there be a change for the better made in the mail service between Duluth and Spooner, Wis., over the Omaha railway, has been received by the local postoffice officials from Norman Perkins, superintendent of the railway mail service in this division. The answer states that, in the opinion of Mr. Perkins, it would not be advisable to make the change and desired improvement at this time.

The request was that the mail car and clerk now running over the Omaha from Ashland to Spooner be transferred to the Duluth run. Under existing conditions the various towns between the head of the lakes cities and Spooner receive mail from Duluth and points to the north and west only once a day, with the exception of South Range and Solon Springs. It was desired by local business interests that the car asked for be placed on the Twilight Limited, leaving Duluth at 4 p. m., thus giving the towns in question two mails a day, where they now receive mail only from the train leaving here at 8:50 in the morning. The change would leave the points between Ashland and Spooner with only one mail a day, unless a pouch exchange was established, but it was argued that this would be more reasonable than are the present conditions, for the towns on the Ashland lines are neither so large nor important as those between Duluth and Soooner, and their mail is much smaller than that going out of Duluth, Superior and tributary country to stations between here and Spooner.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Britton Man Found Dead In Bed In Lodging House.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Britton—Richard Simms was found dead on a bed in his lodging room. A postmortem examination indicated that death resulted from apoplexy. Little is known here of the whereabouts of his relatives, but it is believed he had a sister in Wisconsin.

Preparations are being made to observe Memorial day under the auspices of Gen. Hedrick post, G. A. R. Music will be furnished by the Britton band and a chorus made up of the combined choirs. State Senator O. L. Branson, of Mitchell, will deliver an oration.

Belle Fourche—The government is surveying the district around this city. The work covers 500 square miles north and northeast of the city, 225 square miles south of Bear Dnge, and the completion of Belle Fourche proper, amounting to about 125 square miles. The map is being prepared by the reclamation service, through the topographical bureau of the geological survey.

Lead—A special policeman in citizen's clothes has been appointed by business men to look after incorrigible boys.

Pierre—George K. Mills, one of the leaders of a Wisconsin colony near Hayes, Stanley county, was in the city on his way to Wisconsin, to bring back his family and other members of the colony. Those already on the ground have organized the township, giving it the name of their old home county in Wisconsin, La Fayette. Mr. Mills says the township will have over fifty Wisconsin settlers before the close of the summer. The officers of the new township are Peter Baker, chairman; Richard Newman, clerk; George K. Mills, treasurer.

The secretary of state's office reports a rush of applicants for notarial commissions coming from the southern part of the state, especially from the sections near the Rosebud country. Besides these, applications are coming in from residents of other states, who say they expect to go to the Rosebud country.

Governor Herreld has commissioned Dr. H. R. Gunderman, of Selby, as assistant surgeon of the National Guard. He has also appointed James R. Curson, of Custer, as game warden of Custer county.

Hill City—The Warren Peak Mines company has been organized for the purpose of developing 190 acres in the Bear Lodge district. The officers elected are Eugene A. Bock, president; George W. Bock, vice president and treasurer; Gahard F. Bock, secretary and general manager. These, with Charles H. Thibault and Edith McDonald, constitute the board of directors. Outcroppings of ore appear in several places, and the assays run about $10 a ton in gold.

The little Tesmain stamp mill at the Clara Bell mine has been started. The ore runs high, much of it going better than $200 a ton. The tailings are being saved and will be concentrated or cyanided. A new shaft was recently put down which has encountered the vein at a lower level. The company is planning to build a large mill.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—The work of perfecting the organization of the Commercial club has been assigned to a committee consisting of E. J. Lander, Willis K. Nash, George B. Clifford, George B. Winship and Alvin Robertson. Over 150 citizens have become members and 200 are expected to become actively interested. The purpose is to promote the interests of Grand Forks and its tributary territory. A salaried secretary will have charge.

Appropriate Memorial day exercises will be conducted at the South Side park Monday under the auspices of Willis A. Gorman post. The memorial sermon on Sunday will be delivered by Rev. Mr. Bell, of the Baptist church, and the Memorial day address will be delivered by Dr. A. A. Bruce, of the law department of the university. The tribute to the unknown dead will be delivered by George A. Bangs.

Not an additional grave has been made in the local cemeteries in the year past for the burial of a civil war veteran, and but one member of the G. A. R. has died within the year, he being a Minnesota veteran, whose interment took place at Alexandria.

E. H. Moulton, president of the Tri-State Telephone company, which has a franchise for a telephone system in this city, was here looking over sites for a new exchange building. He says that forty miles of the toll line between Minneapolis and Grand Forks had been completed and the line is going forward at the rate of about five miles a day. He expects the toll line and local system will be in operation before Oct. 1. The council franchise requires its completion by Nov. 1.

GOVERNMENT IS APPROVED

In Recall of French Ambassador From the Vatican.

Paris, May 28.—After an exciting debate in which Premier Combes and Foreign Minister Delcasse set forth the action and purposes of the government toward the vatican, the chamber of deputies yesterday by an overwhelming vote approved the course of the government in recalling M. Nisard, ambassador to the vatican and rejected all preparations of the extreme element for an immediate dissolution of the relations between church and state. The vote approving the action of the government was 452 to 97.

"This recall," said Premier Combes, "signifies that we cannot allow the holy see to interpret the presence of our ambassador in Rome in a sense favorable to its claims or to make use of this presence to justify pretentions which we reject. It also means that we will not allow the papacy to intermeddle in our international relations, and that we intend to have done once for all with the senile fiction of temporal power, which disappeared 34 years ago. We will not withdraw the whole staff accredited to the vatican, as we are bound by the concordat to maintain at the vatican an agent of our government for the carrying on of business. We cannot suppress the embassy and the concordat by our own way, for that duty belongs to the chambers.

"Some speakers urge us to denounce the concordat without delay, but such a serious step should be preceded by measures guaranteeing the Republican state against the political risks which would be entailed by such a radical change in its legipslation and habits."

Premier Combes went on to say that several schemes for ending the concordat were under discussion in committee and it only remained for the chamber to have the question brought up for consideration immediately after the passage of the budget next January.

TO SELL ISLANDS.

Halifax, N. S., May 28.—An agent bas left here for New York to close the sale of the Magdalen islands by the government of Quebec to an American syndicate. They are rich in iron and manganese deposits, and the herring fisheries are valuable. It is said the Dominion government may take some action to prevent the sale.

MAYOR'S CHAUFFEUR

Arrested For Exceeding the Speed Limit.

New York, May 28.—A bicycle policeman with no regard for the majesty of the mayor's chauffeur, has arrested that individual for exceeding the speed limit. The policeman was given a pretty chase before he overhauled the automobile. The chauffuer was on his way to meet the mayor at a Fifth avenue restaurant. He was late and dashed at high speed past the guardian of the law who gave chase for several blocks with the dust flying in his face. When he chauffuer attempted to explain that the chief executive of Greater New York was to be seriously inconvenienced by his misadventure the policeman scented a plea to escape and, refusing to be drawn into it, hauled his prisoner off to the station house. When the alleged law breaker had about come to the conclusion that he was locked up for the night a friend of the mayor appeared and bailed him out.

A DOUBTFUL.

Nothing Heard of Croker's New Horse For Derby.

New York, May 28.—Richard Croker's horse, Clonmel, for which it is said he paid $15,000, with its Derby engagement, is now put down as a doubtful starter for the classic race, says a World's dispatch from London. There are no reports of his training published and he is not mentioned in the betting. M. Blanc's Gouvernant is first favorite for the race this year, and the prospect of its being won for the first time in forty years by a Frenchman is giving the contest unusual interest. Gouvernant will be ridden by Cannon, the crack jockey. The last three derby winners were ridden by Americans.

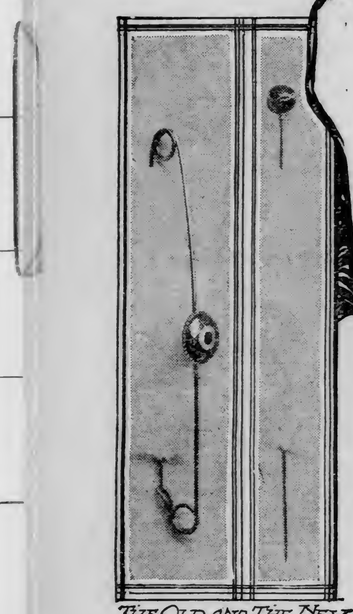
LATEST FADS and FANCIES for WOMEN

ROSES BRING SWEET REPOSE



THE OLD AND THE NEW HAT PINS

HOW TO ADJUST THE NEW SAFETY HAT PIN

VIOLETS BRING HAPPY DREAMS

BY MISS MANHATTAN.

New York —.—Flowers are always associated with pretty women, but even poets in their most fantastic flights could not think of the flower siesta for the fairest of their sex. The fairest did, and the thought has grown and blossomed until now these pretty creatures have made the sleep of beauty one in which the head is embowered in a favorite flower.

There is much wisdom and some sentiment in this latest notion of women. They base the idea of the cult on the effect different flowers have on different persons, saying that each has her own particular blossom which thrives and grows sturdier in her presence while some other flower would wilt and die. There is a plant "aura" just as there is a spiritual one passing from the individual to the flower and from the flower to the individual.

Be that as it may everyone must admit that personality has a very great effect on flowers of all kinds. There are some women who seem to make certain flowers brighten up when ever they come in contact with them, and there are others who have just the opposite influence. Probably you have noticed how long one woman will carry a bunch of flowers at a ball or a reception and instead of wilting the blossoms the warmth from her hands apparently gives them renewed life. It is the same with growing plants and shrubs. A dead looking stick will seem to thrive under the touch and care of this woman while the sturdiest plant that grows will shrivel up and refuse to bud for that one. I have known so many cases of this kind that it needs no long argument by the flower cultists to make me believe that there is some sympathy between women and blossoms.

The rose belongs to a certain type of femininity, and distinctions are made even in color. When a red rose does not find peace and happiness in the atmosphere of a woman then she should try a rose of another color, if she is of the opinion that her flower is the rose. Some times a tea rose will grow more delicate both in appearance and fragrance when in the presence of its human companion, and an American Beauty will turn pale when placed in the same nearness. It would seem almost as though flowers had a human side, at least, in their sensitiveness and selection. This is the foundation of one of the great points made by the flower cultists that the soul of each blossom waxes and expands in the presence of an individual who possesses the same qualities which the flower does, and when it comes in contact with an inharmonious individual, one that is not of the same "perfume," it shows its nerves and nerves mean death to it.

There is only one flower for each person, and when that particular bloom is not in season then the human soul feels its loss very keenly, so say the flower faddists; but, they go on to show, while this flower does not last in its native or adopted surroundings, it will last longer and reach a greater state of perfection for this person while another might not be able to make it grow at all, no matter how carefully tended and nurtured it might be.

The violet girl has a disadvantage in the short season in which these flowers appear and also in their delicacy. The carnation lasts considerably longer, and the strong spicy odor with which it is always associated acts as a stimulant to the carnation girl. At other times it will soothe her as though it were laden with poppy seeds and the siesta into which she falls is pure and sweet on account of the surrounding of flowers; for, of course, if she is one of the newest of the faddists she has her pillow laden with her favorite flower and her room filled with their perfume. Not every night or every 40 winks in a summer afternoon is taken with her head buried in blossoms. This would be too great a stimulant, and the sweetness would soon begin to cloy and result in headaches; but occasionally, when she feels the need of something to soothe her nerves the flower siesta is taken just the same as one would swallow a tonic, only the former is accompanied with pleasant feelings while the latter is taken with a grimace.

Another curious feature about the flower siesta is the quickness with which certain flowers put some women to sleep. Within half a minute after the head has burled itself among the fragrant blooms does a feeling of drowsiness steal over one, and in another half minute this person might have entered the land of nod from hours of sweet and refreshing sleep. With other women the same flowers might act like an irritating spirit, and sleep would never come to them if they remained in the vicinity of the flowers. This is because the flower nature and the human one are antagonistic and each gets "on edge."

As a cure for headache the flower sleep, if it is properly taken, will accomplish all that medical skill can and more than the average home remedy will, at least, this is asserted by the believers of the cult. Indeed a good many women have tried smelling of flowers as a test, and it has been found that certain ones do dispel headaches while others aggravate the pain. All of which goes to show that there is more in the perfume of flowers than just their sweetness and beauty.

This is the season for roses and most of the popular flowers, so as a suggestion why not try the effects of different blossoms and make experimental notes of their actions and appearance. It would do no harm and might serve to pass a few hours pleasantly and at the same time you might make a delightful discovery about your flower nature.

The commonest flower affinity is for the rose, which is quite natural in view of the quantity and great variety of this particular blossom and also in the fact that for centuries woman has been poetically likened to this flower. Probably the ancients recognized some marvelous sympathy between fair woman and fair flower, and they may have had a flower cult the same as this which we flatter ourselves is a product of modern thought and reasoning.

Some men recognize the difference in women instinctively and without knowing why they send this one roses, another violets and maybe orchids to a third. They would never think of altering the flowers, that is of changing them about, if they are men of rare discernment. Of course, there are a few uncultivated ones who think a flower is a flower and no matter what it is a woman will appreciate it just the same as she would her own particular blossom. A little course under the flower cult instructors would soon make them wiser and open their eyes to the possibilities in flowers.

Fashion Notes.

Straight foot ruffles from four to six inches in width are now much used as shirtwaist suit trimmings, and any number desired may be used, so arranged that each ruffle just touches the top of the one beneath it.

A very smart costume can be made of blue taffeta glace with white taffeta for relief trimmings and for the front closing plait and the collar and cuffs. A narrow stitching in heavy silk should be run around the edges of the white taffeta.

For little girls flowered organdies with lace flouncing and the shirred drop shoulder bertha are in the best of taste. Deep colors and heavy trimmings should never be worn by the schoolgirl on occasions of importance, no matter what the girl's age may be. To do so is to offend one of the few inexorable canons of good taste which no possibility of style or richness in the costume can make amends for.

THE PERFUME SOOTHES THE MIND

Passing of the Raglan

All signs now point to the total disappearance of the long coat, the once styled raglan. For rainy days women have thought there was nothing else quite so convenient as a long waterproof garment that reached from their throats to the bottom of the short skirts. The newest rain garment is in two pieces, consisting of a moderately short coat and a walking skirt. Gloria is the favored material from which these rainy day costumes are designed. It is lightweight, sheds water beautifully and looks more natty than a long ulster. Gloria rain suits are not heavy enough for winter wear, but they answer admirably for this season of the year and will prove a rarely useful adjunct to the summer wardrobe.

A lustrous black gloria suit had a coat of almost three-quarter length, made severely plain, with just a touch here and there of white silk in pipings, collar and cuffs. The skirt, of course, was unembellished. It had several well-fitted gores that flared considerably around the ankles. Gunmetal buttons gave it a pretty finish. Dark red gloria suits are far from startling, but they cannot compare with the black for smartness. Various shades of brown and dark blue will find many purchasers, but the royal blue and scarlet long coats made of a very glossy silk will seem too striking to be worn by any but the most daring. They are very good style, nevertheless, and can be used as dust coats in making trips to the city if the weather is dry and warm, or if it is damp or rainy then the coat fills its original scope. Long coats are offered as a concession to those women who think they cannot go out into a storm unless they are entirely enveloped with a rainproof garment, and, also, they are intended for the use of working women who demand a coat that will cover the dress which they must wear the greater part of the day. The gloria coat and skirt combination is all very well for those women who intend to wear it only in the rain, and then, when they come in, expect to exchange it for another dress. The advantage of a long coat is in being able to throw it on or take it off at will. But the attractive feature of the two-piece rain outfit is in the lessening of weight and bulk. There is only the very light skirt to lift, if it is necessary to lift at all, and no consequent dragging as when one wears a long rain coat.

A Child's "Romper" Garment.

The healthy lad and lassie should above all have plenty of time to run about and stretch their growing limbs, and no problem more frequently disturbs the mother than the question of what the children may wear while playing. An idea which should ease this burden is that of a "romper," a simply made suit of strong but cheap material which can be worn over the more dressy costumes. Striped percale is the best material for a "romper," but chambray may be substituted for little girl's costumes at the seashore.

The coat is more easily put on if closed part of the way down the front, but for a chambray suit it is better to close the entire front in coat fashion with a lap or box plait. The trousers are gathered to the lower edge of the front yoke and may be fitted either by an inside leg or a center seam. No yoke is put in the back piece and the trousers fit to the jacket with large pearl buttons sewed to the jacket. The buttonholes should be strongly made on the reinforced material and may be hidden by a belt of the suit material. Since this "romper" is especially intended to withstand hard usage the belt should be caught with four straps. The sleeves are plain and should be finished at the wristband with a plain cuff made in one piece with the sleeve itself. The trousers are made simply but strongly with double seams, and should be caught at the knee in gathers and finished off with a loose buckle so as to give the fullest freedom possible to the play of the leg muscles.

Fancy Kimonos.

Realizing the American woman's penchant for kimonos the Japanese have made some special designs for her with which to charm her fancy. The handsomest are silk or crepe and are elaborately embroidered in great flowers that are wrought either all in one color or in natural tints. A beautiful white crepe kimono had a pale pink lining, which rolled up at the bottom in true oriental style and over the entire front and the sleeves were worked great bunches of purple and white wisteria. To a same thing was duplicated in faint yellow crepe and purple flowers. A blue gown had white bamboo, which is one of the prettiest of the patterns which the Japanese do, and a pin kimono was worked in cherry blossoms, while a fourth in pale lavender was embellished with purple and white iris.

There are obis with these gowns, though the American woman seldom wears hers tied in the back. She likes to have the knot in front and usually it is tied low, like a girdle.

The short kimono is a creation of the fair-haired sister entirely. No Japanese woman would feel herself properly clad even in the seclusion of her own room if she wore such an abbreviated garment, but the American finds many uses for the short kimono and apparently prefers it, as a general thing, to the longer garment. These short ones conjur to the hips and they ar made exactly like the established style, except that the sleeves have sh wings to correspond and there is no obl. Occasionally these novel kimonos are supplied with deep turn back collars, something after the fashion of a sailor that extends down the front in deep revers or points. They look stunning when worn over a dainty embroidered batiste petticoat or over a silk one that matches the shade of the jacket.

Italian Underwear.

Among all the styles of undergarments for feminine wear there is none quite so cool and soft to the touch as the silken ones from the looms of Italy. Almst any undergarment can be purchased in this weave, and they may be as elaborate as one chooses to have them. Singlets and chemises for this season are much trimmed, the whole fronts showing an inset of lace medallions, insertion and embroidery.

Novel Automobile Coats.

From all appearances automobiling will be the diversion par excellence for society this season and to provide for such an event the most remarkable collection of coats, veils and gowns has been designed with a special view to filling every requirement of the feminine automobilist. Leather coats and whole costumes are presented in the most attractive fashions imaginable. Who would have thought a few years ago that a woman would be able to wear a coat of glace leather heavily stitched and strapped, and yet fitting the figure with almost the same precision of a cloth garment?

Almost without exception these coats are made to fasten up snugly about the throat and they button well over on one side, thus defying wind and dust. A fox brown leather coat of hip length had the straight part hung to a yoke and was laid in flat side plants stitched in scallops over the bust. There was a stock at the throat fully six inches deep, but it was of soft leather, lined with silk and could be crushed to any comfortable width. The sleeves of these coats are all put into the armhole without any fullness, but they begin to broaden below the elbow and are held in at the wrist in rather close-fitting cuffs, which are designed purposely to keep the dust from filtering in and up the arm.

Large, fancy buttons adorn the fronts. Sometimes a piping of a contrasting color of leather gives a touch of smartness and individuality to a coat. There is a black one made of a shiny grade of leather, with trimmings of scarlet-varnished leather that looks fetching enough on a pretty woman, even though she is arrayed in one of those outlandish hats and veils, without which the automobilist thinks and knows she cannot travel comfortably.

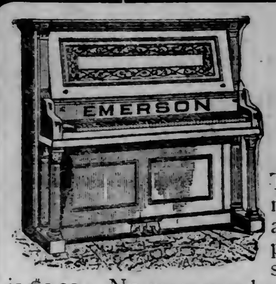
If there are skirts to these leather suits they are made the usual pedestrian length. A few models are pleated from the knees and others have applied pleated flounces. It sounds almost absurd to mention pleated leather, but there is not a whit more bulk in a costume of this kind than in any moderately heavy cloth one. The leather is pliable and far from thick, which makes it yield to various treatments. A flat lining of taffeta adds nothing to the weight of these skirts, but it makes them slip on with greater ease and serves to cover the rough inner side of the leather. Several rows of stitching make a trim finish around the bottom of such skirts, and if there is piping this is put on as a heading for a three or four-inch applied piece straight around the lower edge of the skirt.

An entire leather hood that is gathered around the face is one of the newest ideas in this department of dress, the one I saw was in soft wood brown, with a full bow of ribbon the same shade surmounting the top like the "granny" bonnets children wear, and the hood was held on securely by the aid of broad ribbon strings to tie under the chin. For warm weather this hood would be a trifle uncomfortable, but for long tours later in the season, or if one were going North, it would be just the thing.

Even the automobile enthusiast must have her vanity case when touring about. These are of leather to match the costume, if one likes, and are flat, oblong purses, with very short chains. When they open they disclose a set of pocketbooks and card cases, with a small mirror, a powder receptacle and puff. It suggests a bicyclist's kit of tools in appearance and ability to repair damage.

Buying Seconds.

Very few women know that when they think they have run across wonderful bargains in some of the shops, when, in fact, they know they are getting certain articles cheaper, than usual, because they remember the price paid apparently for the same things at other times, they are really paying all that the goods are worth, for the simple reason that the bargain lot is what manufacturers call "seconds." To all appearances the seconds look just the same as the original lot. If they happen to be underwear, gowns or hosiery the material, manufacture and style seem excellent, but the manufacturer and the buyer know that they are made out of the second choice of material and cannot be considered first class. They are originally cheaper than goods that were bought first and can be sold at something of a reduction, so that 9,900 out of 10,000 customers rejoice in the thought that they have really found a bargain, whereas they have paid liberally for what they got. Sometimes underwear that belongs to this lot of "seconds" is marked very plainly with the word on the inside of the hem or edge, but very few people ever think to look for it or would know what it means if they happened to see it. When bargain hunting it is a good plan to find out just what grade of goods you are paying for, and if that plan is followed, it will be easy to see that the instances where something is obtained for nothing are very, very rare.



MONEY SAVED

There are several ways of making money. One is by speculation, pure and simple, another by grasping opportunities, but the best way is by saving $1.00 every day, if your income is $2.00. No man ever became rich or famous without he had a financial foundation to begin on. We believe that it is better business to sell a man a piano and then help him save to pay for it, than it is to sell him one and have our collection department working overtime to get the monthly payments.

HOW THE CLOCK SAVINGS BANK HELPS

You know that there is not a day passes but what each member of your family spends some money carelessly for something they do not really need. Supposing that each penny, nickel or dime had been dropped into one of our Clock Savings Banks, do you not see how quickly you would have enough to make your first payment on a piano? YOUNG BOY WANDERS

Sad Story Told By Young Lad at Police Headquarters.

Searching For Years For Parents With But Slight Clew.

If his story is true, for six long years, Charles Reid, a seventeen-year-old lad, has pursued a hopeless search for his parents, whom he has never seen. He is in Duluth today pursuing the quest, and the story he told the police this morning is a pathetic one.

Reid says he was brought up by a woman named Gunneman on a farm in Oregon. She was the first person he can remember and he lived on the farm since the time he was old enough to take note of his surroundings. The woman, he claims, was a drunken old virago, who misused him most shamefully during the time he lived under her care. Her husband was also a drunkard, and he was compelled to do much of the hard and disagreeable work about the farm. He claims he was little better than a slave until he was 11 years of age.

He made repeated attempts to get the people to tell him of his parents, and where they were, but they refused to give him any information. Finally when he was 11 years of age he became desperate at the repeated cruelties that were heaped upon him by his drunken tyrants, and ran away from the farm. He had nothing but the clothes he wore, but he started for the Pacific coast, hoping to find some clue as to the whereabouts of his parents, and determined at least to get away from the power of the farmer and his wife.

He worked his way westward suffering hardships such as only he knows of, and finally reached the coast. He toured the coast cities picking up odd jobs and supporting himself as best he could, while he ascertained all he could concerning the different families named Reid who lived in the diperent cities. He kept up courage in spite of his seemingly hopeless task, and became a confirmed wanderer.

During the six years that have elapsed since he first left the Oregon farm, he claims to have toured nearly every state west of the Mississippi river. His travels were not made in Pullman cars or even on passenger trains. Freight trains, blind baggages, the holds of steamboats, wagons, and all kinds of conveyances have been made use of by him, and he has walked many a weary mile. He was at one time robbed of hard-earned savings amounting to $93 in a lodging house in Spokane, and has witnessed many queer adventures such as fall to the lot of such a "picaroon" as they are called in San Francisco.

Reid is a very young looking lad, and appears to be scarcely fourteen years of age, although he states that he is over 17. He is very short and slender and his thin little body would appear to bear out his story concerning the hardships he endured during his early life. The police furnished him with breakfast this morning, and told him to return for the night if he was unable to earn any money during the day.

SHORT ON CURVES

Courthouse Baseball Pitchers Heavily Swatted By the Coppers.

Seven Innings Played and Coppers Quit One Ahead.

They did it! The coppers did it! With their little clubs they hammered the stuffing out of the ball yesterday afternoon in the game with the courthouse nine at baseball park, and won a fierce seven innings' pitchers' battle by the score of 15 to 14.

Ray Butchart and Dr. Patton were selected to be the victims of the coppers and serve up the benders for the court house men, while Kennell with his "foolers" was in the box for the coppers.

It was to be a battle to the finish. Both teams had been eating raw beef steak and tossing 100-pound weights about, for a month previous to the game to get into proper shape, and they were prepared to win or die when they stepped on to the field.

It was agreed by both captains not to count any man's errors until they had reached three in number, so both pitchers had perfect support. The plan had two advantages. It gave everybody a perfect fielding average and laid the whole blame for the defeat, whichever way it went, on to the pitcher. The plan was a suggestion from Capt. Resche, who had a painful experience with the ball last year. In attempting to catch a high fly ball he opened his hands and caught it on the end of his nose. Since then he has waited for it to bounce twice before fielding it.

It was a fierce battle between the pitchers—to see which was the worst. The honors fell to the courthouse men, although Kennell had hard run. When the county players knocked out seven runs in the fourth inning, it looked as if Kennell would have a clear and undisputed claim to the title of the worst pitcher in Duluth, but fate did not decree it so. The curves thrown by Butchart and Patton are unique. The two courthouse pitchers are the only ones in the country pitching that kind of balls today. In fact, they are the only pitchers who have the nerve to pitch such balls to any person but a one-armed man or a baby. The secret is to put all four curves on the ball at once, which makes it come in a straight line right over the plate. The ball should not be thrown too swift as it spoils the effect. The coppers took to these balls like ducks to water. They swatted and swatted and when the runs were counted it was found they had fifteen in six innings.

When they found that the courthouse men could induce the scorer to count only fourteen for them, the coppers seeing they were one run ahead, decided that it was a good time to quit, so they called the game off on acount of rain, after having telephoned to Forecaster Richardson and found that it was raining in New Orleans.

It was a glorious victory. The news of the great battle for the baseball supremacy of the Zenith City will go ringing down through the annals of history. It will be related to the children of future generations by the participants in the great struggle when they have reached their ban and slippered age, and sit before an open fire with their grandchildren on their knees.

The list of combatants was as follows:

Our Immigration.

Immigration at the rate of 100,000 persons per month was the record for several months during last year. This is a very large number, especially in view of our strict immigration laws, excluding those most undesirable. There is also a larger number of people every year taking Hostetter's Stomach Bitters because they are learning more of its wonderful curative powers, and are convinced that it is the best remedy to restore the appetite, steady the nerves, induce sound sleep, or to cure bloating, nausea, heartburn, distress after eating, dyspepsia, indigestion and malaria, fever and ague. Delicate women, too, have come to realize that the Bitters is the best medicine in the world to restore them to health and strength, the weakest system being able to retain it. We urge a trial.

PROVISION FOR TEMPERANCE

Department Voted Down By the Methodist Conference.

Los Angeles, May 28.—The Methodist general conference has voted down the recommendation of the committee on temperance providing for a special department of temperance work and authorizing collections for its maintenance. The report evoked much discussion on the floor but the final vote against it was decisive. The report of the missions committee was adopted with the following recommendations:

Favoring the revision by a commission of the ritual pertaining to the marriage ceremony and administration of the sacrament in the South Asia district. Referring to the commission the unification of Methodist bodies in Japan with power to act; favoring the erection, as soon as practicable, of a union theological school for all Methodist missionaries in Europe, advising that a special committee be provided for the recording of special mission gifts, but providing that churches which have not come up to the regular missions appointments shall not have their special gifts recorded.

Several of the newly elected bishops have been given their first experience as presiding officers over the general conference at last night's and today's sessions. Bishops Berry, Spellmeier Bashford and McDowell have presided in turn. The others of the new bishops will preside during some of the sessions before final adjournment.

Marquette Wants More Taxes From Minnesota Companies.

Marquette—An investigation has been started by city officials as a result of which it is hoped to place several companies, which apparently confine their operations to Minnesota, on the assessment rolls.

The concerns in question are the Lake Superior company, the Swan River Logging company, the West Missabe Land company, the Wright Land company, the Davis Land Company, the Northern Employes' Investment company, the Wells Land company and the Stone Land company. All are limited partnerships and it has recently developed have had their head offices in Marquette over a year. They carry on no business here beyond the details of the annual organization. Together they control goodly assets, said to be over $1,000,000, and it is to determine the exact amount of these and what proportion are taxable in Marquette that the present inquiry has been instituted.

Should the companies not comply with requests for the information desired, they will be put on the roll for amounts considered fair and taxes levied.

Bessemer—After a long and stormy session the board o equalization adjourned sine die. The several mines of the city stand equalized as follows, being a net reduction of $114,000 from last year: Tilden, $375,000; Palms, $27,250; Colby, $35,000; West Colby, $40,000; Joel's Pot, $6,000; Vinona, $6,000; Electric Light company, $18,000; total, $407,250.

City real estate is at the same figures as last year, the total valuation of the city, including real and personal, being $350,000 in round figures.

Taxpayers will appeal to the state tax commission for a rehearing and review of the local board's action.

Hancock—The new stamp mill of the Baltic mine has broken all past records by stamping 723 tons of rock with one head in twenty-four hours. This rock is a hard amygdaloid, and a tonnage of about 500 to 550 a day has been considered the top notch.

Marquette—Dr. J. H. Hudson, mayor of Negaunee, Mich., is lost in the dense woods near Escanaba river. All hope of finding him has been abandoned.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask I. Freimuth.

DIRECTORS TO MEET

Finnish National College Board to Convene Next Week.

Closing Exercises Friday —Finnish National Church to Meet.

The board of directors of the Finnish National college, located at Smithville, on the shores of Spirit Lake, will hold its annual meeting at the school building next Thursday, June 2. The board consists of nine members, most of whom reside at outside points.

Considerable business of importance will come up for consideration. One matter which will receive attention will be that of providing more school room to meet the growing demands made upon the college.

It is expected that plans will be made for the erection of a new building altogether, probably one handsomely constructed of stone and brick, if finances will allow.

The college was opened last January, on the third of the month, and there has been a regular attendance through the winter of thirty-two. The membership will, it is expected, be greatly increased next year. The first term has been a gratifyingly successful one in every way, and good progress has been made in all lines of study. E. V. Saarongh is principal of the institution, and Miss Ina Williamson is first assistant. Some of the pupils attending the college are from Massachusetts and New Jersey, and others are from points almost equally as distant.

The school term ends June 1, and commencement exercises of an elaborate nature will be held on Friday, June 3. The teachers and many of the pupils will then leave for their homes for the summer, returning to Duluth next September when the fall term opens up.

The Finnish National church, with prominent ministers from outside points, will also hold its annual meeting at Smithville next week, June 3.

COMMERCIAL CLUB

Wants Fond du Lac Train Service Retired.

At its regular weekly meeting last evening the West Duluth Commercial club passed a resolution to the effect that strong efforts be made by the organization to have last summer's train service to Fond du Lac restored, and providing for a man to keep the West Duluth station open and meet the night train. A committee, consisting of M. Filiatrault, E. J. Zauft and P. H. Martin, was appointed to confer with Northern Pacific officials in regard to these matters.

The matter of circulating petitions for members of the school board was left to the discretion of the individual members. The sentiment of all the speakers seemed to be in favor of re-electing the present directors.

Several committee reports of minor importance were heard, but no action was taken on them.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES.

The Memorial day exercises in the West Duluth public schools were largely attended by parents and friends of the pupils. The Longfellow, Fairmont and Irving schools had exceptionally fine programs arranged, which passed off without a hitch.

A novel feature of the Longfellow school exercises was a song and drill by the girls of room 8. An interesting feature at the Irving was a drill by the little girls of the B fourth grade. Another pleasing feature was a drill by the fifth grade girls. An Indian club exercise by the eighth grade pupils at the Fairmont greatly pleased the audience.

CHURCH SERVICES.

At the West Duluth Baptist church, Rev. R. R. Kennan, pastor of First Free Baptist church of Minneapolis, will present the work of the Minnesota Anti-Saloon league at the morning service of the West Duluth Baptist church. The pastor will preach in the evening. Sunday school at noon. B. Y. P. U. at 7 p. m.

• • •

The pastor, Rev. E. K. Copper, will preach in the Oneota Methodist Episcopal church, corner Forty-sixth avenue west and Halifax street, at 11 a. m. and at 7:45 p. m. The morning theme will be, "Providence In American History," which is the third sermon in the series of God in history. The evening topic will be, "Lessons from the Leaves," a spring meditation. The Sunday school will meet at 10 a. m. and Epworth league at 7 o'clock, with Mrs. A. R. Merritt as leader. The choir will render special music at the services.

• • •

At the Asbury M. E. church, J. C. Hartley, the pastor, will preach at 10:30 on "Encouragements Amid Difficulties." Sunday school will meet at 11:45 and Junior league at 3 o'clock. Epworth league meets at 7:15 p. m. At 8 p. m., "God's Bountiful Care" will be the subject of the sermon.

• • •

There will be services, conducted by the pastor, Rev. O. M. Saevig, at the Norwegian Lutheran church, corner of Fifty-seventh avenue west and Wadena stret. Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, and in the evening at 7:45.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The Zomona club gave an enjoyable social dance at Schell & Wade's hall last evening.

Wanted In Superior.

"Con" Carroll, alias "Con" Sheehan, was arrested last evening by the police on the charge of being a fugitive from justice.

Carroll is alleged to have broken into a barber shop in Superior and to have stolen a number of razors and others barbers' supplies. He was arrested by the police at the request of the Superior department.

Requisition papers were secured for him. When he was arraigned in the municipal court this morning, Assistant City Attorney McKeon moved to dismiss the charge of being a fugitive from justice and the prisoner was turned over to the Superior officers.

SUCCESSOR SELECTED

Miss Ruth Roberts to Succeed Miss Culver In Gymnasium.

Miss Ruth Roberts has been chosen as successor of Miss Maud Culver as director of the physical department of the Young Women's Christian association. Miss Culver will not return next year, and when the classes open in October Miss Roberts will be in charge. Miss Roberts will graduate this June from the New York normal school of physical education and comes to the local association highly recommended. The local gymnasium has been most successful and has become almost self-supporting. This accomplishment is considered remarkable, as five years is the time usually required to make this department self-supporting, and the local association is but two years old.

Summer Term

Will begin at the Duluth Business University on Tuesday, May 31. Location, 105 West Superior street.

A. W. Taussig, 0, vs. Carl Luster, 6.

G. G. Hartley, 0, vs. R. P. Dowse, 6.

The matches were pretty well played out during the week, there being only three left to be wound up by 5 o'clock this afternoon. It was believed that none of these would forfeit their chance for a second round, as interest in the contest is quite keen.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Duluth and Chicago the Only Grain Markets Open.

Flax Trading Was Dull and July Option Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 28.—Duluth and Chicago were the only markets open today and business was very light. The range of fluctuations was very narrow and in Chicago the July option closed ½c lower, while in Duluth it lost ¼c. There was little of interest in the news. The weather continues favorable. Liverpool closed unchanged and Paris ⅛@1¾c lower. In the Duluth market the principal interest was in the vessel situation. Boats were offered shippers for loading next week but there was much uncertainty as to the rate. The boats were said to be taking four or five cents while shippers claimed they could get them for three cents if they wanted to. One offer of 2½c was made.

Car receipts at Duluth were 8, against 6 a year ago, at Minneapolis, 112, against 164 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 120, against 170 last year. Chicago received 25, against 10 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 90,611 bus., last year, holiday. Shipments, 210,-325 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 5,633 bus.

Corn in Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅜c lower. July oats closed ¼-⅜c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 613,000 bus. Shipments, 756,000bus. Clearances were 500 bus.

Trading in the Duluth market was very dull. The July option opened ⅝c lower at 93c, advanced to 93⅜c at 9:55 and reacted to 93¼c, closing there, a loss of ¼c for the day. The September option closed ⅛c lower at 81½c.

Cash offerings were not large, and wide range of the premium continues.

Flax was dull. July closed ¼c higher at $1.06¾, and other options were unchanged.

Oats and rye fell lo.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard, 95¾c; No. 1 northern, 94⅝c; No. 2 northern, 91⅞c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 96¾c; No. 1 northern, 95¼c; No. 2 northern, 92¾c; on track, No. 1 northern, 93¾@94¼c; No. 2 northern, 90¾@91¾c. Macaroni—No. 1, 96c; No. 2, 88c. May, 94⅝c; July, 93¼c; September, 81½c. Flax—In store, $1.07; to arrive, $1.07; May, $1.06¾; July, $1.06¾; September, $1.06¾; October, $1.06¾. Oats —On track, 41c; to arrive, 41c. Rye—On track, 67c; to arrive, 67c. Cars inspected: Wheat, 35; last year, 20; oats, 2; barley, 3; flax, 8; last year, 6. Receipts: Wheat, 16,021; oats, 2206; barley, 74; flax, 37,411. Shipments: Wheat, 54,893; oats, 315,224.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Bearish Sentiment Again Pervades the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, May 28.—Sentiment in the wheat pit today was bearish, influenced by excellent weather conditions, larger receipts than expected, and easier cables. Owing to the fact that outside markets were closed the volume of trading was light. July opened ⅛c to ¾c lower at 86c to 86¼c, sold off to 85⅞@86c, and rallied to 86¼c. An advance of over a cent in the price of the May delivery, due to covering by shorts, helped the deferred futures. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago report receipts of 424 cars, against 92 cars last week and a holiday a year ago.

The market weakened later in the day on a sharp break in May. Trading continued to drag throughout the entire day being mainly of an evening up character. After selling down to 85¾@86c, July closed at 85¾c, a net loss of ⅛c.

Liberal receipts and favorable weather caused considerable commission house selling of corn, resulting in an easier tone. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 47⅛c to 47⅜c, and eased off to 47⅛@47⅜c. Local receipts were 684 cars, with 82 of contract grade.

Offerings increased during the latter part of the session and market developed considerable weakness. July declined to 46⅝c, and closed at 47c, a loss of ⅜c.

Oats were easier in sympathy with wheat and corn. Favorable weather for the growing crop and for the movement also brought out some selling orders. The demand was very light. After opening a shade lower at 38¾c, July eased off to 38⅝c. Local receipts were 172 cars.

In spite of a small run of hogs and a firm market at the yards, provisions were easier on profit taking by outsiders. The demand was mainly from shorts. July pork opened 2½c lower at $11.30, and declined to $11.25. Lard was off 2½@2½c at $6.45@6.47½. Ribs were unchanged at $6.55.

Close: Wheat—May, 90⅞c; July, 85⅞c; old, 87c; September, 80⅝c; old, 82¼c. Corn —May, 46⅝c; July, 47c; September, 47¼-⅜c; December, 42c; May (1905), 41⅝c. Oats—May, 41¼c; July, 38½c; September, 30⅝c. Pork—May, $11.20; July, $11.27. Lard—May, $6.40; July, $6.47½; September, $6.67½; January, $6.00. Ribs—May, $6.50; July, $6.57½; September, $6.72½@6.75. Rye—May, 72c; July, 66c; September, 62c. Flax—May, $1.06¾; S. W., $1.09; May, $1.02; July, $1.02½; September, $1.06. Timothy—May, $3.05; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $10.75. Barley—Cash, 36@57c. Wheat—No. 1 red, $1.06@1.08; 3 red, $1.02@1.07; 2 hard, 93@93½c; 3 hard, 89c; $1.02@1.07; 2 hard, 93@93½c; 3 hard, 89@95c; 1 northern, 92c@$1.00; 2 northern, 90@95c; 3 spring, 87@97c. Oats—2, 39c; 3, 38c. Corn—2, 47½@48c; 3, 47c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat was dull, featureless and lower. The closed markets at outside points and a holiday Monday further curtailed the limited trade. Operations were mostly in the way of evening up yesterday's closing bulge was lost at the opening, sentiment being influenced to some extent by small deliveries on contract last night and this morning. English cables were indifferent. Receipts were a little more liberal at points reporting. The demand is quiet. There were a few complaints of poor seed and lack of rain from sections in North Dakota. The poor prospects through the Ohio valley are confirmed by the report of one of the large harvesting machine companies. World's shipments estimated at ten million for Monday. Estimated receipts for Monday, 10 cars.

Corn—Receipts today were nearly 700 cars and considerably over yesterday's large estimate which the trade doubted. The cash market was unable to absorb them all even at the decline. The market ruled weak, not being able to withstand the burden of bear news. We see nothing on which to bull the market. Light receipts and poor demand are not usually taken as "bull" arguments. Estimated Monday, 445 cars.

Oats were very dull and draggy. Estimated Monday, 125 cars.

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: We attribute the firmness of the past two days to the covering of the Kaufman line. When this is finished why should not the market show some weakness? Next Tuesday is the last day there will be any incentive to make purchases of cash wheat to deliver on May sales that have been made anywhere from 75 cents to $1.10. There is a fair domestic stock of flour. Why, after that day, should not the cash wheat markets all seek a lower level, deprived of the incentive of May example and cleared up of its influences? There is a tendency toward increased wheat receipts. Why won't every cash buyer, every miller, every shipper exercise the hand to mouth policy strictly and curtail anything but absolute necessities and not go to great lengths to patch out until he sees how the new wheat situation develops? Why should not the bearishness of Snow, of the Modern Miller, of the Price Current, based on improved winter wheat prospects, have a sentimental effect and in connection with the bearish foreign situation, encourage enough selling on this dull market to cause temporary lower prices? In fact, why won't these things spoken of, taken together with the low ebb of speculation, work to give us nearly a normal market at once, and June break? Prices will be higher on the next crop without a question, and September wheat is about right, but why is there not room for a decline in cash wheat which will act adversely on July? Why is not the ranges of such a decline too great to risk buying the July wheat temporarily? Why is it not a good speculative proposition to look for some lower prices for all of the near futures and stick to September where any decline could be but of a few cents, and where is there on the outside? Why will not rigid economics be practiced with great companies, laying off working men by the hundred thousands and speculative offices laying off help by the hundreds. There is too little wheat and too many mouths in the country to make any great decline in values probable, but why isn't it reasonable to expect some concession to the situation as it stands today, temporarily at least? Why?

INCREASE IN TRADE

Between the United States and Its Noncontiguous Territory.

Likely to Aggregate $100,000,000 For Full Fiscal Year.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Commerce between the United States and its noncontiguous territory shows a slight increase in the present year as compared with last year. For the full fiscal year it seems likely to aggregate $100,000,000. For the nine months ending with March, 1904, the total of merchandise is $66,781,218, and of domestic gold received from Alaska, $5,806,501, making the total $72,587,718. The total of merchandise, $66,781,218, exceeds by about $2,000,000 that for the corresponding period of last year, in which the total was $64,843,567. Of this grand total of commerce with the non-contiguous territory of the United States, shipments thereto aggregate $25,806,621 and shipments from those territories to the United States aggregate $40,974,597.

Both the shipments to the non-contiguous territory and the merchandise received from that territory show a slight increase as compared with that of last year. The total value of shipments to the noncontiguous territory in the nine months ending with March, 1904, was $25,806,621, and in the corresponding period of last year, $24,555,845. The total value of merchandise received from the noncontiguous territory in the nine months ending with March, 1904, was $40,974,597, and in the corresponding period of last year, $40,287,240. The value of the domestic gold received from Alaska in the nine months ending with March, 1904, was $5,806,501.

Taking up the commerce with each of the sections in question, tables issued by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics show, with reference to Hawaii, that the shipments to the islands in the nine months ending with March, 1904, were $9,072,680, against 8,196,499 in the corresponding months of last year; and the merchandise received from those islands $14,613,650 in value, against $14,045,496 in the corresponding months of last year. To Porto Rico the shipments were $8,360,883 in the nine months of the present fiscal year, against $9,129,844 in the corresponding months of last year; while the merchandise received from that island was $6,531,574 in valu in the nine months of the present year, against $6,944,441 in the corresponding months of the preceding year.

To the Philippines the shipments in the nine months ending with March, 1904, were $3,653,940, against $2,968,692 in the corresponding months of last year; and the merchandise received from those islands was valued at $9,863,183 in the nine months ending with March, 1904, compared with $9,235,972 in the same months of last year. To Guam and Tutulla the shipments during the nine months ending with March, 1904, were $323,570 in value, against $507 in the corresponding months of last year. To Alaska the shipments in the nine months ending with March, 1904, were $4,501,463 in value, against $4,267,276 in the corresponding months of last year; and the merchandise received from Alaska, $9,966,190 in the nine months ending with March, 1904, against $10,061,321 in the corresponding months of the preceding year. In addition to this, there was received from Alaska, as already indicated, gold produced in Alaska to the value of $5,806,501, besides over $8,000,000 of "foreign gold," by which term is meant gold from British territory adjacent, shipped to the United States through Alaska.

The trade of the noncontiguous territory in question is very largely with the United States in all cases except the Philippine islands. The exports from Hawaii to countries other than the United States in the nine months ending with March, 1904, amounted to $23,155, and the imports from countries other the United States amounted to $2,816,721, of which $940,968 was from Japan, chiefly by reason of the large Japanese population in those islands; $444,191 from the United Kingdom; $554,716 from British Australasia; $240,376 from Chile; $267,479 from Germany; $236,868 from British India, and $155,703 from Hongkong. Porto Rico, in the nine months in question, exported merchandise to the value of $8,063,994 to countries other than the United States, of which $1,440,775 was to France; $488,783 to Spain; $486,636 to Cuba, and $332,104 to Germany. The imports from countries other than the United States during the same period amounted to $1,490,810, of which $511,465 was from Spain, $289,487 from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, $203,151 from the United Kingdam, and $138,481 from France. In the case of Alaska, exports to countries other than the United States amounted to $1,296,313, of which $1,246,052 was to British territory and $41,674 to Asiatic Russia. The imports during the same period from countries other than the United States amounted to $475,872, of which practically all was from British territory.

In the case of the Philippines, the commerce is at present much more largely with countries other than the United States than is the case with any other of the noncontiguous territories of the United States. This is due in part to the custom which has long prevailed in those islands of purchasing from Spain and other European countries, and from Hongkong and China, whose proximity gives to their trade a marked advantage over that of distant countries, while the presence of a considerable Chinese population accounts in part for the large imports from China. Another case of the more rapid growth in the trade relations of the United States with the other noncontiguous territories than in that with the Philippines is doubtless found in the fact that in all other cases no customs duties are collected on merchandise coming into the United States from those territories or in the case of the Philippines a reduction of only 25 per cent has been made in the rate of duty on merchandise from those islands entering the United States, and no reduction on merchandise from the United States entering those islands, as the treaty with Spain provides that merchandise from that country shall be admitted to the Philippines on the same terms as that from the United States during a period of ten years from the exchange of ratifications of that treaty, a term which does not expire until April, 1909. The figures for the nine months ending with March, 1904, are not at hand, but for the corresponding period of 1903 exports from the Philippines to countries other than the United States amounted to $13,497,029, as compared with imports into the islands from the United States valued at $9,235,372 during the same period. Of the merchandise valued at $13,497,038 sent from the Philippines to foreign countries, $5,944,858 went to the United Kingdom, chiefly hemp; $2,673,656 to France; $1,762,543 to Hongkong; $709,632 to Japan; $660,305 to the Dutch East Indies, and $565,329 to Spain.

The imports into the Philippines from other countries than the United States during the nine months ending with March, 1903, amounted to $21,168,801, while shipments from the United States to the Philippines in that period were $2,903,692. Of this total of $21,168,801 imported from countries other than the United States, $4,169,090 was from the French East Indies, $3,727,762 from China, $1,400,128 from the British East Indies, $682,236 from Hong Kong, $525,578 from Japan, $482,122 from British Australia, $363,226 from Siam, $2,-191,533 from Spain, $4,068,889 from the United Kingdom, and $1,535,962 from Germany.

The tables which follow show the total value of merchandise received into the United States from Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippine islands, respectively, in the nine months ending with March, 1904, compared with the nine months ending with March, 1898, and the value of shipments from the United States to those islands in the same periods.

member of the executive committee in 1896; was a delegate to the Republican national convention of 1900; was elected a member of the Republican national committee of 1900; was elected to the United States senate as a Republican to succeed John I. Mitchell, and took his seat March 4, 1887; was re-elected in 1893; in 1899 was defeated for re-election by a deadlock existing throughout the session of the legislature; was appointed United States senator by the governor of Pennsylvania to fill the vacancy caused by the failure of the legislature to elect, but the appointment was not recognized by the senate; on the day of his rejection by the senate was nominated to succeed himself by the Republican caucus convention of Pennsylvania, and was re-elected United States senator Jan. 15, 1901, receiving the vote of twenty-six Republicans in the senate and that of 103 Republicans and one Democrat in the house (a majority of each body), making a total of 130 votes to 118 votes, of which last 56 votes were cast for James M. Guffey, a Democrat; 24 for John Dalzell, and 28 scattering; took his seat Jan. 17, 1901. His term of service would expire March 3, 1905.

EVELETH

Eveleth, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. William Talboys who was the guest of Mrs. F. C. Talboys last week returned to her home at Chisholm, Saturday.

Mrs. Patrick Dolan left Wednesday to visit friends at Ely.

The dance by the Eveleth base ball team at the Pastime hall Friday evening was a splendid success. Many came from the neighboring towns, and a good sum was realized.

Arnold Loken, formerly clerk at Hotel McNeil, was up from Proctor on a short visit.

Mrs. L. A. Marsell came over from Hibbing, Sunday, to be present at the christening of her little granddaughter, Mildred Elizabeth Whitman.

Albert Rohrer who is serving on the jury, came up to spend last Sunday with his family.

Mrs. A. H. Grieser is over from Chisholm.

Mrs. W. J. Moore and Mrs. Fred Lorch of Virginia, called on friends here Saturday.

Mrs. M. ●. Lasch has returned from an extended visit at Ironwood.

Those who went from here to attend the Virginia club party last Friday evening, reported an excellent time. The following went over: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Chamberlain and Miss Ada McKenzie, Dr. Paul Sieger and Miss Barett.

Nell McInnis went up to Tower Thursday to superintend placing a monument on his daughter's grave.

Mrs. F. C. Cerveny and little son have been in town several days from West Superior visiting Mr. Cerveny of Cerveny & Bradford.

Superintendents R. R. Trezona and J. H. Hearding attended a meeting of United States Steel officials Monday in Duluth to discuss the prospects for the summer and other matters pertaining to the mining and shipping of iron ore.

The Masons had a very interesting meeting Wednesday evening when three candidates took the third degree. After the routine business was done they all repaired to the McNeil hotel, where a fine banquet was served by the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church. Speeches were made by S. J. Fraser and R. A. McGonagle, of Duluth, and many local speakers. There was music also by local talent, assisted by Professor Mayo, of Virginia. Chief Black and R. T. Armstead, of Duluth, about fifteen from Hibbing, eight from Biwabik and about twelve from Virginia, in all about 128 Masons, were present. The Methodist ladies served lunch at 12:30.

F. L. Bannon, the attorney, went to Duluth Thursday on business.

The graduating class of the high school consists of Miss Clara Shapiro, Miss Mamie Murray, Miss Ella Talboys and Mary Shapiro.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church gave an ice cream social at the residence of Mrs. Williams at the Fayal Thursday evening. It was a pleasant evening and a good-sized crowd was in attendance.

Judge Vivian Prince was a Duluth visitor Wednesday. His daughter, Miss Carric Prince, left for visit in Bessemer, Mich.

A. C. Osborne has received word from Mrs. Osborne and daughter, Miss Maybert, that they will not leave for home before Aug. 1. On account of the cold weather they think it best to remain in Texas.

N. F. Marion, the conductor, went to Duluth yesterday.

STREET CAR AMENITIES.

Not an audible swear-word was uttered but I venture to guess that for a few minutes the Recording Angel was busy making long black marks opposite two women's names, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle.

One of these women occupied the inner end of a seat in an open trolley car. The other one sat immediately behind her. Presently No. 1 pulled down her curtain, but still the breeze was a little too strong for her, so she reached back and pulled down No. 2's curtain without so much as "by your leave."

When No. 2 had recovered from her surprise at having her view thus suddenly and unceremoniously shut off, she pushed her curtain up again and sat resolutely awaiting further developments.

The car stopped at the next corner and the breeze once more fluttered the back hair of the woman in front. This time there was something determined in the way she snatched the curtain down. But in the next instant it went up with a bang, and No. 2 squared herself for a prolonged tussle.

The conductor looked over at me from his place on the footboard and shut one eye.

At the next corner Woman No. 1 arose angrily and flounced from the car. When she reached the ground she turned a look on No. 2 that was manifestly intended to wither her. But No. 2 was not of the withering sort. She met the gaze of the other with a steady glare that would have frozen a mere man in his tracks.

As the car moved on these two pairs of flashing eyes were fixed on each other until No. 1 had to hustle to the sidewalk to avoid a truck.

Woman No. 2 remained on the car some fifteen minutes after that, during which time she sat bolt upright with a look of mingled anger and triumph on her face; and when she got off she looked back with an expression that seemed to indicate regret that she had not pulled a handful of hair from the other's head.

The conductor watched her until she was lost in the shopping crowd. Then he turned to me again and shut that same eye in that same way.

I wonder if he was thinking the same as I.

MARINE NEWS

CAPTAINS ARRIVE

Several Come In From Lower Lakes But Preserve Silence.

Boats Offered to Grain Shippers For Loading Next Week.

Two more lake captains reported here for duty this morning on boats of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence line, they being F. P. Houghton, of Racine, and E. D. Ballentine, of Port Huron. They came in on the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantice train this morning and registered at the St. Louis, where they took dinner in company with two other gentlemen who were thought to be lake captains.

The captains seem chary about making any statement about themselves on anyone else, and while there were a group of men who seemed to be very much interested in the presence of Capts. Houghton and Ballentine at the St. Louis today, their identity could not be learned, although it was said that most of them were lake captains, half a dozen or more.

The two captains named sailed with the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence line last year and have come to take out boats of the same line from here. They are expected to start within the next forty-eight hours.

"There are plenty of captains around here," said a man at the St. Louis, "if you only knew them when you saw them. They're all over town and it will not be long until there is something doing in lake movement."

The report that twenty captains were on their way to Duluth seems pretty well founded in view of the group that were on deck this morning.

At the offices of the Pittsburg Steamship company it was stated that none of that company's captains had reported for work.

It was reported in marine circles that four or five had reached Duluth to take boats out.

OFFERED FOR GRAIN.

Several Boats Want Cargoes —No Charters Made.

Several boats were offered to shippers of grain today for loading next week but as far as could be learned no charters were made. There is no fixed rate and the boats are skirmishing around trying to see what they can get. There was talk of five cents and four cents and shippers claimed they get boats at three cents if they wanted to take them. They expressed the opinion that the boats were trying to get them to bid for tonnage but they showed no anxiety to do that although it is understood that one did name two and a half cents as the figure at which he would place a cargo.

Shippers say that the grain for which shipment was urgent has all been placed and that there is nothing now pressing. They also assert that the boats will give no guaranty of time of sailing but simply wish to charter to load next week. They say they cannot do any business without a guaranteed time of sailing.

THE HOYT CLEARS.

The First Lake Carrier Association Boat To Go.

The first Lake Carriers' association boat to clear the Duluth-Superior harbor this season was the James H. Hoyt, of the Provident Steamship company. She departed for Buffalo at 9:30 o'clock last night with a cargo of oats from the Consolidated elevator system of Duluth. She was in command of Capt. S. R. Chamberlain, of Chicago.

The steamer D. M. Whitney, belonging to the Gilchrist fleet, yesterday loaded with wheat at the Globe elevator. The Whitney had no master, and the loading of the vessel was looked after by Capt. Allan M. Pick, of the steamer Sinola. It is reported that a non-association man will take charge of the boat.

Capt. Chamberlain, of the Hoyt, was formerly a vessel owner himself, and had a big interest in the steamer Worthington and tow, which were lost two or three years ago.

CRAINE IS SORRY

For Having Taken Out the Steamer Saxona.

Cleveland, May 28.—The following self-explanitary letter, addressed to E. C. Maytham, harbor captain of the Masters' and Pilots' union at Buffalo, from Capt. D. P. Craine, who recently took out the big steamer Saxona from Buffalo, was made public at the local headquarters here today:

"Dear Sir and Brother: I am at a loss for words to sufficiently express my regrets for my rash action in taking the steamer Saxona out of Buffalo in violation of rules of our order. Circumstances and influence bore on my mind to such an extent that I hardly realized what I was doing. I was not outside the piers before it dawned upon my mind and I wished many times since then that I was back.

"No doubt there is a bitter feeling against me, and I cannot blame any one. I am truly sorry and all I can do is to appeal to my brothers for redress. I ask you all how I can square myself to remain with the association. Deal as generously with me as you can and I truly hope I can regain your confidence, with the assurance that I will remain loyal, after my foolishness. Remember we all make mistakes and regret them when too late. Please let me know what I can do and depend upon my honor. If the matter can be fixed up satisfactorily to the harbor for both my mate and myself I will refuse to move her again until all is settled. Sincerely and fraternally yours,

"D. P. CRAINE."

VERY QUIET WEEK IN REALTY MARKET

Nothing Doing In Sale of Property During Present Week—Building Progressing at Rapid Rate Under the Favorable Weather That Has Prevailed—Statistics From Building Inspector's Office.

The local real estate market was rather inactive during the past week, in fact, it was about the quietest period so far as transactions were concerned, than has been experienced for some time.

The week started in with cold and disagreeable weather that checked a number of negotiations where people expected to look up properties, and while the latter part of the week has been fine as regards weather conditions, there has been no special hurry on the part of prospective buyers.

The realty market is a long way, however, from being a dead one, and the fact that prices hold up and are even strengthening right along bespeaks the tendency of property owners to place advancing values on their realty. Even at the better prices quoted some owners are not specially anxious to sell, holding that the prospects are good for realization on their investments in the future.

Few sales are reported for the week and and most of these are small transactions, some of which have been negotiating for a few weeks.

* * *

Improvement talk and improvement work continue the best features in Duluth realty circles, in fact, more attention is being paid by owners of vacant property to the improvement of the same, than toward finding purchasers. This is a condition that is very favorable for the growth of the city, more so in fact than any number of sales for investment. People who own unimproved real estate here and who have been paying taxes on it for some time past without any revenue in return, are making every effort to bring about a change of conditions this year. It is this tendency to put their property on a paying basis that has stimulated largely the loan business this spring and which will result in a number of new houses and flats being erected the coming summer and fall.

* * *

The fact that there has been no set back in the contract work now going on, by reason of adverse weather conditions, has enabled the local contractors to rush the work on which they are engaged. With but few exceptions it is claimed that the building work all over the city is even farther along than had been figured, after making allowances at the start for loss of time because of bad weather.

The amount of repair work and extension work that is being done to store and residence buildings over the city this spring is unusually large. Besides the new building projects, the improvements in the way of additions, new foundations, etc., will aggregate a large figure. Some single contracts for building extensions will cost several thousand dollars.

* * *

The course of the board of education in having plans for the new school buildings, to be erected this coming year, prepared by employes of the board who are claimed to have no actual experience in designing or building a house or public building, has caused no little dissatisfaction among the local architects.

Plans for the new manual training school have been submitted to the board by Mr. Hutchinson, of the manual training department, and plans for three other buildings are said to have been ordered from Mr. Larson, who is engineer in charge of the school buildings.

Some of the architects claim that if the district is to be bonded for over $100,000 for new school buildings, that it is only reasonable to expect that the money be expended on buildings designed by men who have made architecture their study, and who have had sufficient experience in building. Theory and practice, they claim, should be considered when public funds are to be expended, rather than theory alone.

Although Mr. Hutchinson's plans have been accepted by the board of education, it is understood that the commissioners will have an experienced architect work out the details of the construction, at least that was the impression gained after inquiry regarding the matter yesterday.

* * *

The fire yesterday afternoon in the Langelier block, at the corner of Tenth avenue east and Second street, is said to have discovered a new advantage for the old lead plumbing put in during earlier years of construction.

While the blaze was in progress the heat melted off the lead pipe in the bath room, and the water from the break was most effective in putting out the fire, which happened to be confined to that locality. The Langelier block is now undergoing several thousand dollars' worth of repairs and improvements. The damage done by the fire was comparatively slight.

The deed showing the transfer of the Holsten home at Woodland to W. A. McGonagle went on record this week. The consideration was given as $11,000. It is understood that Mr. McGonagle has, or will place in the market, his handsome home in the East End.

* * *

The Allen homestead at 426 East Third street has been sold by John A. Stephenson, for Mrs. Angenette, to George J. Bloedel. The consideration was $3850.

* * *

Alexander Marshall and W. E. Whipple have purchased of John H. Cameron a property on the lower side of Fifth street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth avenues East, for $3000. The property is described as lot 14, block 94, Endion division.

The building permits issued by the local inspector show that there is more building going on since the first of the year than for the same period of time in 1903. About $100,000 more has been expended in building in the five months past than for the first five months of last year.

Over 60 building permits have been issued this month, aggregating a cost of over $112,000 and there are some other permits to be issued before the close of the month that are likely to increase the aggregate cost to something over $242,000. The permit for the new Masonic temple and for a new hotel building have not yet been issued.

In May last year 72 permits were issued for buildings aggregating in cost $128,000.

April last 776 permits were issued on valuations aggregating $103,710 as compared with 41 permits and an aggregate cost of $54,655 in April 1903.

The inspector's books show less building in January and March this year, than last but this is more than made up by the building operations of the other three months.

The comparative figures of the three months are as follows:

	1903	1904
January	$114,825	$ 61,310
February	34,855	44,963
March	119,353	102,680

* * *

It is understood that Loeb Bros., who about two years ago purchased from the Norton estate the northwest corner of Superior street and Second avenue West, are contemplating the improvement of the corner another year by the erection of a four or five story handsome brick and stone store and office building. The corner is now occupied by two-story frame buildings.

S. A. RHODES' NEW FLAT BUILDING AT TWELFTH AVENUE WEST AND FIRST STREET.

The accompanying cut, showing the new modern two-story brick flat building of Sigurd A. Rhode, at Twelfth avenue west and First street, is evidence that flat construction, this summer, is not to be confined alone to the present resident localities of the city. Mr. Rhode's building, which is to be finished and ready for use by June 1, comprises four five and six-room flats, with every modern improvement.

Although built along the conventional lines of a flat building, the structure is attractive both in itself and its commanding location.

The designs were made by Architect J. J. Wangenstein.

What am I smiling at? Last week I bought six of those cheap lots in West Duluth from HOWARD, for $150, and just sold three of them for what I paid for six—and say, by the way, I think I sold them too cheap. Kinder wish I had held onto them; they are going to be worth a good deal more money in the next year or two. Yes, got the whole six for $150. perfect title, taxes and assessments all paid. Don't know; he had quite a bunch of them, but they are going fast. If you are looking for a snap and want to double your money, better buy half a dozen and get them quick. HOWARD'S office, 216 West Superior street; you will see his sign—the big red "H." Good day.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE NEW CHILDREN'S HOME

Adjoining Chester Park Is Handsome and Comfortable Structure.

It Will Be Formally Opened Friday and Saturday Next.

"A child who is an orphan is fortunate to be in Duluth," said a Duluth lady, who was being shown through the new building of the Children's Home society on Fifteenth avenue east, adjoining Chester park.

The new building is certainly one of the beautiful structures of its kind in the West. Nothing appears to have been forgotten that would add to the comfort of the children, and the convenience of the nurses and matrons in attending to their wants.

The cost of the new building and equipment was a little more than $32,000. It consists of three stories and a basement, and stands on a lot 150 feet by 150 feet, commanding a magnificent view of the city, the harbor and the lake. The building will accommodate about 100 children.

On the main floor are the dining rooms, the reception rooms, and the general living room for the children. They are all beautifully finished in Flemish oak, and the latter is fitted with a large, wide fireplace to make cheerful the long, winter evenings.

In the basement are separate playrooms for the boys and girls. They are fitted up with lockers for the toys and

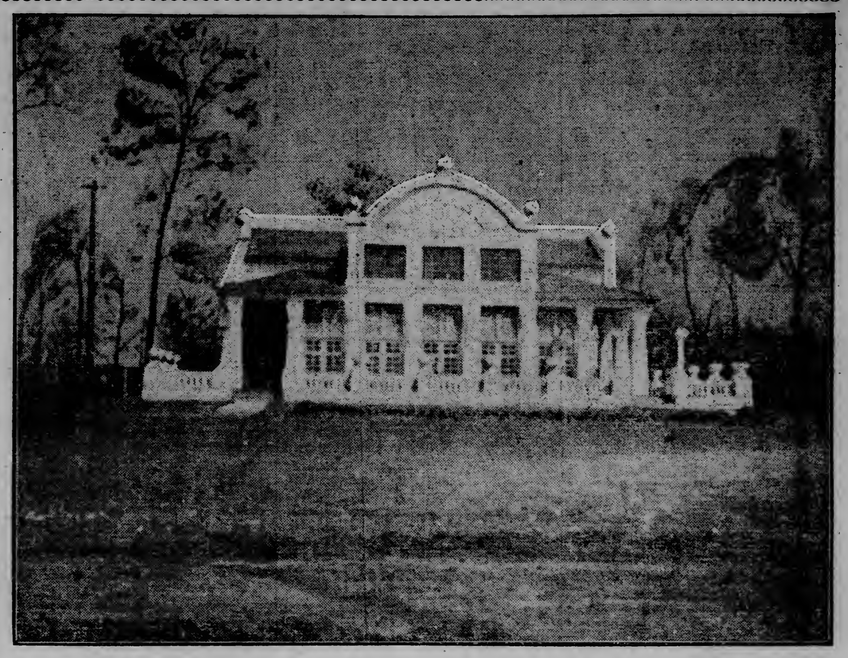
MINNESOTA STATE BUILDING IN ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION GROUNDS



St. Louis, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Residents of Minnesota who visit the World's fair will find no cause to be ashamed of the exhibits made by their native state. Minnesota is represented in every department of the exposition, and her exhibits are in a much more advanced stage than those of most of the other states. Fully 75 per cent of the displays of the North Star state in the different departments were in place at the time of the opening, while a majority of the states had only about one-third of their exhibits completely installed. At the present time Minnesota's displays are practically all completed. That in the palace of agriculture is the largest. Here J. Daniels is at work on a statue in butter designated to represent Minnesota as the "Bread and Butter State." The chief feature of the educational exhibit is a full sized model of a locomotive made by the students in the manual training department of the St. Paul Central high school. It was brought to St. Louis in pieces and put together on the exposition grounds.

A large relief map of Duluth and the surrounding country forms a unique feature of the Minnesota exhibit in the mines and mining building. The map is about fifteen feet square and shows in detail the docks, railways, blocks, streets and harbor of Duluth and the topography of the country lying adjacent to the Zenith City.

S. George Stevens is the designer and executor of this interesting piece of work which he has labelled "The Great Iron Ore Port." Mr. Stevens has also made a model of the Fayal mine at Eveleth, Minn. This mine is largest iron ore producing mine in the world. In 1903 it produced 1,919,172 tons of ore. The different pits and shafts of the mine are shown in the model, as wel as the tracks1 used for hauling the ore, the crushing plant and a street in the town on which the houses of the miners are seen in miniature.

The entire exhibit covers a floor space of 1000 square feet, and is surrounded by a wall composed of different specimens of sandstone taken from the quarries of the Kettle River Quarry company, of Minneapolis. A model of one of the ore cars used by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad and a large model of a crushing house are prominently placed.

Arranged along the walls are specimens of pipestone with various designs cut in them, the stone being taken from the quarries in Western Minnesota. In

WOMEN MADE MAD BY THE SUN WORSHIPERS

Mystic Teachings of a "Persian Prophet" Have Fatal Results.

Law Takes Him In Hand as He Is Amassing Fortune.

Chicago, May 28.—Another prophet of ancient cult brought up to date for the purpose of harvesting dollars has fallen on evil days just as the sun of prosperity was beginning to wax full and warm upon him. Like Elijah Dowie, Ottoman Zar Adusht Hanish sowed the first seeds of his propaganda in California, and finding that he had a good thing for making money out of the big Eastern cities, where people dwell more thickly and are more ready, according to Barnum, to try "new religions," new "get-rich-quick" schemes and new ways of beating old games. Like Dr. Dowie, too, Dr. Hanish threw in money getting and in the spreading of his "new" faith far beyond his wildest dreams. He was preparing to build a $5,000,000 temple in Chicago, all subscribed by his unquestioning followers, when the police swooped down upon him. And all because a woman of some prominence went mad by trying to follow his teachings. A bunch of ill-luck struck the propagandist. His record was inquired into and it was discovered that the Chicago case was far from being the first instance of women converts being attacked with hysteria or insanity through following his doctrines. Claims were even made that some women even starved themselves to death while trying to attain "perfection and burn out the earthly" in them through sun worship.

Relatives and friends of the victim descended vigorously and vehemently on Dr. Hanish's fold and now there is the very deuce to pay in the inner tabernacle of this up-to-date sun worshipping cult, organized, floated and financed by Ottoman Zar Adusht Hanish, high priest of the Mazdaznan, purveyor of the Ga-Llama and arch-herald of the Zarvan Arkarana.

Dr. Hanish loved to salt and pepper his teachings with high-sounding names and mysterious phrases. The curious novice that knocked at his doors could only learn their meanings by buying the many learned books of the teacher, price so many dollars per volume.

San Francisco and Los Angeles have the honor of holding the greatest number of this "new" prophet's disciples on the Pacific coast. Dr. Frank N. Doud and Miss Jeanette Smith, who shepherd the flock in the Southern city, claim a membership there of over 5000 devoted adherents. San Francisco has about as many. They are not so well organized, but their faith in the man of big words and vague promises is just as strong. Chicago is the headquarters of the cult. Salt Lake City and Denver also have settlements. In all the prophet is supposed to have at least 50,000 followers in this country. All the zealous are very very much excited over the bludgeoning their leader is getting in Chicago at the hands of the law.

Miss Eloise Reusse, who went mad and died this week in Chicago through following the teachings, is not the first one who has perished, suffered through practicing the new faith, but she is the first one whose relatives and friends had courage and funds enough to attack Dr. Hanish and drag him before the courts. Her case is a very pathetic one. She became so wild in her ravings that the attendants were obliged to strap her to a bed. The doctors declared her mind was completely gone and she soon died from exhaustion. The unfortunate woman is said to be an intimate friend of the Baron de Brissac of Paris, Senator and Mrs. Depew and other prominent people in the East and abroad. Her friends wonder how she was ever caught in Dr. Hanish's net.

Like Elijah Dowie, Zar Adusht Hanish became mixed up in "new" religions very early in life and quickly appreciated the money to be made from fervent converts. He was born in Persia, he says, of Russian and German parentage, and when eight years of age was placed in the monastery of a Persian sun worshipers' sect called Mazdaz (pronounced Mazdah). In the monastery he was taught all the strange doctrines and mysterious rites.

When he reached manhood he left the monastery and journeyed from land to land preaching a creed which embodies part of the original Mazdez philosophy, but is largely made up of doctrines and tenets which originated in Hanish's fertile brain.

He practiced palmistry, phrenology, astrology and a lot of similar things while spreading his doctrines and making his way. He worked the cities along the coast, went to Salt Lake, Denver and finally landed in Chicago some five years ago.

Here in course of time the number of his followers and his bank account grew till he had over 50,000 of the one and several millions in dollars. He erected a magnificent stone front palace overlooking Lake Michigan, near Thirty-first street. There he lived amid all the luxury and pomp of an Oriental potentate, while 11,000 "sun worshippers" in Chicago call him "Father." He claims to be 61 years old, although he looks to be about 30.

Unlike Dowie, Hanish has stored away his gleanings where no one can get tab on it. Nothing is in sight except the fine mansion in which he lives and the present temple where his followers gather. How much he has stored away no one knows but his co-religionists declare he has "all the money he wants." Most of this has been contributed by his devotees for a "temple dowry." Hanish admitted when the storm broke that he was about to erect a $5,000,000 temple, so some idea may be formed as to the extent of this dowry. Besides this amount there is also a fund set aside for paying the running expenses of the sun-worshippers.

One form of their salvation is the "Health and Breath Culture," divided into twelve lessons on breathing, which, if closely observed by the student, are said to insure perfect health, long life and the ability to fast for at least a month at a time. Hanish himself claims to fast thirty or forty days at a time, and in the course of a year to have fasted at least six months. He and his followers believe man to have twelve senses, seven of which—seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, touching, feeling and intuition—are commonly known. The five intermediate senses—transmission of ideas, telepathy, spiritual discernment, clear sight and realization—are less known.

"These," says Hanish, "are the higher senses, and few people have them developed. Instead of their being extraordinary or superficial gifts, they in reality are the cropping out of senses yet little understood."

Worshipping the sun, the center of life principles, fasting and a secret doctrine are the three pegs on which the "new" religion of Hanish stands. What the secret doctrine is no one but an adept of the inner temple may know. This part of the doctrine is guarded most zealously. According to the Hanish theory when man lives close to nature he lives more in harmony with God. Live as close to nature as possible, as natural as possible, and health of mind and body is better. One must fast, one must drink in the Ga-Llama, the centralizing life principle, if he would be as nearly perfect as possible. What is Ga-Llama? Ga-Llama, the inspiration of sages, adepts, philosophers and sages. Ga-Llama, the invigorator, inspirer, promulgator, restorer, redeemer. Ga-Llama, which opens the portals of the mind and sends forth the light of wisdom which gives eternal life.

Some of the sun worshippers claim to have fasted forty days. To fast for a week is quite common among them. Many of them live on a single meal a day. They do this to overcome the weakness of the flesh and to court better health. If possible they never eat meat. They claim it is unclean. Fruit, nuts and vegetables constitute their chief diet.

According to the doctors of the Chicago board of health it is this fasting in conjunction with the fervid teachings of the prophet which has played havoc with the minds of his hysterically inclined followers.

Some of the zealots argue that Hanish is superior as a teacher to Christ. They make all sorts of wild and foolish claims regarding his mysterious occult powers. The higher flights of his teachings are set forth in a series of books, most of which falls to Hanish. Here is what the initiate strives for.

And now the friends of Marian Bevis, Mrs. George Gilbert, Miss Reusse and other young women who have died or gone insane in following the teachings of the "Perfect Man," as his zealots are taught to call him, are trying their level best to break up this sun worshipping cult and end the business of Ottoman Zar Adusht Hanish.

A water wagon it is called in the shops, but is not ordinary water that is meant, but carbonated waters and the numerous bottled beverages that serve to quench thirst and make life more endurable in sultry summer days, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The contrivance so named is a willowware barrel mounted on wheels and provided with handles so it may easily be moved about to any desired place on the porch or lawn. The barrel is fitted with racks for bottles and glasses and represents one of the season's novelties in the way of adjuncts for the country home by the shore or inland.

SWEDISH MEMORIAL EXERCISES

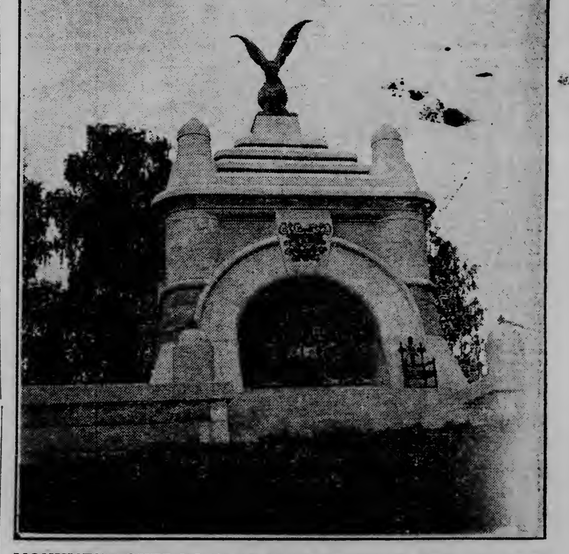
To Be Held In Baptist Church on Monday Evening.

Reading of Six Prize Compositions on Decoration Day.

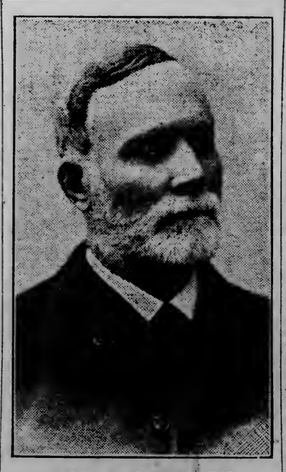
Sunday school teachers of the First Baptist church, Nineteenth avenue west, have arranged something new in the way of Memorial day exercises. A program will be rendered at the church in the evening, beginning at 8 o'clock, and the leading feature will be the reading of six prize compositions on Decoration day, and why it is observed. The articles will, it is expected, deal particularly with the heroism of the Swedes who played a prominent part in the war of the rebellion, assisting the North in winning out in the great struggle.

When the matter of the prize compositions was broached three months ago it met with instant favor with teachers and pupils alike, and details were at once arranged, so that plenty of time might be given for the careful preparation of manuscript by pupils of the Sunday school. About fifteen have signified their intention of entering the contest.

The two Swedish civil war heroes who will be given the most prominent mention in the essays and on the program will be John Ericsson, the inventor of that mighty little war boat, the Monitor, and Colonel K. O. Broady. He was given a rapid promotion because of his bravery and daring, and at the end of the war had a colonel's straps. The colonel is still living, and has for several years been rector of the theological Bethel seminary in Stockholm, Sweden.



MONUMENT OVER BODY OF JOHN ERICSSON, ONE OF SWEDEN'S HEROES IN THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR.



CAPT. K. O. BROADY, Native of Sweden Who Became Officer In Civil War.

Among those who will compete for the six prizes offered are: Theresia Anderson, John Arthur Johnson, Selma Strom, Gertrude Fredin, Stella Johnson, David Wick, Naomie Lindal, Jennie Nelson, May Johnson, Hanna Nelson, Hilda Paulson, Wahlborg Newlander, William Jackson, Philipp Anderson and Welna Fredrickson. The judges who will award the prizes are Miss Minnie Milne, principal of the Monroe school, Rev. J. W. Longbridge and Prof. K. A. Ostergren.

The evening's program will be as follows:

Piano solo—Signe Rosen.
"America"—Audience and choir.
Scripture and invocation—John W. Johnson.
"Star Spangled Banner"—Choir.
Address—Rev. J. W. Longbridge.
Piano duet—Welna Fredrickson and Olga Hagburg.
Song, "Just Before the Battle Mother"—Hann Nilson.
Address—Rev. A. Edstam.
Reading of compositions by Sunday school pupils.
Presenting prizes to the winners.
"Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean"—choir.
Benediction—Rev. J. W. Longbride.

SOCIETY

Tuesday afternoon the Ladies' Literature class enetrtained at the most delightful social event of the week. The affair was a reception in honor of Edward Howard Griggs, who lectured here under the auspices of the class. The reception was given at the home of Mrs. H. C. Marshall, on East Fifth street, and though the weather was most disagreeable a large number of the society women who had listened with pleasure to his lectures called during the afternoon.

Receiving were Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. C. A. d'Autremont, president of the Literature class and Mr. Griggs. Members of the class assisted throughout the rooms. In the dining room, which was prettily decorated, Mrs. Frank Adams presided and Miss Wilhelmin Rupley, Miss Helen Marble, Miss Antoinette d'Autremont and Miss Frnaces Woodbridge assisted. A generous sprinkling of men was noticed throughout the rooms and the affair was most delightful.

June promises to be a busy month in social affairs in Duluth. Several weddings are planned for this month that are of interest to many people, and with the school exercises and the return of many of the young people from college, the month will be filled with many formal affairs for the brides and informal affairs for the school people. The country surrounding Duluth makes possible a day in the woods and country one of the summer's delights, and with pastimes on the lake and bay a deal of the entertaining is of an informal nature. The golf club house will be the scene of much entertaining during the summer. The links have been very popular this past week and the enthusiasts are deep in the game. On Monday the spring championship trials will begin, and much interest is excited in the event.

* * *

Otto C. Hartman left for Boston on Tuesday, where he will be married on Wednesday next to Miss Mary A. F. Dacey. The marriage will take place at a nuptial mass, to be celebrated by Rev. Tuesday evening of next week the gymnasium classes of the Young Woman's Christian association will come together in the gymnasium for one last grand frolic before the closing of the department until fall. The entertainment is in charge of the members of the different classes and a deal of good natured rivalry among the classe assure an evening of clever, thrilling and amusing stunts.

The plans are to be kept a comparative secret but a few details have leaked out and the members of the classes are besieged for invitations. Any who have been enrolled in the classes during the year are invited to the entertainment. As there are over two hundred enrolled, the capacity of the hall will allow but few others to attend. This meeting of the class will be the last time that Miss Maud Culver, who has been director of the department for the past two years will meet with the members. Miss Culver before taking up the work here had studied extensively in New York and the work under her direction has been most successful and the department has been popular among the members and the work greatly enjoyed by those attending. This last year the attendance has increased finely and the work carried on has been endorsed by many of the prominent physicians of the city.

* * *

Much interest has been aroused among the children of the city by the distribution of garden and flower seeds at the public library. The seeds were secured by the Women's Council through the courtesy of Congressman J. Adam Bede, and it is the object of the Council to awaken a desire for the beautifying of the city by means of attractive home gardens. To this end a floral exhibit will be held in the library in the fall and prizes will be awarded for the most attractive exhibits.

* * *

The library has received some interesting additions in the past few weeks, numbering about three hundred volumes. Among these are several attractive books on Russia, Japan and the far East, duplicate copies of recent fiction and a complete set of the English Cornhill Magazine.

At the last meeting of the West Duluth Women's Christian Temperance union a delightful reception was held in honor of the members who have acted as president during the past thirteen years of its existence. The affair was held at the home of Mrs. N. C. Hendricks, of West Duluth and the guests of honor were Mrs. E. J. Ellison, Mrs. C. R. Keyes and Mrs. G. Smith. Mrs. Huntoon was leader for the afternoon and read letters from state officers and members out of the city and short talks were given by the guests of honor. Mrs. Ellison, first president of the union, came from her home at Minneapolis to attend the affair and her talk was much enjoyed by the early members who remember with gratitude her work among them in the early days of the union.

This union is the outcome of an organization begun by Mrs. Ellen J. Foster and Mrs. H. A. Hobart. In 1880 the Duluth union was auxiliary to the Minneapolis Bethany Home. The members collected for and contributed to what was then the only institution in the state for the destitute and forsaken, and from the first secretary, Mrs. S. B. Stearns, came the appeal for the founding of a temporary home for women and children. The work of the union was careful and consistent, and it has been productive of great good.

AMONG THE PLANTS

What a mess the printers made of our letter last week. Perhaps it is a good thing for them that they are used to working in a warm place. Coleus they called Solen and made lots of errors which we wash our hands of. Coleus, of which so many design beds are made farther south, will grow nicely here if not planted out too early; June 5th to June 15th is soon enough, for they are very tender, and get a tired look after a cold night, and the spring is late this year, about the latest I have ever seen in Duluth, and it is a very dry spring too. It seems as though we have not had a real good rain since last November. This is the kind of season one needs to thoroughly firm the soil with the feet over the young seeds sown in the vegetable garden, and it would be good also to press with ball of the foot the soil close up to the newly planted cabbage plants, etc.; no danger of getting it too hard when the soil is dry.

Speaking of cabbage, which do well in Duluth, I find there is going to be more of them grown this year than usual. That is as it should be. Our people here should supply our own market, for you would be surprised at the immense amount of money sent away for this one product.

Oftimes an order comes in about this time for a lot of early and late cabbage plants together, but they cannot be grown that way. An early cabbage will get ripe in about eight weeks, a late variety in three months. If planted in May they would all be spoilt before fall, for once they are ripe, or as hard as they will grow, they burst in the effort to let the seed stem come through. So to have good winter cabbage they must not be planted until after June 20.

In the home garden do not flood the newly set plants with water. A heavy flooding rain generally kills a large percentage of newly set plants on heavy soils.

This coming week will be the great planting week for beds and window boxes. So get everything ready and do everything well. Well begun is half done, and after you have planted be careful in the watering. Don't dry nor drown, and watch the weather report in the papers. Mr. Richardson always tells us when a frost may be expected, and even though it does not come it will do no harm to cover things on cold nights. Better be safe than sorry. ED. C. LINDSAY.

L'ANGE ET LE DIABLE

By Annie Brashear.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

As she entered her private parlor at the hotel, she carelessly threw aside the wrap which rested like mist upon the peach-bloom of her gown, and sank wearily upon the divan drawn before the dying fire.

A touch of the electric button would have summoned her maid, but she felt grateful for the rare luxury of being even for a few moments alone. She raised her eyes to the mirror above the mantle and noted in every detail the beauty which it reflected.

At the reception from which she had just returned, where she had been introduced into her husband's circle, she had easily won the laurels of a pronounced success. The charm of her winning grace and sparkling wit completed the triumph which her beauty assured.

The pride of her fastidious husband had been gratified, and she knew that she had but to reach forth her hand to grasp the reins of a social leader.

But now the light had faded from her eyes and unutterable wearinesss and bitter rebellion sat upon her face. She thought of her great mistake—the marriage which had become a bitter mockery. She wore jewels which a queen might envy, but she felt that they glittered above the brow of a slave. She wore chains of steel wreathed with flowers, and found in her husband a master whom she hated. She clenched her hands in rage as she recalled the time when he had wooed her—when his happiness depended upon her smile. How easy had seemed the exercise of power which a wife could exert, but lo! the lover was the tyrant now, whom she feared even as she hated. She heard his step at the door and arose to leave the room, but with a gesture he detained her. He sat upon the divan, drew her to his side, pressed her head upon his bosom and encircled her waist with his arm. He saw in the mirror the fear and loathing which she deemed hidden from his eyes.

"My sweet wife, you were the most beautiful in all that throng of lovely women. I am tonight, perhaps, the most envied man in New Orleans. Its social world has seen you, and is at your feet. Although it is late I have detained you to tell a little story which I think you will find interesting. I have long intended to tell it, but not until I had brought you to the south, where the tragedy occurred.

"Upon a fine estate, not far from this city, one of the oldest families of Louisiana lived from generation to generation. About 30 years ago the owner of this grand estate married a beautiful French girl. The marriage was a shock and a surprise, for running through her exquisitely sweet and gentle nature was the idiosyncrasy which in other members of her family had been mania, melancholia and insanity. Daring fate, defying heredity, this reckless southern gentleman would have bartered his soul to win the woman whom he loved. For four years she made his home a heaven on earth. Then fell the blow which friends had predicted. With the birth of her twin boys she became a raving maniac. But Providence, which Christians call God's mercy, removed her from earth before the calamity was generally known.

"The husband did not long survive her and the children passed into the custody of a guardian. Personally, they were almost exactly alike, and even the voice and carriage of one was duplicated in the other. Almost from their cradle their old nurse called one 'L'ange' and the other 'Le Diable.' The names followed them through childhood and youth as nicknames sometimes will, followed them through college and remained the names by which they were distinguished by intimate friends.

"In the reckless, Satanic nature of one bloomed a perfect, stainless flower; his idolatrous love for his noble gracious brother, and for that brother's sake he kept his own life clean and pure.

"At last, in one of their rare separations, L'ange met the woman of his fate. From the time of their first meeting he loved her and wooed her as passionately as Claud Melnotte wooed Pauline, laying a knightly chivalry, a princely fortune, a man's great love at her feet. His life, his soul became as transparent as glass for her inspection. Only one secret was withheld—that one intended as a glorious surprise—that he had a twin brother, another self, to whom she would be scarcely less dear. The few days of engagement were as a foretaste of heaven, before he hurried as the south to prepare for the coming of his bride.

At this time a commercial panic swept over the south; many were ruined, and among those who had been made bankrupt by

MIRIAN SPIER.

For once in the history of things sartorial Dame Fashion, and Feminine Caprice and reliable old Common Sense—that elderly dame whom we so often affect to despise but whom secretly we reverence—have joined hands and are executing a dance of triumph around the short skirt. Each one claims that to her belongs the honor of its inception; but the truth is that to none of them individually is credit due, for it has taken the combined efforts of all three to achieve its acceptance. Fashion is said to be fickle, but her fashionable followers are even more so; yet when they all unite in adopting any fad or fancy, then it is sure of an enthusiastic acceptance.

The latest mandate relating to the short skirt is that it shall be at least two inches off the ground; and this brings into a new prominence the footwear, the shoes and to a lesser extent the hosiery that will accompany them.

For wear with the white linens and piques, as well as the more delicate tints which are coming into vogue for informal summer wear, there will be many who will use the tan shoes, preferably, though, in some of the quieter and duller tints. The very vivid yellows and chrome and ochre which even the smartest of shoemakers are showing this season are not by any means of a coloring to commend them to a quiet, refined taste. Added to which these light shoes not only increase the apparent size of the foot, but they show the slightest soil quickly, and are quite an item of expense to keep looking at all smart and well cared for.

So although the season is but yet young, there is a very apparent reaction in favor of the shiny black shoes and this is when Dame Fashion and Feminine Caprice and Common Sense join hands once more, and add the shiny black leather shoe to the short skirt, and announce that the one is the sartorial complement of the other.

And, truly, there is nothing so dainty, so flattering to any size or shape of foot as a well cut black patent or shiny leather shoe. This season the shapes are just as extravagant as are the modes, and there is simply no taste which cannot be suited in them.

In the patent is coltskin, which is far cooler, more durable and smarter than the patent leather. Every possible style is represented. For morning wear there are shoes with broad, stout handsewed soles and you can indulge any caprice on these as to heels.

The military, the Cuban, the Louis heel are all the mode. Then there is the new patent colt pump, which is a feminine imitation of a man's dress pump, with the vamp cut very low to display the pretty hosiery to advantage. The Colonial ties are seen, too; but this season they have discarded the buckle and substituted a splashing black rosebon bow which goes far to increase the apparent height and slenderness of the instep.

The strap style is sure to be a favorite with the smart dresser, and any number of straps from two to half a dozen are seen. The three and four strap shoe, however, is more usual; and these are fashioned with the flexible turned sole and a markedly high heel. The straps are either plain or fancy; and in the latter beaded, embroidered, inlaid and fancy patterns generally abound.

There is one question which agitates the feminine mind in this connection; and that is whether the hosiery shall match the gown or the shoe. Well, this is another case where "you pay your money and you take your choice." With the high shoe the stocking matches the shoe; but with the very dainty and disclosing lines of the newest summer shapes the silk stockings to match the gown is the correct thing. In the pump and the strapped slipper shoe the contrasting hose look especially well; and its sheerness and daintiness are seen to excellent advantage.

And, incidentally, in this connection 'twere as well to note that the embroidered stockings have to a large extent replaced the openwork weaves. The sheer silk stocking, and the sheerer the better, is, of course, the leading mode; but the gauze lisle is just as well liked for the warm weather wear.

The girl enthusiast is just as likely to have the emblem of her favorite college embroidered just above the instep of her silken hose; and monograms are seen on many, as well as single initials. These, however, are but passing fads which will meet with but limited acceptance in a limited circle.

Summer trunks in this year of grace will give up part of their valuable space to the endless accessories that are absolutely essential to complete the wardrobe of the summer girl. Lingerie and lace frills and dainty undersleeves bedecked with fine needlework, picturesque little shoulder wraps, veils, lace and colored, elaborate stockings and the dressy shoe are among the all-important novelties. When these fixings were in style before there were no department store counters brimming over with assortments exquisite enough to tempt the most fastidious buyer. It was before the day, too, of multitudinous, semi-annual family hegiras and all other exigencies which encumber the modern woman's year. Then there were all sorts of homely, but picturesque, terms to describe the woman who had neither patience nor skill to put an infinite number of infinitessimal stitches into the most remote corners of her wardrobe. Fortunately for today's girl, who comes without a trace of even a hereditary "love for her needle," the eternal vigilance of the manufacturer has a supply of accessories ready for her—a supply as abundant in style and design and so reasonable in price that her foremother, were she to return, would find herself out of business.

There is the cleaner, too, whose low price, to be sure, might not amaze even a shade, but who makes frivolous finery possible for very ordinary wear. A season such as he has never yet known is before him, says wiseacres. Undersleeves are many. Some of the loveliest are of French mull, embroidered most exquisitely by the French peasant. Sturdier ones are of fine linens, batiste, etc. And then there are the lace ones of many prices and sort.

Shoulder fol-de-rols occupy a large place in the fashionable woman's toilette this year. They are of all shapes, including such time-honored styles as the mantilla, dolman, shawl, fichu and the like. Chiffon, taffeta and laces are made up into some of the qualntest little garments. There is a new scarf that is not revived from the past. No dame or maid of early days would have courted "bad luck" by wearing it. It is of pale green crepe, worked at the ends with a design of peacock feathers and bordered with the eyes of the feather.

The lace collars were too popular last season and the fashion soon ceased to be smart; but, oddly enough, it has returned to us again, and now a deep lace collar is considered a most useful possession. On the veiling crepe de chine, and even lighter summer gowns, lace collars are a most favorite trimming, and on the thin, sheer, dainty little frock they are in great demand.

Fine embroidered muslin capes are also fashionable, and, while the most effective and, of course, the handsomest are the ones embroidered by hand, there are a number of excellent designs in the machine embroideries that are most satisfactory and effective. There are embroidered chiffon capes and cape collars, and, in fact, never were there seen such a variety of different materials that apparently are considered suitable for this fashion.

Round cape collars are the most fashionable, but as this shape is becoming only to the few, the collars with the points in front are considered smart also, and are so much more becoming that it is fortunate fashion has been lenient enough to allow the two shapes.

Never was there a time when such cheap veiling could be bought, and never was there a time when fashionable veiling was so expensive. The one color scheme that has taken such a hold on the popular fancy is growing apace, and now veils must needs match exactly the hat or costume; black veils with any color in hats being no longer the smartest, although in the black veiling is to be found some of the most expensive that are made. The sheer plain mesh veilings, when becoming, show to greatest advantage a good complexion, but they have a fatal disadvantage in so far that if not carefully put on, any natural wrinkles in the face are accentuated and doubled in number, while the figured and dotted veils, exaggeratedly fantastic, with chenille dots, are like becoming masks—the newest styles being of varied size arranged in half-circle bands, straight or curved in half moons, or in a stiff set pattern across the lower part of the veil, having the upper part of the mesh clear. The same patterns are all made up in colored veilings, as well as in the black and white, for, be it understood, fancy white veilings are among the latest styles, just a trifle trying to colorless skins, which may in consequence be obliged to use rouge. With blue hats the blue veil, with purple hats purple veils, and so on through the list of fashionable colors, and with the greatest care taken that the shade of color shall be exact. It may seem strange to the uninitiated and to those who care not for the more unimportant articles of dress to think that there could be any decided fashion or change of fashion (for where one is the others will surely follow) about so small a matter as that of veils. Let it be understood that veils as well as everything else have their own particular fads and fancies and changes in each. So among fashion's latest vagaries comes the law that for each gown and hat there must be a veil to match—a rule to be followed by the up-to-date dresser. This rule certainly holds good for almost every shade of suit, but whether it will apply with the hat of red or green remains to be seen. Although at first many did not care for this new fad, it is a fact that the colored veil is very popular, and there is every reason why it should last for sometime to come. Undoubtedly now colored ones are better on hats of the same shade than those of all black—that is, of course, provided the hat be of not too bright a shade.

Lace veils will be much worn this summer, and, in fact, many hats are sold with the veils draped on. If becoming, the veil is placed on the hat so as to hang well down over the brim at the back, or again it is merely allowed to fall over the hat for about two inches all round. This fashion of the soft lace ruffles is an exceedingly becoming one. Lace veils to be worn separately are seen in both black and white. It may be left to hang quite loose from the brim, or again caught up at the back, as the plain net veil is worn. Although dating from last summer, the fad for the so-called automobile veil will be still more pronounced this year. These veils are of chiffon, and are made up in all colors from the most delicate shade of pink, blue or lavender to more serviceable black and brown. Unlike most present fashions, automobile veils, though comparatively expensive to buy, can be very cheaply made at home. Two yards of double-width chiffon is required, one end of which is gathered around a loop of hat wire about five inches in diameter. The chiffon is then slit to within about one-half yard of this loop and neatly hemmed on each side of the slit. The end containing the wire loop is placed on the hat so that the opening comes at the back. The part which had been uncut goes over the face and the ends are brought around, crossed at the back and tied with a bow a little to one side or left, to hang down in front loosely, tied in one soft knot. Chiffon veils in dark colors are very good for traveling and an absolute necessity in automobiles, as they protect the head so completely from dust, but they are worn more for effect than anything else in the lighter shades. Although a decidedly warm one, this is a very attractive fad, for chiffon so near the face is at once soft and becoming, and the veil can easily be thrown up over the hat in front, the ends still being crossed at the back and allowed to fall loosely over the front of the waist.

The little accessories of dress add immeasurably to one's appearance, and dainty trifles in the way of belt and stocks are an absolute necessity. Of stocks and belts the fashionable woman cannot possess too many, and on account of the variety it is comparatively easy to choose pretty and becoming styles. The neckwear that is displayed in the shops is exceptionably attractive. The variety is not so marked in the shape as in ornamentation and workmanship, and they are all attractive, from the plain tailor modes to the dainty little confections of lace, chiffon and gauzy stuffs. It would seem that the expression "stole with tab fronts" would describe almost any of these stocks, but each differs from the other in finish. The taffeta and satin stocks, with embroidery or lace medallions as its distinctive feature, is pretty with silk, cloth and the heavier wash shirtwaists, while there is nothing quite so charming as the dainty affair of fine linen or batiste, with Mexican drawnwork as its ornamental feature. The charm of the washable added, with its trimming of braid, buttons and let-in medallions of lace embroidery, will not readily give way to the more elaborate effects in silk, for half the attraction of neckwear is its immaculateness. Madras, pique and linen are all employed for these collars and stocks, and if one is ingenious they can easily be fashioned at home.

Summer neckwear must of necessity be of light and airy nature, with no special body to it, and at the same time able to withstand the ravages of perspiration. The majority of the styles to be seen were never more serviceable or suitable. Most of these are white, or at least a very large proportion of them. The styles may be divided into two general classes—the little fancy effects and the tailored pieces. The latter are naturally more or less mannish in construction. Madras and figured mercerized fabrics generally are now in the height of style for this purpose. The greater number are of the stock order, and many are made to open in the back, fastening with the little baby pins.

The once-over style of tie is possibly as much in evidence as any other form—certainly it is more prominent than it had been for a number of years past. The Ascot tie, however, still holds its own to a certain extent, while the little butterfly bow is also in evidence. Then there is the four-in-hand—another staple form which cannot be downed. While many of the stocks are of plain construction, others are adorned with little tabs which, while they serve no actual purpose, lend a pretty effect to the piece. Gilt buttons to hold these tabs down are another feature. These are not much larger than a pin head; in fact, anything of greater proportion would spoil the effect. Pearl is sometimes substituted for the gilt, but one is as stylish as the other. A new line of fabrics in which these tailored articles are produced is canvas weaves. Many of these are in plain ecru tone, in which they show up most effectively. Others are bleached white. A modish idea is a combination of the two—ecru and white—each one getting off the other to excellent advantage. In the fancier neckwear pretty little cat-stitched collars of various descriptions are much in evidence. Indeed, there is nothing in the shops as stylish as these. They are made up in all forms from the simplest bands to the more pretentious stocks with elaborate effects in front. Fancy stitches, together with bits of lace, ribbon and embroidery, form dainty conceits. Many of the most attractive of these collars have the inevitable glint of gold as a distinctive feature. An especially pretty example is of Renaissance braid worked with gold threads. It is made with the tab in front. A spangled and beaded collar having double tabs is another novelty. The spangles are black, with the beads in opal effect, the floral designs being outlined with the spangles and beads. Collar and cuff sets of cream butcher's linen, embroidered in Bulgarian design in colored threads, are very pretty and provide a smart touch to the shirtwaist costume.

Not in a long while have there been so many different styles of belts and bodices, and never have these accessories been so generally used. There are broad bodices for the slender figure and the narrowest belts for those inclined to stoutness. Liberty satin cut bias, quite wide in front and pointed, with the material stretched in narrow folds to the back, where the short ends are fastened with a buckle or slide, makes an attractive bodice.

There is a distinct change this season in belts, which are nearly all from two to four inches wide. Some are of plain, shiny leather, in red, blue, black or white, while others are of very softly finished dull kid, which folds into the most graceful crush girdles. Belts of this sort are especially appropriate to be worn with severely tailored shirtwaist and walking skirts. There are more dressy belts of elastic, studded with jet or cut steel and fastened with a buckle. Belt buckles have almost achieved perfection in design and coloring, and some costly ones are studded with jewels. Wide crush belts are seen on gowns of every possible material and made of every possible fabric. The belts are most carefully constructed, have a seam directly in front, with bias side pieces, are boned and fitted with the greatest care. The fashion is more generally becoming to slender figures than to stout ones, and yet when one of these boned belts is carefully fitted to the figure so that a good curve at the side seams and in the back is carried out the waist looks much smaller. Belts of ribbon with sashes have three rows of cording in front and at the sides, and are in the same bodice shape and fast as carefully fitted. While a narrow belt is a necessity it is made of enough material to give the effect of soft folds pulled tight enough to indicate without too closely defining the waist line. In washable belts the styles differ somewhat radically from those prevailing last year. An excellent specimen is one design in madras, with Bulgarian design running through the center. It is ornamented with a three-prong gilt harness buckle. These wash crush belts come in all the soft materials such as are employed in the making of summer shirtwaists. This year summer belts are embroidered with wash silk in lieu of linen or cotton, as heretofore. The cotton formerly used for this purpose was not strong enough for embroidering, consequently did not hold. This season, however, experiments have been made with silk, which is not only strong, but washable. A great many pongee silk belts will be worn this summer, and champagne-colored silk is also expected to be a popular belt material.

Stockings, too, must be taken into consideration when supplying the summer outfit, for while the all-black stocking for most occasions is the correct style, there has been a tendency shown for the stocking to match the gown. Silk is above all the right material, and to wear with the dainty, dressy summer frock the more elaborate the embroidery the better. Lace insertion, outlined with rich embroidery, makes the white and light colored stockings most effective, and certainly it adds to the finish of a handsome toilet if there are stockings to match. Even with the shiny black leather slippers for dressy occasions, stockings to match the gown are thought smarter than the all-black, so that it is necessary to have stockings for each and every costume—while the embroidered and lace-trimmed stockings in all-black are to be had in an infinite variety of design.

Whole volumes could be written upon the detail of the accessories in dress, and the above are only the most important details to be considered, which, if carried out implicitly, will add materially to the tout ensemble of our fashionable summer girl.

Cleverly Draped Veiling.

With the new sailor shapes the correct veil is pinned around the brim and left to fall free of the face. The tuxedo meshes are the correct thing for the face veil and the dots in these are preferably of chenille and scattered far apart. The chiffon veil is draped over this in such a manner that it can be pulled down over the face without difficulty when required.

Over a chapeau of white crin straw, trimmed with a simple wreath of white camellias, and with the brim bent in becoming undulation over the face the tuxedo veil in white, with a pattern picked out in large chenille dots of a brownish shade, is carelessly, but carefully, pinned. The veil is one of the made pattern order, and is intended to hang free and undraped from the brim, the slight fullness being bunched in the back.

The stock is of the usual pattern, fashioned upon a mousseline featherboned foundation, and to this the cascaded jabot is attached, the center being of white plisse chiffon, and to this the plisse ruffles of lace are applied on either edge and around the pointed end.

The English eyelet embroidery, or the broderie anglaise, as the French distinguish it, is the favored pattern of the moment, and many are the designs which can be worked out in this simple but effective pattern. The collar and cuff illustrated are worked upon a fine round thread linen, with thread of the unbleached or ecrue tint, the work thus showing up to excellent advantage. This combination of white and ficelle is one that marks many of this season's novelties both in entire gowns as well as the dainty little accessories which make for so much style.

"At the Big House," by Anne Virginia Culbertson, published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis, is a collection of animal folk-tales of the South—the sort that Uncle Remus would have been glad to tell if they had been "ketched in de corners uf 'memb'ance." There are in no sense an imitation or a reproduction of his delightful yarns, but a supplement to them, the completion of the Southern lore. Joel Chandler Harris says that Miss Culbertson has got all the stories.

They are told in an inimitable negro dialect, impregnated with quaint turns, with homely wisdom and with rich and racy humor. Some are narrated by Aunt Nancy, a typical "foh-de-wah" mammy. Others, gathered from the Southern Indians, are put into the mouth of Aunt 'Phrony, who has Creek blood in her veins. The picture of the old plantation house, the songs, half weird and half comical, crooned by the old mammies, the natural history mingled with the unnatural, the tales which make the animal-folk almost human creatures with more than human intelligence—all this means many a happy half-hour for children and grown-ups alike.

E. Warde Blaisdell has made thirty-two most ludicrous illustrations for the book, of which sixteen are in color.

The story, "Why Crabs Walk Backward," is the masterpiece of the collection, a bit of primitive humor about the creation that is simply irresistible.

Madame Albanesi, the author of "Susannah and One Other," (McClure-Phillips) used her own charming Kent home as a background for part of her story. She calls her place Frognall Farm. It lies about six miles from the picturesque town of Canterbury, and is but a short drive from the English channel. It is an ancient, roomy house, about three hundred years old, standing in typical Kentish surroundings—wide-eaved barns and sheepfolds, bowery orchards and broad meadows. It was these meadows, indeed, that inspired the opening chapters of "Susannah"; for, having risen at dawn one midsummer morning, just as her heroine does, to gather mushrooms, Madame Albanesi says that, as she stood watching the sun rise, she developed the whole scheme of her story which she outlined on paper after breakfast that same day.

Robert Morse Lovett's first novel will appear next week with the Macmillan imprint and the title, "Richard Gresham." The hero's New England conscience compels him to sacrifice his natural career for the sake of earning money enough to pay back a considerable sum with which his father is supposed to have made away. The book's real theme is the development of a boy through his formative years into genuine manhood. Heretofore Mr. Lovett has been known in literature through his books written with William Vaughan Moody, erstwhile his classmate at Harvard, now his associate on the faculty of Chicago university.

"The Woman Errant," the new novel by the author of "The Garden of a Commuter's Wife," takes its title from a peculiar modern social phenomenon. Thousands of young women, perhaps college graduates, set forth into the world of business, partly or wholly from choice, to "make their way" or to earn part of their living, reckling little of the harm they work in making the struggle for existence harder for others.

The publishers of "The Homebuilders," by Karl Edwin Harriman, are just beginning to realize how widespread is the interest in the peculiar phases of life which this volume treats. From all parts of the country have come inquiries, comments and criticisms, showing the extent and intensity of the interest excited by the subject and the general concern of the American people regarding the questions upon which Mr. Harriman touches. Although it is fiction, and as such is decidedly entertaining, yet underneath the story one traces some grave problems with which we, as a nation, are at the present time confronted.

George W. Jacobs & Co. announce for publication "Historic Dress in America from 1607 to 1800, with an Introductory Chapter on Dress in the Spanish and French Settlements in Florida and Louisiana," by Elisabeth McClellan. The book is practically arranged for the use of artists, students, costumers and all interested in the above subject, whose frequent demand for authentic plates and descriptions of dress worn in the early period of American history has led to research among archives, torn records, unpublished letters, family annals and contemporary portraits, as well as among the numerous histories of the separate colonies, for accurate information on the subject. The plates have been prepared with a view to being easily copied, the lines and the cut of each garment being clearly defined.

Dodd, Mead & Co. announce for early publication "Behind the Footlights," by Mrs. Alec-Tweedie. This is an amusing book of dramatic gossip and personalia about modern stage celebrities. Mrs. Tweedie has shown great discretion in collecting for publication her large store of anecdotes and information about the stage. She had done more than merely to retail the gossip of the green room, for she has interspersed her talks with serious discussions on the hardships of the life behind the footlights. The volume is illustrated with portraits of leading actors and actresses of the day, and the whole work should prove of interest to all lovers of the stage.

The episodes of California life which Gelett Burgess and Will Irwin have chronicled in "The Picaroons" and "The Reign of Queen Isyl," have been accepted by most readers as simply characteristic of the authors' whimsical imaginations. The fact is, however, that a great many of the incidents are taken bodily from real life or were, at least, suggested by actual events. One story in "The Reign of Queen Isyl," for example, narrates the experience of an American who was married by proxy to a Chinese wife; the bride, his second, having been presented to him by Chinese merchants in token of their gratitude. This might seem absurd, but in the main trend is absolutely true, happening to the Mexican consul in San Francisco. The disappearance of a carnival queen on the eve of her coronation, upon which the main plot of "Queen Isyl" depends, really took place just about the time the book was written. Eloping couples are frequently married in tugs on the high seas, as described in the story of the "Three Mile Limit," as improbable as such a thing might seem to the Easterner.

As red as a June rose is the cover of the June Wayside Tales, just out. The popular Chicago monthly is making rapid strides successward, and the current number contains stories by Opie Read, Guy de Maupassant, Grace Duffie Boylan, the ever-popular Frank N. Stratton, ex-Congressman "Buck" Hinrichsen, and other well-known writers of clever fiction.

Ainslee's for June, as usual, carries a strong list of fiction. The complete novel, entitled "The Custodian," is by Archibald Eyre, author of "The Trifler." There are short stories by such well-known authors as Joseph C. Lincoln, Seumas MacManus, Mary B. Mullett, Owen Oliver, Anne O'Hagan, Vincent Harper, Martha McCulloch Williams and William MacLeod Raine. The essays are timely and above the average. A notable feature is "The Bachelor," by T. W. H. Crosland, author of "The Unspeakable Scot," which created such interest both in nEgland and in this country. Real poetry by William Watson, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Myrtle Reed and W. D. Nesbitt, and the customary theatrical and book departments complete the number.

The Popular Magazine for June contains the opening installment of a powerful and timely serial by E. Phillips Oppenheim's new story has as its motif an international intrigue involving the well-known Secret Defense Board of Great Britain. It is called "The Betrayal," and is so cleverly constructed that the identity of the traitor—for there is a traitor on the board—is concealed until the last chapter. For those who like rousing good mystery stories—and who does not?—we can recommend this exceedingly interesting serial.

The feature article in June issue of Suggestion (Chicago), a journal of the New Psychology for health, happiness and success, relates to the achievement of success through auto-suggestion. The editor claims that a correct mental attitude is essential to business success, and he attempts to explain the law of success.

"Something of a Spotdolph Himself," by Hayden Carruth, in the June issue of 10-Story Book, is an exquisite bit of fiction for summer reading. It abounds with interest, whilst he love theme is leavened with smiles. Other stories no less clever are titled. Axel Tegnier's, "The Pretty Rebel of the Three Moons," is an intense little drama of colonial days.

Pearson's Magazine for June has five short stories, "The Fire Within," by Samuel Merwin; "Pat Weldon, Reformer," by Edwin J. Webster; "How M. Bulford Painted for His Right Hand," "One of the Chronicles of Don Q.," by K. and Hesketh Prichard; "On the Trail of the Bomb Man," by A. W. Rolker, and the "Last Rose of Summer," by Dorothea Deakin. The fiction in this number is bright and entertaining, the special articles clever and timely, and the illustrations by some of the best known artists of the day.

There is a great deal of pleasant reading in the June Delineator. Fashion's foibles, as here set forth by pen and pencil, are well designed to delight the feminine mind, as well as to prove a delusion and a snare to the masculine. There are besides a great many very pretty ideas in dresses for children, which will be welcomed by mothers. In the literary part of the magazine, the first place is given to a graceful Japanese tale, "The Giver of Honour," by Mrs. Hugh Frazer, a sister of Marion Crawford, which is refreshing in its sweetness and purity, and is sympathetically illustrated by C. D. Weldon. Other items of fiction are two college tales, "At the Window of Paradise," by R. H. Barbour, and "Bailey's Sister," by Allan P. Ames.

Genuine, gripping readableness is the marked quality of the June McClure's. This is supplied by a lot of high grade summer fiction, covering a wide diversity of places and things, together with a number of live, vital articles, and some significant editorial comment. Ida M. Tarbell, describes the twenty years' struggle of the independent oil men for commercial life in this installment of her "History of the Standard Oil Company." It is a powerful narrative of a giant combat, of the greatest commercial war in history, and it sweeps the reader along like a romance. Miss Tarbell has now reached the time and the incidents in her history of the deepest present interest. Another article of mixed fiction, truth and satire which reduces some of the methods of high finance to their last analysis, is called "The Inoculation of Mr. Skads." In it John McAuley Palmer, a teacher in economics at West Point, keenly probes some of the sore spots in modern business in a manner highly humorous, yet drawn so close to the line of life and fact that it presents a real as well as entertaining picture.

The first instalment of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's story "The Marriage of William Ashe" opens the June number of Harper's Magazine. Two illustration by Albert Sterner present three of the new characters. A picture of a girl, Lady Kitty Bristol, is peculiarly interesting and quite original, both in color and treatment. William Ashe, son of Lord and Lady Tranmore, and just being returned to parliament the second time, appears at once in the first chapter, which has the same restrained vivacity that caught the reader's attention so promptly in the opening of "Lady Rose's Daughter." Algernon Charles Swinburne, Edmund Gosse, W. D. Howells, Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury, Maarten Maartens, Booth Tarkington, Howard Pyle, Albert Sterner, Elizabeth Shippen Green, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Alice Brown, Arthur Colton, Elizabeth Jordan, Josephine Preston Peabody, Henry Loomis Nelson are some of the other names on the Harper's Magazine contents for June.

If all the gifts the summer brings us are as brimming with profit and pleasure as are the pages of the June Smart Set, it will be a very exceptional summer indeed. The "magazine of cleverness," though it is always much more than that, shows a peculiar cleverness in adapting its monthly contents to the spirit of the season. Charming summer reading? Here it is! Forty-four signed contributions!

The novelette, "The Bonboniere," by Ethel Watts Mumford, with a setting in the outdoors of sunny France, is the sparkling and beautifully conceived story of a mysterious influence of the olden time upon the present-day American family in a French chateau. The daughter of the house and her romance win the reader's heart—and hold it.

"The Men Who Make Presidents" is the title of a timely article in Leslie's Monthly for June on political conventions past and present. The small part the people take in the nomination and selection of presidential candidates is strikingly shown, and makes interesting reading. "The Mighty Men of Russia" is another suggestive article on the men who really control affairs in Russia today—self-made men, many of them, who have had remarkable careers.

Scribner's Magazine for June contains an article of remarkable historical importance. Within a few months there has been discovered in New York City a mass of manuscript material throwing much new light on the most romantic chapter in the records of American exploration—the transcontinental expedition made by Lewis and Clark in 1803-6. These papers are in the possession of the descendants of Clark. Mrs. Julia Clark Voorhis and Miss Eleanor Glasgow Voorhis. The publishers of Scribner's Magazine are the first to be permitted by them to make a selection from the material. The four missing red notebooks of Clark were found, and also a number of letters, one of Lewis' offering Clark partnership in the enterprise; Clark's letters of acceptance, addresed both to President Jefferson and to Lewis. Lewis to Clark, expressing gratification at the latter's acceptance—all of them reproduced in this article, with extracts from the missing notebooks and original drawings made by the explorer. Mr. Reuben Gold Thwaites, the acknowledged authority on the subject, writes an interesting article accompanying and explaining these great historical finds. John Fox, Jr., who has been sent to the Orient to write exclusively about the Russo-Japanese war for Scribner's Magazine, contributes a short article called "The Trail of the Saxon," in which he gives vivid impressions of the mark made by the Saxon across this continent through the islands of the Pacific into Japan itself, where the present war seems the outcome of the contact with Western civilization. He also gives a picture of the war feeling and patriotism of the Japanese.

Queer little fellows are the pocket-gophers, and very important factors in the production of the vegetable mold of the West, according to Ernest Thompson Seton. The result of Mr. Seton's study of pocket-gophers in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Manitoba and British Columbia is presented to readers of the June Century under the title of "The Master Plowman of the West." Mr. Seton's drawings, as always add greatly to the interest and value of his sketch. Of special timeliness is Ray Stannard Baker's discussion of "The Vitality of Mormonism." Few aspects of the virile civilization of the West are today charged with deeper interest and significance for the American people, Mr. Baker shares, than the great fact of Mormonism. In his well-known terse, vivid, compelling style Mr. Baker sets forth the actual conditions found in Cache Valley, an irrigated settlement lying in both Utah and Idaho. There are characteristic illustrations by E. L. Blumenschein.

The June number of the Four-Track News opens with an article entitled "Training a Tenderfoot," by J. Torrey Connor, which is an unusual presentment of some of California's charms; "Railways in the Holy Land," by W. H. Ballou, is an interesting account of how twentieth century enterprise is penetrating that region; "On the Fulton Chain" is a description of summer life on those lakes in the Adirondacks, by N. Hudson Moore; "A Sail! A Sail!" a description of the pleasures of yachting on different American lakes, by Frank H. Taylor; "In Foreign America," by E. Louise Liddell, is a unique description of a visit to Santa Fe.

Country Life in America for June is one of the largest and most beautiful numbers of this superbly illustrated magazine. Country Life has about doubled both in size and circulation, we understand, during the last year, which shows the wisdom of a magazine for those who realy love the country. Among the leading features for June is an article on Indian woodcraft and making fire by rubbing sticks, by Ernest Thompson Seton; also "How to Sail a Small Yacht," by C. G. Davis; "The Transformation of the Bulldog," with remarkable ilustrations, by James Watson; "How to Make a Living from the Land," a fifth installment by Professor L. H. Bailey, dealing in a definite way with a pure-milk dairy; "Doors and Doorways," artistically and architecturally considered by E. C. Holtzoper, and "How to Make Fruit Trees Bear," by S. W. Fletcher. Many other articles, all superbly illustrated, deal with widely varied subjects.

Important political articles, intimate personal sketches and an explanation of a charming village life form part of the suggestive contents of the June World's Work. Judge Alton B. Parker's life as political manager, jurist and Democrat is admirably presented by M. G. Cunniff in a first hand study. Henry Norman, M. P., the well-known traveler, describes a remarkable visit to the Russian imperial treasure house in "The Gold Reserve of Russia." Another timely article is "Industrial Life in Russia" by John Calan O'Laughlin, an investigation made especially for the World's Work, which reveals surprising conditions. In "The Ideal Village," Joy Wheeler Dow with the aid of many pictures, shows how a village may be made a delight to the eye. William Allen White tells in "Fifty Years in Kansas" of an achievement in state building. "Mormon Church Influence in Politics" is interpreted by One Who Knows.

The Russo-Japanese articles in the June number of the Booklovers Magazine are a refreshing group of papers which leave the clash of arms for the more interesting and instructive study of certain underlying principles that are gradually coming to the front in the discussion of the war question. Harold Bolce's article—the fourth in his series on "The Two Pacifics," is a discussion of the hitherto underestimated ambition of Japan to be the propagator of a new Gospel of Civilization for the world. N. T. Bacon compares the resources of the two warring nations and concludes that Japan has the better staying power of the two. The brief note by Professor William Lyon Phelps on "What Russian Children are Reading," is a suggestive side-light on the literary tastes of young Russia. The "War Pictures From the Forbidden Zone" are a group of most interesting photographs, taken specially and exclusively for the Booklovers Magazine, and depict the Japanees army on the march to their victory at the Yalu river.

The Metropolitan Magazine for June is an especially seasonable number, dealing as it does with out-door subjects. It brings to its readers a taste of ante-vacation pleasure in its suggestion of the golden days of leisure in field, on mountain top, upon the sea and along the shore. Pictorially the number is a panorama of peoples and places, the illustrations showing life in its subtlest refinement and at its lowest ebb. It is a delight to the eye and a pleasant stimulant to thought and fancy. The leading story, by Anthony Hope, tells of an amusing courtship, and is written in the author's happiest vein. The characters in the story are superbly drawn, and the comedy is light, artistic and cast in the same graceful mould of fun and philosophy as Mr. Hope's famous "Dolly Dialogues."

The cheery laugh of the New York street gamin, a cool breeze from Newfoundland, and a little Parisian atmosphere from the Seine give June Outing a cosmopolitan character that will please every class of reader. "The Fisherfolk of Newfoundland," by P. T. McGrath, takes you to the blue waters of the Banks and introduces you to the picturesque people who live by the Northern sea. The hardiness and healthfulness of their primitive existence is vividly portrayed by graphic descriptions and many beautiful art photographs done in color on plate paper. The seasonableness of this article is further emphasized by the deep-sea cover, picturing two old salts in a wave-tossed dory.

One of the most absorbingly interesting true stories that has appeared in print for some time is published in the June "Success." It is entitled "The Wreck of the Edna," and is told from the pen of T. Jenkins Hains, the well-known writer of sea stories, who in this instance vividly describes the exciting experiences recently undergone by him and Mrs. Hains, and two sailors, and a little stray dog, who, encountered a terrific hurricane off the coast of Cape Hatteras. The tragic fate of one of the crew, the final rescue of the remaining members of the little band, when almost succumbing to the gnawings of hunger, are touchingly told by Mr. Hains. This issue also contains the second of the series of articles on "Diplomatic Mysteries," by Vance Thompson, in which is told the youthful romance of the crown prince of Germany and a beautiful American girl, and the reasons for the estrangement between him and the emperor.

John H. Denison opens the June Atlantic with a discussion of "The Great Delusion of our Time,"—namely, the belief that the world is organized upon the basis of pure physical force. Against the dominance of this "tooth-and-nail" doctrine Dr. Denison enters a brilliant and witty protest. Ray Morris, editor of the Railroad Gazette, treats "Trolley Competition with Railroads," analyzing the opportunities and problems of the interurban electric system in its competition with the steam railroads. Colonel Higginson in his reminiscences this month writes of "Butterflies in Poetry," with passages from his own early out-door notebooks and quotations from famous "butterfly" poems.

Leading features in Madame for June are: "The Home Life of Lady Henry Somerset," by Jessie Ackerman. The first installment of "The Flower of Andros," a new serial story by George Horton. A description of the work that is being done in training girls for home service, by W. Frank McClure. "Progress Among the Women of Iceland," by Jessie Ackerman, and a number of bright short stories, as well as the concluding chapters of the "Daughter of the Guillotine," by Arthur S. Fforde.

The featured article in the June Reader Magazine is "Labor's Dishonor," by eJan Cowgill. It is probably the most sensational story of Chicago's corrupt labor leaders that has ever appeared in print. eGorge Horton has an estimate of Theodore Roosevelt, entitled "The Human Side," with a rough-rider portrait of the president that is unique. The second of Francis Lynde's papers on railway accidents is headed "Fate and the Incompetents," while "The Present Vogue of Mr. Shaw" is handled in charming style by Archibald Henderson. It is a crowded table of contents, but "As Created," by James Whitcomb Riley, cannot be lost sight of, not only because it is in the poet's highest note of cheer, but because the verse is set in an artistic border printed in three colors. Edward W. Townsend, Harold MacGrath, Frank N. Stratton, Edgar Fawcett, Theodosia Garrison, Israel Zangwill and Clara E. Laughlin are among the other well-known contributors.

A comprehensive survey of the work accomplished by the present congress is one of the leading articles in The World Today for June, written by James R. Mann, one of the Illinois representatives. "The Postal Scandal Fiasco' is treated in sarcastic vein by Congressman Charles E. Littlefield. An eye-witness of conditions in Japan at the present time contributes an interesting account of the conduct of the "little brown people" under the exigencies o fwartime. Topics alive with interest are treated by various writers under the heads: "The Modern Steerage," "The National Bureau of Standards," of which most people know little, and "A Land Where Banana Is King." The articles in this number are profusely illustrated as is usual with this magazine. They present a strong and varied picture of the life and work of the world of the present day.

MAYOR ENDS GAMBLING.

He Is an Iowa Official With a Gun.

Captain F. Norton Goddard, District Attorney Jerome and all others interested in closing pool rooms, gambling houses and other unlawful places, can obtain some useful hints on "How To Get Rid of the Truly Undesirable," by studying the methods and the point of view of Mayor Donald Macrae of Council Bluffs, Ia., says the Brooklyn Eagle. Mayor Macrae is so appallingly unconventional and unsophisticated that he not only cherishes the delusion that laws were meant to be honestly enforced but he actually thinks it is his duty as mayor to see that they are enforced. And as the last straw this unconventional mayor goes out with his little gun and enforces the laws himself when the police fail.

Council Bluffs is a city of some 40,000 inhabitants, just across the Missouri river from Omaha, Neb. For the last fifty years the police have been ostentatiously trying to stop gambling in Council Bluffs but, as any New York policeman and perhaps some others, as well, can understand, they simply couldn't. It is just dreadful the way gamblers keep right on gambling, when hardworking policemen so earnestly desire them to be good. But they do. What the police of Council Bluffs could not do in fifty years, Mayor Macrae did in two hours. And the beauty of it is he did it so effectively the job will never have to be done over again as long as he is mayor. When a friend asked him how he wrought this miracle the ingenuous mayor said:

"Did it with a 44 Colt's—the one which I carried through the Philippines with the Fifty-first Iowa."

Literally, he did with a gun. Single handed and alone, the mayor entered a number of gambling dens one night, and in a cold, business-like tone, informed the crowd of sports present that they were under arrest and might as well come with him. In one of these dens were fourteen players—some of them known as "bad men," but one glance at Doc and his gun was enough. He marshaled the bunch, marched them down to the patrol wagon, and, after sending them off to jail, made his way to the next den, where he repeated the performance. Four places he visited and "pulled." By that time the gamblers had gotten word of his coming. They fled the city, and today there is not a single game of chance running in the city of Council Bluffs.

"Funny, but I'm not a reformer," says Macrae. "I never was one, and I wasn't elected on a reform ticket at all. But when I got into this office I found a law against gambling on the statute books."

"Enforce it," I said to the chief of police.

"Been trying to for many months," he replied. "All our raids are tipped off. We never catch anybody, and all we get is the laugh."

"All right, I'll help you," I answered.

"Then we made a number of raids—always with a bunch of police. And always the gamblers knew of our coming, and there wasn't a chip nor a card in sight.

"Then I determined that I'd get those fellows. The law said gambling must be stopped and regarliess of whether or not I thought it was wrong, I intended to stop it.

"I didn't tell any one my plans, but one night, when I left home, I just slipped my big army pistol into my pocket and went down town.

"Along toward 11 o'clock, when I thought everything must be running smoothly in the gambling dens, I started for the nearest one, which happened to be the Manhattan."

"On the night of the raid the Manhattan was not crowded as usual. There were only fourteen men in the room, including the dealers and the banker. Faro was the favorite and the game was absorbing the interest of every sport in the bunch. There were two or three regular hoboes, several young bloods of fashion, a couple of well known business men, a traveling man or two, and the balance were professional gamblers. One of the two doors of the room creaked. No one noticed the man who entered and who immediately backed up against the door at the same time drawing a big gun from his overcoat pocket.

"Boys, I guess I'll have to arrest the whole bunch of you!" came in soft tones from the newcomer.

Everybody looked up suddenly. The stranger was nearly 6 feet high, slender and with a military bearing. His hair and eyes and mustache were black and his face determined.

Several of the professional gamblers, together with the traveling men, wanted to show fight.

"Don't do it, boys," advised Macrae. "I don't want to hurt any of you, but the law must be obeyed. You are all going to jail and you might just as well come on peaceably."

Macrae's cool manner won the day, and he marched the bunch down stairs, where he asked a paserby to ring for the patrol. Fourteen gamblers were sent to the station in that bunch.

Then the mayor walked rapidly a few blocks to a second den. The door between the bar and the gambling rooms was locked.

"Open that door," said the tall dark man to the bartender.

"Who in —— do you happen to be any way," answered that individual.

"I happen to be the mayor of Council Bluffs, and if that door isn't opened quick, there's going to be trouble right here." The bartender was looking into the barrel of the big gun.

"The door's locked from the inside, but I'll take you around to another door," said the saloonist.

But the crowd within got a tip of their danger, and when Macrae entered the room, all but four had succeeded in escaping. These four were promptly arrested and sent to jail.

Two more gambling dens were visited within the next half hour, and the inmates sent to jail for safe keeping. But by that time all dens were warned that the mayor and his gun were on the warpath, and everyone closed up and the proprietors skipped for Omaha from whence they have not returned.

Macrae is not a politician. He is a physician and has paid practically no attention to political events. But he is popular; in fact, is one of the most popular young men in the city. He is only 34 years old and was elected by the largest majority ever given a Democrat in his city. His opponent in the race was considered one of the most astute politicians in western Iowa, but "Doc" simply ran away from him.

When the Spanish-American war broke out Macrae, a young physician, became sugeon to the Fifty-first Iowa troops, and with his regiment went to the Philippines. The men of whose medical welfare he had charge became very much attached to him and he was the most popular officer in the regiment. Throughout the daily and nightly skirmishes "Doc" Macrae was always where he was needed most, and when the men returned home they sang his praises throughtout all western Iowa.

So when the Democrats of a strongly Republican city were looking for a man to nominate for the mayoralty they hit on "Doc Macrae." The nominee made no promises about what he would do, didn't neglect his business during the campaign; but when election day came around he simply swamped the polls with his voters. Every man in his old regiment got out and worked and voted for him, and before 10 o'clock in the morning of election it was known that Macrae would be the next mayor of the town.

A POLITE BIRD.

The Favorite Occupation of the Albatross.

With many ornithologists the word Laysan is so intimately connected with pictures of albatrosses that the two have become inseparably associated, says the United States Fish Commission Bulletin. Surely no birds can stand out more vividly in our memory than these splendid creatures, not alone on account of their great numbers and remarkable appearance, but more, perhaps, from the unusual sharm and interest which attaches to their personalities. Their large size and striking plumage at once raise them to an exalted place among all sea birds, a position similar to that which tradition and fancy have accorded the eagle among birds of the land.

The Laysan albatross or gony is distributed all over the island, with the single exception of the beaches, which on all sides except the west are colonized by the blackfooted albatross. The flat plains surrounding the lagoon is their favorite habitat, and I found the young here in the greatest numbers. There seems scarcely a tussock of the grass which covers the reater portion of the slopes of the island, but has an ungainly young bird in its shadow ready to snap at the intruder with a show of ferocity.

"They have an inate objection to idleness, and consequently seldom stand around doing nothing, but spend much time in a curious performance, the meaning of which I am at a loss to explain. It has been called courting, but as the antics are carried on during the birds' residence of about ten months on the island, they are probably an amusement, in which the albatross indulge immoderately in lieu of other diversion. This game, or whatever one may wish to call it, may have originated in past time during the courting period, but it certainly has long since lost any significance.

"The proceeding in brief is as follows: Two albatrosses approach each other bowing profoundly and stepping rather heavily. They circle around each other nodding solemnly all the time. Next they fence a little, crossing bills and whetting them together, pecking meanwhile, and dropping stiff little bows. Suddenly one lifts its closed wings and nibbles at the feathers underneath, or, rarely, if in a hurry, merely turns its head and turks its bill under its wing. The other bird during this short performance assumes a statuesque pose and either looks mechanically from side to side or snaps its bill loudly a few times. Then the first bird bows once, and, pointing its head and beak straight upward, rises on its toes, pus out its breast and utters a prolonged nasal groan, the other bird snapping its bill loudly and rapidly at the same time.

"Sometimes both birds raise their heads in air and either one or both utter the indescribable and ridiculous bovine broan. When they have finished they begin bowing at each other again, almost always rapidly and alternately, and presently repeat the performance, the birds reversing their role in the game or not. There is no hard and fast order to these antics, but many variations occur. The majority of cases, however, follow the sequence I have indicated. Sometimes three engage in the play, one dividing its attention between two. They are always most polite, never losing their temper or offering any violence. The whole affair partakes of the nature of a snappy drill, and is more or less mechanical.

"Occasionally one will lightly pick up a twig or grass straw and present it to the other. This one does not accept the gift, however, but thereupon returns the compliment, when straws are promptly dropped and all hands begin bowing and walking about as if their very lives depended upon it. If one stands where albatrosses are reasonably abundant, he can see as many as twenty couples hard at work bowing and groaning on all sides, and paying not the slightest attention to his presence. When walking through the grassy portions of the island, I have seen white heads bobbing up and down above the green, as solitary pairs were amusing themselves away from the larger congregations of their kind. If I walked up to them they would stop and gaze in a deprecating way, and walk off, bowing still, with one eye in my direction. Having reached what they considered a respectful distance, they would fall to and resume their play.

"Should one enter a group of albatrosses which have been recently engaged in this diversion and begin to bow very low, the birds will sometimes walk around in a puzzled sort of way, bowing in return, a curious fact, which F. H. von Kittlitz recorded as early as 1834."

A Herald want ad will not always bring about a miracle; but it will usually secure for you a good servant—which is something near it.

H TOOK BOTH.

Governor John G. Brady of Alaska is visiting the World's fair.

A reporter was condoling with Governor Brady over the fact that on his arrival in St. Louis he had been knocked down by a bicycle and struck by a trolley car.

"Yes," said the governor, "to avoid the trolley I stepped in front of the bicycle. I expected one accident, but not two. I was not so piggish as John Carr, of Sitka.

"John Carr," he resumed, "is a Sitka character. He did a job of work for a shoemaker one day, and in the middle of the job the shomeaker called him indoors.

"'That is thirsty work you are doing, John,' said the shoemaker kindly. 'I am going to give you a drink. Which would you prefer, old man, a mug of ale or a tumbler of punch?'

"'I dont' wish to be troublesome,' said John; 'I'll just take the one while you're making the other.'"

SCENES ON PARK POINT

Before and After Views Showing Snow In March and Same Spot In May.

Within two months Park Point has undergone quite a transformation scene. When the heavy snow storms of last winter, accompanied by the high winds, blocked and buried from sight under huge drifts, the Park Point street railway and a number of summer homes of Duluth people, there were many who predicted that there would still be considerable snow on the point by June 1.

So far as the prediction of sonw is concerned there is quite likely to be a little snow to be found in shaded places under the pines and a few snow banks buried in sand to an extent that the sun's rays do not readily reach them, but during the interval of the past two months the snow has disappeared very rapidly and the point now shows more signs of summer than does any other part of the city.

During the winter a number of Park Point snow scenes were shown that gave some idea of the depth of snow on Minnesota Point this past season, but in the two pictures herewith shown, both taken from the same point of view, of the same locality, at an interval of two months apart, the comparison is best shown.

The snow scene was taken March 27 last. The person seen in the picture was standing on the snow-buried roof of a Park Point cottage, while the snow is seen piled to the eaves of a two-story frame house in the background, burying even a young pine tree to its lowermost branches.

The second scene shows the same buildings and trees taken May 5 last, the corner of the snow-covered cottage in the March picture, being seen in the right foreground.

The second picture presents a typical Park Point scene at this period of the season, in fact there will be little change, except the leaving out of the few hardwood trees found scattered among the pines in certain localities on the point.

THE NEW CHILDREN'S HOME

are light and airy. The playrooms are for use only in cold or rainy weather, as the building is surrounded by large grounds, and immediately adjoining it is Chester park, a paradise for children during the summer months.

On the second floor are the girls' dormitories. They are large, bright rooms with high ceilings and furnished simply but comfortably with iron cots. Each of the two rooms will accommodate about twenty-five children. Adjoining the dormitories are the locker rooms, where each girl has a separate compartment for her clothes and belongings.

A nursery for the babies is also situated on this floor. There is a separate bathroom for the little ones, fitted up with every possible convenience to aid in administering to the wants of the infants or caring for them in sickness.

On the third floor are the boys' dormitories. They are similar to those for the girls on the floor below, and have also locker rooms adjoining them.

Across the hall from the boys' dormitories is the sick ward. It consists of a suite of three or four rooms which can be completely shut off from the other part of the building. A separate toilet room and bath enables the nurses to attend ot the patients without being compelled to leave the rooms.

No building in the city is more free from danger of loss of life in case of a fire. The halls are exceptionally wide, and a broad stairway is situated at either end. In addition to the two stairways, the building is fitted with a fire escape for use in case of emergency, and it is difficult to see how even a child could could be cut off from escape.

All of the interior furnishings will be of the most substantial type, and while hansome, they will be madt with a view of standing any amount of rough usage.

From the exterior the building is a credit to the city. It is built in the Virginian colonial style of architecture, with heavy white pillars, and a broad, high verandah extending across the front. It is situated on a rise of ground facing Fifteenth avenue, just north of Fifth street, and commands a view of Chester park, the East nEd, the lake, the harbor and the Wisconsin shore.

The Children's Home society, to which is due the credit for the construction of the new building, was founded in 1883 by the late Mrs. Sarah B. Stearns. Mrs. Stearns was also the first president of the society, and until the time she left Duluth she was closely identified with the work. The first quarters were two or three small rooms on Superior street. The society soon outgrew these, however, and new quarters were secured at 1729 East Superior street.

The institution was at first only a refuge home for women, but later, when the society moved into the new quarters on East Superior street, it was run as a children's home and a hospital for women. About 1890 the two institutions were separated. The women's hospital was moved to other quarters, and the building at 1729 East Superior street was used for a children's home only.

The number of children in the home stendily increased, and about two years ago it was seen that a new building would be necessary. The officers of the society commenced to lay their plans, and to raise the money for the new structure. After the most self-sacrificing endeavors, enough money was secured to warrant them proceeding with the work, and in the autumn of 1902 the site for the new building was purchased. It was decided on as the most desirable site on account of the comparative cheapness of the land, the vicinity of Chester park, and the location so close to the open country, and yet within fifteen minutes' ride from the central part of the city.

At first it was planned to erect a building which, when equipped, would cost about $25,000, but as the work of the society grew steadily it was found that this would be insufficient, and about $7000 was added to the cost.

The old building on East Superior street is planned to accommodate only about thirty or thirty-five children, although there are over fifty in it at present. The new building can easily accommodate 100, and more rooms can be finished off in the large attic at any time. The lower part of the building is amply large enough to accommodate 150 children, and all that will be necessary to increase the capacity of the building to that number will be to finish off more dormitories in the attic.

The contract for the new building was let to George H. Lounsberry in October, 1903, and it will be ready for occupancy by June 1.

* * *

The Children's home is not, as the name would indicate, an orphans' home. The inmates of the home are there only temporarily. tI is but a temporary refuge for children whose parents are unable to provide for them at home.

Children whose mothers are dead are placed there until their fathers can find a place for them. The inmates of the home come from Duluth and the surrounding country, including the range towns. They are either adopted from the home by families living in Duluth or the vicnity, or are sent to the home for orphan children at St. Paul.

The children are not kept by charity. The sum of $6 per month is paid for their board by the people placing them in charge of the society.

The society is separate from the Humane society, although they work in conjunction with each other and the humane officer frequently sends destitute oronan children to the home.

* * *

The erection and fitting up of the new building has involved an immense amount of work, and the officers of the society have been giving practically all of their spare time for the past year or more to the task of raising the necessary funds, overseeing the work, assisting in drawing up the plans, and arranging for the furniture for the new building. The ladies are now personally conducting the house cleaning and the arranging of the furniture in the rooms, and at almost any hour of the day one or two members of the society can be found at the building to receive the loads of furniture as they are delivered, and to have them assigned to the proper rooms.

The society has disposed of its present property on East Superior street.

The credit for raising the money for the new building and for the work of overseeing its construction is largely due to the unsparing efforts of the members of the board. The list of officers and directors is as follows: Mrs. S. R. Holden, president; Mrs. M. R. Baldwin, vice president; Mrs. R. N. Marble, secretary; Mrs. B. F. Myers, assistant secretary; Mrs. C. E. Lum, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Hazen, Mrs. L. S. Loeb, Mrs. J. N. McKindley, Mrs. C. P. Craig, Mrs. J. B. Richards, Mrs. A. D. Goodman, Mrs. Victor Stearns, Mrs. R. F. Fitzgerald, Mrs. C. A. Luster, Mrs. J. H. Crowley, Mrs. W. J. Olcott, Mrs. T. H. Davis, Mrs. T. F. Cole, Mrs. J. E. Granger, Mrs. S. G. Knox, Mrs. J. G. Williams.

* * *

The home will be formally opened Friday, June 3, and on Saturday, June 4. The members of the board will be present on Friday from 2 until 10 p. m. and Saturday from 10 p. m. to 6 p. m. They are especially anxious that all who contributed to either the building or the equipment should visit the home on one of these days and see for themselves the use to which the money has been put.

RAILROAD NEWS

Chance For Lively Freight War Between Rival Combinations.

To compete with the traffic combination formed by the Anchor and Western transportation lines and the Copper Range railroad, the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic has combined with the Detroit & Cleveland Steam Navigation company. The former arrangement is for trains to take freight from Houghton for Calumet and other inland points to the disadvantage of the South Shore line, while the latter is to give the South Shore road freight at St. Ignace which orginates at Detroit, Cleveland and other lower ports, and let the South Shore distribute it. It is said the rates made are beter than the lake rates. The South Shore is said to have also made a rate on copper shipments to the Eastern seaboard, which is practically equivalent to the lake and rail rate.

Railroad Notes.

In the movement of the Rogers Brothers company from this city to St. Paul and Chicago, the Omaha has secured probably the largest single theatrical movement out of the city in the entire season, if not in all time past. The company contains in the neighborhood of 100 people and these with the scenery and baggage, which are enormous, require a complete train of about nine cars.

I. B. Arnold, assistant land commissioner of the Duluth & Iron Range road, is here from St. Paul.

President F. E. House and Purchasing Agent F. H. White went up Alger, Smith & Co.'s lumber road yesterday on a fishing trip. Mr. White is said to have caught 17 fish, or five more than the president.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, Editor. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

MISSIONARIES IN LOGGING CAMPS

Evangelistic Work of Rev. J. O. Buswell In Northern Wisconsin and Michigan—Summer School and Bible Conference at Mellen.

It is said that there are only two regular minister logging camp missionaries in the United States. Both of these men have their fields of operation near Duluth and work along very similar lines. Rev. F. Higgins, working in the forests of Northern Minnesota, is one, and the other is Rev. J. O. Buswell, expending his energies in Northern Wisconsin and Michigan. The latter also intends to extend his work into Minnesota, but up to this time has hardlly had an opportunity for doing so.

Rev. Buswell's work differs slightly from that of Rev. Higgins, in that, instead of bending his energies entirely in the direction of enlightening and helping the men actually in the logging camps, he and his assistants give some attention to the loggers' families, and the families of the sawmill men, in the little towns scattered through the lumbering region. These towns spring up almost in a day, and the majority of them are without religious influences of any nature until some person of the stamp of Rev. Higgins or Rev. Buswell puts in an appearance.

The spiritual needs of the lumber and mining regions of the Northwest are coming to be more generally realized than formerly. Rev. Buswell has organized the North Land and Bethany Missionary association, a corporation having for its object the evangelization of Northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota, to assist him in his work. The association was founded in 1898, and has since made its summer headquarters at Mellan, Ashland county, Wis., and its winter headquarters at Hurley, in Iron county, a region which, judging by reports of commercial travelers and others who have been there, is very much in need of religious influence.

Experience has shown that very little, if any, permanent good is accomplished by the desultory sort of work of those who go in simply to organize, leaving the work in the hands of wholly untrained and often non-Christian people. The North Land association believes that to do a work which will be permanent a trained Bible teacher must have an oversight of the field, and such workers are being sent out. They go without salary. In many towns it was found that there were no Christian homes, and the workers had to at first go into whatever sort of home opened. This condition gave rise to the need of workers' homes in the centers, as well as in the smaller towns. These were subsequently established and are now called Bethaney homes. The plan is to keep trained Bible teachers on every destitute field, to hold Bible classes, children's meetings, Sunday schools and evangelistic meetings—in a word, to lay a solid foundation for a church on fields that are large enough. To meet the needs in the camps there is a chaplain to each district of eight to fifteen camps. Where it is possible the chaplains try to keep track of the men after they leave camp. The Hurley headquarters are wheer new workers are trained, and from which they are later sent out. Miss Blanche Lowry is superintendent of Bethaney home and treasurer of the association.

The association a few years ago opened the North Land summer school and Bible conference, primarily for the workers of the association, at Mellen, on Lake Galilee. This summer event had developed into a chatauqua, which is annually addressed by men of national fame. The session this year, the sixth, will be from July 1 to July 31. The beauty of this little lake, surrounded almost as it is by a forest, which itself is a thing of beauty, makes this quiet spot an ideal place for a summer outing. Among the speakers of note will be Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York. Others will be: Rev. A. E. Thompson, Berea, Ky.; Rev. W. E. Wright, Kalamazoo, Mich.; President W. O. Carrier, Carroll college, Waukesha, Wis.

WAIF LEFT ON DOORSTEP

Fifty Years Ago In Indiana May Get a Fortune.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 28.—The Allegheny Department of Charities is trying to establish the parentage of a waif left with that institution fifty years ago. The search promises to develop a sensation and a contest for a division of a large estate.

Two years ago Miss Ioga Bollmar, of 505 Pine street, Indianapolis, wrote to the department for information about her mother, Kate Boisel. She had been left a waif on a doorstep April 7, 1856, at a house on Washington avenue, and sent to the Allegheny Charities department, where the waif was named Katie Boisel, in honor of Daniel Boisel, secretary of the department.

Secretary Boisel, for some reason neglected to make a record of the date the child was received into the institution, and he also failed to make a record of the date the child was sent forth into the charge of an old couple. He even neglected to name the people who took the child away. It is said that the old couple, as soon as they took charge of the girl received an income from an unknown source, and were able to educate her. While living with them the couple was murdered, and trace of Kate Boisel was lost for a time, but she continued to receive money from an unknown source. She finally married a man named Bollmar and it is one of her daughters who is now seeking to establish her parentage. The Allegheny officials allege they have worked up a very strong case, and if they had the records which Boisel should have made as secretary of the institution, they could tell who the parents of the Boisel child were. They have figured out that a large estate in Allegheny county will have to be divided if Miss Bollmar can establish her mother's parentage.

The father of the waif found on Washington avenue, is supposed to have been a man of prominence in those days. He went to the civil war, and became colonel of one of the reserve regiments.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

Entering Upon Era of Unexampled Prosperity.

Colorado Springs, Col., May 28.—Two reasons for the belief that the Cripple Creek districts, one of Colorado's most famous sections, is entering upon an era of unexampled prosperity, and the mines of the district upon a new era of development, are seen in the wonderful discoveries of new ore bodies, and in the unwatering of 250 feet additional depth in the great mines by the operation of the recently completed drainage tunnel. This tunnel is carrying off between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 gallons of water per day, drained six inches of depth over the entire district, each twenty-four hours.

For several months the production has been steadily increasing. Last month the value of the output from the Cripple Creek district was $1,850,000, the greatest output in one month for over one year. This increase in production is in part owing to the fact that the water level is being steadily lowered by the operation of the drainage tunnel, and properties which were forced to close down on account of water are one by one resuming work. This is true of many of the prospect companies as well as of the producing mines.

The Sioux Falls company report that the grade of ore from the Fluorine claim has a value of $4 to $12 per ton and as it has been roasted by nature is only requires pulverization and a few hours to treat by the cyanide treatment. They claim that they are breaking, hauling and treating the ores at a total cost of less than $2 per ton. During the past six months an average of seventy-five tons per day have been treated. In view of the fact that it is now possible to treat ore valued as low as $4 per ton by the cyanide process, thousands of acres of ore in the district should be amenable to treatment.

HEAVY HEAD, SICK HEADACHE

Nervousness, Nervous Dyspepsia and Constipation Cured With Rea Bros.' Cascarin.

Between the nervous system and the different organs of the body exists such a bond of sympathy that the latter cannot suffer without producing an evil effect upon the other. This is the reason why so many ministers, officeholders and merchants, who are great thinkers, become nervous wrecks. The organs that are especially wont to trouble the brain are the stomach and liver. If you wish to keep your mind sharp, energetic and strong, be sure to keep your digestive organs in perfect order. Sometimes, however, even in the case of a careful person, medical aid must be resorted to. Then get the best, Rea Bros.' Cascarin. Cascarin is nature's own remedy for all stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles. It is made from roots, herbs, barks, plants and berries. Cascarine clears the bowels and stomach of the undigested food stuffs which adhere to the sides and clog up the passages. It exhilarates the flow of stomach juices, pepsin and gall, thus making digestion thorough and complete. Thinkers ought never to be without Carcarin. At all leading druggists, 50 cents a bottle.

UNIQUE USE OF HIS MONEY

To Be Made By Patrick Hennessey, Bequeathed a Fortune.

New York, May 28.—Fifty-six years old, gray and sad with the weight of misfortunes and hard toil, Patrick J. Hennessey was a much congratulated man over his sudden acquisition of fortune. Hennessey was a workman at the Havemeyer sugar refinery, in Williamsburg, at $2 a day, who has suddenly come into possession of a large fortune through the death of an uncle in Australia. He has been a hard working fellow, who has labored hard to keep a motherless family from 6 in the morning until 6 in the evening. When the news of his good fortune spread through the big refinery his comrades began discussing the probable uses to which he would put his money. Later in the day they called at his home.

"Hennessey," said one, "what are ye goin' t' do with all that money when ye git it?"

"Why, sure, man," replied another, "he'll jine th' Foor Hundred an' buy an ottomobilly an' a yacht an' ride around in his coach an' foor with the best av thim, will ye not, Hennessey?"

Hennessey smiled and said:

"No, boys, you're all wrong. For years and years I've been awakened every morning by an alarm clock. At 5 o'clock it has gone off, and it said to me, 'Hennessey,' it said, 'tis 5 o'clock. Get up; 'tis me orders.' An' for years I've had to obey that order.

"When I get the money I'm going to buy six alarm clocks. They'll be set for 5 o'clock, 10 minutes past, 20 minutes past, half past, 5:40 and 5:45, and as each one goes off I'll hurl it through the window and roll over to wait for the next one.

MAGNATE MARRIED

Who Twice Faced the Gallows In Idaho.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 28.—Twice within the shadow of the gallows, then a prospector and now a mining magnate, "Diamondfield Jack" Davis now has taken unto himself a bride, according to advices received from Tonopah. Mrs. Minnie Williams, of that city, has become his wife.

Davis was convicted of the murder of a sheep herder in the Snake River region of Idaho in the latter nineties. The tragedy was the outcome of a bitter range quarrel. The state was backed by the big sheep owners of Idaho, Nevada and Utah, F. J. Hagenbarth, president of the National Live Setock association, being among those who assisted financially in the prosecution.

The Sparks-Harrel Cattle company, of which John Sparks, now governor of Nevada, was senior partner, spent thousands of dollars on the defense. Davis was in their employ at the time of the murder. The cattlemen lined up solidly behind the accused man. The jury sentenced him to be hanged. An appeal was taken, and Davis was again sentenced to die. Then came intercessions in his behalf. Finally Davis was pardoned by Governor Punt.

After Davis had been freed he located a claim in Goldfield. It was the first great mine of Goldfield, and the discovery was one of the causes of the rush to that camp.

LOOKED GOOD TO HIM.

How a Guileless Youth Escaped a Pitfall.

"While I was reading the odds down at the Benning meeting," said the guileless-looking youth with a mug of milk and a cucumber sandwich in the lunchroom, "I noted an individual of somewhat shabby mien eyeing me closely. Presently he walked up and said to me"—

"We don't care what he said," broke in the broker's clerk.

"How much did you lose on his tip?" inquired the sporty chap.

"Pray let me continue," said the guileless youth. "The seedy person gazed at me in awe and remarked:

"'Gee, but you must 'a' won a lot then.'

"Inasmuch as I had lost on the previous race, this repartee did not strike me favorably, and I so informed him. He was abject in his apologies.

"'I thought you were down here with the Thomas string,' he said. 'If you're not the man, then you're his living image.'"

"Nice beginning," said the broker's clerk.

"Time to take the next boat for Coney," ventured the sporty chap.

"However," continued the guileless youth. "I told the seedy tout that his story strangely interested me, whereupon he clutched me by the sleeve and murmured hoarsely:

"'Why, there's the very fellow now. Gee, I wish I knew what he was betting on.'

"The tout pointed out a fairly good-looking chap not unlike me, yet not bearing any wonderful resemblance. In the movement of the crowd this chap, with a blue suit and a gray fedora, was pushed along in my direction. As he apparently paused by accident at my elbow, he happened to notice my program card.

"'May I look at your card a moment?' he asked, and I handed it to him.

"While he was reading it the seedy bum at my left frantically nudged me, and excitedly whispered that I should ask him what horse he was playing. The seedy bum aroused my curiosity so much that I carelessly turned to the blue suit and fedora and said:

"'Anything good in this race you know of?'

"Just as he was about to answer a sporty man in a check suit pushed his way through the crowd and whispered to the blue suit, barely loud enough for me to hear:

"'I got the thousand on O. K.'

"'Fine and dandy,' whispered the blue suit and fedora. 'Get the other 500 on quick, before the price changes.'

"The sporty man disappeared instantly into the crowd. Then the blue suit with the fedora turned to me.

"'Thanks very much for you program, he said, and then, as though struck by some new thought, he sarted to say something, but checked himself.

"'Ask him what he's playin', the seedy bum whispered hoarsely to me.

"I repeated my question, and this time the blue suit and fedora turned to me again. An index finger was raised warningly, and he beckoned me to follow him. Winding in and out through the betting ring, at last we reached a secluded corner. I looked in vain for the seedy bum, but he had disappeared.

"'Yes, I do know of something good in this race,' said the blue suit. But if I let you in you must swear to keep the information to yourself. In fact, it is so good I cannot even let you know the name of the horse. I am pledged to secrecy myself, but you have been kind enough to lend me your program and you seem the right sort, so I don't mind letting you in. How much can you put up?'"

"That's getting exciting," broke in the broker's clerk. "Cut it short and tell us how much you lost."

"Tell us how much the tout got from you in a hurry," was the comment of the sporty youth.

The guileless chap munched his cucumber sandwich and drank some milk.

"As I was saying when rudely interrupted," he continued, "the man asked me how much I could put up. I said I might risk a hundred on something good and he shook hands cordially.

"'I cannot tell you the name of the horse,' he said, 'but come with me and I will put up the money for you at 30 to 1. I must hold the ticket, and if the horse wins, as it surely will, we will split the profits. Come—follow me.' And he started off down through the crowd.''

"Well? Did you follow him?" asked the broker's clerk.

The guileless youth sipped some more milk.

"I did not," he remarked.

THE PLAY AND THE PLAYERS

The Coming Week.

ISABEL IRVING IN "THE CRISIS"

At the Metropolitan On Monday and Tuesday Evenings, and Kennedy Company the Remainder of the Week, Presenting "Another Man's Wife" and "Rip Van Winkle."

The playgoers of Duluth will see Miss Isabel Irving in Winston Churchill's dramatization of his own novel, "The Crisis" at the Metropolitan Monday and Tuesday evenings. Miss Irving is known from one end of the country to the other as one of the most beautiful women on the stage in this country as well as one of the most delightful comedennes seen in recent years.

During the past three or four years this young actress has come into her own, her art has broadened and developed wonderfully until she now stands among the leaders of her profession.

James K. Hackett, under whose direction Miss Irving is starring has provided the young actress with an admirable company and one of the most beautiful scenic equipments ever seen on the stage. Unlike most stage settings everything used in this presentation of "The Crisis" is real. The scences are exact copies of the actual places in which the events of "The Crisis" took place, while all the furniture and the stage settings actually came from homes in St. Louis in the early fifties.

Miss Irving's work with Rosina Vokes first brought her to the attention of New York inanagers, who, from that day to this, have aways demanded her services. The late Augustin Daly was the first of the great managers to understand her true worth. He took Miss Irving from the Vokes company and gave her an important place in his own stock organization in the days when that company was at the very zenith of its fame. There the young actress played the ingenue roles which were not important enough for Miss Rehan to claim as her own. Perhaps her best work here was her Audrey in "As You Like It." For several seasons Miss Irving remained with the Daly company, making her first visits to London with that organization. Then she resigned from the Daly company and went from Broadway to Fourth avenue. In other words, she left Mr. Daly for the service of Daniel Frohman, who was then making his Lyceum Stock company the rightful successor to the Daly company. In this organization Miss Irving remained for several years, long enough in fact to work her way from the position of ingenue to that of leading woman. It was in this company that the young actress played her first parts with James K. Hackett, her present manager. She was the Princess Flavia to his Rudolph Rassnedyl in "The Prisoner of Zenda." Here, too, she(did what many believe was the best work of her career, next to the part in which she is now appearing, her Lady Susan in "The Case of Rebellious Susan."

From the Lyceum Miss Irving went to Charles Frohman, who made her leading woman with John Drew. Here, too, Miss Irving made a tremendous hit in "The Liars," and again in "The Tyranny of Tears."

After her appearances with Mr. Drew, Miss Irving was practically starred in "To Have and To Hold," under the management of Charles Frohman. The play was illitated from the first an de was kept before the public but a short time. This same year Miss Irving appeared in a number of plays, but each was without merit. Before this time, however, she was seen in New York in a series of farces from the French, among them being "The Husbands of Leontine," in which Miss Irving again scored very heavily.

ISABEL IRVING,
Who Will Be At the Metropolitan Next Week in "The Crisis."

Two years ago, when Mr. Hackett discovered that "The Crisis" was fully as well suited to a woman star as to a man, he secured Miss Irving on a long time contract and began her career as a full fledged star. In this capacity Miss Irving is said to have won the greatest success of her career. Her Virginia Carvel, the heroine of the Churchill drama, is said by many critics to be not only the best work Miss Irving ever done, but also to be one of the cleverest characterizations seen on the American stage in many years.

This season Miss Irving has been seen in all the large cities, where she has renewed the pleasant impression she had made during visits in years passed.

The part of the warm hearted, hot headed, loveable young Southern girl, is one in which Miss Irving takes great delight. Her fine intelligence is allowed full scope and her work shows a broadness and charm which wins her audience instantly.

KENNEDY COMPANY.

"Another Man's Wife" and "Rip Van Winkle."

Commencing Wednesday, June 1, the Kennedy Stock company will present two bills for two nights each, at which time this popular company will be seen in two of the strongest plays. Wednesday and Thursday Bartley Campbell's five-act society drama, "Another Man's Wife," will be presented in an elaborate manner, when Mr. Kennedy will be seen in the character of Makepeace Thackery Muggs, a character which will give this genial comedian scope to introduce his comedy to its fullest extent.

Friday and Saturday the Kennedy Stock company will present Washington Irving's ideal of the Catskill mountains, made famous by Joseph Jefferson, "Rip Van Winkle." The play will be presented in its entirety, and the scenic investiture is promised to be accurate. Mr. Kennedy will be "Rip," Little Dot is the Mina and J. F. Bannister will be seen as the villain, Derrick, while Nellie Kennedy, Leonore Hassan and Royal Stout will be seen in prominent characters.

New specialties will be introduced between acts and matinees will be given as usual.

LYCEUM ATTRACTIONS.

At the Lyceum this evening "A Girl From Dixie will be the attraction.

Next Monday afternoon and evening, Memorial day, "The Gamekeeper' will be brought to the Lyceum for a return engagement.

Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon, Rogers Bros. will appear in their latest farce, "Rogers Bros. in London."

PLAYS COST TOO MUCH.

Managers Wonder If Big Outlays Really Pay.

Theatrical managers who have been indulging the public for several years with magnificence in their productions have begun to wonder if they are not going to suffer from this great liberality, says the New York Sun. The expenditure now necessary in musical and spectacular performances to reach the standard that the public has come to expect is much greater than most persons will believe.

Who, for instance, would hear without surprise that a recent musical and spectacular production seen in this city had cost, on its original performance, more than $65,000? Yet it did cost that sum before the curtain went up. Nowadays $40,000 is a moderate amount to expend in a musical play of the spectacular kind so much in vogue.

Some of the serious plays cost just as much. The most notable of these was a historical melodrama acted here three seasons ago by a woman star. That cost $90,000, and nearly $15,000 of the effects ordered for the piece were thrown out before the first performance because at the dress rehearsal it was found that the use of them delayed too long the action of certain scenes.

One of the pantomimes acted here last winter had a ballet that cost $20,000, and it had others which brought up the cost of the production to nearly five times as much as that sum. Yet the managers have not dared to reduce the cost of these productions for fear that the public will refuse to accept anything simpler, once having seen these beautiful if too costly affairs to which the managers have been accustoming them.

It is a fact that in no other city, with the possible exception of London, is so much spent on theatrical productions. Here the expenditure has been constantly increasing, year after year. Each season in the last decade has seen a greater increase in the amount that the managers seem to think necessary. What used to be considered elaborate would now be regarded merely satisfactory in a modest way.

The Shakespearean plays, as Augustin Daly gave them, were once regarded as masterpieces of color and form, lavishly provided it great cost; but it is doubtful if they would be found even tolerable today.

So much money is not of course spent on these plays as on the musical and spectacular pieces. But the Daly tradition has long since passed out of existence. In the mounting of plays of every class the cost has grown so much that the men responsible for it are wondering when the end will come. Some of the managers profess to believe that it will come before very long, and the wisdom of putting such vast sums into plays has begun to be doubted by the men who a short time ago were most eager to invest.

In London, in the musical farces as well as the plays given by Beerbohm Tree and George Alexander, and in the great Christmas pantomimes, there is no stint of money, and it is a question if they are not sometimes more artistic than the American productions, especially in the serious plays, since noted artists are engaged.

There are few Shakespearean productions of an elaborate nature made here. Richard Mansfield, who has recently given two, merely buys the scenery and costumes from Beerbohm Tree or Sir Henry Irving, fits them together until he has enough for a revival of "Henry V." or "Julius Caesar," and gets out with no great expenditure.

But when it comes to spectacle and musical comedy or comic opera, here, no expense is spared. With all the London outlay in this field, the prices there are cheaper. Labor costs less and so does material, and the result is a considerable saving over the local outlay for similar effects.

London managers have no such risk, for other reasons also. The libraries or the agencies that sell tickets at an advance in price will take in advance of its production thousands of dollars worth of tickets for any Gaiety Theater show, or, for that matter, for any made at a well known theater. The managers know that they can rely on this, and before the first night of their production much of the expense of mounting has been paid.

But the American managers have no such insurance. They must stand or fall by the verdict of the first few audiences that see their play.

In London, with all the seats sold to the amount of $40,000 or $50,000, the manager can improve his piece until it reaches the requirements of his public and win out in the end, so that he as well as the speculators who have bought his tickets in advance are certain to get their money back. With this diminished risk he is able to spend money on his scenery and costumes with no such apprehension for the future.

In Paris, where labor and material are also much cheaper than they are in this country, exquisite taste is shown in all details, but everything is on a much smaller scale. Where a New York production would require thirty costumes of a certain kind, six would suffice in Paris—of course, with the exception of the Grand Opera—so the expense is much smaller in the end. This is just as true of the musical and spectacular pieces as of those given by Bernhardt, Rejane and Coquelin.

"Mme. Sans Gene," "Gismondi," "L'Aiglon" and other productions brought here intact, were all regfined and beautiful in effect, and there may have been persons who found them more artistic than our own prorductions of the same plays. But they were on a smaller and consequently more economical scale.

Here expense seems to play no part in the plans of most of the managers. One recent production will give an example of the result of such lavishness in many cases. This piece, which was produced outside of New York, had a long run and was counted one of the great successes. It was then brought to New York and repeated that prosperous career. It has now been before the public for nearly six months. But it has not yet covered the price of its original production, taking that week by week out of the season's expenses.

The original cost was $65,000, and its managers expect to have several months more of good business before they will be able to say that they are "earning velvet."

The weekly cost of these productions with their long lists of singers and actors is large enough in itself to take a large share of the weekly receipts. Another play that cost its managers more than $100,000 ran for a year in this city without yielding them one cent of profit, although it filled the vast theater in which it was acted. But the investment of all these thousands in that case was a success, for the courageous managers made a fortune by this piece.

After five years it is still yielding them a large sum annually, and they look upon it as a probable money-making enterprise for some years to come.

"Few men alone, and rarely even two men together nowadays go into these expensive productions," said a manager to a Sun reporter. "Usually five or six, and sometimes more, have a hand in one of these costly shows, every man sharing, as in a partnership, according to his interest. In that way the risk is less; but with the amount of money that the things cost, the earnings of the partners are much less.

"Thus we have a large investment on which there is no profit for a long time, so great is the cost of the original capital; and when the money does come in, it is not nearly so much as the time and amount would seem to require to be in accord with good business methods. And the men who happen to share in the production of a musical piece that we were talking about have had to wait for six months before they see any 'comeback.'"

What this manager did not say was that the general public takes much less interest in mere lavishness and expenditure for its own sake than managers have come to think. Effects in form and color are to be had without the great expense of costly materials, and artistic discrimination would seem to the lay mind capable of accomplishing more than mere laying out of money.

But this is an opinion that the managers controvert. They say that nowadays nothing will be accepted by the public unless it is all satin and several yards wide. And they may know best, although there are few persons who would deny that the greatest of all stage managers—Sir Henry Irving—got wonderful effects without impressing most on spectators of his wonderful pictures the fact that they must, above all, have cost a lot.

"Theatrical enterprises," the manager went on in his discussion of the changes in the business, "have come to be a matter of partnership more than most persons ever know. Thus one will read that a certain manager is going to make a star out of this man or that woman; yet the name of the manager who figures in the deal may really mean very little. There may be four or five others in the deal, and the man who happens to be named, for certain business reasons, may be the one that has the smallest interest.

"I could tell you of many women stars who are making money or losing it for a half a dozen managers whose names have never been mentioned in connection with their tours. Of course there are some women who are directly managed by one man who gets all they may make, apart from the salary paid to them. But there are few of these. Six men have interests in the tour of one woman who has, lucky for them, made a great success in her first year as a star, although the name of only one man figures as her manager."

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Aspiring Actresses Entertain With Spring Ventures.

New York, May 28.—Three actresses during the last few days in town have made themselves more interesting than the plays in which they acted, and this in spite of the fact that two of the dramas were new to us, and the third an admired classic, which for many years has not been visible hereabouts. Perhaps a general knowledge of the motives underlying Julia Marlowe's, Margaret Illington's and May Edouin's productions centered this special attention in them. The two newer actresses are looking for plays in which to enter into dramatic leadership next season—they strenuously deny stellar ambition—and both are wise enough to make the plunge with caution, in other words, with the best available play. So Miss Edoun arranged to become a "visiting star" for one week with the Donnelly Stock company, and thereupon see whether the public thought as well of "Starr's Girl" as she did. Miss Illington was more fortunate in getting a Broadway theater and a really exceptional company to assist her in testing the merits of "Yvette," which, by an odd chance, was the indirect cause of Miss Marlowe's revival of "Ingomar," made a few nights later.

The new plays of the last few days in town were alike in more than the fact that both were acted for the first time on this side of the Atlantic experimentally, in the hope of discovering material for starring tours next season of talented young actresses. "Yvette" and "Starr's Girl" were good examples of dramas by observers of other dramas, rather than students of life itself. The author of the French play had studied the world's people through Guy de Maupassant, while the dramatist of the piece from England knew her Bret Harte better than her fellowman, and the results were alike in to-be-expected artificiality. Before telling you about "Yvette" as a play it seems worth while to record the vicissitudes of its voyage from Paris to New York. It was produced in the French capital three or more years ago, and almost immediately put into rehearsal here by Julia Marlowe. And so it stood, even once or twice an actual date for its revelation being set. Two months ago Miss Marlowe abandoned it finally, some said because of its morals, or rather lack of morals; some said because she felt herself unsuited to impersonate an 18-year-old convent girl. A combination of causes brought about its production last Friday afternoon. Daniel Frohman, who heretofore has managed the annual benefit performance arranged for the Actors' fund, found that the usual extraordinary fund, found that the usual extraordinary programs arranged for these occasions gave playgoers so much for their money that legitimate business was unreasonably injured. Therefore, it was decided to utilize the best of Charles Frohman's actors appearing in town in an especially strong cast for a single play. C. F. was bound to the French author of "Yvette" to produce the drama before this season's end, and D. F. is on the eagle search for a part in which to raise his bride to stardom.

Thees facts, with the backing of famous authorship and Parisian prosperity, brought about the American hearing of "Yvette," which proved itself worthy of that hearing, if not of prolonged public attention.

* * *

The program and official announcements declared it to be "by the author of 'Zaza,'" though the accuracy of that claim became impeachable when Paul Berton was named as having written the famous play known to be by Pierre Berton and Charles Simon. Whichever Berton it was—there are two, father and son, collaborateurs in several plays—he found more than his view of life in Maupassant, deriving his story from that source, too. This he spread thinly over half of his play in the mere matter of explaining that Yvette was the daughter of a luxurious wanton, and had recently returned from a convent school to live among her mother's glittering set of evil women and dishonest men; that the girl was so innocent as to see none of the sin about her; and that a young man, slightly better than the rest, debated offering marriage, or whether her guilelessness was mere coquetry, and that a religious solemnization would not be necessary to their union. Thus it was that when strong, emotional drama did take the stage, the girl seemed so impossibly undiscerning, on the one hand, the man so caddish, on the other, and the whole fabric so absolutely foreign to us, that we were never moved and often barely interested.

Yvette, having donned a bathing suit in innocent frolic, is insulted by the man she loves, who sees in it deliberate coquetry. Thus trampled upon, she is further crushed by overhearing a conversation between her mother and a man who is thereby revealed as the woman's lover. The next day she confronts her parent with the revolting facts, whereat that hrifty old soul advises her daughter to take to the streets,, delivering a lengthy harangue, based on the declaration that no woman in the world is virtuous, therefore she who makes her immorality pay is ratner to be admired for it than blamed. This is too much for Yvette—and incidentally for the audience—but the worst is yet to come. The girl from Kay's (Hattie Williams) enters in the guise of a parlor maid, and while dusting off the furniture sagely remarks that Mlle. Yvette is pretty enough to pick up many a penny here and there, with so many rich young men as frequenters of madam's house. This is the last straw, and presently Yvette douses her handkerchief with chloform and retires to her room to die, first saying extremely obvious "veiled" farewells to every one in the cast. A gay old supper party is in distinctly fizzy progress under Yvette's window in the play's last scene, when she lights the gas to see herself die, and the toasts become so warm that the translator left a few in French. They nearly drive Yvette to suicide, but she demurs. Then the mad Parisian revelers strike up a coon song from "The Girl From Kay's," and the maid no longer shrinks from death. Mother looks up at the window and sees that Yvette has gone to bed with the gas on, and being an economical body, comes up to put it out. Thereupon numerous revelers endeavor to beat in the door, while the lover climbs in the window. Just here is where the most drastic measures were taken in Marlowizing the drama for America. In the French story Yvette, being restored to life, decided mother was right, and accepted, unmarryingly, the good young man, but for our audiences it was deemed advisable to make him offer a wedding ring.

May Edouin, like Margaret Illington, is as interesting in herself as in her art.

Miss May Edouin has very wisely stuck to her name of babyhood, and if histrionic talent is hereditary May should be the veritable queen of burlesque. Father Willie Edouin, since he deserted this his native land and the Hoyt farces in which he was vastly popular, has become a London burlesquer, second to none in the British heart. So long had he stayed there that when he came over here for the original run of "Florodora," the younger of us hardly knew who Edouin was. It was really to bring daughter May over that he came, and she has remained most of the time since, winning applause in vaudeville in the "Laughing Song," made famous by her brilliant mother, Alice Atherton-Edouin. But the Edouin party in "Florodora" times was more of a family excursion than many knew, as, tucked away in the double sextet, was Fred Edwards, lord and master of merry, merry little May, and now a leading man, believe me, the hero of "Starr's Girl."

* * *

Alice E. Ives was the dramatist who had looked at life through Bret Harte, as Mr. Berton had learned mankind from Maupassant, rather than nature, and it was the later, less spontaneous Bret Harte, the imitator of himself, whom Mrs. Ives emulated in "Starr's Girl." May Edouin had used this play in England, where it was probably accepted as a more faithful picture of the eWst than it could be here, and she arranged to try it in New York with the aid of Mr. Donnelly's stock company, probably in the hope that an American manager would send her on a tour in it. Some one will, I should think. Accepting a basis of artificiaity it is an admirable, unoriginal entertainment, with a strong appeal to the sentimentality of the unsophisticated. It is one of those plays that tells you in the first line just how and why it will all end happily, and then diverts you with amusing incident till a proper time for that joyous conclusion has been reached. Arizona Starr, Starr's girl, is as innocent as—well, as Yvette, but for the better reason that, protected by her father, she has lived among gold diggers, who respect her purity and love her dashing spirit and gay good humor. Then, too, the Starrs have no hired help to advise girls the most paying use for beauty. To their home in a mountain settlement come an English party, well planned for happy and easily comprehended mating in the last act. A noble Britisher loves Arizona, is loved by her and weds her in the den; a girl of the party, having successfully angled for him, finally accepts the low-comedy Englishman, heir to a title, and the chaperon turns out to be the mother of Arizona—the girl, not the whole state—which comforting fact is revealed on old Starr's deathbed.

Starr's girl went to just as great trouble to protect her virtue as Yvette, although her battle was rather against the "speech of people" than the infamy of man. Starr, having recognized his "long-lost wife," cleared out for the night, leaving Arizona with her Englishman, then languidly recovering from a most romantic injury. Twice hearing the word "unconventionality," new thoughts came to 'Zona, thoughts entirely strange to her nature and surroundings. But Starr's girl was a thoroughbred at heart, father having been a real swell in New York, as he confessed on that chatty deathbed of his. She first sang the wounded man to sleep, and then, being such a perfect lady, took her gun under one arm and a bearskin under the other, and went out to sleep on the doorstep.

Seventeen years. They passed between Julia Marlowe's New York debut in "Ingomar" and her reappearance here last week as that same gentle conquerer of the savage barbarian. I overheard it said, by a witness of both performances, that the first, although better than the last, had not been praised by the critics nor admired by many others. Half of this assertion may be true. Julia is a far more accomplished actress now than she was then yet it may be that the simplicity of her novitiate, fitting the character of the captive and capturing maiden, provided a charm which she has lost in her gain of art. That is a mixed question of recollection and opinion. But the other half of the assertion is untrue. She came here without fame, or even notoriety. Whatever effort there may have been to get publicity for her in advance was so futile that if helped her little. But in a night she won the approval of the reviewers, who qualified their praise by no more than kindly mention of her crudity, and in a week she gained sufficient general appreciation to establish her as a firmly prosperous actress. Her vogue increased steadily year by year, and now Maude Adams is the only American actress who draws more dollars into theaters.

Miss Marlowe's case is similar to Mary Anderson's in many ways. Both came from the Middle West, with only belief and uncertain experience on the stage, began with "Ingomar," got at once under popular headway, learned afterward how to act expertly, and amassed fortunes. There seems to be temperamental similarity, too, between these women. They have the whims, caprices and wayward willfulness of genius. Mary and Julia are both contrary. Mary's retreat from professional to private life was erratic. She returned from several years absence in Europe, and surprised us by her excess of proficiency, for in the meanwhile she had submitted to the tutelage of Henry Neville, a noted London dramatic teacher. Her performance in "A Winter's Tale" was keenly admired and rapturously praised. She had ceased to be merely a marvel of beauty and voice, and had become an actress truly great in artistic accomplishment. The late Henry E. Abbey was her manager, which means that she got a generous share of the profits which his free-handed methods increased to big figures. The tour made money and fame tremendously, till the woman took a sudden aversion to the stage and everything connected with it. She wouldn't speak to the ever urbane Abbey, abandoned the company, went back to England, became Mrs. Navarro after a while, and has never acted since. In a seemingly happy matrimony she regained her poise of mind, and is said to be a contented matron, with no desire to resume a professional career.

Julia Marlowe has behaved somewhat similarly to Miss Anderson in her sudden retirements during the last two seasons, but quite differently in not making them permanent, as "Our Mary" again demonstrated her's to be only the other day when she refused a fabulous offer to reappear. Nearly two years ago, angered apparently by Boston's disapproval of "Queen Flametta," Miss Marlowe declared herself through with acting, and retired to the country. Hardly a fortnight passed before she emerged again, putting "Yvette" into rehearsal and, at the same time, ordering the hasty completion of "The Cavalier." This drama served her on her reappearance and throughout the season. Last fall, having once more rehearsed and abandoned "Yvette," she acted in several cities in "Fools of Nature," which Mr. Esmond wrote for Nat Goodwin, Miss Marlowe assigning herself to the secondary role designed for Maxine Elliott-Goodwin, when she was her husband's leading actress. Miss Marlowe was not generally liked in this play, and she again retired, with many words, this time remaining in her retreat five months. Charles Frohman is said to have been the person persuasive enough to get her back for a spring tour, in which she was alternated "Ingomar" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and pocketed as a reward for eight weeks' work—well, I don't believe in quoting receipts, but almost any two or three of our prosperous stars would consider their time well spent if they could earn so much in so little time. Women holding the positions of Miss Marlowe, Miss Adams and Miss Anderson must find it expensive to indulge their whims.

Any member of that rather large section of the public that regards continuous vaudeville as little better than a house of refuge for the "legitimate" actor, would have received a pretty severe jolt in his exclusiveness had he seen the attitude of the Proctor habitues toward Mr. Hawtrey. Hawtrey appeared as an impecunious suitor of a wealthy girl, his general poverty being at the moment secondary to an immediate need of change to pay a cabman. Thus the progress of his courtship was interrupted by demands of payment, and his apiogies for this shortage in shillings were understood by the girl as lamentations on his greater lack of money necessary to the matrimonial state. After the hearty applause on his entrance the all-day audience settled into an unenthusiastic realization of an artist wasting himself, and at the end let him go with hardly a handclap. Just realize it, if you can. Hawtrey, who has had his legs under the most exclusive mahoganies in London and New York! Hawtrey, who dined Mrs. Langtry, Lillian Russell and, aye, even Mrs. "Pat" Campbell! Hawtrey, who calls Imperial Edward "Ted!" This very Hawtrey dismissed by a "continuous" audience with the merest flutter of applause. Verily, this is the land of the free and, above all, the home of the brave.

Hermann, the magician, is the latest star to succumb to the blandishments of an extended vaudeville tour. He is now booking a series of engagements throughout the country, and will be a vaudeville addition to the ranks of the vaudeville entertainers.

Joseph W. Stanley, connected with the business department of Charles Frohman's theatrical enterprises, was married in Baltimore last week to Miss Ollie Spencer, a member of "The Girl From Kay's" company. The wedding took place at the home of the groom's sister.

Mrs. Robert Osborn, who built her own playhouse in New York, and made a failure of the venture with a musical piece called "Tommy Rot," last week, brought suit for a divorce from her husband. She says they were married sixteen years ago, but that trouble has existed between them ever since the Osborn playhouse was built and that they have been separated for some time. The co-respondent named in the suit is not mentioned.

COMMERCE OF LAKE SUPERIOR

Mile-Ton Report of the Sault Ste. Marie Canal Is of Absorbing Interest—34,674,437 Net Tons of Freight, Valued At $358,306,300, Were Carried Through the Canal In 1903, and $26,727,735.17 Was Paid To Vessels For Carrying It.

It has been said frequently in these columns that there is no adequate measof the port to port commerce of the great lakes, and therefore no way of determining the total commerce of the great chain of waters. However, it is fair to assume that more than half of the commerce of the lakes passes through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, and it is fortunate indeed that records at this point are very reliably kept by the officials in charge of the United States and Canadian canals. General Superintendent Joseph Ripley has just submitted to Maj. W. L. Fisk for transmission to the secretary of war, the exhaustive report of canal commerce for 1903 that is known as the mile-ton report. The report shows that $26,727,735.17 was paid as carrying charges to vessels that moved 34,674,437 net tons of freight through the canals in 1903, and that the total value of the freight was $358,306,300. The cost per ton per mile of moving this freight was .92 of a mill, against .89 of a mill in 1902, against .99 of a mill in 1901, and 1.18 mills in 1900. The high rate in 1900 was influenced by the fact that season contracts for moving a great part of the ore were made at $1.25 a ton.

The total freight traffic of 34,674,437 net tons for the season of 1903 when compared with the season of 1902, the maximum in the history of the canal, shows a decrease of 4 per cent, or, 1,286,709 tons; but in comparison with the previous maximum year, that of 1901, this year's traffic shows a gain or 6,271,372 tons or 22 per cent. The items showing an increase are coal, grain and salt. The falling off in the movement of iron ore largely accounts for the decrease in the total traffic. The total number of passengers was 55,175, a decrease of 4702, or 7 per cent. Vessel passages through both canals numbered 18,596, showing a loss of 4063 passengers, or 18 per cent, as compared with the 22,659 passengers in 1902. The total lockages numbered 11,642, showing a loss of 1294 lockages, or 9 per cent. The season of navigation continued for a period of eight months and fourteen days, during which time the average monthly traffice was 4,095,499 tons.

The traffic through the American canal was 81 per cent of the total freight, and 42 per cent of the passengers carried, the amount being 29,172,252 tons of freight and 23,156 passengers. Compared with the season of 1902, there was a decrease of 2,499,543 tons of freight, or 7 per cent, and an increase of 578 passengers, or 2 per cent. The American canal opened April 11 and closed Dec. 15, 1903, making the length of the season 249 days.

The traffic through the Canadian canal was 16 per cent of the total freight, and 58 per cent of the passengers carried, the amounts being 5,502,185 tons of freight and 32,019 passengers. Compared with the season of 1902 there was an increase of 773,334 tons, or 16 per cent and a decrease of 4680 passengers, or 13 per cent. The Canadian canal was opened April 2 and closed Dec. 15, 1903, making the length of its season 256 days.

The growth of Lake Superior commerce during the past half century has been phenomenal. The estimated amount and value of articles which crossed the portage at Sault Ste. Marie in 1831, to and from Lake Superior, was 12,990 net tons, valued at $1,675,000. In 1861, a decade later, traffic through the state lock was 85,000 tons, valued at $6,000,000; in 1871, 585,000 tons, valued at $15,000,000; in 1881, through the state and Wietzel lock, 1,597,741 net tons, valued at $30,000,000; in 1891, through the Wietzel lock, 8,387,759 net tons, valued at $123,179,208; in 1901, through the Weitzel, Poe and Canadian locks, 28,403,965 net tons, valued at $289,906,285. Thus the percentage of increase in tonnage of each year's traffic over that of the preceding year has averages as follows: 1831-1860, 21 per cent; 1861-1870 21 per cent; 1871-1880, 10¼ per cent; 1881-1890, 19 per cent; 1891-1900, 12¾ per cent; average 1861-1900, 16 2-3 per cent. Following are some of the most interesting conclusions regarding the traffic of 1903:

Total mile-tons	28,374,669,408
Total freight carried—tons	34,674,437
Total valuation placed on freight carried	$349,405,014
Average value per ton of freight carried	$10.08

Average distance freight was carried—miles	835.6
Cost per mile per ton—mills	.92
Average cost per ton for freight transportation	$0.77
Total number of registered vessels using canals	895
Total number of passages by unregistered crafts carrying freight	321
Time American canal was operated—days	249
Time Canadian canal was operated—days	256
Total valuation placed on registered vessels	$74,637,399
Total number of passengers transported	55,175
Freight carried by—
Registered vessels—tons	34,636,859
Unregistered vessels—tons	37,587
American vessels—per cent	94
Canadian vessels—per cent	6

The number of registered vessels of 400 to 500 feet in length using the canal in trad to and from Lake Superior was ninety-seven; of 300 to 400 feet, 175; of 200 to 300 feet, 312; of 100 to 200 feet, 257; and of less than 100 feet in length, eighty-two. The records show that 91 different vessels in a single trip of each carried a total of 2,165,538 net tons. The maximum traffic for a single day was on Aug. 31 when 205,782 tons of freight passed through the canal from 151 vessels, having an aggregate tonnage of 211,326 tons. The minimum traffic was on April 2, when two vessels registering sixty tons passed through the canals carrying no freight. There were no lockages on April 3 and 7. The steamer John W. Gates of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet is credited with having moved the largest amount of freight eithrough the canal during the season, 184,783 tons. The record for the preceding year was made by the steamer William Edenborn with a total of 183,270 tons. The steamer Bransford of the Hawgood Transportation company's fleet is credited with the greatest number of mile-tons, 158,843,953. The largest single cargo, 8914 tons, was carried by the steamer William Edenborn of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet. The New York Central's steamer Troy has the greatest number of miles run to her credit, 45,340.

Unregistered American craft carried 11,373 net tons of freight in 222 passages, or an average of forty-nine 48-2,000 tons per passage. Unregistered Canadian craft carried 25,214 net tons of freight in 125 passages, or an average of 202 419-2000 tons per passage. Of the 18,596 passages for the season, 2461 were by eighty-four vessels under 100 tons register with an average register of 36 tons. The total freight carried by such craft amounted to 2083 net tons.

The following table will prove interesting as showing the distribution to other lakes of freight bound eastward from Lake Superior and also the district from which freight bound to Lake Superior originated:

The American canal records show that vessels necessarily spent 19,927 hours and 22 minutes in the canal, or an average of 1 hour 24 minutes and 8 seconds, which includes the time waiting for lockage and passage through locks and canals. the latter being 1 3-5 miles long. Other delays of canal, which included taking on supplies, waiting for daylight or favorable weather, amounted to 13,588 hours and 47 minutes. Other delays to boats due to operating railway swing bridge, amounted to 2 minutes. Trains were delayed 2 hours and 55 minutes by passing boats, temporarily preventing the close of the bridge.

The American canal postoffice delivered 146,755 pieces of mail during the season, consisting of 128,996 letters, 576 postal cards, 1,304 newspapers and 839 parcels; also returned 727 pieces to the city postoffice, after being held thirty days uncalled for, and forwarded 4846 pieces to new addresses. As compared with the last year, this shows a decrease of 15,999 pieces of mail.

THE GOSSIP OF GOTHAM

Rides In Every New Auto, But Refuses to Buy—Couple Well Known to Roadhouses For Discriminating Taste In Eatables and Drinkables.

New York, May 28.—One of the most successful of the local promoters and sellers of automobiles is deep in difficulty. Business matters worry him not a jot. It's home trouble that oppresses him. He has been engaged in auto exploitation for five years—a long time, considering the comparatively short life of that industry—and it is his boast that he has worked off on the dear public more autos than any other salesman in the country. If a dozen other sellers were to make like statements it would be hard to stop them, so it's enough to know that this chap has been very successful, has made and still is making a big income from the business.

REMARKABLY PERSUASIVE.

Yet he hasn't showy headquarters, where many styles of auto vehicles are on view in all the impressiveness of fresh varnish and bright grass. He hasn't a show room of any sort. He keeps several vehicles at an auto stable not far above Madison square, and spends about half his waking hours in one of these in company with some prospective purchaser. He is credited with being remarkably persuasive, so that once he has got a companion for a ride he is pretty sure of a sale if the party really means to buy. Moreover, he is said to have a marvelous faculty or system, or both combined, for scenting out, in advance of his now very numerous competitors, the dentity of prospective customers. These points in his business make-up offset his lack of showy stock in hand, a matter that really he could not compass, for with an income for the past three years of not less than $15,000 a year, it would bother him today to raise $1000 without borrowing, so promptly and completely does he spend his earnings.

But with all this ability to sell, there is one customer on his lists whose taste in vehicles he seems not to have been able to hit off. The difficulty in suiting this customer has been due, perhaps, to the fact that this inspector of all his vehicles is a woman She's a young woman, large, shapely, bright of hair and complexion, the sort of woman you would rubber after a bit if you saw her on Broadway or Fifth avenue, and if you were the average sort of man—yes, or of woman either.

RIDES IN EVERY NEW AUTO.

This woman, according to the salesman's brief explanations, has been about getting ready to buy an automobile for over six months. He takes her out for a spin in every new auto he secures for sale, and the couple is well known in the roadhouses of the suburbs for discriminating taste in eatables and drinkables.

It was in her company on the second day of the spring meet at Morris Park that he approached the business that led to trouble, a race track weight, a hatchet-faced chap in the bookmaking way, but for reasons not disassociated from his calling, rather on his uppers, whispered to the auto salesman that he was on a good tip. As it proved not to be a tip on some forthcoming race, but knowledge of the desire of a moneyed youth to own a speedy car, the salesman listened eagerly. Some arrangement was entered into by the two men for sharing profits if a sale should be effected, and the auto man and his blonde passed on to the grand stand, to spend a couple of hours picking winners, a trick of which the woman was extremely fond.

YOUNGSTER WAS RIPE.

It is by attracting and acting upon such tips that this salesman heads many of his competitors, and on this day he tore the blonde away from the possibilities of making her fortune that lay in the last race, to head for the city and the opening of a campaign upon the moneyed youth the hard-luck bookmaker had spoken of. The youngster proved ripe for purchasing, and in less than a week he became the owner of a red devil, at an outlay of $4000, which would have been $4500 had he bought of any one who had to pay rental for a corner store in which to show off the "bubble." This last, of course, is some of the salesman's easy talk. He gave a lot more of it to the seedy bookmaker when they met, and vainly. The bookmaker was not satisfied with the liberal fee given him, and claimed that he was entitle to much more by the terms of their agreement made at the race track. Disagreement as to this was complete, and when the bookmaker allowed that the big blonde would agree with his understanding of their arrangement the salesman said that he was willing to abide by her decision.

This wasn't business-like on his part, nor was the procedure satisfactory to the other man, but so the matter was left until the following evening but one, when the three came together in the dining room of a Broadway hotel much patronized by the bookmaking fraternity, and also often visited by the auto man and his blonde. The latter two were dining when the other came upon them.

WAS "BUMPED" HARD.

The bookmaker was allowed to state his side of the case, and the salesman then explained that he had agreed to abide by her decision. It was in favor of the salesman, and, unfortunately for all hands, was accompanied by certain evidences of her distaste for the gambler. Now, when a lady turns you down hard in a deal, and then looks at you as if she was ready money and you was 30 cents, you all the while knowin' her full record, an' she wasn't no great winner, it would bump you, wouldn't it? Whatever your feeling, knowing that he was "bumped." So much so that he retorted upon the yellow-topped referee with impolite classification of her and certain terse and very expressive references to her past and to her relationship to certain dim lights of the turf.

No lady could listen unmoved to such talk. This one reddened even through the powder and grabbed the water bottle. Finding that the watchful salesman had a hold on the carafte, she dived for the wine bottle the two had been emptying, and was about to swing that strnuously for the gambler's head, when her escort rose to induce him to leave their table.

A BAD MIX-UP.

The gambler showed fight, and there was a mix-up of such duration that both men had a chance to tell the story to a police sergeant in the end. There, between the cheerful friendliness of the hotel manager and the intense desire of the auto salesman for a quiet finish, a patch-up. But it was too late The morning papers chronicled the scrap with more or less detail, some cruel fate putting into each account, even the briefest, the statement that the auto seller was dining in company with a lady.

The auto man rose early at his home next morning. He satisfied himself that the mischief was in print and managed to head off the paper boy's delivery for that morning. But he couldn't stay home all day, and during the afternoon his spouse borrowed a copy of her favorite sheet. And it wasn't the paper that had the briefest account of the hotel fight. Then there was trouble good and plenty, and it is on yet, for glib as this salesman is he hasn't yet convinced his wife that in order to sell one auto to a blonde he must take her to ride daily for months and dine her three or four times a week at expensive hotels.

SEEKING WOMEN'S PATRONAGE.

A tendency of New York's retail trade is noticeable. It is the especial bids being made by dealers in men's supplies for women's trade. The extent of these lures is remarkable, and their growth has been so quick that their effectiveness must be great. Really it begins to look as if every holder of well-located show windows would make his bid for women's patronage, even if his stock is far away from women's field. The tendency was first shown a few years ago by hatters. The swell makers along Broadway and Fifth avenue put in one section of their window samples of women's headgear of the untrimmed grades that women style tailor hats. The prices of these inelaborate hats were away up. Yet the showing have increased in number and in size. Also, they have been supplemented by headgear that, at least, to masculine comprehension, is quite as complicated frivolity as women ever put on their heads.

Now take men's furnishings. You can't find a high-grade maker of shirts but has his line of women's waists, and I have it from women themselves that these makers accomplish what fitters of women's garments exclusively cannot do. This, as near as I can understand, is an incorporation in the bodices of the lines of the masculine shirt. Inability to grasp the true invardness of this may be forgiven in me, I think. What's to the point is that women are pleased with the shirtmaker's garments, are paying big prices for them, and that poor man can't go in for a dozen collars without stumbling on a bevy of women shopping for themselves.

TROUSERS AND GOWNS.

More recently dealers in ready-made men's clothing are taking up the opportunity. Side by side they offer to supply men's trousers and women's gowns. In Broadway windows where we used to see nothing but men's suits except it was samples of boys' clothing, there now are pink-cheeked wax figures showing what poor man must assume to be the latest excruciation in woman's apparel. It looks as if in a short time to come the place where you see skirts will be the spot to look for trousers, for there's money in this departure. This morning I found my cigar dealer in consultation with a cabinet maker who gets up store fixtures. The tobacco trust's retail stores keep independent dealers hustling, and this one was weighing the possibilities of a woman's department. This was not for the accommodation especially of women smokers—this particular dealer doesn't believe that there are enough of these women in the city to support a sizeable store—but for securing the custom of these women who buy tobacco for their husbands, brothers and men friends. This store is not large and is well filled, so the disposal of a department for customers of the fair sex is not easy. But it is going to be there in time for the shoppers of next Christmas. This will be an experiment, but in all matters of attire the women's annex to the man's shop seems to be well established.

LIVELY CHAP PUT OUT.

Among the unaccountable chaps whom the liveliness of the broiled lobster resorts put down and out is one whose friends are quite in the habit of referring to as a model. Twelve years ago he came into his majority and a fortune believed to have amounted to $125,000. Four years ago he retired from high rolling and entered business. He was worse than broke, having maintained a lively pace on credit so long as he could after his funds were exhausted. One of the last exploits of his career as a good thing was a supper given in a tiny roadhouse near the Bronx river, partaken of by half a dozen lively damsels, he being the only man in the party, except for a waiter, who early in the stunts performed as an accompaniment to the later courses became so absorbed in the singular entertainment that he was practically worthless. So he was put away in cotton, and the proprietor's wife attended to the wants of her strangely behaving guests. She has today, and will show the customer who broaches the matter with sufficient tact, a box containing a souvenir of the "little" supper. It is a jeweled buckle, not now fitted with the straps that originally were attached to it—for she's a modest woman, if in the pursuit of business inclined to overlook indelicate behavior on the part of good-paying customers. There was one that night for each of the other women, and hers was sent to her a few days later as an afterthought of the pleased patron.

NOTHING NEW FOR HIM.

This matter of gifts for his companions was quite according to precedent with this chap. The practice of giving cost him a pretty penny in his career in the Tenderloin. And quite as much in line with his regular practice was his being in company with several women. During all of his rollicking years he paid their way in clusters. Indeed, but for these two features of his high rolling he might still be setting 'em up for those ever on the lookout for his kind.

Now, these two peculiarities hardly indicate the model. What led to his being thus designated by his friends was his behavior when finally brought to the beginnings of a business training, when as a youngster he had a fortune only in prospect. When confronted by need he resumed just where he left off, influential friends assisting so far, and since has behaved himself admirably. His right-about has been maintained so seriously that he has won promotion in the offices where he is employed, and only recently was confessing to having had his salary boosted to $1700.

GOT AT HIS SALARY.

Creditable a showing as this was in one sense, it was unfortunate in another, for the news of the fact got to one of his creditors. This creditor was a liveryman, and warm-blooded apparently. Plainly, he meant to get his trifle of $800; even if he piled up costs and put the debtor to no end of trouble. For six months he had pushed the debtor for payment, and had been ignored. Then recourse was had to a law recently passed that quite upsets the situation that formerly prevailed. This was such that New York had the reputation of being a particularly hard state in which to collect a debt. Spendthrifts deeply in debt have confessed in searching examination to incomes as high as $20,000 a year, yet have been judicially freed from responsibility for their debts on the plea that they were entitled to keep up the manner of living to which they were accustomed; and as this always had exhausted their incomes they could not spare anything for creditors. But the new law permits the creditor to sit on 20 per cent of the debtor's salary, and under it the model young man is attacked. He is reported as saying ruefully that he thought he had paid the piper pretty liberally, but that isn't going to help him, and many petty beats are in much the same fix.

BURSTING BALLOONS WILL PROBE AERIAL SECRETS

Harvard's Meteorological Station To Co-operate With St. Louis Exposition In Balloon Ascensions—Recording Instruments Tell How Cold It Is Twelve Miles Up In the Air.

Boston, May 28.—With the co-operation of the management of the Louisiana Purchase exposition, A. Lawrence Rotch, founder and director of the meteorological observatory, on Blue Hill, near this city, is about to undertake, at St. Louis, an extended series of experiments with balloons carrying self-recording instruments far into the upper air. An appropriation of $2500 has been made to further the undertaking, which will begin about June 15, if the various pieces of meteorological apparatus which have been ordered arrive in time.

These "sounding balloons," though in common use among European meteorologists, have not been employed before in this country. Those to be used by Mr. Rotch are of small size, only 5 or 6 feet in diameter, and are made of sheet Para rubber. When filled with hydrogen gas, they ascend with increasing speed, the gas distending the elastic receptacle all the while, until at heights varying from ten to twelve miles the balloon bursts, and the instruments drop lightly to the earth, supported by a parachute. If allowed to fall without hindrance, they would, of course, be broken.

St. Louis will, it is believed, be a particularly favorable place for carrying on such a series of expriments, because, situated in the center of the continent, in the midst of a flat, open country, and with no large bodies of water in the vicinity, there is a pretty fair chance that most of the instruments sent up will be recovered. Ordinarily the parachute bearing the instruments, falls at no great distance from the point of start, though in exceptional cases a strong wind will carry them 100 miles or so. All the balloons dispatched from St. Louis this coming summer and autumn will have a printed request in English that the finders do not meddle with the instruments, but send them back to the exposition grounds, and offering a suitable reward for the favor. The newspapers of St. Louis and the neighborhood will also, no doubt, print notices of the time of each ascent, so that people in the surrounding country may be apprised when to look for meteorological treasures in their fields.

A further advantage of the co-operation between the Blue Hill observatory and the St. Louis exposition lies in the fact that since hydrogen will be generated there in great quantities for the aeronautical contests, particularly for those coming off next autumn, the small amount of gas required for the "sounding balloons" will be available at no expense.

Fifty balloons have been ordered from Germany, and twenty recording instruments from France, and it is expected that for a time two ascensions at least each week will be maintained. Each balloon carries a barometer, recording continuously the heights which it reaches, and a thermometer which shows the corresponding temperatures at these heights.

The importance of this work is that it will give the scientists their first opportunity to find out something definite about the conditions in the upper atmosphere over this continent. Regarding the European higher altitudes, they are already beginning to acquire some knowledge. It is now about ten years since the French meteorologists first began sending up what were derisively called "lost balloons," as a means of testing the direction of the air currents at great elevations. No recording instruments were attached at first. A few years ago, however, the custom grew up of attaching instruments to the balloons, and there came about a lively rivalry betwene France and Germany to make this method of probing the atmospheric heights most useful, and to penetrate furthest into the upper strata. By skilful manipulation, ascents of fifteen miles began to be accomplished, and the temperature properly recorded.

Then presently there was established the International Commission for Scientific Aeronautics, of which Mr. Rotch is the American member. This commission, which has its headquarters at Strassburg, in Germany, has given especial attention to ascensions, and has established a monthly day for the international ascent of balloons and kites, which is observed by meteorologists in most of the countries of Europe. On this day balloons and kites are sent up simultaneously all over the continent, and kites are flown at Blue Hill, and from the records thus obtained it is possible to tabulate the meteorological conditions prevailing simultaneously at various heights. These results have been published at the cost of the German government.

A meeting of this commission is to be held in St. Petersburg in August, and plans developed for future work, including, probably, arrangements for studying the atmosphere over the oceans, where balloons, of course, cannot be used, by means of kites flown from the steamship deck—a plan that was first tried by Mr. Rotch and his associates of the Blue Hill Obesrvatory in 191, and the kite thereby rendered independent of the natural wind.

What the scientists hope to gain from the investigations of this summer at St. Louis is at least a fragmentary knowledge of the temperature and other modifications of the atmosphere at great heights over the United States. In particular they hope to discover whether a stratum of warm air, which has been dipped into by balloons secending from Europe to heights of six and eight miles, extends over the Western hemisphere as well. The very existence of such a stratum was unsuspected until recently. Indeed, not so many years ago even the scientists supposed, as most laymen certainly suppose now, that the air grows steadily colder, at the rate of about twenty degrees per mile higher you go up. It is now a well established fact that there are all sorts of modifications of this law, and during the progress of scientific kite-flying, which was first developed as an important branch of meteorological work by the Blue Hill observatory, which is now a part of Harvard university, the actual status of the atmosphere at different seasons and in varying weather conditions up to a height of about three miles, has been carefully investigated. How the air circulates at great altitudes, however, and what varying, permanent, or temporary thermal strata exist in it, has thus far been rather guessed at than ascertained. The surface currents, including the trade winds of the tropics, ahve been pretty thoroughly studied, and there are reasons for believing that great anti-trade winds flow above the trade winds and in opposite directions; and some observers have conjectured that huge masses of warm air rise about the equator, and roll off in constantly descending and cooling streams toward the two poles. But this is really a field in which accurate investigation is only beginning to be possible; the meteorologists themselves admit that most of the speculations of the past are likely to prove to have been in the air. An effort to solve th eproblem of the circulation of the air above the trade winds and didrums was made last year by Mr. Rotch, who applied to the Carnegie institute to aid him to charter a steamer provided with kites and the apparatus necessary to sound the atmosphere in these regions.

MINNESOTA BUILDING AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

glass jars on the shelves are to be seen samples of the different brades of iron ore mined on the Mesaba range. A number of fine photographs of the mines taken by the students of mining engineering at the university of Minnesota are displayed on the walls.

The Minnesota state building is situated in the southeastern part of the exposition grounds on what is known as the Plateau of States. North of it stands the structure erected by Ohio and a short distance further are the Missouri and United States government buildings. Directly to the south is Iowa's magnificent building and beyond is the quaint adobe-like structure of Arizona. The building itself is of the Byzantine style of architecture, two stories in height, and bears the state coat of arms blazoned across the front. It is nearly square, being 82 by 92 feet.

The whole of the lower story is devoted to rooms for the reception and entertainment of World's far visitors, the idea being to make it a homelike and attractive place for Minnesotans coming to the fair. There is a main reception hall, a reading and rest room for ladies and one for gentlemen. Here are to be found copies of nearly all the daily and weeklypapers published in the state, a few days old to be sure, but none the less welcome to people from Minnesota. There is not a single window on this floor, the walls being entirely composed of glass doors opening onto the wide portico which surrounds the building. The upper portions of these doors are of colored glass and have inscribed on them the names of the different counties in the state. All of the furniture for the rooms on this floor was made by the school children in the public schools of the Twin Cities. The upper floor is occupied by Superintendent of Exhibits Mitchell, and others employed on the Minnesota exhibits, a special room being reesrved for the use of Governor Van Sant. As a whole Minnesota's building is one of the most unique of the state buildings and has attracted much attention. About $20,000 out of a total appropriation of $100,000, made by Minnesota, was expended on the edifice.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Winnepeg.
Crookston at Grand Forks.
Superior at Fargo.

Winnipeg, Man., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mr. Owens did it with his little hatchet. He stepped off the train from Minneapolis here yesterday morning, walked to the baseball grounds and smeared the whitewash all over the "Champs." He had the home players sawing the air and tapping weak bunts into the fielders' mits, while the White Sox chortled with glee and took kindly to the slants served up by Bemis.

It was a sorry day for the Winnipeg batters when Mr. Owens struck the Northern league. He made their averages look like two cents' worth of radium.

Owens is a dandy. He has perfect control, good speed and the whole list of curves including some new ones of his own which make the ball look about the size of a half grown pea. He kept putting the ball right over and forced the batsmen to hit it. His field backed him up with perfect support and he had no trouble in shutting out the "Champs." In fact, they never had a look-in, only one man reaching second during the game. The only error chalked up was an excusable one by Ball, which was not costly. Four men fanned and one was issued deadhead privileges to the first station.

The visitors played championship ball. They went after everything in sight and got it. At the bat they were enough to give a pitcher heart failure. The little habit of landing on a pitcher about the eighth inning, which they have exhibited since striking Winnipeg, is a very discomforting one to the fans. Bemis' curves looked pretty good for seven innings. The heavy hitters among the visitors were not able to find him at opportune times, and only one run was scored up to the first of the eighth. At this juncture, however, the visitors appeared to have some anxiety about the outcome, and just to make sure of the victory Martin knocked out a clean single, and Randall after allowing two good ones to go by untouched, lammed one of Mr. Bemis' slants right on the nose for four cushions.

They then added insult to injury in the ninth by piling up two more runs when there was no call for them. These came on an error by Claytor and a couple of hits.

Only thirty-one batsmen faced Owens, and in five of the nine innings the side was retired without a man reaching first. The score:

SYMONS AN ENIGMA.

Fargo Fails to Find His Twisters.

Fargo, N. D., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Symons was a mystery to Fargo batsmen yesterday afternoon and the Wisconsin bunch took the game. The work of Milton for Fargo made a favorable impression except in the third when he was wild. Sensational fielding by Treager and Mankie were the features of the game.

Umpire Smith was put out in the eighth for a short interval by a foul tip in the solar plexus, but revived by the time King Perry counted 9.

Superior's baggage went astray and only part of the team had its regular uniforms. Old clothes were borrowed from Fargo and the boys were able to appear.

Demonteville played his first game for Fargo and made a good impression despite the fact he made the only error. The score:

BREAKS THE HOODOO.

Crookston Shuts Out Grand Forks In Beautiful Game.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The second game of the Crookston series was played here yesterday. The weather was ideal for fast ball, but there was a small crowd in attendance. It was another of those 1 to 0 games. Thomas was on the slab for the visitors and pitched beautiful ball, doing the best work of any pitcher on the local field this season. Three passes and one little scratch hit was all the Tigers could get from him. This together with the fact that the team behind him played an errorless game accounts for the defeat of the Tigers.

Thomas played a star game, having six assists, one put-out, and no errors to his credit. Four of the Tigers fanned, and in the ninth inning, he struck out the first two men up, just to show the fans how easy it was, and those two men were no less than Sharnweber and Nagel. The next man was Martin who sent a little one to the third baseman and was retired on first.

The visitors made their score in the second inning. Hofman lead off with a hit and Burto sacrificed, Thomas did the same thing and Hofman landed on third before he knew it. Then an error by Cheek tells the tale of the score by the visitors.

O'Brien was on the slab for the Tigers and did some good work. Six hits, no passes, and a team making five errors was a little too long a tale for a winning game when the opponents put up such a sample of ball.

Hutchinson, appeared and took his stand on the third corner for the Tigers. He looks to be a fast man although he has an error to his credit for the first game. The score:

All alone at the top, and they have been playing away from home.

Hank Gehring will pitch this afternoon, and the Sox may make it three straight.

Duluth always could beat the Canucks. Corbett and Bartos used to come down here to get the conceit knocked out of them.

"Joe" Wilkes can have the appointment of official prophet for The Herald. He told The Herald man Thursday that Duluth would take two out of three from Winnipeg.

"Newt" Randall had only a double and a home run to his credit yesterday. Martin also had a double and Quillan two safe singles.

That was a pretty good game up at Grand Forks. The North Dakota men may prove a harder nut to crack than the Canucks.

TEN PIN RECORD BROKEN.

Omaha, Neb., May 28.—For the second time within a month the world's record for five-man team at ten pins has been broken by an Omaha team. The old record was 3217, held by an Erie, Pa., team. The first Omaha record was 3232, and last night the same team bowled a total of 3260. The record for a single game by five men was also established, 1186, the previous score being 1164, also held by the Erie team.

GANS DEFEATS COOK.

Baltimore, May 28.—Joe Gans, the lightweight champion, defeated Jewey Cook, reputed to be the lightweight champion of England and the welterweight champion of South Africa, last night, before the Eureka A. C. The men were to have boxed fifteen rounds to a decision. Cook weighed twelve or fifteen pounds more than Gans, the latter having weighed in at 143 pounds.

Gans did the fighting throughout the bout and three times floored Cook, who took the count on each occasion. He quit in the eighth round, after right and left swings to the jaw, which nearly put him out.

AMATEUR GAMES

Commercial League Arranges Schedule—Two Games Each Week.

Fashions to Go to Two Harbors—West Duluth to Hibbing.

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE.

STANDING.

F. A. Patrick	2	0
Northern Pacific	1	1
First National bank	0	1
Kelley-How-Thomson	0	1

The First National bank and Northern Pacific teams will play this afternoon in the Commercial league series at Baseball park. Both teams have been beaten in close games by the Patrick team, and the game this afternoon should be a good one.

The new schedule of the league has been drawn up. The dropping out of the Marshall-Wells team left four clubs in the league, and it necessitated a change in the schedule. Eighteen games will be played at the rate of two each week during the season.

* * *

The Duluth Fashions will leave tomorrow morning for Two Harbors, where they will play the fast nine from that town tomorrow afternoon. The Fashions will have practically the same team that defeated Cloquet last Sunday afternoon. It will line up as follows: Pitchers, Lowe or Lovell; catcher, Lewis; first base, Carroll; second base, Thompson; short stop, Patrick; third base, Peterson; left field, Berg, center field, Bennett; right field, Lundgren or Allen.

The Two Harbors nine is one of the fastest amateur teams in this neck of the woods, and they should give the Fashions a run for the money.

* * *

The Big Duluth nine will leave this evening for Ashland, where two games will be played tomorrow and Monday.

* * *

The West Duluth team will play in Hibbing tomorrow and on the holiday. The new ball grounds in Hibbing are the finest north of Duluth. They will be opened tomorrow with the usual ceremonies of a brass band and the mayor to pitch the first ball over the plate. A second game will be played Monday afternoon. Larson will pitch tomorrow for West Duluth and Freeman for the range men.

ATHLETES SUSPENDED

By the Central Amateur Athletic Association.

Chicago, May 28.—The registration committee of the Central Amateur Athletic union yesterday gave notice of the suspension of fourteen of the best known athletes in the Middle West, and the placing upon the ineligible list of seven more, for a participation in an "unsanctioned" dual meet between the First infantry of Chicago and the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, on May 4.

While the suspension is laughed at by the college men, as far as their own events are concerned, it will affect the men who are not in college, and those college men who have become associated with outside bodies, including the Chicago Athletic association and the Milwaukee Athletic club. Nine of the suspended men were members of the First Infantry Athletic association, most of them expecting to take part in the amateur championship events at St. Louis. They are: Harley Kirby, George Smith, William Uffendall, Roy Albertson, Otto Kaecke, Edward Hill, Walter Steffen, Holton and Neil. The five Michigan men are Hahn, Hall, Schule, Meller and Kellogg. The remaining Michigan men who are declared ineligible for registration in the Amateur Athletic union are: Norcross, Perry, Withey, Rose, Keller, Goodwin, and Dunlap.

FITZSIMMONS AS ORATOR

Delivers Polished Speech at a Benefit In Boston.

Boston, May 28.—Bob Fitzsimmons, who already holds two titles, added another to his list at the Howard theater, where he was boxing last week with Bob Armstrong. Fitz has always been known as the star orator of the prize ring, but when, after three hard, fast rounds, he was called on for a speech, he gave one which put all his past efforts to shame, and was applauded as much for it, almost, as he was for his showing with the mitts. He said:

"During my recent visit to Boston I received the most warm-hearted reception that was ever extended me. While I have received generous treatment in all sections of our glorious country, yet there is something about Boston's greeting which is homelike and enduring. I have been asking myself the reason, and I finally reached the conclusion that Boston especially loves two men—the pugilist and the orator.

"Your greatest enthusiasm and admiration have been poured out at the feet of John L. Sullivan and Daniel Webster. It is my ambition to emulate these two mortals that evidently has endeared me to your hearts. You inherited your fondness for good fighters and men of superior mental equipment. Your ancestors showed their courage when they threw the unjustly taxed tea into your city's harbor, and later proved their valor at Bunker Hill. Your devotion to those who have elevated mankind by striking against slavery, and your love for those who have enriched the field of literature need no mention.

"A city that has applauded a John L. Sullivan and a Daniel Webster, and encouraged a Wendell Phillips and a John Boyle O'Reilly is only repeating itself when she honors a Bob Fitzsimmons. But aside with levity. Allow me to say that I greatly appreciate the cordiality of your welcome, and I trust that as time's noiseless wheels roll me onward that I may ever prove worthy of your esteem and friendship."

The little speech, which was, by the way, impromptu, brought down the house, and the grand old man of the ring was cheered to the echo.

FOUGHT TO A DRAW.

Toledo, O., May 28.—Willie Fitzgerald, of Brooklyn, and Fred Douglas, of Georgia, fought ten rounds to a draw here last night. Willie Gibbs, of Philadelphia, easily defeated Kid Groff, of this city, in three rounds.

MIGHTIEST TEAM

Of Baseball Players On the Face of the Earth

President Harry Pulliam of National League Names Players.

St. Louis, May 28.—A perfect baseball team!

The hazy dream of the fans and "ultima Thule" of baseball is, according to President Harry Pulliam of the National league impossible. Here is the team:

McGinnity, pitcher.
Young, pitcher.
Kling, catcher.
Tenney, first baseman.
Lajole, second baseman.
Wagner, short stop.
Collins, third baseman.
Clarke, left fielder.
Beaumont, center fielder.
Keeler, right fielder.

The team which President Pulliam says can beat forever any team composed of any nine men in the business is taken at large from the two big leagues. He has two pitchers, making ten men, six from the National league and four from the American.

"Of course, picking a team like this from all the players of the two big leagues is necessarily a matter of personal choice to a great extent," said President Pulliam. "And while a perfect team is impossible I think the ten men I have chosen are as great or a greater baseball team than any that could be formed either with some of the team I pick or with the remainder of the players.

"I don't think that my being president of the National league figured in my selection of the majority of the team from that organization. I have picked these men, all of them, with the firm belief that they field their positions better and with their batting combined make the strongest players possible for those places."

"My team is composed of Cy Young, of the Boston Americans, and Iron Man Joe McGinnity, of the New York Nationals, as pitchers, and Kling, of the Chicago Nationals, as catcher. That is my battery. For first base Tenney, of the Boston Nationals, and Lajoie, of Cleveland, the great Frenchman, for second base. Wagner, of Pittsburg, and Collins, of the Boston Americans I want for short stop and third base. The outfield is a harder proposition, but I like Fred Clarke, of Pittsburg, as left fielder; Beaumont, his team-mate, as center fielder, and Keeler, of the New York Americans, in right field. I will go to the front for that team.

"Now, begin with the pitchers, and see if you can pick any flaws in that layout. 'Cy' Young ought not to be insulted with any comment on his ability. He is beyond all question the greatest that ever wore a toeplate, and he has a good prospect of continuing in that role for some time."

"Iron Man" McGinnity is so close to old 'Cy' that he is entitled to a one-two position with him. McGinnity is a great pitcher, but he is not the steady old warhorse from New England. However I have no apologies to make for putting him in with Young as the two best pitchers in the business.

"Now my catcher, Kling, I picked without any hesitation. To my mind he is the great and only behind the bat. He can catch rings around any other catcher working. I think that Kling is more nearly perfect in his work than any man I ever saw.

"There are several good first basemen in the two leagues, but Tenney, of Boston, is, in my judgment, entitled to the place on the best team. St. Louis has two good men in Beckley, and this new man Jones, but they are not up to Tenney's form."

"All the second basemen that have ever or will ever play baseball will always be handicapped by having the name of Lajole shoved out in front of them as soon as they begin to attract attention. I am not going into any analysis of the great Frenchman's game. You have all seen him play and they have to make a special class of second basement to fit him. Ritchey is a good player, and this young man Huggins does very well.

"The short field will have to go to the only Hans Wagner. The Pittsburg short stop has the edge on all of them in fielding and batting, but not by nearly the same margin as Lajole holds the kingship of territory. Were it not treason to the veteran, Wallace, of the Browns, would be a likely candidate, and Parent, of the Boston Nationals can toddle around a little between second and third stations. I like Shay's style very much and he should make a great player.

"Now, there is the team that I pick to beat the world and why I pick it. I know, of course, that there are numbers of good players at every position for which I have picked these men, but I have a little weakness for this combination and in cold-blooded judgment I think it is the best.

RESEMBLES SIRE.

Counterpart of Joe Patchen Recently Foaled.

Those who have seen the brother to Dan Patch (1:56) recently foaled at Parkway Farm, Goshen, N. Y., say that he is an exact counterpart of his famous sire, Joe Patchen (2:04¼) having four white feet and a white stripe in his face. Other recent foals at Parkway Farm by Joe are colt out of Helen Simmons (2:11¼), Almeda Almeda (2:09¼) and Break O'Day (2:11½). All the above names have been bred back to Joe Patchen.

THE LITTLE MEN

Again to the Front, Corbett Agreeing to Meet Britt.

Terry McGovern and Eddie Hanlon as Good as Matched.

San Francisco, May 28.—With Jimmy Britt and Young Corbett all signed up for a return engagement and Terry McGovern and Eddie Hanlon apparently as good as matched, the patrons of pugilism in San Francisco have some gilt-edged entertainment to look forward to. In the present condition of the public mind the inevitable second meeting between Britt and Corbett is regarded as the biggest ring event in prospect, while the go between Hanlon and the Brooklyn Whirlwind will cause almost as much stir.

In the meager details of the Britt-Corbett contest which came to us it is noticed that no specific weight is mentioned, an that the referee is studiously avoided. We are told that the men are to box for "the featherweight championship of the world," which conveys the intimation that Britt will be content to fight at a lower notch than 130 pounds.

Incidentally, it is a stretch of imagination to consider either Britt or Corbett a feather. Things have been more or less muddled since Terry McGovern lost his crown, and this particular weight division is as a stream that has overflowed its banks. The title is still a bone of contention, of course, but when all is said the latest victor is more quickly recognized when referred to as the felow who licked Terry McGovern, or Young Corbett, as the case may be.

Another thing about the weights. Young Corbett may insist upon 128 pounds and Britt may acquiesce, but Corbett will have far harder work than Britt getting to the stipulated weight. If his experience during his past fights in San Francisco are any guide as to what will happen, he will have to take vapor sweats or else visit some Turkish baths a few hours prior to weighing in.

But even then Corbett will be stronger than Britt when they toe the scratch. The ex-champion is such a broad-beamed, solid chunk of humanity that his strength is not affected materially by the drastic methods resorted to to make weight. When he steps on the scales his body retains its poloponey rotundity, and a drawn look about the face is the only indication that he has been taking off a few pounds of avoirdupois.

Britt, on the other hand, presents a herring-gutted appearance when required to make lower than 130 pounds. The weight comes off his ribs and loins, and a good deal of his stamina goes with it. As said before though, he has always managed to reduce to the mark called for in the ordinary course of training, while Corbett, who claims to be able to make 124 pounds if necessary, has to be boiled and steamed and harowed on fight days in order to save his weight forfeit.

The sports are wondering who will be asked to referee the coming fight. Corbett is on record to the effect he will not tolerate Graney, and Graney has expressed himself just as definitely to the end that he will preside over no further functions in which Young Corbett is one of the principals.

When all is said and done, it is felt here in San Francisco that Graney came out of that last affair with far less loss of dignity than Corbett. In canvassing Corbett's record here it was recalled that when he boxed Eddie Hanlon, the first time, Hanlon and Manager Mike Short, who has since died, were firmly of the belief that the local lad had earned the decision. Numbers of Hanlon's friends thought similarly, but there was no recrimination and Graney's verdict permitting Corbett to share the honors of a draw was accepted with comparatively few murmurs.

When Corbett boxed McGovern in San Francisco there was a lively ringside wrangle over the count when McGovern was knocked out. There was division of opinion even among local followers of the game and the prospects were bright for an interminable dispute, when Sam Harris stepped forward and said: "Graney is as square as they make them and as he has decided we were knocked out we acknowledge that we were defeated fairly."

Quite a contrast between the methods of Hanlon and Harris and Corbett when later defeat marked him for its own. There was an inclination to attribute his first doleful yawp to extreme chagrin at being bested by a boy he expected to dispose of in a few rounds, but seeing that he has not attempted at any time since to give Britt the credit he deserves a good many of the far Western sports have come to reward Corbett as the hardest loser the San Francisco ring has known.

The thing carried with it a salutary lesson for Ed. M. Graney, the most prominent of modern referees. Graney loves good company and was never happier than when whirling along the beach in Young Corbett's automobile. Jimmy Britt doesn't own an outo and even if he had one it is doubtful if Graney would have taken an airing in it, for it is no secret that Britt and Graney are not boon companions by a long shot.

When Corbett sent up that agonizing wail: "I have been betrayed by Graney, who pretended to be my friend," one of Graney's cronies remarked to the referee: "There goes your automobile rides and your little suppers at the beach."

Then Graney bit his lip and thought, and thought and thought. He saw at a glance where the acceptance of invitations to ride in a champion's buzz wagon could easily lead to complications which would prove exceedingly embarrassing to a fellow who desired to be known as a fair-minded referee.

The last Australian mail brought a few little items of interest in the pugilistic line. Billy Murphy is touring New Zealand with a younger brother whom the one-time featherweight champion offers to back against any lightweight living for $2500.

A match has been spoken of between Billy Murphy and Bob Turner, lightweight champion of Australia.

At Neil, a San Francisco middleweight, who went to Australia recently, is matched to fight "Soldier" Thompson, a Sydney heavyweight, and one of the best men in the antipodean ring at present.

The National Sporting club of London is trying to induce Larry Foley, retired champion of Australia, to accept a position as boxing instructor at a handsome salary. It is thought that the leaders of the National club are alarmed at the decadence of British fighters, and are anxious that Foley, who developed Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsimmons and several others, should see what he can do with London's rising generation. It isn't likely Foley will accept.

HARNESS GOSSIP.

Lexington, Ky., May 28.—Horsemen here predict that Scott Hudson will have no greater money winner in his stable this year than Gail Hamilton, the sensational 3-year-old winner of 1902. The now 5-year-old mare is in grand shape, and her record, 2:11¾, makes her elegible to races for the 2:12 class. Hudson drove her a mile last year as a 4-year-old in 2:09½. She has not started since the Memphis meeting of 1902.

Senator J. W. Bailey, here on a visit to his stock farm and to see some of his young trotters tried out, says he does not look for any record-breaking prices at the sale of the horses belonging to the estate of the late J. Malcolm Forbes at Boston on the 23rd inst. The Texas statesman says the tendency of the trotting market at present is an assurance for average good prices on any first-class stock offered, and not that of fictitious values. He says, of course, if two men of wealth come together in competition for the great Bingen, 2:09¾, the son of May King may bring a sensational high figure, but he does not look for even the holder of so many best records to bring over what several horses of similar merit have brought in the last few years.

From statistics compiled here by a noted authority especially for J. and Harry Hamlin, the Buffalo horsemen, seventeen of the 2:10 performers by horses owned at the famous Village farm have won in races the huge sum of $258,190. Lord Derby, 2:06¾, now one of the stars of E. E. Smathers' great trotting stable, is the biggest winner with $74,325 to his credit.

The L. V. Harkness barn at the Kentucky trotting horse breeders' association track is being put in readiness for the occupancy of the millionaire's great string of trotters, which have been receiving their early spring training at the hands of the skilled driver, Ed Benyon, at Billings park, Memphis, Tenn. Benyon is expected to arrive here with Fresno, 2:06½, and the other stars of the aggregation the latter part of the month.

David Cahill, owner of the sensational Charley Herr, 2:07, claims that he has received letters from all the breeders who patronized the great horse last year, and of the forty-four mares bred to him in 1903, all but one are expected to drop colts or fillies by him. The horse will be campaigned this season after his stud service is over.

Of fifty 100 pacers of all ages in training at the breeders' association track only one wears hopples, and he is Canadian owned and trained. In Kentucky this style of gearing to make a horse go fast is rapidly disappearing.

Those two rejuvenated trotters—Captor (2:08½) and Country Jay (2:08¾)—both now in the hands of their old trainers, Charles Marvin and Gus Macey, are daily taking their work at the breeders' association track. Both will go down the line this year in the 2:10 class and are regarded by horsemen here as most dangerous competitors the gray gelding, Dr. Strong, will have to face this season. Last fall the holders of the world's mile and a half record looked a certainty in all the big races of this class this year, but the return to the turf of these two great geldings, eligible to the same class, does not make the going so easy for Dr. Strong in 1904.

The fast pacing division of Scott Hudson's string, made up of Norvelo (2:04¾), Twinkle (2:05¾) and Dr. Madara (2:08), are in great condition this spring and elicit much attention from the railbirds at the local track. No regular training stable at this course ever housed a trio of as fast side-wheelers as these three stars of Hudson's great string.

Joe Thayer, W. A. Owens, Ed Allen, Mike Bowerman and Dr. C. J. Phelps all have young trotters in their strings this season that they are confident will get the money. Richard Curtis, for the first time in several years, will also go down the grand circuit this season. He has a couple of green trotters and a young pacer which he believes are 2:10 prospects.

It is probable that Pleasant Thought, purchased in New York when a sensational yearling by Gen. Brayton Ives for $500 and placed in the care of Charles Marvin, in whose stable she has since been trained, will be bred next spring and retired to the stud. Of course, this is conditional on her failing to make good as a 3-year-old this season. So far she has proved a disappointment and is not much of a favorite with local horsemen, who regard any future sensational track record for her as decidedly uncertain.

LAWSON AFTER KRAMER.

Cyclist Returns From Australia With $10,000 Winnings

New York, May 28.—After a sevenmonths' sojourn in Australia, where he won more than $10,000 in cycle racing, Ivor Lawson, the speedy member of the Columbia team, has returned to New York and is now training at Vailsburg with a view of supplanting Kramer as the champion this year. It will be remembered that last season the pair were tied for honors until the last meet of the grand circuit. Although admitting Kramer's great speed, Lawson is confident that this year the New Jersey lad will have to take second place.

While in the antipodes with McFarland, Major Taylor, Stevens and Downing, Lawson added materially to his bank account, bringing home over $10,000. Of this sum, about $4000 was won in actual races, while the remainder was for appearance at the various tracks. McFarland did almost as well, while Major Taylor had a guarantee of $10,000 for the season.

Out of 16 duels of speed Lawson defeated Taylor 12 times. He says that McFarland is riding faster than ever before in his career and should be a formidable candidate for championship honors when he comes to this country. Starting 36 times in Australia, Lawson captured 28 firsts, five seconds and one third. Walker, the best man in Australia, was given 40 yards' start over Lawson in a mile handicap.

LACROSSE DEAD

No Chance For a Team In Duluth This Year.

Lack of Place to Practice Principal Cause of Failure.

Lacrosse has died a natural death in Duluth.

The game was started up here last year and in spite of the many discouragements the team made a very fair showing. A bunch of fast men was gathered together, and the prospects looked bright for another year, when the men had been able to have a little more practice in team work.

During the winter there was more or less talk of reorganizing the team, and early this spring two meetings were held for the purpose. Not more than half a dozen men showed up at each meeting and the few enthusiasts finally became disgusted and abandoned the project, so that Duluth will have no team in the field this year.

Several of the players of last year's team, including Grant and Fauble, have gone to Port Arthur and will play with the fast semi-professional team from that city during the coming summer.

Two or three of the other players have moved to St. Paul and will turn out with the St. Paul team this year. Two of the other members of the team who are still in the city declared their intention of quitting the game, so that not more than half of last year's twelve was available this season.

A number of new men, including several members of last year's high school team, were ready to turn out, however, and had the club been organized there is no doubt but that a good team could have been placed in the field. St. Paul and Port Arthur were anxious for games, and had the team made a good showing a trip to the St. Louis exposition could have been arranged.

The plans for reorganizing the club are dead now, however, and for another year at least lacrosse will probably be relegated to the shelf, although there is a possibility that the high school boys will take it up. Some of the members of last year's team became enthusiastic over the game, and are anxious to reorganize.

The chief cause for the lack of interest was the inability to secure a suitable place to practice. The driving park was too far from the central part of the city, and there was no other field available.

Two Harbors is considering a plan to organize a team this year, among the members of the hockey club, and games will probably be arranged with St. Paul.

WORLD'S FAIR HANDICAP

Promises to Be Greatest Race of Year.

St. Louis, May 28.—On Saturday, June 25, at the St. Louis fair grounds race track, will be run what promises to be the greatest race of the American turf year. It is the World's Fair handicap, and is the racing tribute to the great Louisiana Purchase exposition. Its entries and present eligibles include almost every horse of great prominence in the country, the only absentees in the top flight being Waterboy, who last year vied with McChesney for first honors in the handicap division, but his place is well filled by Gold Heels, in retirement last year, but out again this year with every evidence that he will stand and now in so advanced a state of preparation as to lead his owner and trainer, T. P. Hayes, of Donerail, Ky., to believe the horse is a better one than he has ever been in his life. His deeds and triumphs are of too comparatively recent a date to need recapitulation, and it seems only necessary to call attention to the fact that he was the first horse to cover the route of the World's Fair handicap in better than 2:04, he having covered the mile and a quarter in the Brighton handicap in 2:03 4-5, July 5, 1902, under an impost of 126 pounds, under the pilotage of Odom, he beat Blues, Argregor, Ten Candles, Herbert, Morningside, Water Cure, Port Royal and Northern Star. From end to end he was very close to the front, in all the ardor of the pace, and at the end drew away. The official Guide describes his win as being accomplished "cleverly." In talking of the race and the horse generally, Jockey Odom, who rode him in nearly all of his important races, said:

"The horse always had speed enough to take a position in any field, and speed enough to protect it. There was never any part of a race, no matter how fast it was being run, that I could not have sent him to the front. Once in a lead, he was inclined to loaf, but when challenged he always seemed to have something left to go away again, and I never did know how fast he could run."

The fractional time of the race in question will give an idea of the extreme speed the horse is capable of carrying:

0:22 2-5, 0:36, 0:48, 1:00 2-5, 1:13, 1:25 3-5, 1:38 2-5, 2:03 4-5.

If he is to win the World's Fair handicap under his impost of 120 pounds, he will have need of all his speed, as in the race are represented the highest types of extreme speed and of endurance ever bred in America. Holders of the world's records—for 5 furlongs, McGee; 6½ furlongs, Dick Welles; a mile and 5 furlongs, Africander—are among the eligibles, and competing with such a field the winner will have to be conceded championship honors.

MOHARIB, A LEADING WESTERN 3-YEAR OLD

FOUL STRIKE RULE A DANGER

Tim Murrane writes from Boston as follows: Dr. Nichols, the advisory coach of the Harvard team, says that the foul strike rule will kill the game in the major leagues, and gives as a reason the fact that teams are finding it impossible to make runs against a first-class pitcher who is backed up by good support. Dr. Nichols was a great pitcher during his college days at Harvard and as such he is thoroughly posted on all the fine points of the game. It seems to me that he speaks the truth.

Another argument against the foul strike rule offered by the same man is that the games are too short when the pitcher has so much the best of it. The public can stand a two-hour game, says Dr. Nichols, but nothing for baseball without batting soon becomes a tiresome sport.

* * *

Take the case of "Cy" Young this season, who has pitched six full games and in every game was forced to extend himself every minute of the game. The champions of the world were up against ten men in these six games, less than two to a game, and yet won four of them.

Young prevented his opponents from scoring in forty-five straight innings. Cleveland broke the spell and won the game by scoring three runs in the eighth inning of the game Tuesday of last week. Here were three weeks that the Boston pitcher was worked to a standstill, and in all that time he was only pitching a regulation game with fine speed, good curves and a perfect knowledge of his opponents' weaknesses.

Other pitchers are getting away with phenomenal records, and all helped out with the foul strike rule. While it takes much out of the hands of the umpires and is undoubtedly a fine thing for the minor leagues, it is certainly the advantage handed to the pitcher which is helping him to make a wonderful record at the expense of the game.

* * *

A shut-out should be a rare thing in baseball, where the picked batsmen of the whole country are employed to do their best efforts. Not only are the fine stickers unable to hit the star pitcher, but even find it hard work to hit the ball clean when stick work is called for against the average twirler. Baseball must be uncertain to hold the public, and the batsman must not be handicapped. By cutting down the number of balls to three and cutting out the foul strike rule, there would not be one shut-out where there are five at the present time, and it would mean something. The rulemakers have a serious problem to solve—whether to give the public a better run for its money or to exhibit some phenomenal pitcher once or twice a week.

I don't believe the rules should be interfered with this season, but feel sure that something must be done next season to hold the public interested.

* * *

In the early '80s the pitchers were allowed to jump about the box from fifty feet away until the batsmen became dizzy. The exhibitions became distasteful to the public which refused to pay to witness them. Many thought at that time that the sport had but a few years to live. The pitchers were then forced to keep their feet on the ground, may some of them draw more of the pitcher's box, and later were obliged to pitch sixty instead of fifty feet, until the batsmen were encouranged and the public once more warmed up to the game. The foul strike rule was all right for the National league after the most of its star players emigrated to the American league. Now, however, with both of the leagues playing stronger, and with the American league especially strong, something must be done to give the batsmen a chance to get on the bases.

I will admit that the foul strike rule looked pretty good for a while, but the small number of men reaching first base in the big games has forced me to change my mind and to class the rule as against the best interests of the game from a spectators' point of view.

* * *

Think of the Boston club holding the lead with only four men batting as good as .250 and but five men as good as .300. This is what the Collins team has been doing. Their sharp infielding and great battery work have held them in the front of the race. I have seen no club yet capable of disputing their right to first honors.

All the eastern and two of the western club—Cleveland and Detroit—have shown here. Cleveland was lucky to catch Boston playing in its worst form, but even at that Cleveland did not look like a pennant possibility by a good many points Cleveland has to depend on three or four men for the bulk of the work and these are often weary of the job. Even the great Lajoie, although hitting as well as ever, was not playing with the dash he showed last season. Cleveland is strong, but lacks the united staying quality to land the flag this season. In fact, Cleveland will have to keep busy to remain in the first division. Turner, the blues' new short stop, fielded his position very nicely and looked like a fixture.

Detroit looked as it always does—a club that may give the best a beating and then die easy the next day. The stuff is not there for a first division team. The Western teams are not faring any too well in the East, as they must go against difficult propositions in three out of the four cities.

The Eastern boys will do some great ball playing when they go West, as they will then be in prime shape. Boston has always been a good road team and this season should be better than ever.

Our National league team is doing better than was expected in the West, and by the time the next series of home games is played "Buck's braves" will be in shape to win their share of games from all comers.

I presume the poor encouragement the boys receive at the South End grounds has its effect on the playing of the team when at home.

What can be the matter with Pittsburg? is the query one hears on all sides. No one seems to be able to answer, and only a few venture to place this team out of the race, fearing that it may come with a spurt at any time. With Mathewson in his old form the New York giants should have a cake walk, as far as Pittsburg goes; but the failure of this great pitcher to deliver the goods in his old way has put "Mac" on the guessing bench, with the fear that Joe Kelley may keep going with his Cincinnati bunch, or that Fred Clarke may succeed in bracing up his aggregation.

Mike Lynch, the Brown College lefthander from Holyoke, whom Barney Dreyfuss has signed and who will join the team at the close of the college term, is a fine workman, and should put some real ginger into the champions.

There is one thing that must be said for the Pittsburg club while under Barney Dreyfuss. The men always played clean ball with the exception of Fred Clarke, who lost his head a few times and was a shade rough on the bases. Pittsburg won the honors three times in succession in a truly sportsmanlike way. And championships won otherwise leave a disagreeable taste.

AUTO BOATS READY TO RACE

Many Queer Shaped Craft For the Latest Yachting Fad.

New York, May 28.—Automobile boat racing is to furnish plenty of sport for yachtsmen who have become victims of the craze for power boats. The racing will begin on Decoration day, and from that time until the end of the season nearly all the yacht clubs will have one or more regattas for these boats.

Auto boat racing is an important fad. But if the foul strike rule there would not be one shut-out where there are five at the present time, and it would mean something. The rulemakers have a serious problem to solve—whether to give the public a better run for its money or to exhibit some phenomenal pitcher once or twice a week.

I don't believe the rules should be interfered with this season, but feel sure that something must be done next season to hold the public interested.

* * *

In the early '80s the pitchers were allowed to jump about the box from fifty feet away until the batsmen became dizzy. The exhibitions became distasteful to the public which refused to pay to witness them. Many thought at that time that the sport had but a few years to live. The pitchers were then forced to keep their feet on the ground, may some of them draw more of the pitcher's box, and later were obliged to pitch sixty instead of fifty feet, until the batsmen were encouranged and the public once more warmed up to the game. The foul strike rule was all right for the National league after the most of its star players emigrated to the American league. Now, however, with both of the leagues playing stronger, and with the American league especially strong, something must be done to give the batsmen a chance to get on the bases.

I will admit that the foul strike rule looked pretty good for a while, but the small number of men reaching first base in the big games has forced me to change my mind and to class the rule as against the best interests of the game from a spectators' point of view.

* * *

Think of the Boston club holding the lead with only four men batting as good as .250 and but five men as good as .300. This is what the Collins team has been doing. Their sharp infielding and great battery work have held them in the front of the race. I have seen no club yet capable of disputing their right to first honors.

All the eastern and two of the western club—Cleveland and Detroit—have shown here. Cleveland was lucky to catch Boston playing in its worst form, but even at that Cleveland did not look like a pennant possibility by a good many points Cleveland has to depend on three or four men for the bulk of the work and these are often weary of the job. Even the great Lajoie, although hitting as well as ever, was not playing with the dash he showed last season. Cleveland is strong, but lacks the united staying quality to land the flag this season. In fact, Cleveland will have to keep busy to remain in the first division. Turner, the blues' new short stop, fielded his position very nicely and looked like a fixture.

COLLEGE SPORTS.

New York, May 28.—The anual financial report of the Columbia University Football association has just been given, and the figures show that the year was a very profitable one. The deficit existing at the start of the season was wiped out and a balance of nearly $4000 was left with which to begin next season. The total receipts were $45,448.89, the largest sum ever taken in for a season of football at Columbia. The team's share of the amount was $18,047.17. The expenses were heavy, amounting to $12,000.17, leaving a profit at the end of the season of $7407.15. Out of this various debts, aggregating $6144.20, were paid, and the remainder added to the guarantee demanded by the superintendent of sports, is $3988.50.

The Yale-Columbia game at the Polo grounds proved to be the greatest attraction of the season, the receipts being $9250.90. Columbia received $5060.62 as her share of the receipts of the game with Pennsylvania and $2025.20 from the Amherst game. The game with Hamilton was the only one that did not show a profit, the loss, however, being only $171. The outlook for the coming season is very promising, and should a game be arranged with the University of Michigan for Thanksgiving day the receipts for the fall of 1904 will undoubtedly be much larger than last fall.

POWERFUL STROKE

Duluth Crew Using One Rather New But Effective.

Men In Excellent Form—Dr. Lynam Working Them Hard.

The stroke used by the members of the Duluth crew, which will visit Madison next month, differs slightly from any stroke in use in the West.

It is a very powerful stroke and requires a heavy crew to stand the strain. The legs are brought into use more than in the ordinary stroke, and it ends with a jamming down of the knees and a straightening of the legs.

The crew is now showing excellent form, and Dr. Lynam is devoting all his time to increasing the speed. The men are rowing well together and have learned the stroke perfectly. From now until they leave for Madison they will devote all of their time to striving for speed and will race against the second crew to develop this feature of the work.

The stroke should be well adapted to a two-mile race, which will be the distance rowed at Madison. In a two-mile race, which is practically a spurt from start to finish, it should prove to be a dangerous stroke when well handled by a heavy crew.

The oarsmen are confident of making a good showing in spite of the fact that they will be pitted against one of the fastest eights in the country. In the Poughkeepsie races Wisconsin has always just missed landing first place and is always a dangerous opponent and one of the most feared by the Yale, Cornell and Pennsylvania crews.

The local oarsmen have been handicapped by the short time they have had in which to train, and the fact that most of the men were far from being in condition for the race, while the Wisconsin oarsmen were in racing trim early in the spring. Some of the members of the local crew had to take off twenty or twenty-five pounds before they were in condition to row, and this had to be done in a little over two months.

Dr. Lynam, who is coaching them, has a wide reputation as an amateur athlete. He stroked the Harvard crew of 1891, which won the only one in ten years against the sons of old Ell, and he defended the amateur boxing championship for the Crimson the same year. The men are all enthusiastic over the manner in which he has conducted the training of the eight and claim that no small share of the credit will be due him should the crew make a good showing.

The race will take place two weeks from next Thursday, June 9.

SPRINTING

By the Champion.

All school boys are more or less interested in athletics, either on the gridiron, baseball diamond, or on the cinder path, and nearly all of them have ambition to excel in some form of manly sport.

It is chiefly to boys that I address these hints on training, which are the result of my own personal experience during my athletic career, which began during my school boy days. For this ambition few know outside the trained and successful athletes the hardships, self-denial and hard work to be encountered before one can literally come to the front in athletic sports, particularly in sprinting.

No hard and fast rules an be laid down for building up the body and training it for athletics, as no two constitutions or bodies are alike, each individual requiring different treatment. Each must exercise and train to suit his own physical requirements and capabilities.

STRICT TRAINING RULES NECESSARY.

First, elementary training must be commenced long before the more vigorous course required to prepare one's self for public performance or championship form.

To the beginner in sprint running, I would say that the strictest rules must be followed and a regular life led. Rise early, take a cold or tepid bath and a hard rub down. Eat plain and wholesome food. Never overexert yourself, and with the foregoing rules and early to bed every night any boy or man will be put in fair condition as a preliminary to a regular course of training.

Begin by jogging about a mile or two across country in the morning at an easy pace, keeping this up for two or three weeks, and always taking a good rub down when you return home. After this preliminary work in the morning take a rest, and during the day use chest weights or dumb-bells for developing the arm, chest and shoulder muscles.

As in running, begin these exercises gently, gradually increasing the violence and length of duration when you find you can do so without fatigue. Never overtire yourself in any way. Take a brisk walk before going to bed and retire early.

After a course of about three weeks as given above you will find your muscles developed, your lungs in good condition and your body generally so evenly developed that you will be in proper shape for training.

LIVE AND TRAIN REGULARLY.

Having got your body into condition to undergo a strict and rigorous course, begin by running sprints of fifty or sixty yards for a week, running the distance about five times at almost your top speed.

The afternoon is the best time for this, and here I may say that I have always tried to do my training as near the hour at which my race is to be run as possible. The reason for this is that if a regular life is led your body will not have had a longer or shorter time in action than if the training is done at the regular time when you toe the mark on the day of the race.

After a week of these bursts of speed the art of starting may be taken up. On the start depends the race, and starting is the most difficult part of sprinting for the beginner to master.

The old method of an upright standing start has gone out of date. The proper method of starting is the "crouching" start.

First, the hands must be on the line, the forward foto being five inches behind the line, one knee touching the ground and level with the instep of the forward foot. At the "caution" from the starter the athlete approaches the line and assumes an easy position. At the next word, "get set," raise the back knee from the ground, throwing the weight of the entire body on the forward knee, and let the body fall forward as if you were going to fall on your face.

Hold your breath all the time you are on the mark. At the report of the pistol push the ground away from your hands. This will raise your body. Push hard with both feet simultaneously, and although you appear to be falling forward, your momentum will keep you up, and before you realize it you are flying down the track.

ACQUIRE A LONG, BOUNDING STRIDE.

Now you are going—pay no attention whatever to your opponents; keep your head up and look straight forward all the time. Run as if you were running alone, whether your opponent is ahead or behind you.

After leaving the mark try to acquire a bounding step similar to a rubber ball and stride well from hips, which gives you the advantage of a longer stride. While I am barely five feet seven inches in height, I take a stride in racing nine feet, as big as that taken by Bernie Wefers, the former champion, who is six feet one inch. On nearing the tape, say about 10 feet away, the runner should pull himself together with all the force that he can command.

Put forth every effort, wherever your opponent may be, and fall forward, or practically throw yourself bodily on the tape at the finishing line. This will gain you many inches and win you many a race.

Of course, the start, the stride, the spurt and the finish must all be practiced separately, as good spurt and finish being fully as essential as a good start, which, as I have before said is half the race.

MODE OF BREATHING IMPORTANT.

To become a good sprinter you must master the art of breathing. As the runner approaches the mark at the cautionary command to "get set" the inhalation should be deep, but not to the full expansion of the chest. The breath should then be held during the time you are crouched on the mark. Your whole attention should there be concentrated to listening for the pistol crack. Keep totally oblivious to everything else, in fact, hold yourself literally in breathless suspense. At the crack of the gun, force the air from the lungs by a quick ejaculation or grunt. This helps your start just as a pugilist adds force to his blows by grunting as he drives it home. Catch another deep breath with a gasp instantly, which will be in your second stride and hold that breath until the tape is reached (in a 50 or 60 yard sprint), when you involuntarily gasp it out as you reach the tape.

Although this is an awful strain, the athlete will become used to it and perceive its advantage. In a longer race of 100 yards I take two breaths, the second one being at about 60 yards, which lasts me to the finish. The breathing must be done through the mouth, as it reaches the lungs quickest. Never entirely empty your lungs. The minute you do you collapse and lose your speed.

The beginner should practice breathing daily according to these rules and should expand the chest and lungs by the chest weights.

USE OF THE ARMS.

The arms should be developed as well as the legs, as they play an important part in sprinting.

On rising from the start clinch your fists. Bring the left arm diagonally across the chest as the rear foot is pushed forward and each arm is swung across the body alternately in unison with the stride. This cross motion of the arms, I have found proves a great help to maintaining the "bounding" stride. Great care should be taken when practicing this motion that the arms are not swung too far out or the assistance will be nullified.

The body should be carried at an incline forward about 80 degrees. Many a race is lost by a man carrying his body upright and rigid, both of which retard the speed.

DON'T SMOKE OR DRINK.

In conclusion I would lay down the following rules: Let the diet be plain. Dispense with pastries, candies and, above all never smoke or dring alcoholic liquids when training. You will be better without the two latter at all times. Cigarettes are fatal to athletes. Bathe daily and always use rough towels after a bath and after taking any exercise. Never overexert yourself and exhaust all your strength in any trial. Always finish our training, with "some thing left in you." Only work the hardest in the race itself.

By practicing the above methods and persisting in them until they are entirely mastered you will gain strength and increase your speed to a degree beyond your expectations. Finally, let me impress on all aspiring athletes the fact that rigidness in purpose in training and steady perseverance are as essential as the bulldog determination necessary to land you a winner at the tape.

PITCHING STUNTS

Bancroft Says Days of Real Pitching Stunts Are Gone.

Anson's White Stockings Shut Out Without a Single Hit.

Cincinnati, May 28.—"No hit games?" Mused Business Manager Bancroft on one of the Reds' idle days last week. "Did I ever see or hear of 'Cy' Young's feat being duplicated?

"Well, not exactly, but mighty near it—mighty near it.

"A little fellow of the name of ——, but let me begin at the beginning. It was in '79, when I was managing Worcester in the old International league. We had struck one of those ruts that comes to every team every once and so often and had lost eighteen straight games. The directors were for firing me and getting a new manager. But the stockholders stepped into the breach and saved my life by giving me thirty days in which to either 'make good' or lose my job. The next day we were scheduled to play an exhibition with 'Pop' Anson's White Stockings. I had heard of a young fellow with the beautiful name of J. Lee Richmond, with the accent on the Lee, who was doing good work for the Brown university team. I ran down to Providence that night and got the boy to come up to pitch the game against the Chicagos. J. Lee was a slightly built chap who weighed not much over 135 pounds and certainly didn't look the part of a pitcher.

"I also got Arthur Irwin—the famous Arthur Irwin—then but a mere boy playing on the lots around Boston, to come down and go in at short for me. When I told the fans what I had done they gave me the laugh.

"'What, come out and see those kids play the famous White Stockings!' was the burden of their chanted response to my invitation for their money. 'Not on your life.'

"Those who refused to come out missed one of the prettiest games that was ever played on any diamond. J. Lee Richmond shut out Anson and his heavy hitters without a hit. Only one man got to first, and he on balls. He was thrown out when he tried to steal second.

"Anson asked me if I had signed Richmond and I—for once in my life—told a lie. I said yes. But I 'coppered' my fabrication. The dressing room for the players was under the grand stand, and it wasn't much shucks. So I hired a carriage, and when the game was over got young Richmond by the arm and whispered in his ear:

"'Now, Mr. Richmond'—I used the Mr. because I wished to be diplomatic—'there isn't much of a place for you to dress down here, so I've taken the liberty of putting your street clothes in a hack. If you would like it, I'll drive you down to a hotel, where I have reserved a room and a bath for you. You can dress there.'

"He fell into my trap and I hustled him off to the tavern. There I had no trouble signing him to a contract, which called for $100 per month. He was the goods, too.

"Here is a funny thing, though. He had a stipulation in his contract that allowed him to go to Brown and graduate. On commencement day in Providence we had an all-fired important game booked—we had broken into the National league by that time. I wanted Richmond to pitch, but he stuck to his intention to get all the diplomas that were coming to him. I solved the difficulty by engaging a special engine at 'the enormous cost of $50,' as the showmen say, to haul that young gentleman from the festivities at Brown to Worcester. I jumped him in the engine as soon as he had his armful of sheepskins, and we had a merry ride to Worcester. Arriving there we jumped into a hack and bumped over the cobblestones to the park. When Richmond ran out on the field the big crowd yelled:

"'There he comes! There he comes! Now we'll win, sure!'

"But we didn't. The other fellows knocked eleven kinds of kinks out of J. Lee's benders and won in a walk. The boy was carrying too much weight for age in the shape of college honors and excitement, to win that game.

"But when you get right down to talking about pitching feats, none of these present day wonders overtop those of a decade and a half ago. Remember 'Old Hoss' Radbourne, who, like that young fellow Richmond I was speaking about, ended his diamond career in this city? Do you recall that he twirled twenty straight games for me and won eighteen of them? Do you also have in mind the fact that old George Bradley, who, I think, also pitched here at some time or other in his career on the diamond, pitched every single game during an entire season for me? Well, he did, and, furthermore, he pitched and won three games on the same day, a thing never before nor since accomplished. It was on the Fourth of July. We played at 8 o'clock in the morning at Worcester, at noon in Taunton, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in New Bedford. I umpired the game at New Bedford, and every ball was a strike. At that time I was running a hotel in New Bedford, and some fellow in the grand stand yelled at me:

"'Bancroft, ye may be a pretty good hotel keeper, but you're a frost as an umpire.'

"No, no. The old days of real pitching stunts are gone," concluded the old warrior as he went to the telephone and told his wife that he would be home at 6 o'clock for supper.

DULUTH'S NEIGHBORS TOWER

Tower, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Celia Oppel returned Saturday from a several weeks' visit with her sister, Mrs. W. A. Kingston, at Duluth.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nelson and family, of Winton, visited relatives here Saturday.

Miss Maymie Ericeson returned to Ely Saturday after a few days' visit here with her parents and friends.

Lute Engels returned Saturday noon from a three months' visit in Duluth, and at his home in Missouri.

Mrs. P. Burke and children arrived here Saturday from Rice Lake, Wis., to join Mr. Burke, who is employed here by the Tower Lumber company. They will take up their residence in the Shagren cottage recently vacated by the family of L. Mullaney.

Mrs. Louie Wagner and Miss Whipple were here from Ely last Saturday between trains visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. Charles Shaffer returned Saturday evening from a few days' business visit in the Zenith City.

Gus Morton was here Saturday, having resigned his position in Winton to accept one with the Vermilion Lumber company at their mill at the head of Lake Vermilion.

Mrs. A. T. Johnson and family left Monday for their new home at Couer d'Alene, Idaho, where Mr. Johnson has secured employment. The family have resided here for a number of years and their departure is greatly regretted by their many friends and acquaintances.

A number of young people enjoyed a day's outing on Lake Vermilion Sunday, having chartered the steamer Olive for the occasion. After a delightful ride on the lake the party was landed at Gold Island, where dinner was served. Over a hundred fish were caught during the day, two of which weighed twenty pounds each. The party consisted of Misses Filewood, Murphy, Campaigne, Tippet, Crozier, Shultz, Dunham, Jensen, Dailey, Upham, Graham and McLaughlin, and Messrs. B. Burgess, J. M. Brown, J. Humble, F. C. Burgess, J. Purdy, M. J. Murphy, J. Graham, J. H. Hickey, W. Lamphear and C. Anderson. A similar party has been planned for tomorrow.

Miss Helen Grant came down from Ely Saturday and visited relatives and friends until Monday noon.

Mrs. John Brostrom and children left Monday for their new home at Couer d'Alene, where Mr. Brostrom has secured employment.

Rev. James Hogan returned to Virginia Monday morning, having come here to hold divine service in the Catholic church Sunday.

Sam De Beaurividge left Monday for Virginia, where he is having a building erected, where he expects to open a boarding house in the near future.

James Owens came down from the head of Lake Vermilion and left Sunday for Oshkosh, Wis., having received the sad intelligence of the death of his brother, Ed, at that place.

Carl Borgstrom, wife and family returned to the city Tuesday evening after a long absence from the city, during which time they have resided at Moose Jaw, N. W. territory.

Mat McMahon came up Saturday from Two Harbors for a few days' visit at the home of A. D. Fuller. He returned home Monday afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. McMahon and baby, who have been here for the past week.

Roy McQuade has accepted a position in the First State bank. H. E. Townsend, the former incumbent, having resigned.

Mrs. Anton Johnson and children returned Tuesday evening from a few days' visit with friends in Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Tresiter left Wednesday for their new home at Mountain Iron, where Mr. Tresiter has been transferred, having formerly been employed as master mechanic by the Miner Iron company at the Minnesota mine at Soudan.

Mrs. Aspegreen, of Ely, visited here Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Pearson. She returned home Wednesday evening.

Miss Elma Swanson returned Wednesday from a two weeks' visit with relatives at Sparta.

Miss Minnie Pearson returned Thursday from a few days' visit at Ely.

Mrs. Ayling was in town from her home at the head of Lake Vermilion several days this week, having been called here by the news of the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Paradee. The patient has recovered from a threatened attack of typhoid fever.

Bishop McGolrick, of the diocese of Duluth, will be here next Wednesday to confer the sacrament of confirmation on about fifty children of the local Catholic congregation. He will be accompanied by Rev. Hogan, of Virginia, and one or more priests from Duluth.

J. Sovde returned to Ely Saturday after a few days spent here, having been called here by the death of his father, C. Sovde.

A baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kitto on Sunday, May 15.

John Soderquist returned Saturday from a three months' tour through the states of Illinois and Indiana.

John Jacksha has disposed of his interests in the People's Meat Market company to his partners, A. Garnie and A. Stefonich, who will continue the business. Mr. Jacksha has removed his family to his homestead west of town and expects to devote his time to that property for the summer.

George H. Vivian, postmaster at Soudan, has signified his intention of entering as a candidate for the office of county treasurer on the Republican ticket.

Mrs. August Naslund was agreeably surprised Thursday evening by a number of friends who came in unexpectedly. Cards were in order followed by a delicious lunch. Those present were Mesdames Murphy, Filewood, Voss, Hadley and O'Keefe, Misses Filewood and Murphy.

GRIP CONVALESCENCE

There's nothing better than Scott's Emulsion after the grip. When the fever is gone the body is left weak and exhausted; the nervous system is completely run down and vitality is low.

Two things to do: give strength to the whole body and new force to the nerves. Scott's Emulsion will do it; contains just what the worn-out system needs.

Rich blood, healthy flesh, resistive force, more and better nourishment are what Scott's Emulsion supplies to the convalescent.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.
SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

TESTS PATIENCE

The Most Patient Duluth Citizen Must Show Annoyance at Times.

Nothing spoils a good disposition,
Nothing taxes a man's patience,
Like any itchiness of the skin.
Itching Piles almost drive you crazy.
All day it makes you miserable,
All night it keeps you awake.
Itch! Itch! Itch! with no relief.
Just the same with Eczema.
Can hardly keep from scratching it.
You would do so but you know it makes it worse.
Such miseries are daily decreasing.
People are learning they can be cured.
Learning the merit of Doan's Ointment.
Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure Piles, Eczema or any Itchiness of the skin.

Read the testimony of a Duluth citizen. Warren Blossom, formerly of 519 Superior street, east, says: "It is a pleasure for me to recommend a remedy of such sterling merit as Doan's Ointment. For twelve years I suffered from eczema in a very bad form on the groin and upper limbs. The irritation was intense and few can realize what agony I endured. The skin assumed a coarse, leathery appearance. I used ointment after ointment, wash after wash, and bottle after bottle of medicine. Doctors did me no good and I despaired of ever getting rid of it. When I saw Doan's Ointment advertised and thinking that it probably might relieve me, if only temporarily, I got a box and commenced to use it. The first applications cooled and relieved the burning irritation, and by the time I had used one full box all signs of the trouble had left me, and the skin was soft and smooth."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box.

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

HYPNOTISM AS A CURE

For Profanity, Inebriety and Cigarette Smoking.

Hazelton, Pa., has a cure for drunkenness that beats the Keeley cure all hollow, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Moreover, it is quicker—takes about an hour at the outside—and cheaper, as it is administered free of charge. The cure is hypnotism. Nothing new about that. Dr. Quackenboss, of Columbia used that cure quite a while ago—and lost his position at Columbia thereby. Moreover, there seems to be some doubt as to whether he cured to stay cured. Hazelton has no such doubt concerning the young hypnotist who has been operating of late on her drunkards and her cigarette fiends. He is not a physician, not a man of science, not even a "professional." He is just William Butler, a humble railway clerk of Hazleton—a strong temperance man, a member of the Hazleton Total Abstinence and Beneficial society, who gives his services free, satisfied if he is able to wrest a drunkard from the thrall of his appetite, or a boy from his craving for cigarettes.

Mr. Butler first became interested in hypnotism several years ago, when he attended a performance in a theater in which hypnotism had a place. He was very greatly impressed with what he saw, and shortly afterward began to study the matter seriously. He appeared at some local entertainments and soon had considerable reputation in and about Hazelton. He had made up his mind that boys could be cured of the cigarette habit by hypnotic suggestion. He tested his theory, with most encouraging results. He was appealed to by Mr. and Mrs. John F. Dodge to save their son Gordon. He smoked incessantly. The habit had undermined his health and was threatening his very life. He smoked sometimes nearly a dozen packages a day, and although tobacco dealers had been cautioned not to sell to him, it was seldom that he was without his favorite brand. In desperation, the parents appealed to Mr. Butler, who took the case in hand. The boy was hypnotizxed and was then told repeatedly, "You are to stop smoking cigarettes, do you understand? You must stop it. Hereafter when you attempt to smoke you will become deathly sick." This was said not once, but many times, until Mr. Butler felt that it had been thoroughly impressed on his patient's mind.

Then he restored the boy to consciousness. For a day or two afterward the youth seemed to have no desire to smoke, but one evening the old desire returned, and he lighted a cigarette. He had taken but a few puffs when he became ill and took to his bed. As the night wore on his condition became worse. He declined to tell the cause, fearing parental displeasure, and toward morning it was feared he would not live. The priest was sent for, then the boy confessed, and Mr. Butler was hurriedly summoned and instantly relieved the patient's sufferings. This is absolutely true and is vouched for not only by Mr. Butler but by the parents of the boy and the priest. The boy has not smoked since. It is now several months since Mr. Butler treated him, and he has grown to be a strong, robust youth.

Butler's success in dealing with the tobacco habit led him to believe that he might be equally successful with the drink habit. He is a very strong temperance advocate, and his heart as well as his will was in the work of redeeming the drunkards. Having experimented on several cases, and finding himself successful, he made a sort of public test with James Michaelson, a miner from Harwood, one of the mining "patches" about six miles east of Hazelton. Michaelson had the reputation of being one of the heaviest drinkers in the neighborhood, and mining settlements are not, as a rule, white ribbon towns. Before he began to drink, however, Michaelson had borne a good reputation as a hard-working, industrious young fellow. Under the influence of liquor, however, he had gone rapidly down hill, and at the time that Mr. Butler essayed his cure he went on a spree as regularly as pay day came around, which only ended when his money was gone. Naturally, at that rate he could not keep a job, and had sunk so low that he was considered past redemption.

Mr. Butler felt so sure of himself that he decided to demonstrate his power over such cases as Michaelson's at a meeting of the Temperance society, to which newspaper representatives and prominent temperance advocates were invited. Of course a temperance society meeting was not the sort of place which Michaelson might be expected to frequent, and he was in a state bordering on delirium tremens when he was induced to enter the hall and be led up on the platform, lured by the promise of a good time. Mr. Butler put him under hypnotic influence and cautioned him that he must stop drinking. Then he warned him seriously that the next time he drank or even smelled liquor his senses would leave him.

After repeating this several times he restored his subject to consciousness and allowed him to mingle with the crowd. Presently someone offered him a bottle of beer. Hardly had the liquor reached his lips when he fell into a swoon, and it was w. difficulty that he was revived. Some time afterward several of those present determined to satisfy themselves whether the subject would be affected by the smell of liquor. Two engaged him in earnest conversation, while the third placed a sponge saturated with whisky near by. As soon as the fumes were inhaled the victim fell into a state of collapse. These facts are vouched for by James J. McGinty, secretary of the temperance society. Michaelson has since become a member of the society and is a model citizen. He gives all saloons a wide berth, as even the smell emanating from these places makes him ill.

An especially interesting hypnotic test was given by Mr. Butler at a recent entertainment. The subject was instructed to meet the hypnotist at a certain place and at a certain hour the next day, but he was not informed of it when awakened. He promptly appeared at the appointed place on the second. He stated that some irresistible impulse took hold of him while at his work, and try as he could he was unable to shake it off. Finally, he dropped his tools and hastened to the place without knowledge of why he was doing so.

Next to reclaiming Michaelson from the drink habit, Mr. Butler considers that his best performance was curing a friend from swearing. The latter was greatly addicted to using the most blasphemous oaths, even in the presence of ladies, and his friends appealed to Mr. Butler, probably in a joking spirit, to stop it by hypnotism if possible. Mr. Butler, however, took the matter seriously and induced his friend to undergo the test. The subject was cautioned that he must stop swearing and that the next time he tried to utter an oath his tongue would be paralyzed. Some time afterward he attempted to let out a string of oaths when, strange to say, his tongue clung to the roof of his mouth. Thoroughly frightened, the young man appealed to Mr. Butler for relief, which was administered, and the fellow's language since that time has been irreproachable.

An Adventure With a River Outlaw.

BY ALICE LATIMER.

Robert Buckley and Jay Gerney had come down from the Upper Delaware in their sneakbox, which was to be their tent, as well as their boat, for a week's trip down the river. They went ashore at Pigeon Island, tying the sneakbox to a clump of bushes and carrying the provisions for their evening meal higher up the shore, where it was dry and sheltered enough for a fire. Both went steadily to work gathering chips and small branches for the fire, and while Buck was lighting it Jay spread the feast on an old tree stump and filled the coffeepot.

"I tell you what," said Buck, seriously, "I don't know about sleeping in the boat. She's so little a big wave might easily turn her over if any of those steamers come down."

"There won't be any to go by until about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning, after we turn in," said Jay. "We'll be up by 7. I'm afraid to anchor her and sleep on shore. There are too many boat thieves about here. Why, they told me over the river there they'd lost a dozen boats this season."

Buck said nothing more. The two boys were old campaigners along the river bank. They had been used to wandering up and down the shores ever since they had been old enough to handle a boat. They ate their supper contentedly, listening to the frogs croaking in the marshes. Then they made up their beds in the bottom of the boat and pushed out, anchoring the boat at a comfortable distance from shore. Being leaders of the Lawrencetown High School Choral Society, they piped up, in rivalry of the frogs, and made the shores echo to their songs. Then they crept down into their beds and pulled the hatch part way over. By this arrangement they were protected from the damp night air, while an opening at one end gave them the necessary breathing space.

There was only the gentlest little motion to the boat. This and the soft lapping of the water soon sent the boys off to sleep. Only a very observant person seeing the sneakbox anchored there would have noticed that the hatch was raised slightly at one end. No one would have guessed that underneath it two boys were slumbering peacefully. The boys and boat had no other protector than the man in the moon, who looked graciously upon the tiny craft sleeping so trustingly on the bosom of the wide, silver river.

After he had been sleeping several hours, Buck began to dream. He dreamed, first, that he was in an elevator that stopped at every floor. Then he dreamed that he was home, but that the house was being moved very carefully down the street and around the corner. Then he dreamed that he was in the middle of the Pacific Ocean in an open boat, which a large fish, presumably a whale, had taken in tow. He decided to put his head out of the hatch and see whether it really was a whale. He did so and saw that it was not a whale. It was a man.

For a moment he could not believe that he was awake. He ducked his head below the hatch and came up cautiously, this time barely putting out his head far enough to see that the sneakbox had been cut from its anchor and was now at the end of a long towline, being rapidly rowed down the river. The man who was rowing it was in a very small bateau. He rowed with the short, unpretentious, effective stroke of the experienced river boatman. He was sitting slightly sidewise in the boat and not looking at his tow at all. Buck surveyed him wonderingly for a moment. Then he drew in his head. "Might as well see what he's going to do with us," he muttered, philosophically. He fished out a pencil and paper from his pocket and wrote by the light of a few straggling moonbeams:

"Keep quiet! One of your river thieves has got us in tow and doesn't know we're here."

He put his hand over Jay's mouth, wakened him and thrust the paper before his astonished eyes.

Jay read the message with difficulty in the dim light. Then he, too, peered out cautiously above the latch and drew in his head, making pantomimic gestures expressing astonishment and delight. It was too exciting an occasion for sleep. The two boys lay there looking at the invading moonbeams, listening to the splash of the oars. To be kidnapped without your kidnapper being aware of it they felt was as promising an adventure as might well have befallen them. Excited as they were, however, the steady dip, dip of the oars and their natural longing for sleep in time overcame their eagerness to see how the affair would develop, as they both fell sound asleep again.

When they awoke a broad sunbeam was falling straight into the opening in the hatch. They did not dare poke their heads out in the broad light of day, fearing that discovery would be certain. They could not hear the sound of oars, and yet they seemed to be moving very rapidly. What was taking them along they did not know,, but they were devoured by a burning curiosity.

"I believe he's got himself and us atow on a barge," whispered Jay. "We're getting waves from a tug."

It was true that the waves came too steadily to be from any passing steamer. The boys listened patiently. They heard unmistakable sounds from a tug, also the voices of men calling to each other from one barge to another and most delightful of all, they smelt the aroma of coffee floating back to them on the morning air.

"They're having breakfast on board the barge," whispered Jay disconsolately. Buck groaned softly. Their captor was evidently also moved by the fragrant odor to bethink him of his own breakfast, for he presently called out to the barge that he was going off on shore for a bite and would part company with them. There followed an interchange of raillery between the bargemen and their captor. Then the towline splashed in the water and the swish of the oars recommenced as the man in the bateau began pulling himself and them toward shore. The boys had a sober thought that perhaps it would be better to cut the line at once and not wait for the man to haul their boat upon the shore. He might belong to a gang of tramps toward whose headquarters he was taking them. In this event the boys felt they would have small chance of getting away with their sneakbox and, indeed, were more than likely to suffer physical violence themselves. "Shall we show ourselves?" whispered Jay anxiously. But Buck stood firm. "No, we've come all this way and we might as well see it through," he said.

They supposed they must have been towed at least 10 miles, but whether up or down the river they did not know, and they were equally uncertain as to which shore they were being taken. It was hardly probable that the man was taking them to a town or settlement of any kind, as discovery of his theft would be more probable there. It was more good on those two fellows," they chorused, delightedly; "letting their boat go adrift. Why, they're the best boatmen in Lawrencetown."

"So it belongs in Lawrencetown?" said the man, cressly.

"Yes," said Charlie, "and if you take it to Jay Gourney's father you'll get a reward, I know. But I wonder where the boys are? They must have gone ashore somewhere. You don't think, do you, that anything could have happened to them?" The laughter stopped suddenly. Charlie's voice had grown painfully anxious.

Jay reached over and gave Buck a gentle blow on the arm. "Old Charlie is going to weep for us," he whispered.

"The time has come," responded Buck.

Two heads were instantly thrust up over the hatch. Two pairs of eyes gazed straight at the astonished group on the shore. Two loud, cheerful voices said in unison: "Don't cry."

"We have enjoyed our trip exceedingly," said Buck, turning politely to their captor. "I hope you did not find us a very heavy load."

The man gazed at them openmouthed.

"Have you been down there long?"

likely that he was planning to hide the sneakbox up some small creek, tributary to the river, where he would have an opportunity to paint over her name before taking her out to sell.

They heard the man's boat ground on the beach. It struck against pebbles and they knew they were on the Pennsylvania shore. Then the man jumped out, fastened his own boat and drew in the towline of the sink-box until it was close up to the other boat. There was no sound of human habitation or the movement of other boats. At a little distance, however, the voice of a plowman talking to his horses seemed to indicate that they were on the shore of a farming section of country. Their captor had gone only a few steps from the boats. They heard him moving around energetically, and then that delicious odor of coffee arose again to tantalize them.

"Oh, the revelry of the wicked," growled Jay, dismally. But this breakfast was doomed to interruption. The man had hardly settled to enjoy himself when the sound of boys' voices chattering cheerfully struck across the shore. The boys heard the sound of a bicycle gong, and then the wheels stopped and their riders pushed through the underbrush which cut off the narrow strip of beach from a winding wagon road. "Say, old man," said a boy's voice, affably, "couldn't we buy some of that coffee from you?"

If caution had not been necessary the boys would have shouted in their astonishment.

"That's Charlie Sprague's voice," they whispered. "He's (in reference to the captor) brought us up river again. I'll bet we're nearly to Lawrencetown."

Their captor had started towards his boats when he saw the boys coming towards him, but they were too quickly upon him.

"I've only got just enough coffee made for myself," he said, gruffly, in reply to Charlie Sprague's question, "but I can let you have some to make yourselves if you want. Here's the fire and you can have the can. I've got to be puttin' up river."

He started for the boats, and suddenly the boys heard Charlie's voice exclaiming:

"Why, there's the Minx. I know that sneak-box. It's the Minx, isn't it? And it belongs to a couple of fellows I know. How did you get it?"

The man hesitated a moment. "I found it adrift down river," he stammered, reluctantly.

The boys who were with Charlie shouted with laughter. "That's pretty demanded Charlie.

"Ever since the gentleman found us, near Pigeon Island, at about 10 o'clock last night," said Jay.

"Adrift," added Buck.

"Ahem!" exploded Jay.

The man ran to his boat and began pushing off desperately.

"'Oh stay,' the maiden cried," chorused the boys.

"You should be rewarded for your brave deed in bringing in a drifting boat," said Charles.

"By the way, have you any drifting anchors aboard?" asked Buck.

The man lifted the sneak-box anchor out of his own boat and threw it on the beach. Then he jumped in his boat again.

"You better leave us a little breakfast," suggested Jay, mildly. "Naturally, we are hungry after our long voyage." The man threw out a bag of provisions and coffee and the boys stood looking at him push off.

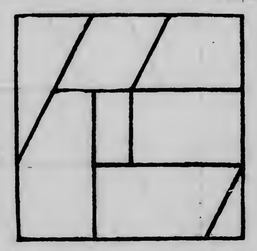
"You're not going to let him go?" remonstrated Charlie.

"Oh, well," said Buck, "he isn't any worse than the pirates."

"Or highway robbers," added Jay.

"Or Indians," admitted Charlie.

"Well," said Jay, as they devoured the outlaw's breakfast, "I've heard of sailors being battened down at sea, and, while I don't mind being battened down in port, I shouldn't care to be battened down altogether, at least not for long."



Solution to last week's Square Puzzle.

The Little Leas' Decoration Day.

BY ELEANOR McCARTHY.

Ever since the war between Russia and Japan began the little Leas had been stirred to a sympathetic warfare in the nursery and over the border. Their Uncle Jack had sent them a set of wooden Japanese soldiers. Uncle Billy had given them a regiment of metal Russian soldiers, their father had given them a fleet of worships and their mother gave them a Red Cross nurse and ambulance "to prevent their becoming altogether ferocious and bloodthirsty," she said.

Polly always sympathized with the Russians, Betty was for Japan and Rosemary loved to run the Red Cross end of the warfare and care for the wounded. Engagements were many and disastrous. Long files of soldiers lay prostrate at the end of each battle, but under the Red Cross ministrations most of them were ready to stand up to fight and die, if necessary, for their country and their flag the next day. Sometimes the action was so indecisive, both sides having been entirely wiped out by the hot fire of the enemy, that it was hard to tell where the victory really belonged.

"Hurrah!" Polly would shout, "my brave Cossacks have won the day."

"They haven't," Betty would protest, "it's a Jap victory. All your men went down first."

Sometimes, it is painful to relate, the question then was settled by two little American girls fighting each other vigorously to win a victory for far-away Russia or Japan. Usually, the Red Cross nurse on these occasions fled to the court of arbitration, of which Mrs. Lea was the presiding officer, and cried out: "Oh, mother, mother, Polly and Betty are fighting about Russia and Japan." After that Polly and Betty usually had to go into exile until their warlike spirits were subdued and they were willing to promise to forbear personal hostilities.

"I am afraid all this war talk and the toy soldiers are making our little girls very rough and unladylike," Mrs. Lea told Mr. Lea and Uncle Jack.

"Won't hurt them a bit," protested Uncle Jack. "It's good for them to get stirred up. Besides, you haven't any boys to do the fighting, and what is home without a fight now and then?"

Mr. Lea laughed, but Mrs. Lea shook her head and said: "It's bad for them."

There were six corpses, laid out side by side, and five wounded soldiers in the hospital. The three little Leas sat amicably side by side regarding the scene.

"I see a Japanese scout looking for the enemy," observed Betty.

Instead of replying that the Russians were now about to swoop down upon the Japanese and wipe them off the face of the earth, Polly absent-mindedly assented, "H'm, h'm."

Betty and Rosemary regarded her with surprise. Never since she espoused the Russian cause had she thus disregarded a challenge.

"You sick, too?" asked Rosemary, trying to feel her pulse.

"No," said Polly. "I've been thinking."

"Oh!" Betty and Rosemary waited for Polly to disclose the substance of her thinking.

"Do you know what Decoration Day is?" she asked, after a pause.

Betty and Rosemary shook their heads.

"Well, it's a holiday.

"Like Christmas?"

"No."

"Like the Fourth of July?"

"No, not like that, either, 'cept it's patriotic. I asked father about it. Everybody has a holiday then, so they can go and decorate soldiers' graves."

"Ah!" Betty and Rosemary at once glanced at their dead soldiers and nodded.

"Yes," said Polly, "we'll have to do something for our dead soldiers."

"What else do they do 'sides decorate their graves?" inquired Betty.

"They have bands o' music that play solemn and patriotic airs. That's what father said. And they have speeches telling how the brave soldiers died for their country, and they put flags and flowers on the grave of each soldier."

"That's nice of them," said Rosemary, approvingly.

"When is Decoration Day?" asked Betty.

"Tomorrow's Sunday, and it's the day after that," answered Polly.

"We ought to bury our dead soldiers today, then."

"Yes, and I think some of those in the hospital are dying now."

"Oh, no," protested Rosemary, who wore a red cross on her arm, anxiously running up to her charges in the hospital.

"Yes," repeated Polly, "three or more of them are dead," and Betty agreed with her. So Rosemary saw that it was to be, and said no more.

"Where shall we bury them?" asked Betty.

"There's a nice place beyond where the Sickersells live. The ground's loose there and easy to dig, 'cause I tried it once when we were digging for buried treasure."

A plot nearly square was staked out, croquet stakes being used for two of the corners and stones for the other corners. Then a line was drawn through the center.

"There are five Japs dead, and only three Russians," said Polly.

"Why, Polly Lea, how can you say such a thing?" replied Betty, indignantly. "Ever so many more Russians were killed, and you know it."

"Oh dear, we'll never get 'em buried if you fight," groaned Rosemary.

Polly and Rosemary paused. There was sense in what Rosemary said.

"All right," conceded Polly, "two more Russians have died in the hospital; that makes it even, five Russians and five Japanese."

Betty agreed to that and the five wooden soldiers painted like Japanese and the five metal ones painted like Russians were carried on a bier made of a checker-board and placed beside one of the croquet stakes while the ten graves were dug. It took a long time, even though they did not dig them very deep, and Rouser, the dog, sat by, regarding proceedings with deep interest.

Three tired and dirty little girls and a dog finally trudged over the border homeward. The soldiers were buried, and it didn't matter if one aggressive Russian foot and a stubborn Japanese arm did stick out above ground.

Early Monday morning the little Leas were astir. There were no lessons and it was a beautiful morning. As soon as breakfast was over they sallied forth.

"Wait," said Polly, and running back, she pulled a basket from under the side porch.

"What's in it?" asked Betty.

Polly raised a leaf and showed pansies, daisies and other flowers just like those that grew in Mrs. Lea's flower beds.

"Where did you get them, Polly?" asked Betty under her breath.

"I fought I heard you go creep out before breakfast," said Rosemary.

"What will mother say?" asked Betty.

"She'd be glad to give 'em for the soldiers. That's patriotic," affirmed Polly.

"I thought we were going to get blossoms from the orchard and cover the border," said Betty.

"So we are, but we'll have these, too."

Laden with flowers, the three little Leas were making their way to the spot where the Japanese and Russian soldiers were buried, when they stopped suddenly, Polly saying, "Listen!"

There was a sound of music, faint, low and sad, then gay and triumphant, the strangest music ever heard.

"What is it?" asked Betty.

"It's the Decoration Day music," said a voice that seemed to come from behind a big leaf and then out stepped Mr. Timbobby. An American flag was draped about his pointed hat and his uniform was half Russian and half Japanese.

"This is my military band," he explained, waving his hand, whereupon birds, butterflies, beetles, cicadas and all manner of winged things began to sing and twitter and hum, making the strange music the little Leas had heard. "Now, if you are ready, we will continue the march," said Mr. Timbobby, going ahead and waving his wand like a drum major.

But when they got to the cemetery, what a sight was there! Every soldier, Japanese and Russian, was out of his grave. Some were standing, some were sitting and some were lying down.

The little Leas stared for a full minute.

"What's happened?" whispered Rosemary at last.

"Probably their fighting spirit was too strong and they couldn't rest even in their graves. I've no doubt that in trying to get at each other they fought their way out," explained Mr. Timbobby.

Rouser, who stood by, said nothing.

"We haven't any graves to decorate now," lamented Rosemary.

"The graves are here just the same," said Polly, "and they've had soldiers in them, so we'll put the flowers on them just the same."

"And we will take the poor soldiers back to the hospital," said Rosemary, secretly pleased to have them back.

While the flowers were being put on the vacant graves the birds and insects of the Decoration Day band played wonderful music and when the three little Leas sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" they played the accompaniment and Mr. Timbobby took off his hat with the Stars and Stripes wound around it.

Then they all went over the border again carrying the resurrected soldiers back to the hospital.

Because it was Decoration Day no battle was waged and the white flag of truce flying all day over the hostile camps.

When the three little Leas got home to luncheon they had ice-cream frozen in the form of soldiers and Polly told how she had taken the flowers from Mrs. Lea's flower beds.

"I would gladly have given them to you if you had asked me," said Mrs. Lea.

"I will the next time," promised Polly. "The soldiers came out of their graves," said Rosemary over her ice-cream, but Rouser barked so loud at this minute that no one paid any attention to what she said. Only Polly looked at him suspiciously and he shrunk away.
